Babler added, "I was involved in another investigation of a gentleman in a situation similar to yours. But nothing could be done because the fraud occurred in Russia." I knew that was a lie. Even if all the criminal acts I alleged occurred in Russia, which they did not, whenever it was reasonably foreseeable that criminal conduct would impact the U.S., like tricking men into bringing mafia prostitutes to America for the mob's white slave trade, those acts violated RICO. Federal law enforcement agencies had plenty of power to not only bounce the Commie Ho, Anastasia and Nicolay out of the country but also break up the Russian mob's operations in America. However, I doubted they had the will. Babler's statement was so absurd that it would absolve the cocaine cartels in Columbia from prosecution because all they did was put the dope on the ships headed for America.

Babler moved into the therapist role with "It is not at all infrequent for an older American man to marry a younger Russian woman who only wants to get to America." This ploy of commiseration put me on alert for the proverbial incriminating question meant to nail me to the wall. But instead Babler asked, "Do you live here or New York?" I didn't get it. He knew from my letter and Complaint where I lived, so dismissing his question as irrelevant, I answered, "New York."

After hanging up with Babler, I called Anastasia's home number several times, but it was busy for over five minutes. Was Babler reporting back to her, maybe, maybe not?

So far, my trip provided some information useful in discovery for impeaching Anastasia and Nicolay and added some specifics to my understanding of their local operations about which I could quiz them in detail, assuming the case made it to discovery. The tailoring shop in the back of the fashionable designer clothing store with tall pretty young models looked and felt the clone of the Tatyanna Vasilyeva House of Fashion in Krasnodar. Anastasia's letter to the court indicated the tailoring shop was a separate company but the lack of corporation records or a telephone listing showed it was most likely part of the clothing store, just like the operation in Krasnodar. With Canada not far away and notoriously open for allowing in illegal aliens, Russian hos likely entered Canada and hopped a ride across the border into the U.S.

The Vasilyeva's U.S. operations began looking like a carbon copy of their vertically integrated prostitution business in Krasnodar. Perhaps Nicolay recruits the hookers in Krasnodar, arranges passage to Canada using a Canadian "entertainment" company to act as the visa sponsor, just as the Athanasious do in Cyprus. Someone in Canada or Anastasia helps the hos travel across the border into the U.S.. When the girls arrive, Anastasia farms them out to the many Russian mafia prostitution rings in the U.S. or Russian and American mob run strip clubs, which are always looking for new talent. The fashion and tailoring shop does a legitimate business but might also provide a cover for a "dirty girls list" using the shop's models just like the Krasnodar House of Fashion. Unfortunately, the only way to find out was locating a girl who had worked on the inside, but I had neither the time nor resources.

As for figuring out the truth about Babler's strange behavior and his involvement, if any, with the Vasilyevas would require subpoenaing F.B.I. records and deposing him once the RICO case moved into the discovery stage, if the court didn't throw it out first. But even in discovery, getting my hands on F.B.I. records and questioning Babler would be difficult. All I had as a reason was Babler's weird behavior during a ten-minute conversation that only I witnessed and his discrepancies with what Zahnow told me and what Anastasia said in her letter. My intuition knew Babler was hiding more, but that's not a reason the District Court will listen to. Even my associate thought I didn't have much to go on concerning Babler or the fashion shop's involvement with the Vasilyevas' operations in America, but I knew the fog would eventually clear on some of the scenes that I could not now see.

Over the weekend, my associate and I took in a Latin festival. It surprised me that Latinos lived in the North Country, but what did I know. The demographics of America had changed dramatically during my adult life with the politicians pandering to the Latin vote by opening the southern border to anyone from Mexico, South America and elsewhere. Personally, the Federal Government should only let in the young Latina babes so as to once and for all destroy that prevalent Feminazi myth that a girl can act like a man and be beautiful at the same time. Imagine the contrast: straight hair, no make up, Feminazis with nothing to reveal clunking down the avenues looking like Soviet era matrons while decked out, coifed, painted Latinas with multiple moving parts seduce their way into the imaginations of those men that the Feminazis haven't turned into girlie-men. Which brand of female has more power? It's not the she-male Feminazis. Like most men, I don't pay attention to she-males. There's nothing they can tell me that's worth hearing, and there's definitely nothing they can show me that I want to see.

The Latin festival featured a lot of different acts and music, the language of which I couldn't understand, just like when I stayed in Ecuador some years earlier thanks to a jungle girl I met in Coca in the middle of the Orient. For the remainder of the weekend, my associate and I hung out in the country, watching the sunsets and me cursing to myself, as I do every day the parents the universe stuck me with. Life could have been enjoyable, interesting and worthwhile but for those two sociopaths.

Monday morning 8:15 AM, my ringing mobile wakes me out of a sound sleep. Normally, I'd ignore it at that hour, but it might be important.

“Hello,” I answered.

“Mr. Hollander?” The nasty sounding voice inquired.

“Yes.”

“This is Officer Sean Schmidt from the Town Police Department. You are going to be arrested for aggravated harassment if you try to contact Cynthia Zahnow again or visit her shop. You have no legitimate reason for being in touch with her.” This caused butterflies in my stomach because I just woke up, which was this cop’s intention a la Franz Kafka whom I’m sure he never read.

Schmidt continued, apparently for purposes of added intimidation, “Ms. Zahnow told me that an F.B.I. agent had also talked to you about your inappropriate contact with Ms. Zahnow.”

The butterflies didn’t last long; anger began to seethe through me as it flowed into my voice. “Listen here officer Schmidt, there is right now in the Federal District Court in New York a pending RICO case (I emphasized Federal and New York so he’d know he wasn’t dealing with some bumpkin case in some dink state court) in which Ms. Zahnow will most likely be called as a witness. One of the defendants in that case sent a letter to the Federal Judge in which she claimed to work for Ms. Zahnow. I, as the attorney and plaintiff, have a right, do I make myself clear, a right to investigate claims made to a Federal Judge by interviewing Ms. Zahnow, and I do not appreciate the local police department interfering with a Federal case!”

Schmidt’s voice changed to sounding civil but to save face he repeated, “If you contact her again you’ll be arrested. She says you’ve been coming to her business and also calling her.”

“That’s false! I visited her business once for a fifteen-minute interview for which I have a witness and never once telephoned her. She, in fact, is the one who agreed to call me today with information I had requested from her during the interview. Obviously, she is not going to make that call, so my next contact with her will be to subpoena her as a witness, and I doubt whether you guys will dare arrest me for that.”

“We have no problem with that.” What else could the flat foot say.

“What did she say about the FBI?” I dropped the angry tone in an effort to obtain some information. I didn’t really think he’d answer, but he did.

“She said an F.B.I. agent contacted her and told her to call the local police to complain about being harassed by you.”

“Did she say who the F.B.I. agent was?”

“No.”

“Well, I’m going to stop by your headquarters later to talk to your Chief about this.”

“You’re free to do that.”

When I hung up, a quote by A. A. Milne came to mind:

“Sometimes when the fights begin, I think I’ll let the dragons win, But then again, perhaps I won’t, Because they’re dragons, so I don’t.”

Obviously Babler was the F.B.I. agent since he was the only agent I talked. Either before or after my interview with him, Zahnow or Anastasia talked with him about my snooping around. If either contacted him before I did, that might explain why he was so nervous. Babler in turn must have reported to one or both of them my interview with him—so much for the vaunted confidentiality of the F.B.I. At some point, most likely on Babler’s suggestion—so much for not giving legal advice—the three agreed to have Zahnow file a complaint with the local cops using that chestnut of Feminazi intimidation against men: a broad faking fear to the police while she lies about male harassment.

Babler's left field question about where I lived now made sense. Babler knew that the cops couldn't charge me with harassment for talking to Zahnow about the RICO case, and as a lawyer himself, he knew I knew that. Babler was simply telling me to get out of town, go back to New York or he would make even more trouble for me. To make sure I got the message that he was behind the threat, he told Zahnow to tell the cops that the F.B.I. was involved. If I had lived in town, the intimidation, to Babler's bullying point of view, would not work because I would have no choice but to fight back since fleeing would not be an option. These federal pigs tick me off as much as organized crime goons. Both are always trying to push people around, "Get out of town by sundown," what a bunch of creeps. Well, I got out of town, since my flight left that afternoon, but the trouble I made for Babler was just starting. Nobody, not even a Federal agency is going to pull my tail and not get chewed a little bit.

My associated and I had a couple of stops to make before the airport.

She said, "Maybe you've stumbled into a hornets' nest. What other explanation is there? The F.B.I. might be running an investigation and doesn't want you interfering. Then again this guy Babler could be on the take. Maybe they pay him in girls for his protection. It has to be one or the other but the real question is which?"

At the Town police headquarters, I vehemently complained to the Acting Chief, also sporting a deep tan, that I didn't appreciate the intimidation implied in the threat to arrest me. I filled him in on the RICO case, why I was in town and made clear that F.B.I. Special Agent Babler had used his police department as a tool. He politely listened as a matter of customer relations, since there was nothing he could do about Babler. But when I returned to continue my investigation, assuming the case made it to discovery, the local cops would think twice about believing some Feminazi. He did, however, arrange for me to talk with Officer Schmidt in person, which always helps. Schmidt had no further information but agreed to provide a statement if needed about the content of his conversation with Zahnow. The Acting Chief also provided me with a copy of Zahnow's complaint against me.

A little before 1 PM, I stormed, almost, into the F.B.I. office. "I want to know why the F.B.I. is interfering in a RICO case in the United States District Court of New York." I angrily told the receptionist and demanded to see the supervisor. When I saw the look of shock on her face, I said to myself go easy this is not New York City. She said the boss was out of town for the week, which I didn't believe.

"Okay, let me see his assistant than."

She rang a number, talked with someone and said, "He's busy, but call back in an hour, don't come back to the office, just call."

Persona non grata, huh! I knew then I'd never reach any of the bosses. Babler must have told his bosses I was from New York City and would probably return there and step back from investigating my case's connections in their jurisdiction. So by ducking me, the local F.B.I. figured the incident would fade into oblivion. Evildoers always count on the victim letting their evil go. From the airport, I called back and as expected the acting supervisor was still busy, but his secretary assured me he would telephone me in New York City the next day. So how did she know I would be in New York the following day?

On the plane to Cincinnati for my connection to New York, I picked up the second translation of the Commie Ho's diary that I had begun on my way out.

The Cincinnati airport was busier going back. Walking toward the gate, I spotted, how could I not, one of those young voluptuous ladies that makes a man forget all caution. This blonde bombshell came out of the ladies room in her color for the day pink: pink jeans, pink top and pink Yankee cap. First time I ever saw a pink Yankee cap before. She had trouble, or pretended trouble, with pulling her carry on bag. It tended to roll over on one side as she moved along swinging her hips walking to the gate. The obvious line immediately came to mind, “Need some help?” and then segue into a comment about her pink Yankee cap to which she’ll laugh. But I stopped myself, she’s a blonde and I have the diary of another bottle blonde to finish. So, I found a relatively empty group of seats and sat to my reading.

The rows of seats at the gate faced each other, probably some Feminazi psychologists’ idea to promote the feeling of comradeship. Some motion caught my eye and I looked up from my reading to see the blonde bombshell with her pink Yankees cap parking her nicely shaped rear in one of the seats in front of me. She starts trying to make calls on her cell phone. What girl doesn’t when she has five seconds to spare? But this girl couldn’t get through to any one. Before I can stop myself, I say, “Having troubles with your cell phone?”

“Yes, it must be the airport. It keeps fading in and out,” she replies a little hesitantly.

“Maybe it’s Cincinnati. You can try using mine if you like. It might work.” I said looking her over: nice large breasts tightly packaged but a bit of a tummy roll, probably went on an eating binge recently because compared to the rest of the body it didn’t belong there.

“No thanks, it’s not important.”

“You going to New York?” she asked.

“Sure thing,” I answered. She received a call, so I went back to my reading, but her call last all of 30 seconds.

“I’m also going to New York,” she resumed.

“What for?”

“I go to school there, N.Y.U.”

“Good school, are you heading back from your summer vacation?”

“I’m coming from my home near New Orleans. You know Britney Spears is from there.”

Who? I pondered silently searching for some recognition of the name in my brain as my face must have stared at this girl in bewilderment. Then I remembered Spears was a singer, but I thought she was from England. The bombshell continued with something else, but I couldn’t hear amid the airport noise and my middle-aged eardrums, so I smiled and thought of something to say. I almost remarked ‘looks like you gained some weight at home’ but decided against it and instead asked, “What’s your name?”

She thought some, guess it wasn’t on the tip of her tongue, and said, “Kelsey”

“Pretty name,” I said as she smiled. “Mine’s Roy. How do you find New York?”

“Lonely!” She now looked sad with this obvious opening but I let it go.

“How old are you?”

“I’m twenty-two.” And very delicious I wanted to add, but her demeanor now turned wispily serious as though her youth was draining away.

“You must have lots of beaus chasing you in New York. There’s no reason to be lonely, go have yourself some fun.”

“I know, but I also have my career to think of,” she said with in a tone of burden.

“I thought you were in school?” I responded always the lawyer looking for inconsistencies.

“I was, but now I’m a dancer.” So maybe I heard wrong the first time.

“That’s a tough profession, especially in New York but I guess that’s the place to pursue it.”

“It would still be nice to find somebody.”

Always the optimist without sensitivity, I said, “You’ve got ‘til your late twenties to get married. Enjoy yourself for now, but later on don’t let your career interfere with raising a family. I’ve seen too many girls sacrifice their family for a career and they are now miserable.”

“What do you do?” She asked.

“I’m a lawyer.”

“There’s a lawyer who lives down the block from my family in New Orleans. He’s got a big house, but he’s never around, always working.”

“Yeah, it tends to consume your life.” I gave her my card and said, “If you need a lawyer, give me a call?” Her reaction told me I should have said, “If you feel lonely give me a call and we’ll go have a drink.” All right, so I blew it.

Our plane started boarding.

She said, “I always wait to get on after everyone else boards.” So I waited with her wondering how she ever found room for her carry-on if she waits until everyone is on board. Then I realized, a girl who looks like her will have guys lining up to find room for her baggage or volunteer to put it under the seat in front of them no matter how badly it cramps their legs.

As we walked down the gateway, I thought of trying to get the person next to one of us to switch seats to continue our talk but nixed that. I wanted to finish the Commie Ho’s diary, which would make an interesting topic of conversation with Kelsey, but would drive her away. Mark always told me to shut up about my Russian adventures when hustling a dame, and he was right. Once I breach that subject, the girls vanish into the night air.

“Where do you live in New York?”

“Manhattan.” Nice vague answer that.

“What clubs do you hang out at?”

“I like Cancun,” and she mentioned some other place of which I never heard.

“Yeah, I know Cancun, on Eight Avenue in the high forties nice little bar. I like going to the Latin clubs like the Copa, Noche and Gonzales y Gonzales. Only I still can’t dance the salsa. Keep taking lessons, but I’m not there yet. But the music is great, and I figure the more I go, the sooner osmosis will take over. You should give them a try. You’re a dancer and it should be easy for you.”

“I don’t know about that.” She had lost interest, so when I got to my seat I wished her well and never saw her again. Once I went by Cancun just on an odd shot, but when I told Mark the story he said we’d have to hit the place around 2 AM when girls like Kelsey hit bars like Cancun.

It’s Just a Matter of Time

By the time I arrived back in New York, I was even more fed up with this Federal Bureau of Intimidation than when I had left. Who did they think they worked for anyway: mobsters and terrorists? They were no better than the goons I was after in the RICO suit. These federal pigs spend much of their time trying to scare taxpaying citizens into doing what they want. They exploit the unwritten threat that if the average guy does not cooperate with and supplicate himself to their authority, then the entire weight of the Federal Government will land on his head. They don’t dare act that way with the rich and politically connected or even the criminals they’re supposed to put in jail. My seventh grade civics teacher really got it wrong when teaching us about the F.B.I., just as wrong as those TV fantasies about Eliot Ness. In reality, today’s federal cops didn’t take their jobs with some noble thought of bringing evildoers to justice, but for the authority to push ordinary people around and the time to work on their tans at the beach. Did federal employees in the fifties have character and honor, or as a kid, was I sold a bill of goods that I'm still trying to shake out of my head. One thing is certain, however, they don't scare me anymore.

Blackie came up with an idea for dealing with these federal fops. As a onetime bureaucrat himself, he knew what they didn't like—work, which they only did to cover their butts. By starting a letter writing campaign of complaints, the F.B.I. would feel compelled to respond in some fashion to protect what fearsome symmetry it still commanded after its 911 screw ups. In responding, these modern-day Max Sennett coppers might goof in their haste to get it done as quickly as possible so they could get to the beach. Any mistake might provide some useful information. As Blackie said, “The more you are a pest, the better it is for you, especially since you sure have been getting screwed over by the good old U.S.A.” I couldn't argue with that, and being a pest should come natural to me.

The first letter went to the New York F.B.I.'s Mike Byrnes in the Russian Organized Crime Unit. The letter recounted our telephone conversations from two weeks previously when as soon as Byrnes got someone out of his office so he could speak freely, he asked for more information on some of the allegations in my RICO Complaint. My cover reason for sending the letter was to remind Byrnes that he had not yet notified me of the topics in the Complaint in which he was interested.

The next letter went to the F.B.I. Director in Washington, D.C. with the opening, “I want to know why the local office of the F.B.I. is interfering with my investigation of the facts in a civil RICO case presently in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York?” I had no respect for or fear of these knaves and tried to show it. The Director, probably an honest and competent man, would never see the letter, but some cowardly bureaucrat in his office would. By emphasizing that the defendants included Chechen Islamic mafiosi and Russian gangsters, even a Feminazi bureaucrat would have to take some action just to protect her rear and the F.B.I.'s. To put a little heat on Babler, I pointed out that he had talked with me alone; took company time to read my 91 page Complaint; admitted the routine inquiry of Anastasia's father turned into an investigation—F.B.I. policy is to avoid confirming or denying any investigations; and provided legal advice to Zahnow and Anastasia that Zahnow file a harassment complaint against me with the local police. Into the mix, I threw that the F.B.I. office's acting supervisor never called me back as promised—for what that was worth.

The letter to the Director listed the incident as one in a series of “bizarre” responses by the F.B.I. concerning the events in my RICO case and set forth the others as John Madison-Pierre's threatening telephone calls. In closing, my letter stated, “I want to know why the FBI is protecting two Russian alien defendants who ran and apparently still run an international prostitution ring centered in Krasnodar, Russia. I am taking this route of contacting you before I decide whether it is necessary to take up the District Court's time with a motion for a preliminary injunction against the F.B.I.” Somewhat gleefully I thought, let's see how those guys like having the threat of Government power turned on them. Bureaucrats, as with lawyers and prostitutes, always become irate when someone does to them what they do to others.

Next came a letter to Vadim Thomas. He was the New York F.B.I. Special Agent whose family came from the Caucasus in Southern Russia, the same general area as the Commie Ho. He and Mario Pisano had met with me in February 2002 at F.B.I. headquarters in New York City and later determined the type of narcotics the Commie Ho brought into the country and identified the guy using the pseudonyms John Madison and John Pierre in the threatening calls. My letter recounted, “unfortunately the F.B.I. did not have a two speed tape player, so the unknown man making the threats sounded more like Mickey Mouse than an associate of Flash Dancers, which you [Thomas] suggested he probably was.” The purpose was to not only mock the New York F.B.I. to its bureaucratic face, but to get on the record that Thomas suggested the goon worked at Flash Dancers. The letter requested from Thomas the test results on the substance and the name and business address of the man they tracked down. He was not going to give me either, but his denial could be added to the record.

In early September 2003, F.B.I. Special Agent Byrnes left me a voicemail message in response to my letter. He asked that I call him, so he could tell me the areas of the RICO Complaint about which he wanted more information. These coppers, just like hoods, never put anything in writing. Is it sloth or are they trying to hide something? Well, I didn’t trust any government employee to tell the truth, so I either taped them or created a written record. My letter in response offered to provide information he wanted in return for information that I needed: the laboratory report on the substance I gave the F.B.I. and the identity of the threatening caller John Madison-Pierre. Since the F.B.I. decided not to investigate any of the threats my letter argued, “I do not understand why [the F.B.I.] will not release the information concerning the identity of the man who made the three threatening calls. Given special agent Mario Pisano’s statement that the F.B.I. would not even interview the man because of what he might do to me, and Pisano’s added precautions not to open my door to anyone I don’t know and to be careful when out in the public, I understand that the FBI does not want to bother with the safety of a tax-paying US citizen—fine. But that is no reason to thwart my efforts to protect myself. I am still fearful for my life, which causes me to periodically change my living pattern and, in accordance with Pisano’s advice, take extra precautions when outside of my apartment.” That last sentence was baloney, but I was trying to put Byrnes on the bureaucratic spot that if something did happen to me, the press might come looking for him and others in the F.B.I. to answer why they did nothing to protect a U.S. citizen. With this letter, I started putting down Jeff as receiving a copy. I figured that having two lawyers involved would reduce the chances of the F.B.I. doing something stupid again and make them realize I was not just a lone flake they could ignore.

By mid-September, Byrnes responded to the letter with another voicemail asking me to call him, but I was busy at the time on other matters, so I let it ride. A week later he leaves another message telling me it was okay that I did not promptly return his earlier telephone call because I might have been on vacation. That ticked me off. Who did these Club Fed indolent boors think they were? Citizens don't need an excuse or permission not to return calls from the F.B.I.—we pay their salaries. This arrogant commissar would have to wait.

Near the end of September, Byrnes finally reached me, by telephone, to say the F.B.I. could not release any information about the laboratory results or the man making the threats. He used the Privacy Act as the reason for not giving me the information. What kind of privacy rights the substance that I gave to the F.B.I. to test had—left me at a loss. Nor could I understand how the claim of privacy could protect the identity of a hoodlum that intentionally called my telephone number to threaten me on behalf of an illegal alien prostitute. By the F.B.I.'s reasoning, if an al Qaeda operative in America telephones the President and threatens him, the President can't find out who made the call because privacy rights protect the caller. The F.B.I.'s rationale was not only stupid, but also a lie, and, unfortunately, a typical example of how law enforcement agencies now work in America. When the average citizen requests help, he can expect law enforcement agencies to misapply Congressional Acts and U.S. Supreme Court decisions meant to protect that citizen by twisting those laws and decisions to protect criminals or the rich or the powerful or illegal aliens or broads or the agencies themselves.

After refusing to help me, Byrnes, in true bureaucratic fashion, requested that I help the F.B.I. by providing it with information to continue its investigation. That last word “investigation” was important because now I could tell the District Court the F.B.I. was investigating some of my RICO Complaint’s allegations, which immediately made them more believable to a judge unschooled in the workings of the Russian mafia. It also told me there was more going on in the F.B.I. than I knew. Byrnes wanted to know about the bribing of INS employees to obtain prostitutes visas. Byrnes got some of the information as a return favor for confirming an ongoing investigation by the F.B.I. Never heard from Byrnes again and didn’t expect to.

Three weeks after sending the letter to Special Agent Vadim Thomas, I mailed him a reminder setting a deadline of October 10, 2003 for a reply or I would contact a supervisor or the inspector general. Private citizens can play the bureaucracy threat game too. A couple of reminders also went to the F.B.I. Director that I had not received any response to my complaint about Special Agent Babler. Inundate the bureaucrats with paper and they’ll screw up somewhere. And they did, in one of only two written replies I received from the F.B.I. The Bureau obviously has a good reason after all for not putting anything down on paper.

The useful F.B.I. letter came in response to my complaint to the Director about Special Agent Babler. The Acting Chief of the F.B.I. Investigative Law Unit wrote that the unit conducted an inquiry into the events by interviewing “cognizant personnel in the F.B.I. office.” Good, that meant Babler, and it should teach him a lesson to stay off my back when I return for more investigating if my case reaches discovery. The Investigative Unit concluded it was satisfied that Babler “acted appropriately in his contacts with the parties in [my] complaint and did not, in any manner, interfere with [my] investigation.” The part of claiming no interference with my case was expected but not the confirmation of Babler having contact with “the parties in [my] complaint” while I was out there, which meant Anastasia. I had assumed Babler would just deny it, but he didn’t.

The letter’s next paragraph was even better: “Specifically, the agent made it clear to all parties who contacted him that the F.B.I. had no interest in the matters alleged in [my] civil Complaint and that he could not advise them as to how to respond or proceed.” The “all parties” phrase indicated to me that Babler talked with both Anastasia and Zahnow while the “no interest” part created the false image that the F.B.I. was not involved. If “no interest” then why did Babler read the RICO Complaint and keep it on his desk in connection with the “investigation” he referred to when refusing to give me the name of Anastasia’s father.

The really good part, however, was: “The only exception was the agent’s advice to one party to contact the police because that person had alleged that you were harassing her.” Great, the F.B.I. confirmed that Babler told Zahnow or Anastasia, probably both in a conference call, that Zahnow should file a harassment complaint against me. The letter shows Babler knew an attorney was doing what attorneys do when investigating a civil case but went ahead anyway and advised a defendant or a potential witness, or both, in that case to frighten off the investigating attorney by falsely claiming aggravated harassment. Babler, Anastasia and Zahnow’s conduct looks an awful lot like a conspiracy to cover-up something. That appearance of a conspiracy to interfere in a Federal proceeding opens up a legitimate avenue for discovery as to why Babler gave such advice; what are his connections with Anastasia, Zahnow and the fashion store; what’s his interest in the RICO case; and why the investigation into Anastasia’s father? The F.B.I., however, may refuse to release any information about the investigation into the father for the reason that it's ongoing. In which event, I'll try to go through the G.R.U. guys in Russia to find out what the F.B.I. is doing with respect to the Vasilyevas.

The F.B.I. letter in closing added that Babler's refusal to give me the first name of Anastasia's father was required by the Privacy Act. So why didn't he say so, rather than using the ongoing investigation reason? No, I wasn't buying; the FBI was just trying to cover-up Babler's slip of referring to its investigation that involved the Vasilyevas. So in the end, thanks to the F.B.I., and assuming my RICO case makes it to discovery, I'll have a decent chance to subpoena some F.B.I. records and question Babler under oath. This letter from the F.B.I. is an excellent example of why its employees usually don't respond in writing—they're not sharp enough.

Having obtained some useful information from the F.B.I. Investigative Unit, I tried again. This time requesting that Babler be reprimanded, which would never happen, but that was just my cover for what I really wanted to know: whether Anastasia or Zahnow or both were told by Babler to contact the police and was it normal F.B.I. procedure to investigate visitors from Russia? This time the Investigative Unit wised up by telling me to make a request under the Freedom of Information Act for the answers to any questions. Knowing that with law enforcement agencies, such was a waste of time, I didn't bother. The relationship between totalitarian governments and the people they rule is always an adversarial one, apparently the same is true today in America.

In order to lay the basis for using the District Court's power to probe the F.B.I.'s activities, I made a motion to supplement my Complaint by adding Zahnow as a defendant and accusing her and Anastasia of conspiring and tampering with a witness, victim and informant in violation of 18 U.S.C. 1512. The law forbids harassing a witness, victim or informant, in this case me the plaintiff, in order to hinder him from providing information to a judge concerning the commission of a Federal offense. The whole reason behind getting the cops to threaten me with arrest was to keep me from digging up more information on the Vasilyevas' committing federal crimes. In my description for the Court about what happened, F.B.I. Special Agent Babler played a prominent role, but I didn't include him as a defendant because my intuition told me otherwise. Federal judges tend to view citizens who sue Federal Government bureaucrats as enemies and throw such cases out of court. The judges, bureaucrats themselves, also fear setting a precedence that might include them in such lawsuits. Besides, keeping Babler out might avoid my running into the "attorney work product rule." If Babler were a defendant, the F.B.I. could argue that the interview notes from its inquiry fell within the "attorney work product rule"; therefore, I couldn't get near them.

The only outstanding items from the "Make Myself a Pest" campaign against the F.B.I. were replies from my letters to Special Agent Vadim Thomas. In an effort to turn up the pressure on Thomas, I telephoned the New York City F.B.I. Operations Division and complained about Thomas and Mario Pisano's conduct in handling the threats by John Madison-Pierre and not telling me the test results for the substance I gave them. The F.B.I.'s Office of Professional Responsibility, an oxymoron, eventually called me back. When I answered the telephone a broad said, "This is agent Lu Leiber from the F.B.I.'s Office of Professional Responsibility."

"Oh, what's going on?" I asked in a surprised and wimpy fashion as a result of the lack of sleep. The moment the words left my mouth, I knew they were a mistake because the Feminazi on the other end would interpret them as meaning I was frightened by her position of authority. Whenever a broad thinks she has a man cowed, she'll go for the throat immediately. Leiber did just that. Immediately, I could hear in the affected nastiness of her voice the instantaneous incarnation of the authoritative, scolding female. I hit my record button to get this call on tape.

“We received your complaint against Special Agents Pisano and Thomas and found no grounds for their doing anything improper. The FBI is under no obligation to give you the results of the substance tested or the identity of the man making the threats. As far as we are concerned the matter is closed. Besides, you are calling in the year 2004 and these events took place in 2002.” Her voice dripped with princessly pomposity in her disdain for having to converse with an insignificant male peon.

“No,” I angrily retorted, “You’re calling in the year 2004. I sent my letters requesting this information in 2003.”

“They are not obligated, Mr. Hollander to respond.”

“So maybe you will give me the site to the F.B.I. rules and regulations where it says they are not obligated?”

Sounding as the scornful school matron in order to hide ignorance, she replied, “Mr. Hollander, any other issue?”

“Actually, it’s Den Hollander that’s the whole last name.” A minor put down, but why not, she was a Feminazi who stole that job from a man, so any attack was justified.

“Again, three answers, to provide you with the analysis results, we are not obligated to do, so that’s our first answer.” But it was confirmation on tape that the F.B.I. has laboratory results; therefore, the Court couldn’t deny a subpoena request based on finding the request was nothing more than a fishing expedition.

She continued, “Number two the threat, and there was an investigation that was conducted by the agents.”

“Right and they found out who made the threat?” Just pumping her for information.

“Yes they did.” Good, another confirmation on tape that will help me obtain a subpoena of F.B.I. records to finally track down this goon, assuming my case makes it to discovery.

“We are not obligated to provide you with that information because the threat was not deemed to be life threatening or serious bodily harm.” How would she know? Imagine this bimbo’s reaction if the threats were made to her—call out the Marines, the Green Berets and Navy Seals! If there was no danger why did Pisano tell me to watch out in public?

“Okay, and that’s it?” I asked. “I thought there was a third in here somewhere.”

“No.” She said there were three just seconds ago. Maybe she dumbed herself down in kindergarten math to be more attractive to boys.

“So how do I appeal this?”

“It’s really not an issue of appeal. If you feel that you don’t want to accept this, well, the third issue...” Ah, there it is, she could count, but her memory was that of the typical vacuum-head bimbo. “I will tell you this. We are under no obligation to provide you with the results of an ongoing criminal investigation.” Thank you again, this time for confirming the F.B.I. was conducting an investigation, this one in New York City. Was its investigation connected to something larger?

“What ongoing and criminal investigation is there?” I reached for her snatch but she blocked me.

“Well if that’s what you were looking for, well that’s number three. We do appreciate people calling us and giving us information.” Now she sounded like an airplane stewardess from the 1970s.

I replied, “Well, there’s one American citizen who will never call you guys with information again; that’s for sure. But I still don’t understand why you even brought up the fact of an ongoing criminal investigation. The guys tested the substance, they found out who the guy was that made the threats and they did nothing. Pisano told me they weren’t going to do anything.”

“I’m not in a position to comment on that, I cannot comment on that. If you feel that you’re not satisfied with this, you can certainly write to our legal department here in New York.”

“Okay, I really didn’t expect you guys to do anything about my complaint being the Federal Government.”

“Well, you know, Mr. Hollander...” I guess she forgot my whole last name, probably the vacuum tube in her head blinking out. “I’m actually calling as a courtesy, as a courtesy, I am calling you to explain...”

Now I got angry and cut her off, “Courtesy! Courtesy! Wait a minute, wait a minute! You people work for me and all the other citizens of this country.”

She mounted her authoritarian horse again. These broads always want to be on top. “I don’t work for you Mr. Hollander, I work for President Bush!”

So I knocked her off, “You work for the citizens of this country! And you know for whom President Bush works? He works for the citizens, or should.”

“This conversation will go no further.” She said in resignation.

I was on a roll. “The courtesy here is that I’m listening to you.”

“Mr. Hollander, I appreciate the information.” Ah, sarcasm.

“The courtesy is that I am listening to a nasty government agent telling me that they’re not going to help a citizen of the United States.”

“I’m not being nasty with you. I’m trying to explain to you.” We were now sounding like a bickering couple. I wonder what she looks like—no I’m not going there, she’s a Feminazi.

“Yes you are... I understand it when you start saying in that tone of voice this is a courtesy call...”

“No I am not, but Mr. Hollander, please, I don’t work for you, and I’m sorry if you feel otherwise.”

“No, but you work for the citizens of the United States of which I am one.” Now I was enjoying antagonizing her.

“No, I don’t work for you okay, is there anything further you would like to say, okay?”

“You don’t work for the citizens of the United States?” I asked, badgering her some more.

“Is there anything further that you would like to say?” She ignored it.

“Of which I am one?” I continued.

“Is there anything further that I can help you with?”

“No, obviously not.”

“Thank you for your help,” she ended as we said out goodbyes.

The call provided me with confirmations on tape that the F.B.I. knew who threatened me, knew the substance the Commie Ho smuggled into the country and had an on going investigation in New York—not bad. It also, hopefully, ruined Miss Leiber’s day. Shortly after hanging up, it struck me that John Madison-Pierre, who threatened me three times, also referred to his calls as “courtesy calls.” At the time of the threats, that term sounded strange to me because I had never heard it before concerning telephone calls, so I filed it away with all the other puzzle pieces waiting to fit. But now, this F.B.I. agent used it, a number of times. Maybe it’s lingo unique to the F.B.I. or federal coppers in general. Perhaps the goon who made the three threats was an F.B.I. agent, and dismissed that idea as too much television. But, now I wasn't so sure. It would explain the F.B.I.'s refusal to tell me his name and Pisano trying to scare me off, but where's the motive? All of those threats came over a year before I filed the RICO case, and two of them before I ever talked to the F.B.I. But they did occur after a New York City INS agent told an Assistant U.S. Attorney in 2001 that the INS was still checking the organized crime connections of the Commie Ho.

When I heard that back then, I couldn't figure out why the INS agent had mentioned mafia connections. My original complaint in March 2001 to the New York City INS didn't mention any gangsters because I didn't think any were involved at the time, but now I knew different. Did the Commie Ho and her Russian and Chechen mob associates have sufficient influence in any federal law enforcement to have an agent threaten me? The Russian and Chechen mobs had a lot of money and plenty of influential contacts. Or was INS, F.B.I., Customs or D.E.A. behind the threats so that I wouldn't interfere with one of their investigations already under way in 2001? Then again, maybe none of the above was true? Right now all I saw was another shape in the fog that would clear some day, assuming I was around to notice.

Once Upon a Time

As another summer of discontent ended in late September 2003, I made another try to interest the media in my RICO case. This time contacting another guy whom I had first met in the 1970s while working at WNEW TV News, Bob Iger. Back then, Bob was starting his way up the corporate ladder at ABC Wide World of Sports and eloped with a very straight-laced, preppy lady with whom I worked, Susan. Her spur of the moment marriage surprised everyone in the newsroom, so I nicknamed her Suzy Cream Cheese after a song by Frank Zappa. Bob and

Susan were smart, decent people and we became, if not friends, very good acquaintances. Cream Cheese once lent me one of Bob's books that they thought might enlighten my dead-end nature.

A Fan's Notes by Frederick Exley juxtaposes the author's real and partly imagined life with that of a fellow student of Exley's from the University of Southern California: Frank Gifford, the New York Giants' great football running back and receiver. Gifford was one of my heroes. As a kid, I watched him play on TV every other weekend. There were Giants in those days and none with more guts than he. When Gifford joined the team in the early 1950s, he ran faster than anyone else in the league and played both offense and defense when other players, as now, stayed with one or the other. With time his speed began to fade, so he relied on his smarts. In 1960, he got blindsided during a passing play and suffered a severe head injury that forced him into retirement. But in 1962, he came back as a flanker to make one unbelievable catch after another as the Giants made it to the NFL championship game two years running. He retired for the last time in 1964 and went into broadcasting TV Sports.

In 1980, I actually met him on a story I was producing for my employer at the time WABC TV Eyewitness News where Gifford had previously worked. After a short interview for the camera, I asked him for his autograph, babbling about those great catches he made of the bombs Y.A. Tittle threw. Apparently, it had been sometime since a fan complimented him on his football achievements since his wife remarked, "I don't believe this!" But Gifford seemed pleased that someone remembered. I still have his autograph, the only autograph of any successful person I ever wanted.

A Fan's Notes seemed written for me, since Exley couldn't do anything right either, bouncing from one useless experience to another like a pinball. In one episode Exley meets a tall beautiful blonde, the girl he always dreamed of but never got because he didn't have the glory or fortune of a Frank Gifford. But on this occasion, for some unknown reason, the tall blonde beauty goes for Exley. Unfortunately or maybe fortunately, his anxiety prevents him from consummating the relationship, so she vanishes to find someone else. If only that had happened to me with the Commie Ho, but no, I was even unluckier than Exley.

After reading the book, I returned it to Bob and Cream Cheese and thanked them for their attempt to help, but my life didn't change. It's unlikely that people with a bad upbringing can really change their lives. Lots of folk disagree, and many are decent people like Bob and Cream Cheese who try to help with a little advice. The three of us kept in touch into the 1990s and then, as with many American couples, Bob and Cream Cheese divorced. Cream Cheese started buying into the Feminazi propaganda that husbands should sacrifice their careers to make the wife's role easier by shouldering much of the family burden evolutionarily slated for women. Cream Cheese went to work for a video production company and Bob became Chief Executive Officer for Walt Disney, which owned the American Broadcasting Company for which I had once worked. So, I sent Bob a synopsis of the RICO case billing it as "Frederick Exley in Russia" and suggested that Disney's subsidiary ABC News might be interested. Never heard back.

In another effort to interest the media, I contacted a guy who had written articles on the Russian mafia while working for the American Bar Association's Organized Crime and Corruption Project on Russia. He now worked in the Chief of Staff Office for the Department of Homeland Security, but no longer wrote articles about the Russian mob or had any up to date information that might help my case. Too bad, his insight into the Russian mafia was the most accurate I ever came across:

"The Russian mafia differs from the Italian mafia as the latter has been portrayed in The Godfather and other movies. In some respects the Russian mafia is even more frightening because it represents a virtual, if not actual, partnership between Government officials and criminals. Many believe that this corrupt influence reaches to the highest levels of the Russian Government, a belief for which there is ample precedent. Throughout the Soviet era, the Communist Party was largely seen as the most powerful of all criminal organizations in the world. The Party controlled not just one aspect of an illicit economy but the entirety of a nation and its resources.

“During the Soviet era, the mafia and government officials formed partnerships that controlled the lucrative ‘black’ and ‘grey’ markets of the Soviet Union. Nonetheless, communist authorities themselves took second place to no one in criminal behavior. Russians first began to use the word ‘mafia’ in the 1970s to describe the large networks of corruption lurking inside regional and central government ministries. Regional party chiefs became their own regional chieftains, feudal overlords of vast criminal networks. The Government and the mafia became one.

“The Russian mafia is distinctively menacing in light of its close connections with key sections of the government bureaucracy. While it is true that as the Communist Party faded from power, more conventional organized criminal structures emerged, these connections persist.

“The Russian mafia also represents an attitude, not merely an organization. This attitude, developed during the years of Communist Party rule, is rooted in the belief, held by many government officials to this day, that if something is not nailed down or something is placed within their power, they can treat it as their own property. These former Communist apparatchiks are not averse to taking, selling, or auctioning off to the highest bidder any thing, or authority, entrusted to them. Corrupt former Communist, and now Russian, officials have sold secret military hardware to the U.S., indicating that if the price is right, even treason is not an impediment to a lucrative deal.” Scott P. Boylan, Organized Crime and Corruption in Russia, Vol. 19, Fordham Int’l L.J., 1999, 2013 (1996).

Scott did, however, refer me to an attorney and visiting scholar at Harvard University who also wrote articles on the Russian mafia and had actually prosecuted some Russian gangsters. The Harvard scholar didn’t have any up coming articles planned in which he might use my RICO case, but he did know how the Russian mob operated and tentatively agreed to testify as an expert in order to educate a jury on the workings of Russian organized crime, if my case made it to trial. He also suggested I check out the F.B.I. Law Enforcement Bulletin for information on the Russian mafia that might help my case.

The Bulletin contained lots of information that provided background support for my allegations, which surprised me given the F.B.I.’s general uselessness. The Bulletin described the Russian mafia’s international enterprises as made up of numerous ethnic groups, including Chechens, and comprised of amorphous gangs that act autonomously or have loose ties to regional, national or international criminal networks. The Russian mob is not a monolithic institution like La Cosa Nostra with traditional membership rules and codes of honor and respect. The skills and absence of moral principles of Russian criminals pose an exceptional threat to society, both in the U.S. and abroad. The F.B.I. estimated that about 80 major Russian organized criminal groups engage in prostitution, extortion, drug trafficking and fraud schemes and these groups use many financial institutions and businesses throughout the world for money laundering.

The first wave of Russian Mafiosi came to America in the 1970s as a result of détente, but it was the second wave following the fall of the Soviet Union in the 1990s that brought most of the professional Russian criminals to the U.S. According to former FBI director Louis Freeh, “When freedom was established in Russia, it helped spread the existing criminal network to expand abroad.” The Russians formed gangs, some of which affiliated with other domestic and foreign-based organized groups. These gangs are large, well-connected and well-financed and may represent the greatest threat for law enforcement in the U.S. The Russian mob in America is allied with La Cosa Nostra in crimes of prostitution, extortion and fraud, including in the stock market (as though Wall Street Bankers need any help in that area). Its Miami operations work with Colombian drug lords to ship cocaine to Russia in return for Russian military aircraft and weapons while a partnership with Turkish criminals smuggles drugs from the Near East to America. Russia’s M.V.D. estimates that over 100 Russian mafia gangs are active in at least 50 countries fed by the lifeblood for the Russian mob: money laundering.

A report by William H. Webster, former F.B.I. chief warned, “The Russian Federation itself is likely to become a full-blown criminal-syndicalist state. In many respects, such a state already exists in Russia with corrupt officials at all levels throughout the government, successful full-time criminals, and businessmen for whom Russian and Western laws are simply obstacles to overcome. Even at the lowest level of the Russian mob, the strong shared interest in self-enrichment, survival and power prevent normal interaction with those outside it. How then can the U.S. hope to build enduring relationships in matters of international cooperation, economics and security with representatives of such a criminal state?”

According to the Webster report, Russian gangs or krishas usually include a financial institution for laundering and investing the profits, government officials for protection from other officials belonging to different gangs and for escaping enforcement of government laws against a gang’s operations, and an armed force—a private militia. “Membership in a krisha carries a price: a share of profits or payoff in services by a company or individual to the krisha. In return, individuals and businesses receive services that ensure personal security, defense from attack and shakedown by another krisha, handling of payoffs and deals, intimidation of real or potential enemies and competitors and other help. A krisha is not only a criminal entity that intimidates, beats or murders, but can also be governmental, able to deploy force for criminal ends. A krisha can manipulate the law and bureaucracy in an individual or business’ favor—or against it.”

Perhaps what I was up against was a U.S.-Russian krisha. Anyway, if the FBI knows all this, why is it not only refusing to help but actually hindering my efforts?

My review of the F.B.I. Bulletin led me to the book Red Mafiya: How the Russian Mob Has Invaded America by investigative reporter Robert I. Friedman. According to his book, the Russian mob runs gaudy strip clubs in America where girls dance without clothes and are generally available for prostitution—sounded familiar. The mob traffics in heroin and has even corrupted some NHL hockey clubs. The Russian mafia virtually controls Russia and has spread to every corner of the U.S., infiltrating banks and brokerage firms. American law enforcement agencies were just waking up to the threat posed by Russian organized crime but may not be able to control it. Many, Russians don't come here to enjoy the American dream but to steal it. Friedman concluded, the Russian criminal empire stretches around the world and poses an enormous threat to global stability and safety.

Friedman appeared to be my best chance of interesting a reporter in my story, but, unfortunately, he was dead. Not at the hands of the Russian mafia, but his belief in Feminazi propaganda. While working on a story of alleged female oppression in India he contracted a disease that killed him.

Bend Me, Shape Me

The American defendants that responded to my Complaint didn't want the case to go any further than it already had, so they joined together in filing a joint motion to dismiss that included a 66 page memorandum of falsehoods, half-truths and omissions along with 16 exhibits, mostly irrelevant. In Federal court, a motion to dismiss asks a judge to throw out the plaintiff's complaint. The motion comes at the very beginning of the proceeding before the discovery of evidence, witness testimony or hearings on what actually happened that gave rise to a complaint. The purpose of motions to dismiss are to eliminate those cases in which assuming everything the plaintiff says in the complaint is true, there aren't any laws that can do anything to help him recover damages for the harm he may have suffered.

In an effort to allow society to function, conduct that some may find offensive is just not covered under the law. For instance, a guy uses the word "girl" instead of "woman," there's nothing a broad can legally do because the law does not cater to overly sensitive people. When courts assume what the plaintiff says is true, that doesn't mean they accept statements that hold no credibility in reality, such as “politicians tell the truth.” In order to determine whether statements in a complaint are so absurd that they shouldn’t be considered true, the courts can look to knowledge commonly held by people in the community, including newspaper articles, even the New York Times unfortunately, or to certain documents used by the plaintiff in drafting his complaint. (Since my 2003 RICO case, the Supreme Court has heightened the requirements for a complaint by requiring that what it alleges falls somewhere between possible and probable.)

From the defendants’ opening salvo and through all their papers filed over a period of nearly a year, the attorneys for the American defendants and eventually a defendant in Cyprus, the Bank of Cyprus, used the prevalent lawyer tactics that have made the court system in America a joke for determining the truth.

The opposing lawyers, led by Bradley Dubin, rolled out their litigation of personal destruction under the assumption that character assassination really works: demean, demonize, denigrate, and “dis” the plaintiff in order to distract from the legal issues by making the plaintiff the issue. They accused me of setting out on a “relentless course of harassment” against my ex-wife and anyone who helped her “without regard for ethics or even common decency.” This familiar Feminazi lament was aimed at emotionally turning against me any shrew or hermaphrodite clerks working for the Chief Judge and to use the current political climate in America to pressure the Chief Judge into ruling against a man in a dispute that involved a female as a key defendant.

Today’s male judges often err on the side of less or no rights for men so as to avoid the Feminazis labeling them “male-chauvinists,” the equivalent of being marked a commie in the 1950s. The defendants also depicted me as emotionally disturbed by calling the Complaint the product of “a delusional, imaginary tale of fantasy”—a little redundant that and somewhat of an overreaction. But the defendants meant to not only bias and apply “politically correct” pressure to the District Court, but to intimidate me with the specter of Feminazi wrath and insinuations of mental problems. Such tactics often succeed in modern-day America, but unlike these half-men, defense lawyers, broads don’t scare me and calling me nuts only brings a smile to my face. In an insane society, a person needs to be crazy to be sane.

The defense lawyers used other tactics typically resorted to by honor-less members of the Bar:

Tell enough falsehoods and half-truths, omit what the defense lawyer doesn’t like and misrepresent the rest.

Overload the Court with exhibits and so-called facts so that in its rush to wade through all the material it will miss an attorney’s intentional deceptions.

Misquote and selectively edit statements by other courts and the plaintiff in order to twist the accusations and the law to fit an attorney’s falsehoods.

The attorneys arrayed against me did all that and more. They loaded up their memorandum with snide remarks in an effort to spew forth so much social opprobrium that I would decide it not worth fighting for my rights. Such a technique often works with plaintiffs who don’t expect their character to come under constant assault in a case in which their character is not an issue. Little did these goofs know that by this stage of my life I was now immune to such sophomoric name-calling.

The defense even tried to avoid the key question on a motion to dismiss by claiming the Complaint didn’t “prove” my case, but complaints aren’t suppose to prove a case, just tell the defendants of what they are accused. A complaint’s purpose is not to prove, at least according to the U.S. Supreme Court. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 500-01, 91 L.Ed. 451, 67 S.Ct. 385 (1947). The proof comes further down the road, after the plaintiff and defendants have the opportunity to use various court procedures to gather evidence, that’s called discovery. When a person files a complaint, he doesn't walk into court with stacks of evidence ready to go to trial because in order to obtain most evidence requires a court telling the defendants, or plaintiff, to hand over documents or testify at depositions. For example, if an SUV swerves across the median of a road and hits a car sending the car's driver to the hospital, the driver or his insurance company is going to sue. In order to determine whether the SUV hit the car because the female driver was fixing her makeup, talking on her cell phone, had drank too much, or the SUV's steering wheel locked, or a pot hole punctured one of the wheels or other something else happened that caused the accident requires a court to make the female driver, seller of the car or city provide information to the plaintiff because neither will hand it over voluntarily. That's the proof that discovery produces.

It took me three months in the law library, the entire fall of 2003, to compose a 147-page memorandum in order to counter the defense attorneys' lies and omissions and debunk their deceit filled arguments and implications. My opposition memorandum included a handful of exhibits on procedural matters except for one that contained copies of a website on which Mundy's law firm advertised immigration and domestic relations legal services. On the same web page as Mundy's firm, an agency marketed Russian girls for marriage—nice fit of services. Here was one website where an American man could pick his ho of choice and use Mundy's firm to get her into the country—such Russian efficiency. Also included were lots of photos from that site of pretty young Russian girls, some scantily clad, because I knew Mundy and Petrovich would like that. As soon as their lawyer and lead counsel for the defendants, Dubin, received my response, Mundy took his firm's ad off the website.

The time I had to spend on opposing the defendants' motion illustrates another of their tactics: make numerous lies that either require me to use up lots of time refuting or risk the District Court believing them. It's always more time consuming to counter a lie than to make one. Again, this tactic of lawyers often works because plaintiffs don't want to spend lots of money on their attorney. But I'm a lawyer, so I didn't have that expense, although the defense figured the time I would have to put in would drastically cut my income, and, like Russians, lawyers can only understand money. So to them, creating a situation that required me to spend lots of time responding to their lies would, under their value system, deter my effectiveness because I wouldn't take the pay cut. They didn't realize, however, that I was in this to my last dollar or last breath, whichever came first. Some people will do anything for money; others will do anything for justice.

In the defendants' motion to dismiss, the lawyers tried time and again to trick the District Court by claiming a case said something it didn't. They even used selectively edited quotes or failed to mention a qualifying sentence in manufacturing the law to support their positions. It's an effective tactic when using a large number of cases, such as over 100 as they did. To accurately understand what a case says requires reading it in its entirety. Judges and their clerks don't have that kind of time to check the veracity of what lawyers claim for a case, and the defense attorneys used that failing of the judicial system to mislead the District Court. So I read the cases and pointed out the defense attorneys' duplicitous version of the law over and over for the Court.

Another nifty trick used by the defense attorneys as I told the District Court was that "They do not refer to any paragraphs or page numbers in the exhibits they talk about. That leads to wasting a busy court's time by requiring it to search through the defense's exhibits in order to check the accuracy of their characterizations of parts of those documents. Perhaps, these lawyers wish the Court to accept their edited version of documents on faith."

The attorneys for the defendants in America also took allegations in the Complaint out of context, misquoted some and simply ignored others to support their objection that the accusations against their clients didn't provide enough information. The defense lawyers, however, filed so many exhibits, allegations and pages of detailed and intentionally misleading arguments in response to the Complaint that their argument of not having enough information looked ludicrous. They clearly understood what I was accusing their clients of doing, and that is all a complaint needed to do back then. But once again, the heart of this tactic was to play on the District Court not having enough time to check whether the Complaint provided the information the lawyers claimed was lacking. So I provided the District Court a listing of the pertinent paragraphs in the Complaint ignored by the defense lawyers, an accurate quoting for those misquoted and established the appropriate context for others in order to fill in the phony information gap the defense tried to create.

When the defense attorneys weren't omitting or misstating my allegations, they were calling them "outlandish, extremely broad and fantastic" or "outlandish, incredible and far-fetched." They used the word "outlandish" a lot to try to convince the District Court that my Complaint described a reality that couldn't possibly exist; therefore, the Chief Judge shouldn't assume my allegations true as generally required in deciding a motion to dismiss. For example, the defense lawyers called my allegation of the global reach of the Russian mafia a delusional fiction that read like a Tom Clancy novel. In response, I requested the District Court to take judicial notice, which it could in a motion to dismiss, of a public statement made by a former Director of the C.I.A. John Deutsch said before Congress, "Russia's criminal groups reach across international borders, including our own ... [and] have the potential to support terrorism, and contribute to the proliferation of materials, technology and weapons of mass destruction."

As I told the Court, “While the last part of this quote concerns the Tom Clancy novel The Sum of All Fears, [my] Complaint does not deal with nuclear weapons of mass destruction, just the more mundane, run of the mill Russian criminal operations in America, such as money laundering, illegal money transactions, prostitution, narcotics trafficking, extortion and fraud that are often carried out in cooperation with La Cosa Nostra.”

To further counter the defense lawyers’ dismissal of that mob’s globalization, I used a law review article by Scott Boylan from the Department of Homeland Security. “Not only does the Russian Mafia kill and steal in Russia, it does so in the United States as well. Mafia members are involved in theft, extortion, money-laundering, gun-trafficking, drug running, prostitution, smuggling, loan sharking, contract killing and more. The U.S. Department of Justice has established task forces to deal with the Russian Mafia in New York, Los Angeles, and Miami.” In addition, an article by investigative reporter Friedman in the November 7, 1994 N. Y. Magazine stated that by 1994, the Russian mob had more than 300 members in the New York area alone, making it larger than the Bonanno, Colombo, or Lucchese crime families. Further, Friedman’s Red Mafiya book warned, “Blending financial sophistication with bone-crunching violence, the Russian mob has become the FBI’s most formidable criminal adversary, creating an international criminal colossus that had surpassed the Columbian cartels, the Japanese Yakuza, the Chinese triads and the Italian mafia in wealth and weaponry. Presently, the U.S. and Russian Governments are cooperating in efforts to combat criminals operating in the United States and Russia. The FBI has assigned agents to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, while U.S. Department of Justice prosecutors currently reside in Moscow.”

If my allegations about the Russian mafia were imaginary, I argued to the Court, then why didn’t the F.B.I. save taxpayer dollars by closing down its Moscow office and its Russian organized crime unit here in New York, which was looking into some of the allegations in my RICO Complaint. So much for the Russian mafia existing only in my imagination, which I wish it did. The defense lawyers were simply copying what mobsters always do: claim their organizations are as imaginary as the tooth fairy, but no one believes that line anymore—I hoped.

Another response to the defense attorneys’ objection that my allegations were “outlandishness” was to tell the Court, “Well, of course they are because they describe the conduct of collaborators and members of the Russian mafia, which, to quote an American executive in Moscow, are ‘frigging unbelievable.’ The Complaint merely depicts the defendants’ deeds, and, if those had not been outlandish, then there would be no Complaint.”

The defense lawyers in trying to convince the Court that the Russian mafia existed only in my delusional imagination also misrepresented the Complaint as stating the only connection among the defendants was that they came into contact with the Commie Ho. To which I replied, “If coming into ‘contact’ with her was the criteria for listing a person as a defendant, then it would be impossible to list them all for Shipilina has literally had thousands of customers who have ‘come into contact’ with her. She is, however, the thread that weaves through a section of the Russian mafia. The defendants are fellow travelers who committed crimes in order to get her into the U.S., keep her here and expand the activities of the Russian mafia to its and their benefit. In the Watergate scandal, reporters Woodward and Bernstein followed the money; here the plaintiff followed the trail of Shipilina. She is a mid-level manager and asset of the Russian mafia, who works with, works for, cooperates with or directs other members and abettors of the criminal enterprise. When I walked into the cross hairs of the Russian mob, Shipilina was the one dispatched by defendant Leo Perlin to sucker me into unknowingly helping the mob infiltrate another of its members into the U.S. The only way I have been able to expose some of the workings of the defendants was by following the thread of Shipilina.”

“A little common sense is needed to show the absurdity of the defendants’ objection that they are not connected. When I worked as an associate at Cravath, Swaine and Moore or as a political producer at WABC TV Eyewitness News, I never came into contact with every member or associate of those large organizations, but it was clear that we all shared the organization’s goals and worked for that end. On anyone case or story, I was at times the only connection among different members or associates of the organization, all of whom were working to make the organization succeed and providing varying degrees of assistance on that particular case or story. That’s how large organizations work. They muster together resources, which include people, to support the pursuit of numerous activities to achieve the organization’s goals. At any one time, Cravath, Swaine and Moore is working on dozens of cases, Eyewitness News on dozens of stories and the Russian mafia on dozens of targets. Looking at only one case, one story or one target will reveal only some of the organization’s members or associates and some of them will not even know each other, but they all share the common goal and accept the means for achieving it. Otherwise, they will be fired, or, as with the Russian mafia, worst. And no, I am not claiming Cravath or Eyewitness News as being RICO enterprises.” The disclaimer in the last sentence was necessary because when dealing with low-life lawyers who torture the plain meaning of sentences to serve their ends, I needed to stop them from verbally jumping up and down like monkeys vying for a banana claiming I was so delusional that I called those organizations RICO enterprises.

The argument that the defendants were not connected also served as a ploy to maneuver the District Court into considering the allegations against each in isolation—switch the focus from the forest to the individual tree, which would change the legal outcome. “The purpose of RICO is to reach organized crime groups. If defendants are permitted to narrow the focus to individual defendants in a vacuum, then there is no RICO statute. The cause of action is against the Russian mafia of which the defendants are part. Large organizations work through individual humans who make decisions within their sphere of responsibility and carry out tasks to get them accomplished. It is a one for all, all for one situation. And that is how the law treats RICO participants: joint and individually liable for harm caused by others in an organization or association. The U.S. Senate report on RICO stated: ‘What is needed here are new approaches that will deal not only with individuals, but also with the economic base through which those individuals constitute such a serious threat to the economic well-being of the Nation.’” The only way to take down a criminal organization is by holding everyone who exercises some power in running the operation liable. Without RICO, the law could only reach individual members or confederates, not the whole collective, which was what the defense lawyers wanted.

“The Russian mafia consists of and acts through people, and no one victim, or customer, comes into contact with all the decision makers and support personnel that go into making a mafia successful. But they are there in the shadows supporting those on the front lines, giving aid and direction in order to reach the mob’s goals. For me, the Russian mafia’s retailer or, more appropriately, front, initially was Alina Shipilina, but soon other comrades in crime came out from standing in the shadows to help directly and indirectly with the mob’s scheme as it applied to me. What others are lurking behind the known defendants continue to be revealed as the Krasnodar Department for Fighting Gangsterism and Corruption conduct their investigation, and I mine.”

One diversionary tactic of the defense attorneys kept them harping that the case involved domestic relations, not RICO matters. Their underlying argument was that since a state court had already handled the domestic relations issues and the ex-husband, me, held a grudge over the results, the District Court should find some way to throw the case out. My response emphasized the larger picture, which explained how I got tripped, pushed and drugged into this mess.

“There are really only two ways a middle-aged, American, male lawyer could get involved with such a bunch—money or a woman.” The Feminazi sycophants must have loved that—screw them. “I took the road less traveled or, perhaps, more traveled. An allegory should help. While sailing the waters of the former Soviet Union in my Sun Fish, doing my work for Kroll Associates, along comes this juggernaut of pimps, prostitutes, pornographers, pushers and assorted criminals of Russian, Chechen, American and other nationalities, including a few lunatics from the Chechen Special Islamic Regiment. The juggernaut, ever scanning for the easy prey of softhearted American businessmen, spots me, and sends out one of its prostitutes as bait: a tall, blue-eyed, bleached blonde. Using duplicity and drugs, my Sun Fish is torpedoed, heads to the bottom. I’m sunk—married to a Russian prostitute who is a member of Russian organized crime although I don’t know it at the time. I bring my wife of a few months to America, and the juggernaut of the Russian mafia gets another one of its assets and mid-level managers into the premier hard currency market in the world. While this was happening to me, it was and continues to happen to others. When I finally came up for air and saw what was happening: I struggled, tried to get free, fought back to protect my rights as a human being by using the law and not stepping outside the law—but to no avail. So far, the Russian juggernaut of organized crime has been more powerful, more effective than the law because it uses lies, dissemblances, prevarication, smear tactics, threats, intimidation and bribery.”

“My dark passage began with the discovery of telephone calls that Alina Shipilina made from my apartment in order to market her sexual services to Flash Dancers’ customers. The truth led through a labyrinth of sleaze, crime and corruption that my attorney friend helped me realize was part of the Russian mafia. I am just one of the pieces of wood that the Russian mafia used to fuel its Mordor engine of greed.” The Lord of The Rings movie trilogy was big at the time.

“The only reason for the earlier domestic relations’ case was the very nature of the Russian mafia’s scheme, which includes using prostitutes in Moscow to deceive American businessmen into marriage so that the prostitutes can gain legal entry into the U.S.A. I was one of the suckers. But because the trail of the harm done to me lies behind a fraudulent marriage rather than a fraudulent business transaction does not make it any less serious. When criminal instrumentalities exploit human emotions of the heart rather than the pocket book, the victim does not lose his rights under U.S. law.”

“Today, the Russian mafia consists of assorted criminals from the former Soviet Union who have joined with underworld characters in Western markets over the past decade to create a global web of smuggling, protection, extortion, counterfeiting, tampering with witnesses, revenge, evasion of taxes and other illegal activities.” Both the Court and the defense lawyers missed the initials spelling “S.P.E.C.T.R.E.” My memorandum continued, “Russian organized crime groups, working in cooperation with each other and foreign gangsters, infiltrate lucrative, hard currency markets, such as the U.S., by taking advantage of ineffective and un-enforced immigration laws, as well as bribable officials, to illegally gain entry for the organization’s managers and human assets. I am one of the victims of this new Red menace.” Probably should have wrote, “red-lip menace.”

“Operating through some of its members and allies, the Russian mafia tricked me into bringing one of its assets to the U.S.; tried to get me to lie to the INS; secretly fed me drugs; tried to intimidate me; threatened me with physical violence; suborned and committed perjury; engaged in mail and wire fraud; bribed officials; attempted to and did tamper with witnesses and informants; laundered money; and conspired to commit murder for hire. My continuing investigation in Russia has revealed the involvement of a Chechen terror and crime clan in threatening witnesses in Krasnodar and the clan’s known connection with both Shipilinas. As a result, to this day, I continue to follow the advice given me in March 2002 by a special agent for the F.B.I.—don’t open your door to anyone you don’t know and watch out when you are in public.” Okay, so I pretended to be scared.

In order to make sure the Court realized that the Russian mob not only harmed me but other Americans as well, my memorandum continued. “Besides the harm . . . caused me by the defendants, their continuing criminal activities also injure other U.S. citizens, both individuals and companies. Through business alliances among American, Russian, Chechen and other criminals, the defendants further the Russian mafia’s operations. Prostitutes flow out of southern Russia into New York City for sale and use in lap-dancing clubs, such as Flash Dancers, or over the Internet, immigration laws are violated to get the prostitutes into America and keep them here, drugs are brought in from southern Russia to keep high end customers happy and assure their return business, prostitutes also flow from southern Russia to Cyprus and on to the U.S., prostitutes and pornography move from Moscow to southern California or first to Mexico and then into the U.S., the prostitute underground railway extends into America from southern Russia, all these operations are protected with bribery and physical intimidation, profits are laundered and the U.S. system corrupted. It is all interrelated—supply, service and production, protection, profit maximization, reinvestment and growth—with each defendant playing his or her part in the success of a large organization. An organization that targets tens of thousands of consumers for sexual services with the result of dramatically increasing the health risks to those consumers and their partners. The Russian mafia also places law-abiding entertainment companies at a competitive disadvantage by unfairly competing for entertainment dollars that would otherwise flow to the investors and employees of legitimate businesses in the leisure industry and by increasing the tax burden on legitimate companies that have to pay for the government services the Russian mafia consumes but doesn't pay for thanks to its tax evasion.”

The defense lawyers, sounding like little girls, also accused me of bringing the case to humiliate and insult the Commie Ho and other defendants. If it did—good, but that wasn't a reason for doing so much work. In answering, I played it straight—almost, and wrote, “as Charlie Chan once said, ‘truth cannot be an insult,’ if it injures a person's self-respect than that is the fault of the person, not the reporter. The defendants are simply engaging in character assassination—plaintiff seeks to humiliate, harass and is delusional—in order to shut down the argument and marginalize the plaintiff so that they do not have to argue the merits.”

The defense naturally resorted to the trendy, totalitarian lefty view that the victim is the violator and violator the victim. “Kuba, Mundy and Petrovich paint themselves as innocents that merely represent another virtuous soul, Alina Shipilina. A more accurate picture of Kuba, Mundy & Petrovich is that of a green card and visa mill getting fat on the feeding frenzy of obstructionist immigration lawyers that fail to sort out the truly oppressed from the rank opportunists and fugitive criminals. This is a case about the institutional behavior of the Russian mafia, which includes many criminal members and allies posing as legitimate businesses and law-abiding individuals. This RICO action has been brought against the archetypal, intimidating mobster, an enterprise of organized criminals, not respected and legitimate businesses and individuals.”

The defense also resorted to the technique made popular by the Feminazis of shaming men into submission to their whims by accusing men of violating the very code of chivalry that the Feminazis profess subjugates females by treating them differentially. Sounds contradictory, but it is not if you are a broad. Feminazis will use any means to their desired end that for all things good in society, females should be treated equally with men, but for all things bad, girls should remain protected on their pedestal of angelic purity—hypocrisy pure and simple.

Just like the Feminazis, the defendants’ mouthpieces tried to embarrass and demonize me for violating the code of chivalry by setting up the Russian language website to gather evidence for the annulment/divorce case. They blustered it was “inappropriate and offensive” for making public the Commie Ho’s “personal diary and nude photographs without her knowledge or consent” and including clips of her masturbation video. The defense lawyers self-righteously condemned my actions, as “criminal matters being handled by Detective Henning.” What a bunch of lying hypocrites. As I pointed out to the Court. They knew no crimes were committed by the website, didn’t even cite to any criminal statutes, because the Commie Ho already had made the naked pictures public by selling them to her prostitution customers, such as “Grandpa” in Cyprus. Besides, I owned the rights to those photos taken by her Moscow pimp Leo. As for the masturbation video, Paulsen abandoned his rights but allowed Perlin to use certain scenes, the ones I had, for advertising to the public his stable of whores. Advertising was one of the usages that the Commie Ho signed away when she got paid for the video. As for the diary, publicizing the truth about the Commie Ho in her own words didn’t amount to any crime. At best, the lawyers might have copyright infringement against me but no crimes—not even a violation or misdemeanor. Naturally, the Feminazis persuasion sees it differently because as with all broads the truth ruins their schemes, and anyone opening that box, especially a man, should go to jail. But that's not what the law says—yet.

What really made these lawyers' alluding to "criminal matters" despicable, however, was that the documents they submitted to the District Court included an affidavit by Detective Henning that stated he referred the website complaint to the Queens District Attorney who had found no criminal violation. Gee, that was news to me! Anyway, even though the D.A. said no crimes were committed, that didn't stop these lawyers from trying to bias the Court by accusing me of such. The lawyers assumed the amount of documents they gave the District Court would cause it to miss the discrepancy between their words and the facts. But even if the Court caught it, that didn't matter much because the lawyers really wanted to manipulate the Political Correctionalist sensitivities of the Court by painting me as one of the new lepers, the new American bogeyman and escape goat for Feminarchy America—a heterosexual male who refused to metamorphose into the Feminazis' modern day, sensitive, androgynous wimp. The defense lawyers were exploiting the modern-day mind set of Mencken's boobs that whenever a guy didn't cow tow to female whims, or become what they wanted, he should go to jail. The lawyers could have saved their energy and just asked me what I considered myself, and I would have freely admitted to being the Feminazis' worst nightmare—a man.

Henning's affidavit proved useful for other reasons. Henning swore that after he heard back from the District Attorney, he closed the case on June 19, 2002; a year after the Commie Ho filed her complaint that I had violated the order of protection and three months after notifying me early in the morning of my imminent arrest. Henning claimed it took so long, nine months, for him to get around to trying to arrest me because he couldn't find a Russian to translate the website and because of the 911 tragedy. The lazy, incompetent and deceitful will use any excuse. Henning, however, told me over the telephone in March 2002 that my pending arrest was based on the Commie Ho recently filing a complaint for my violating the Temporary Order of Protection, not on a complaint she had filed nine months earlier and which he just got around to calling me about. No, the whole episode was Henning illegally using his police position on behalf of the Ho and her attorneys to intimidate me into keeping my mouth shut to the INS.

When Henning allegedly heard back from the D.A. in June 2002, he didn't tell my attorneys about my exoneration, although my lawyers had called him a few times over the summer and fall of 2002 to find out the status of the case. Neither did he call me in the early morning hours to tell me. The closing of the case was unknown to me until I read Henning's affidavit in October 2003, more than one year after Henning claimed the D.A. made a decision and more than two years after he claimed the Commie Ho filed her complaint. Something wasn't right. My lawyers or I should have been notified about the case's closing when it occurred, not as a result of an affidavit in a RICO case that no one knew was going to happen at the time.

The RICO suit had forced Henning to submit an affidavit that covered up his work for the Commie Ho and her attorney. So perhaps Henning claiming the D.A. decided not to prosecute was also part of the cover-up necessitated by Henning never having referred the case to the D.A. in the first place. Henning probably thought I would stay shaking in my boots waiting for an answer from the D.A. that would never come or not until Henning, with the Commie Ho and Mundy's okay, decided I had been a good boy, and then he would call my attorneys to say the D.A. decided not to prosecute. It was an ingenuous way to drag out the threat of arrest because without it, they no longer had a club for trying to keep me quiet or at least curtailing some of my activities.

To confirm my theory, I filed a freedom of information request with the Queens D.A. They had no records concerning me—none. I was right, Henning made up the story about his referral of the Commie Ho's complaint to the District Attorney in order to keep the threat of arrest looming over my head. It was just another effort on the part of Mundy and the Commie Ho to protect themselves from the law by stepping on my rights. They probably thought it had worked too, until they got hit with the RICO case. Boy that must have surprised them.

Henning likely committed perjury before the Federal court, but the Chief Judge wouldn't care unless the case made it to discovery where I could show Henning's affidavit false. In reality, federal and state courts generally don't care how much defendants lie so long as a case is dismissed; therefore, it makes sense for defendants to maximize their mendacity in order to obtain a dismissal. If the gamble doesn't work, the worse a judge will do is scold them—big deal.

Another phony “criminal matter being handled by Detective Henning” was the Commie Ho's report to the police in December 2000 claiming I had tried to extort money from her. She didn't press charges, so the cops didn't investigate, and I knew nothing about it until May 2003 when Mundy filed his disciplinary complaint against me. Mundy clearly told her to file the report but not press charges. Doing so allowed Mundy to duck my disciplinary complaint against him for attempted coercion but was that the reason, since he didn't know at the time I would file a complaint?

What other reasons were there for the Commie Ho to file a report without pressing charges, do it in mid December 2000 and then call me two weeks later from Krasnodar on New Year's Eve feigning a tear-choked voice to wish me Happy New Year and new millennium. Some people thought the new millennium started in 2001, but the Commie Ho was not one of them. She used it as the typical psychological female trick to create in my emotions the false hope of a new beginning and communicate the phony implication that she wanted me back—she didn't. She just wanted to trick me into helping her with the INS, and this pretense, from the female point of view, was one way to do it. Girls always delude themselves into thinking a guy wants to give the relationship another try, and then try to exploit what sometimes is true for wishy-washy men. But that's not a problem I ever had. When the dating ends, no matter who slammed on the brakes—it's over for eternity.

While drafting my response to the defense lawyers' motion, I finally figured out why Mundy told the Commie Ho not to press charges in December 2000 and explained to the District Court the real story behind the false accusation of extortion that never became a criminal matter. "In late October 2000, Shipilina and I met with Petrovich at Kuba, Mundy & Associates to arrange for a separation, to be followed by a divorce. At this meeting I was advised by Petrovich, after he consulted with Mundy, to lie in an affidavit to the INS in order to assure that Shipilina would obtain a permanent green card. Afterward, I consulted with an attorney friend and in no uncertain terms, he confirmed that my decision not to lie was the only acceptable course of action. I notified Shipilina that I would not lie for her to the INS, after that, on December 13, 2000, she filed the perjured police report alleging an extortion attempt by me. The filing of the perjured report claiming extortion came after a divorce was imminent, and after I refused to cooperate with Kuba, Mundy, Petrovich and Shipilina's shenanigans to defraud the INS. Rather than demonstrating moral turpitude in me, the filing of the false report more reasonably infers an effort to create a false record by which Kuba, Mundy, Petrovich and Shipilina could pressure me into lying before the INS or use to their advantage in a divorce proceeding that appeared imminent at that time. Otherwise, why file a report on which charges are not pressed unless to hold that ammunition in reserve and press charges later.” Another reason was to use the false report to bolster her application for a VAWA waiver.

The defense attorneys’ demonizing efforts even attacked me for approaching law enforcement agencies and the courts as “objectively offensive and repugnant” and an attempt to “harass and incense.” If the District Court buys that, I argued, it would “send a chilling message to any U.S. citizen who foolishly chooses to fight for his rights. If he loses, the courts will still use that to throw out any cause of action that reveals itself later on. The right to pursue justice through the legal system will be a right in name only. Besides I was the one who received threatening telephone calls, so who’s being harassed; who’s being intimidated by a large underworld entity—not the defendants. I’m the one who has been threaten by a bureaucrat with arrest on a bogus charge and told by the F.B.I., the premier law enforcement agency in the world, to watch out for myself in public.”

The attorneys also claimed that because government bureaucrats did nothing to help me, it proved I improperly used the legal system. To which I responded, “Perhaps these bureaucrats are of the same quality that granted two of the 911 hijackers their visas, just months after killing thousands. During all my requests to the legal system, I thought the judiciary would help me, and made three requests for protection orders—but to no avail. I reported threats recorded on audiotape to the police and F.B.I.—but to no avail. So if anything, I’m a dope, but that is not grounds for dismissing a RICO complaint—I don’t think!”

The defense lawyers, like all sleaze attorneys, indulged in creating false impressions by omitting facts and manipulating the meaning of words. For instance, the defense attorneys manufactured the illusion that Mundy, an upstanding attorney, “reluctantly” filed—long before learning about the RICO suit—a disciplinary grievance against me because of my “assault of frivolous litigation.” There’s that word “frivolous” again. The crux of the false impression is the claim that Mundy didn’t know about the RICO suit when he filed the disciplinary complaint, which allowed his attorney to claim Mundy acted in good faith by using the only means left to him to put an end to my assault of litigation against “innocent” people. The attorneys couldn’t admit the truth that Mundy knew about the RICO suit before filing the disciplinary complaint because it would look like what it was—trying to use the Disciplinary Committee to scare me off of the RICO case, which is a no, no, and Mundy would no longer appear the innocent, upstanding attorney but rather one willing to trample Constitutional rights to reach his end.

Here’s how the defense attorneys created the deception. They recounted the time line of events that showed Mundy filed the disciplinary complaint before he was “served” with the RICO Complaint, which was true, but that implied he didn’t know about the RICO case before filing his disciplinary complaint, which was false. Under the law, “serve” means an official procedure by which the summons and complaint are provided to the defendant. However, a defendant may know about a lawsuit against him even though he has not yet been served. When Mundy filed his disciplinary complaint, he had not been served, but already had a copy of the RICO Complaint as a result of my mailing it to him with a request to allow me to avoid the cost of official service. The defense attorneys conveniently left this mailing out of their time line, which created the intended false impression for the District Court that Mundy did not know of the RICO suit when he filed the disciplinary complaint. Rather stupid on the part of the lawyers since Mundy even talks about the RICO case in his disciplinary complaint, but, once again, the attorneys were counting on the Court missing that point due to the large number of documents they filed.

Many attorneys will use any ploy imaginable. The defense even made a play for sympathy on the other side of the coin that depicted me as the villain by saying I was on a “quest to harass, intimidate and persecute.” To which I wrote for the District Court, “It seems a little ludicrous that I, a sole practitioner lawyer, eking out a living, could ‘harass, intimidate and persecute’ an entire law firm that advertises on the Internet in Russian and has offices in New Jersey, New York City and Rockland County, New York. Or that I could persecute a lucrative strip club advertised as “Live from the heart of N.Y.C.” in Times Square, a New York City Police Detective, a medical doctor and a wealthy Russian prostitute along with numerous others, including gangsters and Islamic lunatics. If I have caused such trials and tribulations, then why haven’t the defendants filed harassment actions and complained to the police about intimidation? Because there’s no basis. Where are their allegations of my arranging threatening telephone calls and threats of arrest or surreptitiously feeding them drugs? There are none. Only the objection that I sought to redress the harm done to me and protect my physical safety from what I now know is the Russian mafia. The defendants ask this Court to not only grant dismissal because they don’t like me exercising my rights as an American, but also request this Court to act as a medieval inquisitor that would permanently crush my constitutional rights with ‘an injunction barring me from filing any future related claims.’” The American defendants had asked the Court to prevent me from ever bringing another suit based on their actions that had harmed me in any court that existed. Even the U.S. Feminazi court system wouldn’t go that far. I continued, “No the defendants are not the victims. I was the one tricked, drugged and pushed into this sinkhole of a situation when I ran a foul of a large criminal organization operating out of Russia.”

All the defense lawyers’ lies, half-truths, character assassinations and smear tactics were to bias the District Court against me, to castigate me—an American man—as unworthy of the right to seek legal redress, so that the Court would fine or create a legal loophole to throw the case out. While assassinating my character, the lawyers and their clients hypocritically proclaimed their virtue as do whores their virginity.

She Works Hard for the Money

At the end of one day while still working in the law library on my opposition memorandum to the American defendants’ motion to dismiss, the idea lit my consciousness to search the Commie Ho’s name “Angelina Shipilina” on the Internet. With a few minutes to waste before my Salsa class, I ran the search. Up pops five pictures of the Ho on www.Russianny.com.

It’s a web site in Russian for Russian professionals living in the Northeast, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Toronto Canada. The site’s sponsors were running a Miss Russian New York beauty contest in which people registered as members voted for their favorite Russian slut. Only girls 25 years old or under and amateurs could enter. The Commie Ho was 28 and a professional model, but that didn’t stop her from lying her way into the contest. She came in seventh using the theme “bringing light to others”—more like darkness and dread. This was the beauty contest the Ho’s mother Inessa told the Ho’s old boyfriend in Krasnodar about back in March. More information would eventually reveal itself, such as the name of the “good boyfriend” that Inessa also bragged about.

The web site allowed members, mostly Russians, to send private messages to any of the girls in the contest, contact other members through a chat room and message board and participate in the largest Russian Internet dating service in America. All very useful for a Russian call girl operation to reach and screen its customers. This was most likely how the Commie Ho and others like her sold themselves, concentrating on the Russian criminal market, the guys with money. She probably only hoed part-time, since I doubted she'd give up the over one hundred grand a year tax free she made stripping 40 hours a week. Another part of the site listed erotica, so I took a quick look and there was a girl looking a lot like her giving a blowjob. She probably did porn on the side as well. Mark and others who knew her checked the photo out, and they thought it was she. As with the Flash Dancers' advertisement, her appearance altered to match the gig, maybe there was no real her at all, only a changeling, a meta-ho-morph in appearance as well as personality.

The defendants in Russia for whom I could dig up addresses were finally served with the Summons and Complaint in November 2003, except for the Commie Ho's mother Inessa and the purveyor of girls Alexey Smolin. The delay, caused by the time to translate the documents, was permitted under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure but didn't impact the schedule for the American defendants' motion to dismiss. Why was that, I wondered? Anyway, I still needed to serve Inessa and Smolin. The first try at serving them was to have the District Court mail the documents, but that relied on the local Krasnodar postman to make the delivery. Assuming the postman didn't just throw the packages in the garbage to save work, not uncommon for Russian postal employees, Inessa and Smolin probably bribed him to do it anyway since the Court never received the return receipt card. Next, the Court used Federal Express, and neither bribe nor lie nor threat of force kept Fed Ex from the swift completion of its appointed rounds. Smolin was served at his temporary place of work the “Lucky Grand” and Inessa at the Academy where I hoped the Fed Ex man might attract the attention of the gossipy Russian girls milling in the hallways.

As for the defendants in America that I could identify, they were all served months earlier but two of them claimed the service improper: the Commie Ho’s Russian lawyer Petrovich, and the Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network. In trying to duck service, the lawyer for Petrovich and Mundy argued that when my process server left the documents for Petrovich at the law firm of Kuba, Mundy & Associates, the service was ineffective because he didn’t work there, which was false. The Commie Ho and I had met the guy at the firm to discuss a divorce in 2000, and I telephoned the firm just before service in the summer of 2003 to confirm he still worked there. Who did these guys think they were kidding—not me, but the District Court. Okay, so I’ll serve him at his home address, which I previously learned from the Commie Ho’s mobile telephone records when she still lived with me.

The address I had for Petrovich’s apartment was a brownstone on the Upper Eastside, not bad for a struggling Russian immigrant. The building contained about six apartments, but Petrovich’s name wasn’t listed on any of the buzzers. So I buzzed all the apartments, a trick I learned from Sam Spade in The Maltese Falcon, until an older and younger lady opened the front door to the building. They said Petrovich had moved to Brooklyn a couple of years ago, so I checked the post office forwarding records, nothing. Then I looked on the Internet, nothing, and finally got a private eye but none of the leads panned out. Petrovich had disappeared from the residency roles for New York City, but kept the same telephone number he had for his Upper Eastside address where he no longer lived. In the old days before the breakup of Ma Bell, my friend Alan could find the billing address for any New York number, but not anymore because the number could belong to any phone company and each had its own procedure for accessing records. These Russian criminals are smarter than al Qaeda. Some of the 911 hijackers were actually listed in the telephone book—no wonder the F.B.I. couldn't find them.

Giving up my search for Petrovich's home address, I decided to prove he worked at Mundy's law firm. Alan agreed to call the firm pretending to be one of Petrovich's clients to see if he still worked there. I couldn't do it because the District Court wouldn't believe an affidavit from me. When I told Alan the name Peter Petrovich, he translated it as Peter Peter, which was correct, but something I had missed. It seemed strange to me for a Russian to have the same first name and surname, but I let it go. The firm's receptionist told Alan that Petrovich no longer worked in the office but from home. Sounded like the law firm had its cover-up in place. Alan also talked with a paralegal at Mundy's firm whom he asked where to send documents for Petrovich. The paralegal said to the firm, which was all I needed. Under the law, by receiving business correspondence at the firm, Petrovich could be served there with legal documents because the law assumes people pick up their business mail. So legally, Petrovich received the Summons and Complaint when they were left for him with the firm's receptionist even though he might now work at home.

In response to Alan's affidavit, Dubin the lead defense lawyer, as well as Mundy and Petrovich's attorney, filed an affidavit in Petrovich's name—lawyers rather than their clients always write these affidavits, although the client swears to them. Petrovich didn't deny receiving business correspondence at the firm; he just swore he did not "maintain" his place of business there. Might be true, I doubted it, but under the law it didn't matter, Petrovich had been served. Dubin also put an unnecessary lie into Petrovich's affidavit that Petrovich "served merely as a translator for the law firm on certain occasions." Dubin also told the Court that he would give me Petrovich's address if I asked, so I asked but Dubin just ignored it. Why was the lead counsel trying so hard to keep Petrovich out of the case?

Petrovich's affidavit raised another anomaly, why did he use an Armenian notary public from San Francisco County in California to verify he was whom he claimed when signing his affidavit? Had Petrovich skipped town or were the defense lawyers trying to make me think he did? What finally dawned in my often overly thick skull was that the name Peter Petrovich was a fake name he could get away with in America but not Russia. Petrovich is a Russian man's patronymic that means his father's first name was Peter, so Peter Petrovich is a man without a surname, not possible in Russia. Also, he used an Armenian notary public because Armenia once belonged to the Soviet Union, so its people would be at the same level of ethical conduct as Russians—zero. Petrovich is hiding his real name. If the District Court includes him as a defendant, and my case makes it to discovery, he won't be able to keep it a secret anymore. But why should that matter to the defendants and their lawyers unless Petrovich is more important and dirtier than I thought. With his full name, I could easily find any Russian criminal records concerning him and maybe U.S. as well. But I needed his surname to determine Petrovich's real identity, which the defense wants to keep secret.

The other American defendant who tried to duck service was Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network, the Internet purveyor of porn and call girls. Cybertech's attorney called me in December 2003, so he had to have received the Summons and Complaint; otherwise, he wouldn't know who to call.

He started off in the usual obnoxious way of attorneys who think they can intimidate people, "My client was never served, so we are under absolutely no obligation whatsoever to respond to your frivolous Complaint!" I'm really getting tired of that word.

“So how did your client get the Summons and Complaint?” I asked.

“That doesn’t matter. You used the wrong name and left the Complaint at the wrong address. Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network is not the corporate name.”

“Okay, I give up, what is the corporate name?”

“I’m not at liberty to disclose it.”

“So why are you calling me then?”

“I’d like an agreement that you wouldn’t do anything until the current motion to dismiss is decided.” I wasn’t buying that. By agreeing to do nothing, the District Court would conclude I wasn’t serious about suing Cybertech; otherwise, I wouldn’t have relinquished my rights to do something immediately to bring Cybertech under the Court’s jurisdiction. A long time ago at a deposition in a multi-billion dollar hostile takeover, I learned to never agree to anything the opposing counsel requests—it’s always a trick and I didn’t fall into it then. Cybertech’s lawyer was also trying to save himself some work, typical.

“If you have a problem with service, then make a motion to the District Court.” I said.

“I’m not yet admitted to the District Court.” That was the lamest excuse I ever heard.

“Then get admitted pro hac vice.” That means for one time only. He ignored my suggestion.

“The Complaint is in the wrong name and was not left at my client’s office, so my client is not obliged to do anything.” He then tried to pump me for some information as to who was helping me.

“Those are depositions questions, and I am not at present in a deposition.” He shut up, and the conversation ended.

By checking with the New York Secretary of State, I found out he was right about my not using the registered corporate name, which was Cybertech Internet Solutions. But I did use the name under which Cybertech created and managed its pornography and escort services website, www.stripclubescorts.com, as well as Flash Dancers', which was good enough for service since Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network and Internet Solutions were in reality one and the same. As for his objection that service was improper because made at the wrong address, I knew it wouldn't hold up because it wasn't the wrong address. Before having the documents served, I called up Cybertech's CEO pretending I wanted to set up a porn site. He said I could stop by his office at 50 West 33rd Street to discuss it. I didn't, but did check out that his office was inside the Paradise lap-dancing club, where guys pay to make out, feel up and do more with the hos in a side room, which doesn't nullify service.

My three months of purgatory in the law library, five and six days a week, finally came to an end when I finished my opposition memorandum on December 18, 2003. Eleven years to the day after my mother's death. No I didn't see any connection, only wondered why I ever decided to become a lawyer? Should have done what I liked, Physics, but we've been through that. Regardless of what the matrix had made me, I was still going to try for some justice and retribution before oblivion because as Bob Dylan said, "In ceremonies of the horsemen, even the pawn must hold a grudge." And I knew against whom I held mine—the Feminazis. Without them, the Commie Ho would have been in jail.

A few days after filing my opposition, I received a tax bill from the State of Massachusetts. It seems as though the only activity the bureaucrats in governments and businesses undertake is to shakedown citizens for more money to waste on benefits for illegal aliens and the corporate rich. Massachusetts was never my residence, except for a couple of years at Boston University decades ago, so why was it sending me a bill? Because I owned a piece of the Casablanca Restaurant on Brattle Street in Cambridge and was unfortunate enough to receive dividends. The amount was small, and if I was a Massachusetts resident, fully deductible, but because I lived out of state, I got nailed with a tax. That Feminazi sycophant state, which had just ripped off federal taxpayers across the country for billions of dollars to dig a ditch for a leaky tunnel in downtown Boston with huge cost overruns, now wanted more from me because I didn't live there. So what happened to the rallying cry made famous in that state, "No taxation without representation?" Modern-day, Orwellian Massachusetts had changed the old cry for justice to one of "No taxation with representation." My vote didn't count in Massachusetts because I couldn't vote there, so why do I get taxed while those who can vote get a deduction? The state got its money.

Months later, however, Massachusetts sends me the all-too-typical threatening bureaucratic letter trying to trick me into paying again by working the scam that the stress hormones their scare tactic was meant to activate would fog my memory. Well, I had my original records, and wrote back, "You lying, cheating, scam artists, I already paid this bill!" I wanted to add but didn't, "You are of the same mentality as the idiots who let those clowns board the planes to take out the World Trade Center, and now you want money from me I already paid that you didn't deserve in the first place. I hope Uncle Usama targets you next." Russia may be a criminal society, but America is a corrupt one filled with cozeners—a distinction in degrees only. Both countries are jungles with predators and prey—guess who wins?

Around Christmas my attention focused on Cybertech. Its lawyer was going to sit on his ass until the District Court ruled on the dismissal motions. Then, no matter how the Court ruled, he'd argue that I failed to take timely action to respond to his notice that my Complaint was not properly served, and ask the Court to dismiss the case against his client. So I filed for an "Application for Default" against Cybertech, which assumed the Complaint had been properly served. That should force the issue and prevent Cybertech's lawyer from claiming I sat on my rights.

An Application for Default is just the first step in a long process. If approved, the District Court eventually holds a hearing on whether to enter a default judgment against the defendant. The Court would deny the application, which it did, because default is a drastic measure that says the plaintiff wins as a result of the defendant failing to show up and oppose the accusations against him. Courts don't like to do that, and that wasn't my purpose. The purpose was to get Cybertech to appear in the District Court, a legal technicality by which the Court would then have power over Cybertech. The porn lawyer would then have to either accept the service as proper or move that it wasn't. It also showed the Court that I wasn't sleeping on my rights. In order to goad Cybertech's lawyer into appearing, I sent him a copy of the Application for Default even though it wasn't required. The Application showed the District Court the kind of sleaze operation Cybertech ran and exploited the cliché of illiterate goons pimping girls.

Cybertech ran an on-line prostitution business through its Strip Club Escorts at www.stripclubescorts.com. The copies of the web pages that I included as exhibits in the Application showed some tame pictures of hos for sale as "Dinner Companions," Nightlife Companion," "Weekend Getaways," and "Business Trips." Pretty good advertising for hoods, they spelled six words correct out of eight. Cybertech also offered hos for bachelor parties and translation services, which isn't normally part of a call girl operation unless the sluts are foreign, as in illegal aliens. Cybertech touted "We offer numerous packages to suit your needs whether it is professional or personal. Call now to find out about custom packages to cater to whatever your individual needs might be. No matter what the occasion, our talents will inevitably be the primary attraction at your event.” By “talents” they meant whores.

Predictably, Cybertech’s lawyer sent the District Court a letter opposing my application with the proverbial insulting language directed towards me. But with that letter, Cybertech appeared in Court, and its lawyer would have to either accept service or make a motion claiming it improper. As for the Application for Default issue, the porn lawyer’s letter meant nothing, as did my letter in response. But my response letter did give me another opportunity to show the District Court some more examples of what Cybertech sold and show up the lawyer as unschooled in the law.

Cybertech’s lawyer claimed my Application “during the holiday season is indicative of the underhanded, though clumsy, manner in which Plaintiff has attempted to gain a judgment over Cybertech without providing that company with a fair opportunity to respond to allegations against it.” To which I pointed out that the lawyer didn’t understand that an Application for Default was just the first step towards a judgment for default, and that no matter how quickly the Court acted, a judgment would not occur during the Christmas season. “In addition, there is no requirement that an Application for Default be served on the defendant. Apparently, Cybertech’s attorney does not know this either. But in the spirit of fairness and openness, the application was served on Cybertech’s attorney. In any event, since service of the application has had the effect of prodding Cybertech’s attorney to finally appear on behalf of his client, I request the Court either set a schedule for Cybertech to answer or file a motion to dismiss. The attorney’s reason for delaying his response to the Complaint served six months ago because he was not admitted to the Southern District appears disingenuous, since he could have applied to the Court to appear pro hac vice—it's only $25."

Cybertech's attorney also called the RICO action against his client "ill-conceived," that I "had to know that Cybertech Internet Solutions was not incorporated under the name Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network" and my "failure to exercise due diligence with respect to the matter of properly designating Cybertech in the Complaint is unprofessional and inexcusable." These defense lawyers just couldn't get away from name-calling or making claims as to what I knew. The attorney's reference to Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network, however, gave me an opening to include some pages of smut showing that Cybertech operated a porno and call girl site under the name of Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network. Included in my response were pages from Cybertech's "Global Porn Host" site showing one girl mouthing a silver dildo and another drenched in a white substance dripping from her naked body. That ought to get the Court's attention and tick off the porn lawyer as well as the Feminazi sycophants in the halls of injustice.

Cybertech's attorney further claimed I didn't use its registered name in order to "create the unfair impression that there is a linkage between Cybertech and some of the other defendants." Naturally this less than truthful attorney ignored that Cybertech hosted and managed Flash Dancers website, sounded like a "linkage" to me and probably did to the Court as well. As a final dig at the attorney, I notified the Court that the New York Secretary of State listed Cybertech as an "inactive" corporation, which meant it failed to pay the yearly franchise fee charged every corporation, implying it's a dead beat. The Court decided to include Cybertech in the motion schedule.

On the Road Again

In early January 2004, Blackie called to see whether I'd like to go on one last road trip. His days were numbered, the cancer was back, but he kept hanging in there. For me, life held nothing other than my battle for justice against the Commie Ho, her ne'er-do-well criminal allies and the Feminazis—a true axis of evil. But I had time for a short vacation.

“Where to?” I asked.

“Texas and Mexico where it's warm, and I can walk on the beach one last time.”

“Could be the last time for both of us.”

Blackie laughed, “Yeah, Roy boy, nothing but blue skies ahead.”

To which I laughed appreciating the utter absurdity of our lives and remembering a quote from A Candle In Hell, “To realize the uselessness, purposelessness, worthlessness and hopelessness of our lives is to be truly strong.” Both Blackie and I had finally achieved the realization part, knew in our guts the truth of it, but the strength seemed to elude us both. The trip held all the promise of a Pirandello play but still sounded good to me. I always liked the beach. It brought a peace but never any answers, which didn't matter anymore, since I now knew the answers, although too late to do me any good. One final trip to sun, balmy breezes and young girls in bikinis appealed to my foreboding mental state in dreary, gray and cold New York City. Besides, the time spent would bring me a little closer to oblivion.

“When do you want to go?” I asked.

“Well, I'm thinking of mid January for a week. You can fly into Memphis or New Orleans; I'll meet you there. Memphis would be better for me.”

“Let's do Memphis. There's a lull in my RICO work right now. I'm just waiting for the American defendants' lawyers to reply to my opposition memorandum that I filed in December.”

“I thought they already put in their motions.”

“They did, but still get a chance to reply to my opposition. The way the whole procedure works is that the plaintiff first files a complaint. Then the defendants’ attorneys, assuming their clients guilty, use a motion to dismiss memorandum to shout and scream about how evil and misguided is the plaintiff and how innocent are the defendants. After ranting on with as much hostility and ridicule that their command of the English language permits, they throw in a few fake legal arguments and then ask the court to bounce the plaintiff’s case out into the street. The plaintiff, assuming he’s not a goon like the defendants, responds with an opposition memorandum in which he tries to expose the defense attorneys’ lies and asks the court to let the case proceed. Finally, the defense lawyers get the last written word called a reply in which they usually tell even more lies than the first time and more outrageously assail the plaintiff’s character because he has no more opportunities to write another memorandum countering the defense attorneys’ latest falsehoods.”

“So, you don’t get the final word to show up these other lawyers as liars?”

“That’s right, but I can request an oral argument, which I did, and hope this District Judge grants it.”

“Don’t you have a right to an oral argument?”

“No, so you see the more defense lawyers lie in their final memorandum, called the reply, the better for them, since no court has the time to check all the lies, assuming they tell a lot of them like the guys I’m up against. And even if the Court grants me oral argument, there’s no way it’ll give me enough time to expose all their deceptions.”

“What a system! Just like everything else in America, geared for the crooks. So when do they send you their reply?”

“Dubin, the defense’s lead lawyer, called a few days ago to ask me to agree to an extension of time. He said he had been on vacation and didn’t read my 147-page memorandum yet. I’m sure he was on vacation, just as I’m sure he was lying about not reading my memorandum.”

“A hundred and forty seven pages you wrote!”

“That’s how long it took to counter the defense’s lies, prevarications and tricks in their 66-page memorandum.”

“So how’d you know the lead lawyer was lying?”

“Because lawyers always try to create false assumptions in their opponents—the better to upset them with surprises, just a form of psychological warfare. This clown even told me that his second memorandum, the reply, would be shorter than the first. No it wouldn’t; it’ll be longer. That’s why he wants the additional time.”

“Did you give him more time?”

“I told him he could have all the time he wanted. Besides, whether I agreed to an extension or not, the District Court would probably grant it, since courts figure the more time that goes by, the more likely the parties will get fed up with the case and agree to a settlement.”

“Are you willing to settle?”

“It depends; I’ll see. But I’ll have to get passed their motion to dismiss. If the District Court throws my case out, there will be no settlement offer from them unless I win an appeal—if then?”

“Well at least you’re costing them money and a lot of aggravation.”

“Yeah, isn’t that a shame. As a lawyer, you don’t always have to win a case, to win a case.” We laughed and picked some dates for our road trip.

In mid-January I flew into Memphis.

The weather was a little cool but sunny, and Blackie and I figured it'd warm up on our way south. Blackie had changed our destination from Texas and Mexico to Mississippi and the Florida panhandle, "I didn't think Mexico was so far away until I looked at the map," he said.

"You mean you were planning this trip based on what you learned in our third grade class on geography?"

"Yeah," he laughed.

"Oh brother, I can imagine where this trip is going." Laughing myself. "I remember that class, and we like the rest of the guys spent most of our time trying to look up the hot young blonde teacher's dress."

"Yet, I had forgotten about her. No wonder you were always getting into trouble, so you could stay after class!"

Our first stop: Elvis' house. Rather small, and boy did he have bad taste in decorating, but who I am I to criticize the king of rock 'n' roll. We then drove into northern Mississippi just across the Tennessee border where Blackie had booked a room in a casino-hotel. There were a bunch of casino-hotels in this area. Mississippi, always one of the poorest states in the country, finally found a booming industry that attracted the geriatric set. Except for one girl selling spiked juice drinks, who was married and couldn't speak understandable English, at least the English I spoke, I didn't spot one good looking young babe in the casinos we went to. Blackie didn't care, since he liked the thrill of gambling or more accurately the chance of easy money with no work. Gambling only bored me, I wanted to hit on the showgirls, but there were none—not even a show.

Next day we headed due south, still cool weather but now no sun. Miles and miles of nothing, except for one huge confederate flag flying over what looked like a rebel camp. Blackie wasn't up for dropping in to see what was going on there.

"Why not?" I said. "After all, who won the war, them or us? We'll just tell them we're following up on Reconstruction."

"Yeah, I'll let you off, but don't choke on my dust as I leave you there."

At dusk, we found a motel in the Capitol Jackson. At 8 p.m., I left Blackie in the motel suffering from some ancillary lung problems to find me some dinner and check out this rebel town. Stopped in a trendy spot for the worst hot turkey sandwich of my life, then drove around. Nothing moved on the streets other than a car or two. What did these people do for a social life, cotillions once a year? I'll stay in New York City, thank you. I went back to the motel. Blackie and I continued to have lots of laughs about our lives that found two middle-aged Yankee men taking a road trip through the confederacy.

The next day, we reached Biloxi on the Gulf Coast. There were no teenage girls in bikinis, no sunny skies, no hot sun, no balmy breezes, just the cold down pour of rain soaking a deserted beach.

"So where's the tropical beach you promised?" I sarcastically asked. "Want to go take a walk in the cold rain swept sands? We can pick up some monsoon gear."

"Hey, it's not my fault. Last time I was here, it was sunny, warm and girls all over the place?"

"And when was that—July or August?"

"No, it was back in the nineties, same time of year, January."

"Yeah, probably during El Nino! Didn't you check the weather forecasts?"

“Nah, I didn’t have the energy.”

“Oh, you’re wheezing lungs again.” I needled him. “I can see you at home with your wife, ‘Oh, dear get me this, do that, I’m feeling some palpitations.’ Hey come to New York. I’ll get you some Latina ladies to give you real palpitations.” We laughed at the absurdity of our last road trip on which the gods, as with our lives, decided to rain.

Driving along Beach Boulevard, we looked for a place to stay. This part of Biloxi looked real nice with large old houses lined up facing the Gulf Coast. What a great place to live before the casinos invaded with the traffic jams and the usual riff-raff of which we were two. One casino sign advertised Sarah Brightman, so I told Blackie to pull over. I wanted to catch her act. Probably the hottest babe in entertainment, Brightman knew how to make men want her and ladies want to be like her. She was the complete antithesis of the no make-up, sexless Feminazi that deluded itself into thinking it was beautiful. Brightman epitomized what Mother Nature intended in creating woman, pure femininity and very dangerous for men. She would have been a joy to watch and to daydream about, but we were a week too early. What did I expect for a trip organized by my buddy Blackie? We found a nice quiet motel—well, actually the entire state of Mississippi rates as quiet. There wasn’t much to do in Biloxi other than hang out at the casinos and catch a very tame showgirls act that was probably on the high school circuit.

Our second day, still rainy, and while driving along Beach Boulevard we started talking about our childhoods back in Midland Park, New Jersey. Blackie enjoyed his, except for a pontificating hypocrite of an uncle who naturally was friends with my father—Nazis always stick together.

“My days growing up were hell.” I replied. “As bad as things are now, my childhood was worse.”

“What was so bad? Your father was a jerk, but your mother always seemed nice.”

Blackie said.

“Nice like the Queen of the Damned. She only pretended to be nice for those outside the family, but inside, she was the real horror, ranting and raving. She did more harm to my brother and me than our father.”

“I never saw that. Your mother always smiled and acted friendly while your father never said a word, just gave me a cold-dead stare like what are you doing here.” Blackie recalled mockingly.

“Acted is right. Sincerity never existed behind that phony smile of a mask or the melodious voice she used to trick people. The only honest feelings she ever expressed were cold-blooded self-interest, greed and anger. Not unlike the Commie Ho. Actually, I’d like to resurrect mother, so I could lock her in a room with the ex-wife. Father was never as dangerous; everyone knew he was a miserable jerk. I learned by five to never tell him the truth and avoid him as much as possible, which wasn’t hard since he was trying to stay away from mother and the house as much as he could. Given the she-devil he married, I can’t blame him.”

“At least you had your older brother.”

“Not really. When I was eight, they sent him away to prep school, which left me to face the full brunt of the witch’s brew of mother’s failing looks and menopause. It was around then that I somehow became convinced mother was trying to poison me. Maybe it was her ranting that she wished she never had me, blaming me for the ills of her life and the hormonal lunacy of her menopause. Gee, maybe I could have killed her and argued her hormones made me do it? A unique defense and ahead of its time.”

“Yeah, they would have stuck you in an orphanage.”

“It would have been better than where I was. If only I had known? Anyway, whenever I sat down at the dinner table while my brother was away at school and father at one of his political meetings or working overseas, I’d wonder whether it was my last meal, whether she’d get me this time. For weeks, I searched my food in dread, ate as little as possible, refused to eat anything she didn’t and took the portions myself rather than let her dish them out. I believed she was either using chemicals from my father’s laboratory in the basement, where he sometimes did experiments on projects from work, or killer worms from one of the sci fi movies she took me to. Was it all paranoia I was born with? I don’t think so, but it came from somewhere.”

“No, your parents are responsible for that.” Blackie said with certainty. “A little kid doesn’t go around thinking his mother is trying to poison him for no reason at all. A whole pattern of behavior by both of them over years brought you to that point.” Then Blackie raised his voice, “Damn Den Hollander! Your wife ended up doing to you what you feared as a kid your mother was doing. What the hell are the odds of that?”

I sunk back in my seat with the surprise. “Jesus, you’re right! I never put the two together. The Commie Ho actually feeding me drugs with the fear of my mother poisoning me. Is this the fulfillment of a prophecy or my entire life a revolting imagining?”

“Hey, I read your ex-wife’s diary and her slipping you drugs was no imagining. You’re one unlucky guy Den Hollander,” to which we both laughed at the sheer absurdity.

“That’s not all,” I continued. “After I thought I beat the poisoning attempts, I figured she decided to hire a hit man. She’d come into my bedroom at night and open the window right next to my bed for ‘fresh air’. Why didn’t she open the window on the other side of the room like before, I’d ask myself? So there I lay awake most the night, week after week, waiting for her hit man to put his arm through the opened window and blow my head off.”

“That’s why you’ve always been so hostile.” Blackie concluded. “No one could grow up in those conditions and not be angry all the time. My aunt always said your parents were sick.”

“Well, your aunt should have warned me about them and my future wife.”

Blackie laughed, “Looks like the close of your life is making good on warnings from its beginning. Didn’t you say your ex-wife would eventually hire some Russian hit man to take you out?”

“That she will, that she will. I’m sure of it. She’s got the money and the temperament. She already took out a contract with one of her mafia associates in Krasnodar to keep me from testifying against her before the INS.”

“Yeah, but the INS isn’t going to go to the bother of calling you to testify. They let six al Qaeda terrorists become citizens and didn’t care about the 911 hijackers, so why should they care about one Russian mob prostitute.”

“You’re right. That’s why the Krasnodar contract never bothered me, but when the court proceedings end and she eventually becomes a citizen, then she’ll seek revenge for my audacity to expose the truth about her. But I have a contingency plan for dealing with that.”

“What’s the plan?”

“Nah, that would be telling.”

After a couple of days in Biloxi, we tried to drive east to Florida, but it rained so heavy we went back to Biloxi. Blackie did his gambling while I looked for chicks to flirt with, but the best prospect was a high schooler I came across working behind the counter in a stationary store. Needing a pen, I took the opportunity to chat her up. When I let drop that I came from New York City, girls in the provinces always find that alluring, she smiled, told me about her cousin who was going to attend college there. She got to giggling at an ad-lib joke or two of mine and then her mother walks out from behind the curtains. I bought my pen and left.

On our third day, still raining, we took in a gun show, nothing else was going on in town. The gun show included dealers and individuals selling pistols, rifles, shotguns and even AK-47s. Many experts consider these Russian assault rifles more reliable and durable than the U.S. M-16. The AK-47s sold for $450 each, not bad if I wanted to take out a Mc Donald's, but I didn't.

Most people mistakenly think the Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees the right to keep and bear arms, was passed so that Americans could hunt for food and shoot for sport. Not at all, the amendment exists to give ordinary citizens the power to take down an unjust administration whenever, as the Declaration of Independence states, "any form of government becomes destructive of these ends" by which it means life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A lot of tin pot dictators throughout history never would have had a chance if their citizens owned as many guns as the average non New Yorker. The effete, feminine, white trash, antigun elite can't seem to understand that. Their new god—the therapist—has pumped them up with so many drugs, excuses and self-righteous delusions that they will live on their knees before any tyranny, all the while believing themselves superior to those willing to pick up the gun to fight for their rights.

Another reason the Founding Fathers wanted Americans to own guns was so they'd have a fighting chance when attacked by some lunatic or outlaw. Nothing better deters cowards and criminals with a gun than another gun in the hands of their intended victim. The Political Correctionalists actually believe the government should eliminate guns from the entire country—the entire law abiding country, but what about the hoodlums and illegal aliens? The bleeding heart lefties have so twisted government priorities that limited resources are used to crack down on law-abiding, gun-owning Americans who want to protect themselves rather than being used to protect those citizens from criminal illegals.

The following day, still no sunshine, still cold, but less rain, we drove back to the casino-hotel in northern Mississippi near Memphis where we first stayed. No rooms because of what looked like a nursing home patients' convention had filled the hotel. Mother of mercy, could this be my end, wheeling my drooling self into a casino years from now? There has to be a better way. We finally found a motel, and the next day took our separate flights home. What do you say when two old friends know they'll probably never see each other again? Nothing, except the usual goodbyes. Blackie turned and walked to his flight and I to mine. On the plane, I understood that when you are finished, but before it's over, you no longer have those hopes, illusions and preoccupations that get you to the next moment. Life just hangs there barren and empty waiting for the next event to come along, until, finally, there are none left.

I'm Looking Through You

When I arrived back in New York, an email message was waiting for me from Traviesa—now that surprised me. She had moved out in such a huff just before the 911 attack that I figured there goes another person I'll never hear from again and probably just as well. She and her Austro-Hungarian cousin had depleted my net worth by at least $2500 through one favor or another.

Girls are always running an angle to get something for nothing from a man by false sweetness and light, pretending to be an object of sympathy and using enticements of sexual delights never delivered. Girls figure all us guy for suckers, and don't give a hang who gets hurt, so long as it's a guy. As with con artists, girls are adept at creating the illusion that a guy can trust them, but once he does—he's sorry. When Traviesa needed a place to stay in April 2001, I thought about making her pay with sex. But there was something about that girl, maybe her Cheshire smile, that told me when we first met to stay out of her pants. So, what did she want now?

Dear Roy,

You are probably surprised that I am writing you (maybe positive or maybe negative way). It has been a long time so it is hard for me to find proper words, but it is not so hard to write. I want to forget my pride for once because it is childish, even though, it took me such a long time. Lately, I have been thinking a lot and I would like to reach out to you and hear from you again. It bothers me that we said good bye to each other in such an upset way and that time it hurt me because it was not truth, I would never forget what you have done for me and I would be there for you as well.

I am employed in a normal job and I am not little Traviesa anymore... When I think of you I feel very closed to you-when I was lost and alone, confused in a big NY, you were there.... I want to write so many things, but I do not know how you feel about this. I want to know how is everything with you. I want you to know that you were one of my best friends and I think of you quite often. I think we got along great. I remember how you used to say: Where is Traviesa, there is a trouble...

If your feelings are similar and you can break the ice, please, write me. If you are not interested so at least I have tried to tell you that you are still deep in my heart, there is not many people out there like you.....

--Traviesa from Czechoslovakia (That is not in Eastern Europe)

After reading her email, I wanted to drop everything—to run and hide. Traviesa was accomplished at manipulating guys; I'd seen her in action and listened to her stories. Over the years, I have noticed a funny thing about girls: if a guy shows no sexual interest in them, they start confiding all these lured details of their exploits. The kind of stuff most men believe occurs only in porn movies—ha! These girls brag like the guys I went to high school with, only they are telling the truth. Having glimpsed the inner workings of Traviesa from her own mouth and tasted the trouble that bubbled in the wake of her nubile hips, I went on Red Alert!

Most of what she wrote didn't jive, especially that part of being lost, alone and confused in a "big N.Y." While here, she and her cousin lived the nightlife, staying out to sunrise, pursuing this guy or that, usually ones with money. After 911, they both went back to Europe.

Two years later, she's contacting me—why? Revenge, maybe, girls are innately vindictive, and they never forget a slight. But what was her game plan? She couldn't possibly think me dumb enough to let her stay in my apartment again, assuming she made it back into the U.S. Suddenly, I pulled away from those alluring words in the email with the suspicion that perhaps this was not Traviesa at all. Maybe the Commie Ho, who knew Traviesa and my connection with her, concocted this email of pretending to be Traviesa in order to obtain incriminating statements from me for use in the reply memorandum that the defense lawyers were preparing. Perhaps that's why the defense lawyers wanted a time extension: to give this latest con room to work.

Since I'm a party in the RICO case, anything I say, no matter to whom or through whatever medium, is admissible in the District Court, so long as it helps the defendants. If it helps me, I can't use it. The reason for this rule of evidence is that while people always lie about the great things they do, they rarely lie about the bad things. So the courts assume that when a person admits something that can be used against him in court, it's probably true. My experience with the defense lawyers told me they would pounce on any statement they could rend into showing me as a bad character.

Writing back in a friendly manner, I asked a couple of questions only Louisa could answer and for her telephone numbers in Europe in order to let whomever sent the email know I would call to check whether it was Traviesa. She answered the questions and the telephone numbers checked out as hers, so this was indeed the Traviesa I knew and feared. But that didn't obviate the possibility of her scamming me in order to help the Commie Ho and the defendants in return for assistance from Mundy's firm in getting her tight Austro-Hungarian ass back into America. If Traviesa wanted anything, it was a rich guy in New York City, so she could spend his money and party her firm breasts away. So I played along with whatever her scheme was, but always kept in mind that everything I emailed might go right back to the Commie Ho, Mundy and the other defendants.

When Traviesa asked me about Angelina, the Commie Ho, I answered "Angelina who?" When she asked what I did for a living, I told her I spent most my time on RICO cases, which was true. When she asked about my social life, I told her Mark, who had scored with her cousin, and I chased girls at the Latin clubs. Nothing in any of those answers that the defense attorneys could twist against me.

Traviesa then started writing about romance as girls always do in their eternal effort to make guys think they are "good girls." She complained that men only want a good time, but she wasn't "like that." She needed "feelings first, not just this."

How many times have I heard that malarkey from a dame? The truth is that girls do want "just this," just sex. There in lies their power and greatest thrill, more of a thrill and more power for them than guys. But they pretend otherwise in order to shake down a guy for as much as possible. To "sex him" as they say, meaning metaphorically and literally: shake those boobies, but when he comes for the goodies—"Stop! I'm not that kind of girl unless you do this or that for me." Baloney, they're all that kind of girl. For years, I stupidly believed girls were actually capable of trust and loyalty and treated them as such. They aren't. The only way to deal with them is to see them for what they are—play toys, and that's it. Any other view opens a man to their sexually exploitative ways while behind his back they laugh at his foolish belief in their fidelity. A girl wants men—that's plural—to comprise all the pieces on a chessboard that she controls with the centerpiece her prince charming who can afford all the things she wants and is dumb enough to believe what she tells him. As Lord Byron wrote, "Man's love is of man's life a thing apart, 'Tis woman's whole existence." Girls put the same effort and deviousness into sexual affairs as men do their careers and war.

Traviesa's overly used complaint about men found no commiseration in me. Girls always try to make men feel guilty so that dames will benefit from every man's efforts to make amends. Feminazis use the same tactic, but expand it to sucker guys into giving them jobs, status and respect they don't deserve. It's important to remember that Eve suckered Adam into biting the apple—not the other way around. Although unsympathetic with Traviesa, I was courteous and advised her to stop blaming men, "You obviously have not read the book you borrowed and still have, I assume, The Anatomy of Love. You have to make an effort if you want someone to help you raise your children. There are no more old maids, but plenty of middle-aged Feminazis incapable of compromise that will cry themselves to sleep every night until they die because they don't have a man."

Traviesa's emails, however, kept playing the sympathy card, "I know I should give in, but maybe there is someone still waiting for me. Here is not easy to find someone. It is not like N.Y. where you can pick up chicks. People here are more responsible then over there. By the time they reach my age, 26, they are either married with at least an apartment or they have a serious relationship. At the clubs and bars you can find only teens or some empty losers. I do not go out often, almost no clubs...."—more feminine clichés. It must be a law of physics that hot-looking babes in clubs rarely go to clubs since that's what they always tell me. Guess I'm supposed to believe my running into them in a club is an extraordinary bit of luck that beat the universe's odd? I don't think so. Good-looking girls live in clubs.

On another sympathy note, Traviesa claimed that before the Communists took over her country, her family of royal blood owned woods, lands and, I assume, serfs. Ignoring this fairy tale trap, I reverted to the lawyer in me and suggested she look into suing the current government to get back her family's land or for reparations. "You may become a landed princess after all," I wrote with my tongue in my cheek.

Whatever Traviesa or perhaps the Commie Ho wanted from me with these emails, they weren't getting. Traviesa stopped writing for a couple of months, and I assumed the scheme ended, but then one last email arrived just a few weeks before the defendants' reply memorandum was finally due. The email and its timing made some of the hidden intentions clearer. She apologized for not replying to my last email sooner and closed with the clincher: "In May there is a lottery going on the green card, so maybe I will be lucky. You know I am a big spender, so N.Y. is the place for me, where I can improve myself, this job is taking away my motivation and ideas." If only Traviesa was behind the emails, she obviously wanted my help to get her into the U.S. in return for dollars or maybe sex. If the Commie Ho stood, as she usually does in the shadows, then the two of them were setting me up for violating the immigration law.

Normally anyone, particularly criminals and terrorists, can violate U.S. law with impunity, especially the immigration statute. But for a lawyer who has complained to the INS Inspector General about that agency's failure to enforce the laws, the bureaucrats would make an exception to nail me for even the appearance of impropriety. No I'm dumb, but not that dumb. So I suggested Traviesa get her hotel employer, which runs a hotel in New York City right across the street from Flash Dancers, to send her to America, and ended with, "Face it Traviesa, you're not going to be happy until you find a rich guy in New York City.” That ended that scheme. Traviesa or the Commie Ho standing behind her wasn’t fooling me anymore. No dame was. After decades, I finally understood the Janus, spoiled nature of girls. They all suffer from that unique feminine illusion that the mere fact of their being female exempts them from civilized behavior.

When a girl speaks words of endearment, paints herself up and dresses in tight revealing clothes, she’s advertising sex, not using sex to sell something, but selling sex in return for a heavy tax on a man’s life. Like all good advertisers, she intentionally aims to stimulate and manipulate the emotions in men with deception. But when the guy fails to do what she wants or the guy she wants doesn’t respond, she curses out criticisms as did one girl in my Salsa class who used the Feminazi tactic of trying to publicly shame men into obsequiousness. Out of nowhere, this girl starts haranguing guys in general for not dancing enough to suit her taste, and exasperatedly claimed, “You can’t ask a guy to dance because it will insult their machismo.” So I chimed in “Maybe guys want to select, rather than settle. If you walk into a used car dealership, and a driverless car pulls up along side of you, pops its door open, I don’t think you’re going to get in for ride.” Boy did that tick the broads off. So what, it was the truth. Girls will tell any lie, cheat any guy and commit any crime to get what they want, and they want everything—name it, they want it. They are the primordial apostles of greed, whether for money or power.

Feminazi or not, if female, she’ll ruthlessly exploit the attraction, protectiveness and tolerance Mother Nature bred in men for girls. For example, a friend and I were walking down the street when this middle-aged broad, obviously a Feminazi, walking towards us sees my friend and breaks into a big friendly come hither smile. Seeing those high beams on him, I’m thinking she's either a long time friend or some older female who's got the hots for him. Listening to their conversation, it turned out she was a civil court judge trying to move up the ladder to the New York State Supreme Court, and wanted my friend's help. On saying goodbye and again asking for his help, she shines the smile again and kisses him on the cheek with half a hug. As she walks away, my buddy turns to me to say, "She's a lesbo." I laughed, what a phony! Her sexual airs were only feigned female flirtations to get what she wanted. Give her a little authority, and she'll cut my friend's throat merely to confirm her power. My pal thought little of her judicial ability, and said he'd oppose her for the Supreme Court. In a meritocracy, she won't have a prayer at any judgeship, but this is Feminarchy America where females are obsessed with power and will use sex or any other means to get it.

The problem with females as judges or politicians is they are constitutionally unable to handle the pressures of administering the law and politics. They lack the political tolerance and self-restraint that democracy requires. Their passive-aggressive personalities make it impossible to rely on their words while their mixture of timidity and hysteria make it both a waste and danger to give them power. They are unable to compromise because compromise assumes a rough equality, which their innate arrogance will not allow for fear it may unmask their feelings of inferiority. For example, Catherine the Great ended up bankrupting Russia and creating the problems in Chechnya that still plague her country with slaughter in the subway, on airplanes and in schoolhouse bombings. When females move into men's roles in society, it leads not only to less effective social institutions as a result of their incompetence and lack of requisite abilities but to a society permeated with corruption and cover-ups as broads abuse their authority the way princesses did and hide their ineptitude—after all, nobody lies as good as a dame.

Despite females' inability to handle jobs evolutionarily suited for men, Feminazis ceaselessly whine about "equal pay for equal work." The she-males of America, which is what the Feminazis and their advocates are trying to turn us all into, claim females receive around 77% the pay of men for doing the same job. Sounds like discrimination, but is it?

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' 2007 Time Use Survey, men spend 144% as many hours working as females do. So for every hour the average guy works, the average girl works 42 minutes. If both are paid $1 for a full hour of work, then the guy should receive $1 for each hour he is on the job, but the girl, since she only works 42 minutes out of the hour as compared to the guy, should receive $.69. An appropriate number for a girl, but less than the $.77 she now receives. So girls are actually paid more than guys when measured on a per unit of time basis. It's understandable the Feminazis didn't figure this out, since math is not a girl's strong point, so they would logically ignore the mathematical way of making comparisons.

The Feminazis also ignore that the real measure should not be "equal pay for equal work" but "equal pay for equal quality of work." Take professional basketball, why should WNBA players receive as much money as the guys in the NBA who play better ball. Now if the WNBA went topless—maybe. Holding down a similar job doesn't mean the performance is equal. If it did, then an employer could hire four girls for the price of three men, maintain quality and increase his output by one-third, which would enable him to cut prices and drive his competitors out of business.

Putting the truth about salaries aside, how come the Government and media never talk about the inequality of inheritance between husbands and wives? Spouses inherit money because they put energy, effort and time into a relationship, not unlike building a business partnership. Actually, the laws of many states consider marriage an economic partnership.

When the partnership ends with the death of one spouse, the other is guaranteed a certain percentage, but more often than not ends up with the full value of the partnership. Surviving spouses are usually females, but that wasn't always the case. At the beginning of the 20th Century the average life span for men and females was the same at around 47 years. Over one hundred years later, however, as the result of a disproportionate amount of medical research spent on female-specific ailments and society channeling a disproportionately high percentage of men into the most dangerous jobs in the "tombstone basement," females live an average of six years longer. Since they live longer, females receive more inheritance dollars from men than men receive from females. Sounds like discrimination to me.

In the name of equality, the Feminazi rallying cry, all females receiving an inheritance from deceased husbands should be taxed to the extent that allows for balancing out the inequality of inheritance. The proceeds from the tax should go to all living married men and widowers in order to make inheritance "gender" neutral. Equal inheritance for equal work adheres to Feminazi, or more accurately, female logic, but it will never happen because it benefits men. Feminazism exists solely to benefit females that can't attract a man because of their looks, failed upkeep or attitude. By neuterizing both sexes, these failed females hope to feel less inferior.

Every Breath You Take

While waiting for the next flare up of legal hostilities, I began searching for where the Commie Ho currently stripped. The last sighting of her at work dated back to October 2002, when my bartender friend Tom caught her stripping at Flash Dancers. But the following summer my process server couldn't find her there, so he ended up handing her the RICO papers at her apartment in Astoria, Queens. The bouncers at Flash Dancers told my process server that she no longer stripped there, but what about all those bus and taxi posters running around New York

City with her mug on them advertising Flash Dancers? False advertising, or one blonde ho was as good as another? Who knew, but I sure wasn't going to believe muscle-heads in a strip club. To find out whether the Commie Ho still worked at Flash Dancers or some other ho den I hired an investigator. He checked Flash Dancers off and on but no Commie Ho, and concluded she no longer shook her tits and ass at Flash Dancers. The Commie Ho would never switch to a legitimate day job—not enough money, so she was stripping at some other house of ill repute. But which one?

No matter where the Commie Ho lap danced, she'd lie about stripping to the Court, and I would have to prove that as part of my strategy to impeach her credibility. Like all girls, the Ho hides behind a mask of virtue that compels her to lie about the tawdry world from which she makes so much money, at least 500 to 600 grand tax-free from a little over three and a half years in the American dream: July 2000 to February 2004. On her earlier return visits to Krasnodar, she used to tell her acquaintances that she worked as a translator in Moscow, but after my visits in 2001, no one believed that line anymore, if they ever did. In America, she used modeling as her cover. But what Russians or the average American thought about her, I didn't care. It was the Court I wanted to convince of her habit for lying. All I needed to do was catch her in a series of lies, and the District Court would stop believing anything she said, no matter how crucial to her defense—I hoped.

The Commie Ho had not only lied to the INS and the Department of State about her occupation, but also lied to the New York State Supreme Court and the I.R.S. in claiming to work only as a model and bartender. The bartending was false and modeling only partly true, but they created the false impression of how she earned her money because they left out lap dancing. The Commie Ho still didn't realize that by omitting an important part of the truth, a federal judge or jury would see it as an intentional lie. She always thought that lying by omission was not lying. The moment she lied under oath about not stripping, I would need evidence to prove she lied. That evidence would go a long way to impeaching her credibility by showing she worked mainly as a stripper who made a lot more money that she never declared. Despite the Feminazis' attempts to make such a profession respectable, most judges and jurors consider the girls working in strip clubs as walking frauds and prostitutes.

My search for the Commie Ho's place of employment began by obtaining her Equifax credit report through one of my investigators. Sometimes these reports contain a person's current employer. Different P.I.s are good at different tasks. This one had access to lots of different records while another private eye did excellent surveillance. The Commie Ho's Equifax report, however, didn't show any employer, but it did list four credit cards for her, three from banks—Chase, Citibank and Providian—and one from Macy's. If, as she had done in the past, the Commie Ho used the bankcards for transferring money overseas, it would leave a record trail I could subpoena. The credit cards also provided me with another knife into her credibility because she'll lie about having them in order to cover up her money laundering. Both uses, however, would have to wait until the case moved to a later stage.

My private eye tried another method for finding where the Commie Ho worked. Every state keeps records on a quarterly basis for the employees in that state who receive W-2 tax forms. Hooking doesn't generate W-2s, but some lap-dancing clubs do hire the girls as employees for a small amount, as with waitresses, which requires issuing a W-2. Such clubs take a cut of the money the hos make giving lap dances with the hos receiving most of it. Flash Dancers didn't do this, but if the Commie Ho switched to a club that hired her as an employee, there would be a record. A check of New Jersey and New York, however, turned up nothing, so I assumed she worked in a club like Flash Dancers where the strippers pay the club a set fee each night and work only for “tips” from the customers. Clubs such as Flash Dancers avoid filing a W-2 or even the 1099 required for independent contractors because each time a girl strips, the club claims the guy who paid her the $20 hired her. That’s the superficial interpretation. The I.R.S. is suppose to look at the reality of a transaction, which means the girls really work for the club because it provides the facilities, tells them what to do and makes money off of the young hos offering their charms to the club’s customers. So why doesn’t the I.R.S. bust these clubs for literally billions in unreported income? Because the Feminazis in the government believe any means of transferring wealth from men to females is justified and should carry no tax.

The only alternative left for uncovering the Commie Ho’s place of work meant tailing her. But to do that, first required locating her at a point in time and space. As of the service of the RICO papers in July 2003, she was living in the apartment in Astoria, Queens to which she had moved in December 2000. Checking the outside apartment buzzers for her building at 28-15 34th Street, she was still listed in apartment 4H under Chipilina, one of her aliases. To make sure, I called her apartment telephone number, but she had changed it and switched to an unlisted number. One of my private eyes track down the new number, which also confirmed her address as the Astoria building. This told me she still leased the apartment, but whether she lived there or with some guy elsewhere, I didn’t know. After making a number of calls to her unlisted phone number with no living person answering, I still didn’t know.

She was living there when my process server had caught up with her, but that was eight months ago. Since then, she could have sublet her apartment, and it wouldn’t have shown on the telephone records or the apartment building’s outside buzzers. Her apartment’s mailbox inside the building’s lobby listed no one, which it had since she first moved in, so I couldn’t tell anything from that. The building didn't have a doorman, which made getting inside easy but information via a bribe impossible. Hiring someone to knock on her door wouldn't work because after she opened it to my process server, she'd never open it again to someone she didn't know. The Commie Ho generally didn't make the same mistake twice. Despite my uncertainty, I needed to start somewhere. Logic pointed to her still living in the same apartment, since cohabiting with her main sucker would make it too difficult to hide her true profession. The surveillance would first try to pick her up at her subway station, 30th Avenue, in Astoria and follow her to work.

In order to save money and because I had the time, I decided to do the tailing myself. The disguises that Bob, my makeup artist client, gave me back in 2002 should prevent the Commie Ho from recognizing me. Hey, if his work was good enough for Saturday Night Live, it should serve my purpose. Besides, the Commie Ho couldn't see that well in the evening light because of her laser eye surgery, and that's when I would try to pick her up.

Her schedule was probably similar to the one she had at Flash Dancers. My earlier surveillances for the INS revealed that she left her apartment at around 6 PM and walked to the 30th Avenue Station on the N line, one of the last remaining elevated subways in New York City. Usually, she approached the station going west on 30th Avenue to the Northeast corner subway stairs at 31st Street and took the steps two at a time on her overly long legs up to the turnstiles. After paying her fare, she would go up the northwest stairs to the Manhattan bound platform for the N or W train. On the platform between 6:15 and 6:20 PM, she generally walked directly to the northern most bench to sit down. Stripping all night long with her size 11 feet squeezed into 5-inch heels took its toll, so she sat whenever possible—something all girls do. Sometimes before sitting, she would stretch in preparation for work. Her hair was always braided into a single strain, colored a bright whore blonde that stood out against the requisition all-black Russian outfit. She rarely wore dresses, except for stripping, and never mini-shirts. Too many guys hit on her she said, but her legs weren't the best. In the winter, she added a black down jacket. Flash Dancers usually closed around 4 AM, and she'd hop a cab back to Astoria. Around 4:15 AM, her cab would let her off on the southwest corner of 28th Road and 34th Street, and she'd walked about a hundred feet to her building.

In mid-February 2004, I began staking out the 30th Avenue subway platform in the late afternoon and early evening, invisible behind my disguise. The days alternated among Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the high-income producing nights for lap dancers and assorted hos. Confident she'd show, I first positioned myself on the opposite subway platform, but it proved too cold up there, so I moved inside the station to directly behind the token booth. A New York Times, folded in the customary subway fashion provided additional cover. New York subways get so crowded during rush hours that the only way to read the Times, if one likes fiction, required folding the paper length wise and turning the pages in a mind bending way that only New Yorkers seem to master. The subway fold provided an excellent mobile cover that could expand from nearly seven inches wide to fourteen and twenty eight inches in seconds. The Commie Ho, however, never appeared, and she wasn't the type of girl a guy could miss unless he was blind, which I wasn't—physically that is.

No longer so sure she still lived in Astoria, or if she did, whether she still worked at a strip club, I resorted to calling her unpublished home number again. If she answered, then she still lived there, and I'd have to change my surveillance times. She didn't answer, not once, but sometimes the answer machine came on, sometimes a fax tone and sometimes it rang and rang, so someone lived in her apartment to change the settings, but whom? On occasion, however, she would answer her mobile phone, which meant she was still on the planet, but that I already knew. Where was this slut? I couldn't tail her to work until I picked her up at some place and time.

To determine once and for all whether she still lived in the same apartment, I started calling her neighbors on the same floor as hers. The public library carries a directory that lists the names, telephones and apartments for most of the people living in any building in New York City. Here as in Krasnodar everybody knows the local whore, so someone must have seen her around assuming she still lived there. No luck until I reached a young girl, maybe ten years old. Great, she's not about to lie and wants to prove her worth by helping. My pretext was that I worked for a music video production company.

"We just interviewed a girl name Angelina Shipilina for a role, but she failed to leave us her telephone number. All we have is her street address but no apartment number. We're calling people in her building to try to reach her."

"Oh, I know her," the girl said happy to help. "She lives right next to me. She's very tall and blonde and pretty, but I don't know her telephone number."

"That's okay. Do you know her apartment number?"

"Just a minute I'll ask my mom." No, no, no, I'm thinking, not your mother. Mom will grab the telephone, ask questions, become suspicious and might even report back to the Commie Ho.

But the girl didn't leave the telephone to get her mother, instead she yelled right in my ear, "Mom, what's the apartment number next to us?" Her mother answered back and the girl proudly repeated for me, "It's 4H."

"Is she still living there?" I asked after switching the receiver to my other ear.

"Yes, I see her all the time."

“When did you last see her?”

“Just a couple of days ago.”

Bingo, the Commie Ho still lived there, but when did she leave the building to go to work? Could she have actually taken a 9 to 5 job? No way, whores never reform, they just say they do. And she wasn't at Flash Dancers anymore. Strip clubs tend to want fresh meat for their customers, and the Commie Ho stripped and prostituted at Flash Dances for over two years. But at which club was she hoing now? There were dozens and dozens in the New York metropolitan area, which includes not only the five boroughs but also parts of Long Island, Connecticut and New Jersey. The evening shifts, when girls make the most money, start anywhere from 3 PM to 8 PM and end between 12 AM and 4 AM. That's a wide span of time for the Ho to leave for work during which I'd rather not stand on a subway platform in cold.

An idea from my Columbia University Business School training pops into my head to use a statistically valid sample of clubs from which to figure out the most probable times for her heading to work given a travel time of 30 minutes to an hour. Once again I staked out the subway on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays— still nothing, so much for the value of Columbia's statistics' courses.

What did the Commie Ho do that left a record of her comings and goings—nothing! But I could get to the same point by knowing when she was usually in and not in her apartment. Most people, even hookers, have a basic schedule to which they adhere even though on the odd day it may vary. Humans are, if anything, creatures of habit. Although I doubted the Commie Ho's humanity, she definitely was a creature. A list of the outgoing telephone calls on her unlisted telephone line would indicate a pattern of when she was at home and when she was not. But how do I get it? A private eye, of course. Unfortunately, the Ho's telephone carrier's priority to maximize profits through cutting expenses derailed this strategy. The company had previously listed in each monthly bill the time of day for all the local calls a customer made, but a couple of years ago, the carrier replaced reporting the individual calls with the total calls over a period of time. This did me little good. The bills, however, still listed the specific times of the long distance calls, which indicated she was often at home from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, but the information was too little to indicate when she left for work.

The only way to catch her meant staking out the front of her apartment building. Long stakeouts require two guys so that one can keep watch while the other hits the local restaurant for a restroom or deli for food and drink. One leftwing blogger I knew always needed money. We staked out her building from a rented car parked on her street. If she left, I'd drive pass her, turn the corner and leave my partner off to pick her up and tail her to work.

When we started my partner said, "I checked those photos of her on that Russian web site, so I'd be able to recognize her. She's a hot looking babe."

"And that's all. She has no sense of right and wrong; lacks a conscience, integrity and a sense of fair play; is amoral, self-centered, selfish, self-righteous, hypocritical, duplicitous, a phony, pathological liar, dissembler and prevaricator with no socially redeeming qualities whatsoever—a barbarian life force driven by its self-indulgent wants and needs. The nobler qualities of human civilization are absent—compassion, empathy, dignity, self-respect and a respect for others!"

"Ookay," my partner said, "Why don't we talk politics while we wait?"

So we did, as we sat and sat, day after day, early morning, afternoon and early evening but no Commie Ho. I put the stakeout on hold, thinking she might be slipping out the back door or was on vacation in Cyprus or Las Vegas. To determine which, I started snooping around the building on my own.

Dressed in my disguise, I'd wait for a tenant exiting the building, asked for directions to the super's apartment, which they always happily gave while letting me inside, or watched for people turning into the entrance way and quickly moved in behind them, fumbling for my non-existent keys, so they'd hold the door open. Given my appearance, white and anywhere from 40 to 60, no one questioned me. Inside, I checked the side and back of the building. She could go out the back, but to make it to another street required going over a seven-foot wall, not too difficult for a guy, but a girl dressed for work, even in slacks, unlikely. Upstairs, I listened at her apartment door, no noise, looked under it, but no light. Rang the bell and ducked into the stairwell from which I could see the top of her door and whether it opened—it didn't. After doing this a few times on different days with no luck, I switched tactics.

On the roof of the building next door at night, I could see her apartment windows, which weren't visible from the street because her apartment overlooked an alleyway. The windows were always dark. I kept going back looking for the light in the window so that I'd know she was not out of town and could restart the stakeout. On one sojourn while walking up the stairs to the roof door, I saw a red light that I'd never seen before. My next step brought an ear-piercing alarm. The human flight emotion tried to take over, but I said if you run you stand out, so I walked slowly back down the stairs, four flights with the alarm wailing its high pitch noise throughout the building, and not one person came out of their apartments to check it out.

Why was I not surprised? This was the same borough where in 1964 Kitty Genovese pleaded for help after a man stabbed her. The residents heard the cries but did nothing, so the guy came back twice as she lay bleeding on the sidewalk yelling for help, stabbing her each time, sexually assaulting her and finally killing her, and none of her neighbors did a thing. Might history repeat itself with a tall Russian blonde whore? I couldn't be so lucky. The newly installed roof alarm cost me an excellent spying spot, but I found an alternative by using an alleyway from the next street over to get into the backcourt yard of her building. From there I could see the apartment windows, but still no lights at night.

Where the devil did this ho disappear to? Nearly a month and a half of trying to track her down and still no success. Was the Matrix interfering in my life again? No matter, I knew if I stuck with it, I'd find her.

The lefty blogger, who helped me on the failed stakeouts, came up with an idea that proved the turning point because of workers unable to follow instructions. He suggested sending her by Federal Express a box of chocolates from a fake modeling agency. By paying in cash and using a telephone number that's always busy, there was no way to trace the sender. Eternally busy telephone numbers are maintained by Verizon for technical reasons in every exchange. When making pretext calls, it often avoids suspicion by leaving one of these numbers as a call back because whenever the target tries the number, it's always busy. That allows one to call the target again for information and pretend he couldn't reach me because of trouble on my line or just a lot of calling going on. Either way it doesn't blow a cover, at least initially.

Sending chocolates from a model agency was a great idea because the Ho couldn't resist sweets or the delusion that the world saw her as a glamorous model rather than a whore for money. When Fed Ex knocked on her door, she would open it, if at home. If not, then by requiring delivery only to her, Fed Ex would go back and back until they found her home or learned from the superintendent that she no longer lived there. Tom Hanks never gave up when he played a Fed Ex delivery manager in Cast Away, so the guys in Queens should do the same.

Once Fed Ex made the delivery, it would post the date, time and her signature on its web site. I'd recognize that signature anywhere. The Commie Ho always feared someone forging her signature, so she perfected an intricate scribbling of her name that no one would ever bother trying to forge—not unlike Swiss bankers.

After a week of trying, Fed Ex finally delivered the package, but not to the Commie Ho, instead to someone who signed as “A. Anthony”—so much for the truth of Hollywood movies. I called Fed Ex from a local pay phone, using a calling card, pretending to be the CEO of the phony modeling agency that sent the package and asked to talk to the deliveryman. Who was “A. Anthony” and didn't Fed Ex deliver the package to the Commie Ho. The Fed Ex customer rep said she would have the deliveryman call me back, which did me no good because I wasn't about to give out my real number. So I made up another story by telling her I was attending meetings out of town and could give her my hotel number knowing Fed Ex wouldn't make any costly long distance calls. The customer rep in turn arranged a time for me to reach the deliveryman at Fed Ex's office—just what I wanted.

The deliveryman told me the Commie Ho had not answered her buzzer from the outside entranceway on three attempts, so he left the package with the building superintendent's 10-year-old son. Great, the kid probably ate the chocolates himself—I would have, at that age. Fed Ex really ticked me off. The deliveryman was supposed to go inside, up the elevator and knock on her door. Instead the idiot took the usual American easy way out by not bothering to go to the apartment at all. But the deliveryman did give me a telephone number for the superintendent.

A couple of years earlier, I had talked to the super on the pretext of looking for an apartment but really to confirm the Commie Ho's address for INS. His accent and appearance led me to believe he came from southern Russia, which meant I couldn't believe anything he said about a fellow Russian. But as a result of my recent telephoning of some of the Commie Ho's neighbors, I learned the super came from Croatia, which meant he hated Russians. People who lived in any of the countries occupied by the former Soviet Union, despised Russians. The super, therefore, could be relied on to provide that most damaging of commodities to a Russian—accurate information, so I gave him a call.

“Hello, may I speak to the super,” I asked.

A young girl snootily replied, “He’s not here right now! Who’s calling?” Must be the pubescent girl I ran into on my visit to the super’s apartment two years earlier.

“This is Federal Express,” I lied. “We’re trying to track down a package that was given to A. Anthony a few days ago on Monday at around 3:40 in the afternoon.”

“That’s my younger brother.”

“How old are you?”

“I’m 14.” No wonder she sounded snooty, the boys probably just started chasing her, so now she believes herself a femme fatale. Didn’t take long for her to metamorphose into a teen queen. But she was still young enough for me to cautiously rely on what she said. Give her a few years and the lies will flow like breath from her painted lips.

“Do you know what happen to the package that was meant for Miss Shipilina?”

“Anthony brought it to our apartment in the basement, and she came down to pick it up.”

“Do you know what time that was?”

“Around 4:30 PM.” Apparently, Anthony notified the Commie Ho somehow, meaning she was at home when Fed Ex rang her buzzer from the outside entranceway, but didn’t answer, or she arrived shortly after.

“Is she usually home late in the afternoon in case we have to deliver other packages?”

“She’s rarely in her apartment. She’s a model, and I see her go out at 5 o’clock, 8 o’clock at night. She’s always out.”

“When will your father be home?”

“Try back tonight after seven.”

That evening I reached the super. He repeated his daughter’s story of the package.

Then I asked, “When is a good time to make deliveries to her?”

“It’s best to find her before 11 in the morning. She goes to work in the afternoon, maybe 3 or 4.” Just what I needed, I thanked him and set up another round of surveillance with the same guy as before, starting at 11 AM Monday, April 12, 2004.

We parked across the street at the corner facing south with me in partial disguise. Within minutes of settling in for a long wait, the Commie Ho bounds out of the entranceway of her building. Wearing black leather pants and a black backpack in her concession to American style, her vat-dyed blonde pony tail bobbed from an erect head looking straight ahead as she swung her arms loping down the street on those long legs and moving at a speed that for others would be a run. Battle stations, battle stations, the cry went off in my head. We buckled ourselves in; I started the engine and zoomed passed her taking a quick look to make sure it was she. At the light, I turned right and let my “I Spy” partner out, then took off down the block to get out of sight. We assumed she’d also go right at the corner to head for the 30th Avenue subway, but she didn’t. Five minutes later my partner calls my cell. The Commie Ho had gone to the New York Sports Club on 30th Avenue at 38th Street. Driving the car to a parking lot across from the gym, I met my partner and we continued the stakeout.

“That girl is all legs!” My partner exclaimed. “I had to run just to keep up with her. But she sure sticks out in crowd. She must be six-three! And that blonde hair is like waving a flag.”

“Yeah, she’s easy to spot. Makes our job a lot easier.” I replied.

“Why does she walk so fast?”

“Maybe she’s afraid something will catch up with her.”

We sat in the car waiting for the end of her workout.

About an hour later, hair now up in a bun, she bolts out of the gym as from a starting gate and moving at the same fast pace. My partner jumps out to give chase. As we had agreed, I drove the car back to the corner across from her apartment figuring she’d head back home for a shower. The Commie Ho has a phobia about using public facilities, even Laundromats. Germs, I think, rather bizarre for a prostitute, the type of person that most folk consider synonymous with filth.

Sure enough, she arrived back at her apartment with my partner well behind her breathing hard trying to keep up.

“Damn, she moves fast. I’ve got to get myself in better shape.”

“Expensive Russian prostitutes definitely keep themselves physically fit. There were a lot of them at the gym I used in Moscow. They were among the few Russians that could afford one.”

“Physically fit is right.” My partner agreed, “It’s just the rest that seems lacking.”

“Exactly.”

At 1:20 PM she again zooms out, moving south and still fast, but no backpack, hair in a ponytail. My partner sets off in pursuit while I waited in the car for his cell phone call. Once again, she doesn’t go to the 30th Avenue subway, but walks further south, making a cell phone call and stopping in a store. Then she walks west to the elevated subway at Broadway, the next stop down the line from the 30th Avenue station. My partner is right behind her, panting away, but manages to get on the same train to Manhattan. I drive into the City to wait for his next call. While parked in Manhattan by the 59th Street Bridge, I tried to figure where she was heading, but soon gave up.

My cell rang.

“So where are you?” I asked knowing it was my surveillance partner.

“Union Square, but I lost her. She got into a SUV outside the Virgin Record store driven by a guy in his 20s, white, light brown hair, silver Forerunner Toyota, license AGE 9596.”

“Okay, I’ll run the license to find out whom it’s registered to.” We agreed to try again a week from Tuesday. The SUV belonged to a Joseph Martin, 6 Bradford Avenue, Rye, New York. The driver of the SUV was probably one of her prostitution clients or some poor sucker with romantic delusions about her. Either way, I knew she benefited materially from the rendezvous. But I still didn’t know the place where she stripped. When she worked at Flash Dancers, she often took Sunday or Monday off because the money wasn’t good. Maybe she was off this Monday, and turned a trick to pick up extra cash.

Tuesday, April 20, 2004, the Commie Ho whips out of her building at 11:33 in the morning, arms churning back and forth, pony tail swinging its way to the same New York Sports Club where my partner spots her running on a treadmill. After the gym, trucking at the same fast pace, she goes back to her apartment for about an hour then heads off to the 30th Avenue subway wearing a white jacket with black pok-a-dots. She catches the train to Manhattan, gets off at 34th Street, Herald Square, and walks a block to the IRT number One train, which takes her further south to Chambers Street. It would have been more convenient for her and have saved a fare, if she switched at Times Square. At Chambers Street she walks toward the river to a luxury high rise at 22 River Terrace. My spy can’t follow her in to see which apartment she went to because of the doorman. After three hours of waiting, we figure she's in there for the duration and go home.

The next day, Wednesday, at around 1:20 PM the Commie Ho comes walking up her street, carrying shopping bags, wearing the same clothes from the day before and enters her building. That's the last we see of her and end the surveillance at 6 PM. Apparently, she made a night of it at River Terrace—fun or business.

On Friday, we started late at 1 PM certain the Commie Ho would either enter her building coming back from the gym or exit heading for the subway and Manhattan. This time we parked on the same side of the street as her building, just between it and the corner. Sporting a fake mustache with a cap, I sat in the driver's seat. At 3:30 PM, my peripheral vision catches movement on the sidewalk a few feet from my window, as I turn to look, the Commie Ho wheezes pass. Rats, did she see me in the car? She was wearing her backpack, dressed in blue jeans with studs running down the legs, what kind of fashion is that? She probably came from the gym but by a different route that took her right passed us. Well, I knew if she saw me, she'd call her clients at the police station just a block away to come hassle us. We waited, but no cops, so she didn't see me.

At 4:30 PM, she leaves at her usual gallop in her favorite outfit, black slacks and a white jacket with black pok-a-dots. At the 30th Avenue subway, she sits on her favorite bench and, as usual, boards the last car of the train. She's consistent—until 42nd Street, Times Square. Then something new happens, she steps off the train, waits, and suddenly steps on again just as the doors are closing. My partner made it back into the car, but only barley and obviously. At 34th Street, she hops off, looking nervously behind her with fear pulling the corners of her eyes tight. My partner backs off trying to follow her at a distance, but it's clear she spotted the tail. After ten minutes of twists, turns, double backs and feints around crowded Herald Square, she managed to lose him.

The surveillance was placed on hold in order to let some time pass for her to fall into a false sense of security. But early one afternoon four months later, while rushing for the BMT subway at 42nd Street, I froze in my tracks. The Commie Ho was not ten feet from me, wearing a jackal look of discontent and cowardice, staring nervously behind her as though checking for someone following. She hadn't seen me yet, but the moment she turned her head forward again, those laser enhanced, blue gray eyes would pass right over me. The only thing to do was use one of Mark's martial arts' tactics and I thought myself invisible. She turned her head from looking over her left shoulder, swept her glaze right over me without seeing and continued down to the train. The Commie Ho still suspected a tail, so I put the surveillance on hold indefinitely.

The information from this chance encounter and the earlier surveillances indicated to me that she probably no longer stripped, but just did call girl work, a profession much easier to hide from the District Court and the INS. Also at 28, the lap dancing clubs might consider her too old, but she could still hook for $200 to $300 an hour and those were Los Angeles rates. The best she did stripping was a little over $100 an hour and that required standing on her feet all night long. So hooking meant more money, less work and no sore feet—right up the Commie Ho's alley. Another reason for believing the Commie Ho had switched to fulltime hooking was that during the on again, off again surveillance from February to April, I obtained the Commie Ho's mobile records for two months running. One month she made 290 out going calls and the other 370 in addition to the approximately 150 calls made each month from her apartment telephone. The Commie Ho's activities looked a lot like those described in the grand jury transcripts of Los Angeles' largest prostitution ring run by a Russian mother and her daughter.

While I hadn't found any connection between the L.A. ring and the defendants in my RICO case, that didn't mean the model used in L.A. wasn't also used in New York City by the Commie Ho and her associates.

The L.A. call girl ring had offered two types of services: "in-call" and "out-call." With in-call, the guy visited an apartment maintained by the ring where he was charged $200 an hour. Out-call was where the girl went to the guy's apartment but charged more, $300 an hour. To make an appointment, the guy would call the dispatcher's number, or go on line and make his request for a blonde, redhead or brunette and leave a contact number. The dispatcher rounded up a girl and called the guy back to finalize the arrangements. Business for the L.A. ring had usually started in the early afternoon and gone to the early morning hours. The Commie Ho's call volume, connection with www.Russianny.com and her history pointed to her concentrating her time on Russian mob prostitution in New York where she acted as a dispatcher, semen depository or both.

You'll Lose a Good Thing

In order to dig up more information in Russia for my RICO case, I took a lesson from my annulment/divorce case and used a website. Boy that should annoy the defense lawyers! They'll shout and scream to the Chief Judge and call me this and that—tough. Nadya, my Krasnodar translator, went looking for a Russian website designer who also knew how to advertise. The site would be in Russian and aimed at people, mainly in Krasnodar, so I wanted a Russian from that area familiar with attracting attention to websites. Similar sites for Mexico and Cyprus were planned.

I sent Nadya a CD with the contents of the site. The introduction page stated:

United States dollars for information concerning any of the people mentioned in the following diary of Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina (Chipilina) also known as "Angelina," a runner up in the Miss Krasnodar Beauty Pageant of 1997. Miss Shipilina lives in Krasnodar, Russia and New York City.

Click on Nude Photographs or Masturbation Video to identify Alina Alexandrovna “Angelina” Shipilina, a.k.a. Chipilina. Click on Other Photographs for more pictures of Angelina.

Click on Diary and Newspaper Article to read about the life style of this Russian prostitute.

Please contact rdhhh@yahoo.com with any information or questions. Valuable information will be rewarded with dollars.

Following are the full names or additional information on some of the individuals and organizations talked about in Miss Shipilina’s 1999-2000 diary that may help the reader identify them. Information on anyone mentioned in the diary, not just those listed below, is being sought for a case in the U.S. Federal Court of the Southern District of New York and will be rewarded.

U.S.A.

Flash Dancers Topless Club
Barry-Night Manager Flash Dancers
Tatianna, former stripper at Flash Dancers in 2000
Nikita, former stripper at Flash Dancers in 2000
Marc L. Paulsen, California doctor

*Russia,
Krasnodar*

Anastasia A. Vasilyeva
Tatyanna Vasilyeva Fashion House
Alexey Smolin
Dmitri Morosov
Inessa Alexandrovna Shipilina
Olga Ponomarenka
Katya Gerokaris
Mariya (Masha) Alexandrovna Chebotkevich
Enya, winner of Miss Charming and Russian Radio in March 2000 Miss Krasnodar Beauty pageant.
Natasha, tall young with black hair who lives at 138 Rashpilevskaya Street.
Lena, the poor nurse who prostituted herself with Angelina and Olga Ponomarenka.
Nadya, who went to work in Cyprus with Angelina in December 1999.
Inessa, a model at Vasilyeva Fashion House.
Larissa, girl friend of Marios Athanasiou, manager of the Zygos and Tramps brothels in Cyprus.
Volodya, sculptor in his late thirties, married.

Andrei, drove a white Mercedes in 2000.
Mkrtchan, previously taught at the Krasnodar State Academy Physical Training, wife
Tanya.
Rey, pimped for Krasnodar models, including Angelina.
Roma, client of Angelina for whom she wore a black wig in 2000.

Moscow

Natasha Gubina from Vidi Vinci Casting.
Phodes Studio Co.
Leonid Perlin, President Phodes Studio Co.
Tanya, Phodes Studio Prostitute

Other Russian Locations

Vladimir Gavrilov of St. Petersburg
Yulya Alyabyev in Kanevskaya
Alexander Andreevich Rybakov, former police official in Grozny in the 1980s and early 1990s, born July 25, 1952 in Mednogorsk, Russia.
Aunt Sveta, owns house at 11/1 Skvoznaya, Yablonovskiye.

The only way Russians would respond to such a site was by offering U.S. currency. The defense attorneys would claim the information tainted because money exchanged hands, but I could overcome that with sworn affidavits or a precautionary instruction from the Chief Judge to the jury. After all, lawyers always pay private investigators for information and they pay sources, as does the Federal Government. Anyway, the information would most likely lead to more for which I could use the District Court's powers to obtain testimony and documents.

Nadya expressed some concern that the site might break the law. Law, there is no law in Russia, at least none that are enforced, not all that different from America. But some Russians still fear as they did when living under the Soviets. Under the Commies, such a site would violate the law because it told the truth, which was strictly forbidden. But apparently Nadya's concerns went deeper than she originally expressed. She emailed me to say, "Don't you think it's criminal to write such things about other people?" This was a strange remark coming from her since she knew the Commie Ho wrote the diary, sold the photographs and made the video for money. All the site would do is tell the truth. Then I remembered my female Russian instructor in Moscow who refused to translate the Commie Ho's diary when I first copied it. She didn't want to invade the prostitute's privacy, and Cheryl, the Feminazi, refused to read it for the same reason. Two girls, like all girls, who would go out of their way to find incriminating evidence to batter a man, didn't want to see the truth about one of their own. Girls united against men. They will hide any secret, no matter how foul, justify any deed, no matter how harmful, so long as it puts a man in jeopardy or protects the truth about how girls really operate. The girls I had come across always tended to lie to men for each other, but was there really a genetic worldwide conspiracy reaching back into time to promote the illusion of females as "sugar and spice and everything nice"?

Nadya's remark was put out of my mind for she had dug up a lot of useful information in Krasnodar over the past three years while collecting a monthly stipend. Assuring her there was nothing criminal about the site, she eventually found a "pcman," who would set the site up and advertise it in Russia for $700. A little steep I thought, especially for Russia where it amounted to half a year's income for the average household. But Nadya knew how to operate in Russia, and I trusted her.

A problem arose when the Internet host required blacking out certain parts of the Commie Ho's body, such as the close up of her massaging her snatch in the video clip. That struck me as strange because Russians not only allow people to murder and steal at will, well almost at will, they never let morality interfere with making a ruble or buck. But I didn't care, just as long as viewers who knew or previously came across the Commie Ho could identify her. Clearing that up took a couple of months.

Nadya finally emailed me the site's address, but clicking on it only brought up the window "Network Problems." Nadya assured me she'd get the pcman to fix it. Another month goes by. Nadya then tells me that the pcman subcontracted the work out, and she needed to complete some paper work, another month, another stipend. She eventually emails me a different site address, but again up pops "Network Problems." Okay, I finally catch on; my trusted agent in Krasnodar is either scamming me or has defected to the Commie Ho's side. After all, the Commie Ho can now pay more than me having made by then around 600 grand tax-free in four years. Nadya's monthly stipend ended, so much for pretty young Russian girls in their mid-twenties.

Nadya had first started working for me at twenty-one, and, like other early twenty something Russian babes, she always stuck to her work agreements, but by the mid-twenties these Russian girls transmute into thieves in the night and turncoats. Guess they figure they are running out of time. Nadya ripped me off for $700, but she would have made more in her monthly wage by keeping her end of the bargain. Oh well, and I never even hit on her, although spent a lot of time gazing at her attributes. Just can't help looking more at a young girl's breasts than her face when talking to one. However, with older broads my eyes ignore them completely while conversing, which is as seldom as possible.

Trouble In Paradise

Uncovering more information on the Commie Ho and her mob associates' web of revulsion for my RICO case continued to consume a lot of time, tolerance and appetite for boredom. The pursuit of justice carries a heavy dose of the meanness of reality that deters many from paying its price. But there's no way other than to pay that price to keep the fundamental problem with people from swamping the planet. No matter when, or where, it's always the same. People with power, whether individually or as part of an institution, group or government, decide they will take what they don't deserve because they can. Naturally, they always justify in their own minds violating the rights of others with such lame excuses as some god or goddess told me to, it's the correct thing to do, we're superior, we know what's best and any other lunatic rationale humans can invent.

Look at the Bush Administration, it goes knocking on Iraq's door saying, "Listen up boys, this here's your lucky day. We're going to remove Saddam, then make you just like us. That's right, soon your children, 12 and younger, will have the opportunity to buy any addictive drug nature or modern chemistry can make; your daughters, sisters and wives can make big bucks in the soft-core and hard-core pornography industry—hey, a hundred grand a year is more than you'll see in a lifetime, and thanks to Billy Bob Clinton, the girls can give blowjobs while claiming, if their mouths aren't too full, that it's not sex; every house will have a TV with shows oozing sexual thrills, naked breasts at half-time and dirty innuendos for the kiddies to salivate over; however, ninety per cent of you guys will stay condemned to the worst and most dangerous jobs, but the females, just look at the Abu Ghraib prison photo album, will now run the show in order to make up for centuries of you boys sacrificing to protect and provide for them and their children; of course, you'll still have to die to protect the girls from foreign enemies, but now the girls will control your lives according to their whims—isn't that great; you guys will automatically become second and even third class citizens, but it's the correct thing to do—believe us; you'll even have a stock market and homes to invest in so as to build a nest egg for retirement that corporate executives, stockbrokers and financial analysts can steal without the government doing much of anything about it, other than give those wealthy crooks larger tax breaks and low interest loans that you'll have to make up by paying more tribute to our, we mean, your government—isn't the American brand of freedom and democracy wonderful; true you wouldn't be able to believe what the media says because it uses fake documents and makes up stories, but that's no different than under Saddam, so the media's a wash." Somehow I don't think the Iraqis or anyone in the Middle East wants our democracy, freedoms and injustices.

If America came to my door with an offer like that, I'd pick up a gun too. Now that I think about it, America actually kicked down my door in the 1960s with a similar ultimatum. When I stepped out of high school, the draft said, "Come her boy!" so I went to college instead. But when I twice left college, the Selective Service was on me like a fury trying to add black ink with my blood to the financial statements of members of the military-industrial complex. Profits for the complex that Eisenhower warned against grew geometrically during the war as more and more blood of young American men—not girls, but men, washed the jungle floors of Vietnam. Corporate America and that butcher Lyndon B. Johnson, for whom more females voted than men, weren't going to vampire my blood for a buck. Anyone who did a little research knew the government lied; the real reasons for the war were profits and L.B.J.'s political career. L.B.J. didn't want to appear soft on communism because by his cold war mentality pulling out of Vietnam would hurt his chances of re-election in 1968. Boy was he wrong.

Twice I had to fight and beat the draft: the first time by going underground in California, then back to college; the second time a couple of sympathetic doctors, one whose son also carried the draft on his back, gave me the notes needed to escape the hamburger grinder for good. All an experience today's Feminazis can't even begin to imagine unless America's current wars bring back the draft. If that happens, all those broads who think they are as tough as men will start bawling and pleading that the draft shouldn't take them because they're girls. They'll begin the old whine, "But men start the wars," to which I always retorted, "Tell that to the guys pushing up daisies in the Falkland Islands, the Seks butchered by Indira Gandhi, the Arabs killed in Golda Meir's 1967 War and those slaughtered during Queen Victoria's Boer War or because of Catherine the Great's lust for beachfront real estate on the Black Sea. No, when the draft comes knocking the next time, none of the traditional feminine wiles will work, not after all the changes in the law and culture they've wrought over the past forty years. The U.S. Supreme Court will reverse its decision allowing the Government to discriminate by drafting only men, and the Feminazis will finally know not just the benefits but also some of the real hell of manhood. I can't wait.

Despite the stupidity and waste of the Vietnam War, sometimes I regret not having gone. In the sixties, I didn't want to die a sucker, which my instinct told me would happen. But looking back, what was I saving myself for? Since then, I ended up falling sucker to one female scheme after another: taking care of the Nazi Ho in her old age, investing with an incompetent and corrupt stockbroker in league with other Wall Street crooks and corporate thieves, marrying a narcotics slipping Russian mob prostitute and falling prey to the Feminazis terror responsible for denying me good jobs that I wanted and invidiously discriminating against me in America's courts and government agencies. Had I'd gone to Vietnam, I would've avoided all the subsequent harms caused by those broads. But I didn't go, so now, as it turns out, I'm a bigger sucker than had I gotten my head blown off in the jungles of Southeast Asia. Better a life of promise cut short, than a life of promises never fulfilled.

Lots of Iraqi and Muslim men apparently feel a life cut short rather than years of U.S. feminism scams and discrimination is a price worth paying. After the end of 30 years of tyranny under Saddam Hussein, why should they risk a Feminazi tyranny like the U.S. has had for the past 30 years with its institutionalized discrimination, defamation and intimidation of men in order to serve feminine malice? Muslim men aren't stupid. They understand American priorities as illustrated by the Attorney General of the United States boasting at a press conference about the successful prosecution of a twenty-year-old guy who posted nude photographs of his seventeen-year-old girl friend on the Internet. The girl was clearly a ho; otherwise, she wouldn't have allowed her boyfriend to snap the pictures. She also probably encouraged him to post the photographs, since hos always fantasize about strangers seeing them engaged in sex, naked or partly unclothed. If they didn't, they would not wear dresses so easy to look up or blouses so easy to look down.

The Attorney General seized the opportunity to pander to broads. Since the girl wasn't yet 18—why should one year make a difference—the Department of Justice called out its Feminazi storm troopers, expended valuable time and resources to destroy this guy's life by throwing him in jail for child pornography. As if the Justice Department didn't have better things to do, but that's the American way these days, and Muslim men know it. So they're not about to sit idly by while America creates a similar Middle Eastern Department where the wheels of justice run over mostly men for grievances hypocritically touted by broads. Muslim men don't want a democracy where females receive preferential treatment for the most desirable positions while they receive preferential treatment for the worst; where the system of justice and prosecutorial discretion rides the public relations bandwagon of demonizing men; and where fighting for your rights as a man means mockery, ostracism and poverty. No, the men in the Middle East and other Muslims are wise to fight and die against the modern American way. Better a dead hero than a live coward.

Muslim men have their own paradigm for organizing society, so who are the American and British one percenters and the Feminazis to make them think differently? If guys in the Middle East want civil wars, let them. America had a civil war, so did England, why should Middle Eastern countries be any different? But the American and British rich don't want civil wars or ongoing guerrilla rebellions because it threatens their oil revenues and reconstruction profits. The Feminazis also want the Western domination of the Middle East so as to spread their self-exalting belief system that translates into money, power and status for females with a subservient population of men who cater to their whims and think the world of them. American men might enjoy living as hermaphrodites ruled by she-males, but the U.S. Feminazis aren't going to turn Muslim guys into girlie-men.

The guerillas in the Middle East know the consequences of allowing the U.S. collective to turn their country into an economic colony, so to prevent it, they're killing Westerners and those who work for the West. The corporate rich, through the Federal Government, media and academia, self-righteously denounce the guerillas as brutal, evil, barbarian terrorists. But are they? Who invaded whom?

If during the Cold War, Commies from the Soviet Union came marching down my street in suburbia, I'd start shooting too. After all, what right did the Commies have to enter my neighborhood? Sure the town's female Mayor was a Nazi, but after they removed her, they should have left. As far as disputes among neighbors on the block, we'd deal with that in our own fashion. We wouldn't need some Commies telling us what to do. Same applies to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. If while living in New Jersey, I awoke one morning to find a bunch of guys with long beards camped in my back yard, dancing around singing like Zero Mostel, I'd call the police to kick them off my property. If the cops refused because the police chief had cut a deal with the squatters, I'd throw them off myself. I wouldn't give a damn what some book their ancestors allegedly wrote 2000 years ago said, off they go, with force if necessary. But jingoism, even the American kind, always fails to give the view from the other side.

When people lose their land, have authoritarian governments imposed and their belief systems violated by nations with powerful militaries what are they expected to do? Roll over like a dog, or fight back with any means they have against any targets available to them. Sure the rebels, guerillas and terrorists in the Middle East use personal means to injure and kill others, many of whom are noncombatants, but that's because they don't have the helicopters, tanks and fighter jets that the U.S. and Israel use for killing and injuring their opponents, many of whom are also civilians; oh, excuse me, "collateral damage." If the U.S. gave the Palestinians apache helicopters, tanks and fighter jets, the Palestinians won't use their children as waking bombs or blow up Israeli citizens, they'd go after Israeli government officials, the military and the nation's infrastructure—just like the U.S. does in war. What do the Americans and Israelis think? That a Palestinian girl with no hope for her future children is going to walk up to an Israeli tank made in America and blow herself up. So she dents the tank, and it needs a new paint job, big deal. No, she's going to try to spill as much blood from those on the other side as the latest Apache helicopter rocket attack did in her refugee camp. Same thing throughout the Middle East, only now America is now wearing Israeli boots.

Perhaps I am not completely alien from those victimized in the Middle East by the American rich and the U.S. Government. Both threatened my liberty, interfered with my pursuit of happiness, stood idly by while gangsters threatened me and denied me justice all because an accident of nature made me a man born into a society that turned into a feminarchy. Every day slaps me in the face with the realization that I live in a society controlled by a few, the rich, that benefit from having many, the Feminazis, discriminate against men like me. In this American society, my rights are repeatedly violated because of who I am. It's not so much different for Muslims fighting against America for their land and way of life, only they generally end up dead. But, depending on the point view, there are some things so dear, some things so precious and some things so eternally true that they are worth dying for.

No, I'm not about to convert to some religion that prevents pretty young girls from flaunting their delicious curves, but I would provide America's Islamic opponents, not the Chechens however, legal services and be a better mouthpiece then those guys hiding in caves. Now that would be an interesting battle in this jingoistic environment. But I am stuck in this story of my anti-Feminist crusade, whose end is my reckoning.

Stupid Frigging Fool

By Roy Den Hollander

Part 7

Back On The Chain Gang

“Hello,” I said answering the telephone.

“Mr. Den Hollander, this is Bruce Claugus. I’m representing the Bank of Cyprus.”

“What can I do for you?” I courteously and insincerely replied.

Pompously Claugus said, “We just received your RICO Complaint last Friday and would like you to stop by our offices either today or tomorrow to discuss it.”

Gee, how nice of this puffed-up attorney to give me a choice of today or Wednesday. The really bizarre part, however, was asking me to stop by his office. The case was still in the motion to dismiss stage, and none of the defendants were about to consider settlement until at least discovery. So there was nothing to discuss. A face-to-face meeting made no sense unless he wanted to psychologically maximize the impact of some less than subtle threat. Then again, maybe this wasn’t a lawyer at all, but someone wanting to catch me at a particular time and place. Whatever the purpose, it surely wouldn’t benefit me.

So I asked him, “Why?”

“We conducted an investigation into your allegations and found them groundless.” Next to “frivolous” and “baseless,” “groundless” is another most favored word of defense attorneys whose clients are guilty. Once again, I hit my record button.

“Okay, you’ve told me, so why do you want to meet?” Another question went through my mind that I didn’t bother asking. If these lawyers received the Complaint on Friday but today was Tuesday, March 30, 2004, how could they conduct an investigation in such a short time and over the weekend no less? No, he lied; he was trying to get me into a situation where he and another attorney or two would lean on me, and, if I didn't break, they'd simply lie to the court about what I said. Since I was both the plaintiff and my own attorney, anything I said the defense lawyers could try to use against me in court as a party opponent admission. And in a meeting with two or three other lawyers, the court would believe them as opposed to just me.

Claugus answered, "Since we were unable to find any evidence of your allegations that means you're barking up the wrong tree." Oh brother, does this guy really expect me to believe that if they found evidence of their client laundering money for the Russian mafia, they would tell me? No, they'd tell me just what he's saying in this lame authoritarian attempt to psychologically undercut my resolve.

Claugus then segued into a phony sympathetic and confidential tone, "It seems to me the nub of your complaint. Let me close my door here, hold on." I liked that touch: just us two guys talking. "You know it seems to me the nub of your complaint is that you married badly and then had trouble getting rid of this woman. Same thing happened to me. But I didn't blame my banker or her banker." Was this supposed to make me believe we were brothers in harm? I didn't respond, just let him talk as I learned in the media decades earlier when doing undercover stories: let them ramble on, they may put their feet in their mouths and it makes for a clearer sound track.

"We had absolutely nothing to do with this!" Back to sounding authoritative while repeating the same tired cliché that defense lawyers always say about their clients, as though anyone believes them. "So we're given the choice of either persuading you to drop us from the Complaint or defend the thing. We're prepared to do either." Naturally they are, since either serves their interests: impressing the client if I let them go or making money, but why bother telling me what I already knew?

So I responded, “Well then defend it because I’m not going to drop the Bank of Cyprus as a defendant in the Complaint. I can tell you that right now.”

“Alright, we’re going to proceed to defend, to defend vigorously, and we expect to be fully exonerated.” Another hackneyed lawyer expression. Claugus then switched to the typical lawyer threat for scaring people off of their rights, “and when we do that, we are also going to move for sanctions. This is utterly and completely ridiculous. I’ve practice for 28 years, never seen a complaint as preposterous as the one that you brought, at least as to my client. I don’t know about any of these other things and allegations that you make. But the Bank of Cyprus is completely in the clear. And the information we already have indicates that. And if you are not prepared to listen to us and respond responsibly, then we’re going to take whatever steps we have to in order to get ourselves exonerated and make ourselves whole for whatever it is we have to spend to deal with this complaint. Are we clear!!”

Now that last sentence was a combative remark deserving a two-knuckle punch to the bridge of his nose, but I was on the telephone and this pretentious lawyer only bored me. So, I matter-of-factly responded, “Are you threatening me?”

“No I’m not threatening you!”

“Ohhhh yes you are.”

“I’m explaining to you.” Lawyers always say that after they’ve threatened someone who wouldn’t do what they want.

Still matter-of-factly I replied, “No, you’re trying to intimidate me, and you’re trying to coerce me. Now I told you in the beginning, I am not going to drop the Bank of Cyprus from this Complaint. If you would like some productive information and are interested in what is going on currently in this case, I can give you the name for the lead attorney for the defendants, which I will do as a courtesy to you. If you are interested?" If John Madison-Pierre and the F.B.I. can sarcastically use the word "courtesy," so can I.

"What I want to know most, is how it is you specifically think the Bank of Cyprus is implicated in anyway?" Claugus knew better than to ask a question like that of an opposing attorney. It's such an obvious sophomoric trick to get the other side to admit something that will certainly be twisted out of context. But this guy actually believed I would try to convince him of the merits of my allegations against his client. There's no way that a lawyer collecting high fees would ever be convinced that the sun rises in the east, if his client's case depended on it rising in the west.

"Well, that's a deposition question, now isn't it?" I answered. Silence, which I chose to break. "I've given my answer to your efforts of what I consider are meant to intimidate or threaten me."

"I'm not trying to intimidate or threaten you. My client based on the investigation that we have done had nothing to do with any of this. We're going to defend."

"I expected that."

The sparring over, Claugus asked for the name to the lead defense attorney, which he should have requested in the beginning and saved us both the unnecessary sand throwing.

So now there were seven lawyers for the defense with whom to fight: three from small law firms, one from the City and three sole practitioners. Seven guys who in the proud tradition of the law as it really works, not as portrayed on television, believe winning is everything.

Of all the defendants served up to this point; that is, the ones whom I could identify and find addresses for in America, Russia and Cyprus; only Flash Dancers, Cybertech Internet Strip Club, Mundy, Petrovich, the Commie Ho, Paulsen, Henning and the Bank of Cyprus hired attorneys.

The Mexican defendants had not yet been brought into the case. My Spanish translator needed more time than she originally believed to work on the Complaint, so it delayed serving the bloated drug-trafficker Alfredo who spent a weekend in Italy with my then wife of two and a half months, the assorted white slavers: the Julia Heart Agency, now called Malbros, and its former manager Maria Serrato, both of which recruited hos; the strip joint The Men's Club, which hires the hos; Salvador, Leo's partner for funneling Russian sluts into Mexico; Max Garcia Appedole, who bribes Mexican officials to provide the whores work visas. But it didn't matter because in federal courts there's no deadline for serving foreign defendants.

By the end of March, the Spanish version of the Complaint was ready to go. The Mexican government, which considers America the dumping ground for those citizens it can't take care of due to chronic corruption, actually requires stricter procedures for service than other countries, such as those in civilized Europe. Guess Mexican officials need to assuage their suspicion that we Americans might lie about legal proceedings in our courts. The south of the border pillars of truth and justice required the clerk of the U.S. District Court to sign in pen, not with a stamp signature, all the summonses. The signed summonses then went to the United States Department of Justice so that the Attorney General could sign a document, in pen, saying the signature of the U.S. District Court's clerk was really the clerk's. The Department of Justice sent the documents back to me, and I forward them onto the United States Department of State so that it could confirm the signature of the U.S. Attorney General with a document signed in pen. Finally, the documents were mailed to the Mexican government agency that serves foreign court papers on its citizens.

Mexico really wasn't concerned with American veracity. It imposed all those medieval requirements in order to make it very difficult or impossible to sue members of a corrupt banana republic's criminal elite whose government encourages its poorer citizens, already fleeced, to move across the border to violate American law and burden the American infrastructure for which the U.S. middle class—as long as it lasts—pays.

The American Government, allied with the criminal officials in the Mexican government, do nothing about the influx of illegal aliens because the Republicans want cheap labor and the Democrats cheap votes. Eventually, there will only be the rich and the poor in the United States of Mexico. Injustice is the nature of human society. Those that run a society, in America the one percenters and in Mexico the crooked government elite, do whatever increases and protects their wealth and power. If history has taught anything, those that run a society care nothing for its other members—not unlike the feminine perspective.

April Fools' Day brought the much-delayed response to the RICO suit from Cybertech Internet Strip Club's attorney. Ten months after Cybertech first received the Complaint by mail, eight months after official service and three months after my default motion prodded Cybertech's attorney to make an official appearance on behalf of his client by sending the Court a letter, the lawyer finally tells the Court that Cybertech joins with the other American defendants in their joint motion to dismiss. Why so much time, especially after dropping his false claim that the Complaint was never properly served on Cybertech? The attorney obviously didn't want to do much work, and didn't, as his second letter to the Court showed by its absence of any legal citations, meaning he didn't even look up the law. Perhaps such sloth resulted from what he told the Court caused his delay: “dealing with other pressing matters.” What could those have been? Maybe screening the new talent recruited by Cybertech’s V.I.P. Escorts, www.vipescortsinc.com. Still, why did the Court put up with such delays? That’s not what law school or Cravath had taught me, but, maybe, times have changed since the 1980s to the feminine way of doing business.

True to form for attorneys representing purveyors of porn and escorts, Cybertech’s lawyer made a couple of derisive remarks in his letter by declaring that I sued Cybertech “with no small degree of absurdity” and engaged in “fanciful conspiracy theories.” He also rolled out the deceit maneuver in which he fired-off a couple of lies that I countered.

The first falsehood used one of the favorite tactics of the lead defense lawyer, Dubin: simply claim I didn’t say something when I did. Cybertech’s attorney declared the only allegations of wrongdoing against his client were RICO violations. The RICO statute specifies certain crimes as violations of the act, but mafia organizations usually engage in other crimes as well, and scholars of the law advise including those crimes when filing a RICO complaint, which I did. For Cybertech the non-RICO crimes included promoting prostitution. The evidence for which included detailed color copies from Cybertech’s website, www.stripclubescorts.com, showing plenty of spread legs and naked breasts of the hos available for rent “worldwide.” Also included was a copy of the form for booking a whore. The form asserted V.I.P. sluts come “discreetly dressed or as requested in accordance with your chosen venue or function” and “many of our ladies like to work duos, so please Click Here”—I guess that meant top and links. Cybertech’s call girl website also provided hookers willing to travel to exotic places anywhere on the globe for a sufficient number of Benjamin Franklins. Other non-RICO crimes were Cybertech employing girls not lawfully admitted to work in the U.S., violating federal and state tax laws and conspiring to violate federal and state laws.

The attorney's second and more blatant lie came in declaring "I would like to stress to this Court that Cybertech has no employment relationship with any of the other defendants...." To which I responded, "If that were true, then why was Cybertech listed as the host of Flash Dancers web site, www.flashdancersnyc.com. Sounds like an 'employment relationship' to me." For good measure to show the interconnection of Flash Dancers and Cybertech, I threw in a page reached through the Flash Dancers website of Cybertech's Showgirls fully naked, with spread legs and manipulating themselves and each other. That ought to attract the Court's attention. For a while, I even tried searching the Cybertech sites for the Commie Ho, but all those naked girls dancing in my head was too much stimulation for me.

In order to support his lies, Cybertech's lawyer pompously asked the Court to trust what he said. To which I replied, "That is a unique basis for deciding a motion to dismiss: if the defendant's attorney says in a letter that his client did not do the acts alleged, then the complaint should be dismissed. Such a rule would have the benefit of quickly clearing a court's docket, but the impact on justice would be pretty dismal."

Cybertech's lawyer never responded to the evidence that showed him a chronic liar. Attorneys always try to get away with ignoring that which shows them up as liars and their clients as scoundrels.

All the factual claims by the defense lawyers, including Cybertech's, that kept popping up at this stage of the case never should have because in the beginning of a lawsuit in 2004, federal courts were only concerned with whether a complaint painted a picture of harm that the law could rectify. In order to determine that, the Court was suppose to assume that what a complaint said was true and decide whether the law reached that situation. Determining the factual truth based on admissible; that is believable evidence, comes later. For instance, I didn't include the Commie Ho's diary, investigator reports, affidavits or other documents showing some of the defendants' RICO crimes because under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure complaints only make allegations; they do not present evidence that supports the allegations. Much of the evidence for proving the allegations is gathered later during discovery, which gives both sides special powers to find evidence that a person couldn't find without those powers. But when dealing with bureaucrats interested in expediency, that's not always the case, so the defense lawyers, as did the 911 terrorists, played upon this bureaucratic plague of sloth by attempting to have the Court try the case before discovery even began.

People often forget that there's nothing special about judges. They're bureaucrats like all the rest of government employees. Many are lazy, incompetent and uncaring, as were those in the INS, F.B.I. and C.I.A. who failed to do their duty before 911. They just didn't give a damn how many people ended up dead or harmed, so long as they didn't have to interrupt their eight hour lunch breaks. For many bureaucrats, their convenience comes first, which means even in federal courts some judges are driven by expediency rather than justice, reciting not the mantra "equal justice under the law" but "how can I make it easier on myself." Other judges, however, still follow the call of trying to deliver justice to all, even those classified as members of one of society's disfavored groups at a particular point in history, such as heterosexual, middle-aged men with little money in current-day America.

The defense attorneys' strategy relied on the judge falling into the category of just another bureaucrat, so they tried to exploit present day societal biases against men in an effort to get the Court to dismiss the case. My strategy was to point out what the defense attorneys were doing so that the Chief Judge would be prodded into remembering what he learned in law school and make a decision based on the law and not politics.

You Cheated, You Lied

By mid-May, the attorneys for defendants Flash Dancers, Cybertech, Mundy, Petrovich, the Commie Ho, Paulsen and Henning finally filed their joint reply. The lead attorney for the defendants, Dubin, originally had requested in January a “short extension of time” that ended up lasting three and a half months. He needed the time to draft the defendants’ 88-page reply memorandum of law, or more accurately lies, half-truths and prevarications, which ran 22 pages longer than his prior year’s collection of misleading statements in the defense’s initial joint memorandum for dismissal. Once again, Dubin included lots of exhibits that didn’t belong in a motion to dismiss reply. Back in January, he had claimed the reply memorandum would be shorter than the first, but I never believed him, so that lie didn’t count.

The procedure and different papers in this case can get confusing, so here’s a summary. The defendants living in America whom I could identify hired lawyers, except the Vasilyevas. The defense lawyers appeared in Court to tell the Chief Judge they were moving to dismiss; that is, throw my RICO case out of court. Dubin, the lawyer for Mundy and Petrovich, acted as the lead counsel for the defendants in America who had lawyers. Dubin drew up the initial memorandum of law to dismiss, 66-pages and plenty of exhibits, in which the other American defendants with lawyers joined. That memorandum was filed in September 2003. Detective Henning’s attorney, Vikrant Pawar, from the City’s Corporation Counsel Office also filed a short memorandum and affidavit in addition to signing onto the joint memorandum for dismissal. The Vasilyevas didn’t bother to hire an attorney, nor make a motion to dismiss nor sign onto the joint memorandum. In December 2003, I filed my memorandum to oppose a dismissal, 147-pages with a handful of exhibits, which refuted the joint memorandum and Pawar's papers. In mid-May 2004, Dubin filed the 88-page reply memorandum to which the other American defendants with lawyers had joined. The Vasilyevas' continued to do nothing.

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure didn't permit me to file a response to the 88-page tome, so naturally Dubin lied like there was no tomorrow because there wasn't. The only way I could counter his falsehoods and omissions was in oral argument before the Court, which I had requested, but to avoid work, especially in civil RICO cases, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of N.Y. usually doesn't allow oral arguments. So it was a worthwhile gamble for Dubin to fib, and fib he did, more so than in the initial joint memorandum supporting a motion to dismiss.

Beginning to suspect Dubin was Russian, I did a little checking. He comes from a family of Jews with ancestors in Eastern Europe and Russia—I knew it! But for a Jew, he didn't seem too bright, since he often repeated the same lies and vilifications over and over by rote. Then again, repetition often sways those who lack the capacity for critical thinking or are pressed for time; that is, government bureaucrats.

Dubin's reply rant was a calculated scheme to deceive the District Court and play on its institutionalized biases. His reply resorted to just about every lawyerly trick used in today's litigation of personal destruction: misrepresentations, mischaracterizations, prevarications, half-truths, misleading statements, smears, edited quotes, taking a quote that applies to one topic and using it for another, using quotes out of context and the trademark of most lawyers—dissembling. Legions of attorneys resort to such methods because it's easier to just make up the facts and the law while demonizing their opponent. Such lawyers figure: let the other side spend the time correcting their falsehoods and character assassinations because a court wouldn't. Such attorneys also understand all too clearly the special difficulty in countering those lies aimed at manipulating a judge's emotions by painting their opponents as psychologically unfit or socially unacceptable. The strategy of lies and personal attacks often works against individuals because many judges' carry a disdain for the common man and believe the rights of corporations and law firms are more important than the individuals on whom such organizations step.

The defense's reply strategy relied on a trinity of falsehoods: what the lead lawyer said I said but didn't, what he said the law says but doesn't, and what he said are facts but aren't. All the other lawyers for the defendants in America agreed to these tactics as part of their two-prong strategy to have my case dismissed.

The first prong aimed at assassinating my character that even took a concept from the Spanish Inquisition by trumping up charges to which they proclaimed me guilty because I did not first prove my innocence in my Complaint or memorandum of law. That's not the function of a complaint or the papers in a motion to dismiss, not to mention a judicial proceeding in a non-feudal country. Judges aren't supposed to put up with either side trying to win by calling its opponent names or impugning a party's character, but that didn't stop the defense lawyers from trying. There was no way for me to stop them with a lawsuit because no matter how false their harangues, slander and libel are allowed in judicial proceedings.

Dubin's personal attacks declared my motivations improper, as if he knew what they were, and as if they matter under the law, which they didn't—something he even admitted. Dubin claimed I brought the RICO suit "to re-live the consequences of my marriage and divorce to Shipilina." What? Was he nuts? No man would ever want to relive that experience. He maligned that I was "unable to let go." Oh yeah, who kicked whom out of whose apartment? Dubin even ridiculed me for a "fascination" with my "wife's infidelities"—the correct word was revulsion. He also claimed I wanted to “harass” and “punish” the Commie Ho and her fellow defendants: harass maybe, justice definitely, and retribution for the harm caused me by her, her mafia associates and collaborators.

So why did this attorney bother emphasizing my so-called motivations in the beginning of the joint reply memorandum if he knew they didn’t matter under the law? To tell the District Court that political-correct society, read Feminazis, considers me a modern-day pariah, read angry white male, for whom the politically correct will not accept the Court enforcing my rights because the active ingredient in the harm caused me was a slut, read woman fully experiencing her emotions, so the Court had better find a legal way to deep-six my case. The character assassination was simply intended to shut down the legal argument and marginalize me, so the lead defense attorney didn’t have to argue, nor the Court consider, the merits.

The second prong of the attack, which also provided a basis for vilifying me, consisted of information that the lawyer claimed as true but was really false or misleading in order to convince the Court that my Complaint was a “delusional” tale told by a liar. For instance, the attorney wrote concerning his phony facts that “Each and every fact has either been acknowledged by the plaintiff or confirmed by documentary evidence.” Under the law, “acknowledge” means a person admits, affirms, declares, testifies or avows that something said by another is true. I never did that concerning the so-called facts this lawyer used in his memorandum. And even if I did, under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure a judge shouldn’t engage in resolving disputes over facts or considering evidence until later on in the case after the necessary steps are taken to make sure both sides’ statements and documents aren’t fabricated. Dubin gamed the procedure; otherwise, he never could have gotten most of his disinformation before the Chief Judge, which was crucial in carrying out the defendants’ strategy to paint me as a liar and a pariah in order to give the Chief Judge a socially acceptable excuse to throw the case out.

The alleged “documentary evidence” the defense lawyer submitted consisted of 47 separate documents, which he disguised as 30 exhibits to make the number appear less. The lawyer lied that because “the plaintiff had possession and full knowledge of each and every document” the Court could consider them in deciding the motion to dismiss. That’s not the law, even assuming I did have full knowledge and possession of each document. The only matters a Federal court can consider in deciding a motion to dismiss are the allegations in a complaint, documents incorporated by reference into a complaint, matters of which judicial notice may be taken, and documents relied on by the plaintiff in drafting a complaint. Only eight of the 47 defense documents were used in drafting my Complaint, none of the others were referred to in the Complaint, and none of the 47 could the Court take judicial notice of. In my response, I told the Court I had relied on other sources other than the eight included in the 47, such as “Shipilina’s diary of over one hundred pages. Gee whiz, the defense lawyers didn’t include the diary in their voluminous exhibits. I guess it doesn’t support their so-called facts and false inferences.”

Among the defense’s “documentary evidence,” for which I moved to exclude, were letters I sent to the Commie Ho before our marriage. Dubin obviously submitted them, in part, to embarrass me, an often tried and often successful tactic to cause a plaintiff so much emotional stress that he will abandon his rights. It didn’t work. These days I’m beyond embarrassment but not hate. Even though some of my sappy romantic remarks in those letters made me want to throw up. The defense lawyer also used the letters to try to impeach my credibility, which was again improper for a motion to dismiss, but okay for a deposition or trial, which come later in the process. Dubin claimed the letters showed that the Commie Ho, her Moscow pimp Leo and her criminal mother didn't trick me into bringing the Ho to America because I pursued her and knew the Commie Ho's "profession" before marrying her. He used the word "profession" to create the false impression for the Court that I knew she was a prostitute and member of the Russian mob and added that knowing such; I tried to find her work. Right, I'm going to drum up Johns for my future wife; I don't think so. But the lawyer's mind set, meaning he would probably do that for his girlfriend, his lie was a natural result of his values.

The only part of the Commie Ho's profession I knew about before the marriage was the lap dancing, which I learned of in November 1999 after a call about her arrest in Mexico on immigration violations, and I did help her find a job at Flash Dancers believing, like an idiot, it would be temporary until she saved the nest egg she wanted of 50 grand. So, I'm a dope. The defense lawyer knew all that from the Complaint, but that didn't stop him from twisting the letters I had written when I believed she worked only as a model and go-go girl with clothes, although not many clothes, in order to mislead the Court into believing I aided her work as a prostitute and Russian mafia member. Many lawyers never care about the truth or what anyone actually says, so they just make it up assuming the Court will be too busy to straighten out their misrepresentations.

Most of the defense's documents weren't even authenticated, which means a statement by someone in a position to know whether a document is real or a fabrication as with the documents CBS 60 Minutes boss Betsy West used against President Bush concerning his National Guard Service. West was the same bimbo who ignored my story about the truth of Russian sluts coming to America voluntarily to ho for dollars.

One of the defense's phony documents was an alleged contract between the Commie Ho and me that was clearly pulled from a book of legal forms. Dubin argued the document proved me a fellow traveler in crime by acting as the Ho's agent, implying pimp, even though it had no signatures, no references to prostitution or the Russian mob. Anyone can type up a copy of a form without signatures and claim it's an agreement. Any judge not driven by or scared of the political correctionalist agenda would throw such exhibits in the garbage because they lacked any indication of genuineness.

Taking this opportunity to return a few insults in my motion to exclude the documents, I told the Court, "the defense attorneys were beginning to behave like pro se defendants, and perhaps the special rules accorded non-attorney pro se parties should apply to them. They improperly submit extraneous exhibits on a motion to dismiss and don't even bother to take the time and effort to authenticate them. Then after I make an objection, they still don't do all that is required to authenticate these extraneous exhibits. Rather, they invent an excuse for their failure by claiming some of the exhibits don't need authentication because they are provided as a 'courtesy to this Court.' That's a slick rationale for the whispering of untrustworthy evidence into the Court's ears. By that inquisition-like reasoning, the defendants could fake any document, give it to the Court and the court should believe it because lawyers say it's legit—I don't think so."

An even slicker argument for getting the Court to consider these unauthenticated exhibits depicted me as the heavy for "seek[ing] to have this Court ignore admissible information." By "admissible information" the defense lawyer meant "evidence," but it's not the Court's function on a motion to dismiss to weigh the evidence that might be presented in a summary judgment motion or at trial. Telling this to the Court, "I just don't understand why the defense attorneys blatantly ignore the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, unless they are trying to slip something by. And they are. They want the Court to ignore the due process concerns built into the rules and try the case here and now.”

The exhibits even included what the defense maintained were English translations of Russian documents supporting their position, but they didn't bother to include copies of the Russian documents from which the translations were purportedly made. Despite this, they argued that because I didn't say in my motion the documents were inaccurate or not translated properly, they were, therefore, correct translations and authentic. To which I responded, “Where in the law did the defendants find this Joseph Heller Catch-22? If a party doesn't claim the English translations of foreign records are inaccurate, then they are accurate, even though there are no copies of the foreign language records for a party to compare to the alleged English translations. Give me a break, except for a handwritten document in Russian, which is unlikely a public record unless the Russians have run out of typewriters, there are no copies of the original Russian official records from which the English translations purportedly came.” That didn't stop the lead lawyer. Dubin argued that the Russian version, even though absent, serves as the evidence, and, therefore, the English translation does not require authentication. Interesting argument, lawyers could create any document in English that said whatever they wanted and have a court consider it as truthful by simply claiming it accurately represented the translation of a foreign document for which the lawyers couldn't provide a copy of to a court. Clearly an Orwellian argument.

The lead attorney, however, did include the Russian language papers from the Krasnodar criminal defamation case against the Commie Ho's mother but no translation into English. Probably slipped his mind, or more likely to cover his lie to the Court that the papers represented a civil suit brought by me in an attempt to harass the Commie Ho's mother. My motion to exclude the exhibits pointed out "The defamation case referred to was not a civil defamation case, but a criminal indictment of Inessa Shipilina brought by the city prosecutor of Krasnodar—big difference!" But what did the defense lawyers care, since their aim was to discredit me before a judge who might not want to deal with a civil RICO case anyway. Some judges just go along with one sides lies in order to get rid of a case they don't like—bureaucrats serving that most important of interests: their own.

Another trick Dubin often used switched around the sequence of events in order to depict me as assuming the risk of what happen. For example, he claimed I learned about the Commie Ho secretly feeding me drugs and that she was a prostitute before the wedding but went ahead and married her anyway. I maybe dumb, but not that dumb. As my Complaint clearly stated, that knowledge of the Ho's actions didn't come until months after the wedding and after reading her diary, which I found in her bags. The lawyer also mixed up the allegations in my Complaint so as to rewrite it to the defense's advantage, which once again is not allowed on a motion to dismiss. In one instance, the defense attorney twisted my Complaint as asserting the Commie Ho fed me drugs while she was in Mexico and I in Moscow. How did she do that? By emailing me meals. She only fed me lies during that time. Dubin also lied that after I learned of the Commie Ho's adultery and went back to New York in June 2000, I then contacted her "in the hope that she would return." In order to reach that deception, he turned a "goodbye letter," the one I sent from England, into a "come back letter." This lawyer also had the nerve to criticize me for trying to save my marriage by demanding the Commie Ho obey her marriage vows when she was in America. Duh, isn't that the reason for marriage vows?

On it went with the defense's joint memorandum changing dates, mischaracterizing the Complaint and simply lying:

My investigation in Krasnodar to find evidence for the annulment/divorce case became a "fascination" with the Commie Ho's affairs and an "effort to punish her." Guess as a man, I not only had no right to make accusations against my wife in an annulment/divorce case, but no right to dig up evidence to prove those accusations.

The Commie Ho declining to press charges when she went to the police in December 2000 to report attempted extortion by me turned into "merely," another favorite word of attorneys, creating a record because I had abused the legal system by filing a lot of suits. At that time, I had filed no lawsuits.

By not denying the accusations in Dubin's initial motion to dismiss memorandum meant I had admitted them, which included harassing the defendants. Baloney, the law doesn't require a plaintiff to deny a defendant's accusations until the defendant serves an answer with counterclaims, which the defense lawyers had not done, and the use of the legal system to sue others for violating a person's rights is not harassment—it's the very reason the judicial system exists.

Dubin even claimed I never received any threatening telephone calls when his client Mundy had tapes of two of them, thanks to the state court motion to reform the divorce settlement, and declared that I never accused Mundy and Petrovich of instigating them when I had. Dubin argued that because the F.B.I. didn't arrest the guy making the threatening calls, they never happened. Well, the F.B.I. didn't arrest in time the 20th 911 hijacker taking flight lessons in the Midwest either. Maybe the F.B.I. will make an arrest of John Pierre-Madison when I end up dead, although I doubt it.

Dubin naturally ridiculed me as mentally unstable for seeking help from a psychiatrist to deal with the hell the Commie Ho, Mundy and the New York State courts had put me through. The New York State Bar Association encourages lawyers to seek medical assistance during troubled times, but if they do, it's a certainty that other lawyers and judges will use it against them. No more shrinks for me.

The defense lawyer intentionally mixed up Silpe's July 2001 sell out of me in the annulment/divorce case with the November 2001 settlement by saying the sell-out was no such thing because it came in November after a long period of time and an extensive written agreement that I approved.

Dubin also resorted to the sarcasm used by a few of the other attorneys in the case who depicted me as claiming the RICO action spanned the globe. Not true, I said the Russian mafia spanned the globe, and this suit involved only a part of that organization's activities in five countries on two continents.

Dubin also lied that the Complaint's only references to Mundy and Petrovich were for representing the Commie Ho in the annulment/divorce action and immigration matters when paragraph after paragraph cites them for coercion, bribery, intimidation, obtaining visas for Russian prostitutes, suborning perjury, mail and wire fraud and money laundering.

Dubin didn't confuse the Complaint's allegations; he intentionally misrepresented them and repeated his lies more than once betting that the Chief Judge would not spend the time necessary to see through his falsehoods, omissions, switching the chronology of events and the false impressions the joint memorandum created. That's why he filed so many documents, to scare the Chief Judge off from making the effort to understand the allegations against the defendants and the chain of events.

One lie by the lead counsel, however, made me smile. He declared it was I who was the mafioso. If the people with whom I used to work in the news media could hear that, they'd have a good laugh. Whatever reputation my time in the newsroom created, it wasn't that of a mafia sycophant.

In the seventies and early eighties when I worked in the media, New York City's mobsters consisted mainly of Italians, Irish and Jews operating as "families" with "made members" and those not officially on the inside, but close, called "good friends." Not too many folks were "made members," and I only met one in my news career, a cousin of Joey Gallo. But lots of politicians, public officials, union officers, slumlords, nursing home operators, law firms, newsmen, contractors, methadone and medical clinic managers and businessmen did and received favors from the made mobsters and were accorded the title "good friends." The mobsters and their good friends made up a shadow government of influence peddling that favored certain business operators and politicians. Corruption weaved throughout the City and at the heart were the mob bosses' power over unions, certain industries and violence that they brokered through guys like Roy Cohn and Bill Shea, as in the former Queens stadium. Power brokers such as Cohn and Shea cut the deals that enriched those on the inside with the money from those on the out, the average taxpayer. I hated these guys, didn't know why, just did and still do.

On one undercover story, I ended up sitting in Roy Cohn's town house on the Eastside with him and two other guys working out the details of a Studio 54 fundraising event for the newly elected Surrogate judge, a "good friend" of Cohn's, the Gambino and Mangano families.

In New York City, the Surrogate judge determines which lawyers received the millions of dollars each year the judge parcels out in lawyer fees. When a person in the City dies, the individual's estate goes before the Surrogate judge, who, depending on the situation, can appoint the judge's lawyer friends to protect the interests of one or more heirs to the estate. The appointed lawyers, however, generally protect no one's interest but their own by padding their fees and sometimes just looting the estate, which the Surrogate usually approved.

The fundraiser we were planning, which was Cohn and the judge's idea, gave lawyers the opportunity to buy a piece of the action from the Surrogate Court by effectively bribing the judge with ticket purchases. The money raised by the fundraiser, after paying off campaign debts, would go right into the judge's pockets. Even some of the campaign debt payments would go into the judge's pockets because they were falsely listed as coming from fronts set up by other "good friends." These fronts never lent the campaign any money or provided services, so by paying them off with the fundraising proceeds simply channeled money to the judge.

Cohn originally wanted Bill Shea to help him push the tickets, but Shea thought it a little too obvious a bribe scheme. Shea preferred secret bank accounts and exchanges of envelopes with cash. After talking on the telephone with Shea, Cohn remarked, "I just can't deal with all this negativity. Bill will buy a couple of tables but won't help sell the tickets. We'll have to do that ourselves."

Since joining the judge's campaign as assistant manager, I had kept Joe Conason, a reporter at the Village Voice, informed on the various shenanigans of the campaign. After telling him about the bribery-fundraiser scheme on which he did an article, the New York State Commission on Judicial Conduct started an investigation. The fundraising efforts immediately stalled, the judge, who directed me to keep an index file of the lawyers who contributed and how much, deep-sixed the file, but not until I made a copy. The fundraiser went off, but the judge didn't show along with many others and very little was actually reported, since the preferred ticket sale was in cash.

After the stink over the fundraiser, the judge took bribes the old fashion way, through a combination lawyer and bagman, whose brother had lost lots of money with his partner Meyer Lansky in a Havana casino after Castro took over. The bagman eventually ended up in jail for five years.

The reform wing of the New York City Democratic Party that controlled the Commission on Judicial Conduct cut a deal with the regular wing of the party to whom the judge was aligned and who was represented by a lawyer for John Gotti. The agreement kept the judge on the bench provided she gave patronage, millions of dollars in lawyers' fees, to both factions of the Democratic Party, which included lawyers friendly with the Commission, Cohn, the Gambino and Mangano families and the judge.

There were other mafia news stories I worked on, but rarely did the real culprits: judges, lawyers or businessmen ever pay the price. Then in the 1990s, a new corruptor came to town, the Russian mafia, and I, like an idiot, helped bring in one of its assets. So, I couldn't help but laugh at the irony of unwittingly having aided the new mob and being accused as one of its associates.

Dubin also included in the joint reply memorandum a type of bootstrap logic. He claimed my allegations false because the Federal Government, according to him, had never investigated two of the key defendants, Mundy and Petrovich, for their Russian mafia connected activities. He didn't know that, or maybe he just lied, but even if true, the 911 Commission's Report showed the Federal Government renown for not investigating comrades in crime. Besides, as the U.S. Supreme Court held, the purpose of the civil RICO statute was to allow private citizens to take down criminals and their abettors that government prosecutors couldn't because of limited resources. The really outlandish part of the defense attorney's claim, however, was that he completely ignored that my papers stated the F.B.I. had confirmed its Russian Organized Crime Unit had started an investigation based on my Complaint. True, the F.B.I. didn't mention Mundy and Petrovich specifically, but neither did it rule them out. Dubin conveniently ignored that because he figured the Court would miss it among all the pages of documents in the case.

Hypocritically, Dubin even rebuked me for trying to find out the truth as though I, the target, had no right to investigate the defendants concerning the harm they caused me. What a system of justice America has evolved into where lawyers can actually use against an injured party that party's efforts to uncover facts for a court. Guess the new rule of procedure is that evildoers can't be investigated because they are evildoers. Depicting me as a social outcast, and his clients as pillars of the community, he declared I had telephoned strangers to ask "appalling questions." Not true, but if I had, so what, that's a plaintiff's or defendant's right, at least it used to be under American jurisprudence. The defense lawyer had conveniently juxtaposed questions I had asked the Commie Ho to my asking them of strangers, and the questions directed to the Commie Ho were based on her "appalling" diary. But that's the way such lawyers work, tell a lie and then use that lie to sully an opponent.

Often when I pointed out an obvious fabrication by Dubin, he'd simply ignored it. Many lawyers and judges do the same—no sense drawing attention to the pathology of lawyerly lying. But there were some lies so blatant that this lawyer needed a smoke screen to shift attention away from his blatant falsehood. My opposition memorandum slammed the defense attorney for his intentional deception that Mundy's filing of a disciplinary complaint against me was not aimed at scaring me off the RICO case. The attorney claimed Mundy didn't know about the RICO case when Mundy filed the disciplinary complaint; therefore, Mundy couldn't have been using the complaint to intimidate me. But Mundy did know, and after I showed that to the Court in my memorandum, the defense lawyer tried to distract the Court from his original lie by calling me hysterical for exposing it. What a jerk, my mother was hysterical, not me. Anyway, according to his reasoning, telling falsehoods didn't matter if they caused an emotional reaction in an opponent because such reaction was a sign of guilt. Sounded similar to the rationale of a prosecutor at a witch trial where putting on a strong defense to false claims meant toasting at the stake.

Dubin claimed the Internet website on which Mundy's law firm advertised with agencies selling Russian bribes and hos was created by me. What a beckon of darkness was this guy. On receiving my memorandum, he actually called me to say he couldn't find the site, so I told him how to search it. He replied, "Hold on, I'm going to try on my computer right now. Okay, I found it, thanks." He himself confirmed its existence, but in his reply memorandum and after Mundy's advertisement was removed, he calls it "suspect" and goes on to accuse me of setting it up in order to explain the copies of the site included in my exhibits. First, I'm accused of fabricating the Ho's diary and then Mundy's website aimed at providing hos bound for American immigration services. Where do these people come from—Russia!

The defense's reply memorandum also made some trivial objections that my complaint and opposition memorandum were too long. The Complaint was only so long as to give the defendants fair notice of the claims against them. As I told the Court, if they had violated fewer laws, it would have been shorter. The opposition memorandum was only so long as to expose the falsehoods of the lead defense lawyer in his dismissal memorandum. If he had lied less, it would have been shorter. And, if I had the opportunity to respond to the reply memorandum, my response would have been even longer than my first memorandum since the defense attorney told more lies in his reply memorandum. Putting aside all that, under the Court's rules and the individual rules of the Chief Judge, the lengths of both my Complaint and opposition memorandum were within the rules. Besides, the American defendants up to mid-May 2004 had submitted 353 pages of documents to my 273. So why was the lead attorney complaining? Once again, he knew the Court would not bother counting the pages each side filed, so he tried to create the false impression that I was to blame for loading up the Court with paper.

The length of my opposition memorandum also ticked off Dubin because it countered most of the lies he told in his first memorandum. He called my relentless exposure of his falsehoods "nit-picking," and the omissions he had made as "trivial." Then he accused me of diverting the Court's attention by spending "countless pages" disproving his misrepresentations, half-truths and false impressions, and even accused me for doing what he did by "referencing inadmissible evidence and harping on mundane details." The guilty, especially lawyers and girls, don't like others showing them up as liars, and will always criticize their opponents for doing what they do, whether or not true, so as to distract from their own mendacity.

Like whores, many attorneys will never admit the truth while criticizing everyone else. Dubin denounced me for using "buzz words" to appeal to the Court's emotion, such as white slavery, narcotics trafficking, bribery, money laundering, extortion, threats, murder for hire and fraud—all of which are legal terms specifying crimes committed by the defendants. What terms would he have me use? If I euphemized them to "inappropriate social conduct," he'd then complain about vagueness. Dubin also criticized me for using public statements by the F.B.I. and C.I.A. about the Russian mob's activities in the U.S., which he called "delusion," “outlandish,” “incredible” and “far-fetched.” He went so far as to rebuke me for paranoia by trying “to lull the Court into believing that the Russian mafia presently exists.” Well if it doesn’t, then who washed billions of dollars through the Bank of New York, runs lucrative gasoline tax fraud and insurance scams in the New York City area and operated Los Angeles’ largest prostitution ring. He reminded me of some people in the 1940s and 1950s, like J. Edgar Hoover, who always claimed La Cosa Nostra a myth—until Appalachia.

Dubin even found fault with me referencing my education and employment history after he went to such lengths to tear down my reputation and paint me as a pariah. How else can someone counter such smear tactics? This guy would use Moses’ Ten Commandments against him. And no, I’m not implying any comparison.

Many lawyers and all Feminists follow the Old Russian adage, “the law is like a wagon axle, it goes in any direction you want to pull it,” and apply the motto, “don’t let the facts get in the way of a good story.” For example, the lead defense attorney claimed I “blatantly admitted that this action was a fishing expedition.” “Blatant” is another favorite word of exaggeration for lawyers. But in this case, not only did I not “blatantly” admit, I never admitted to a “fishing expedition” at all. Fishing is not one of my past times, other than for girls, which is more like a hunt. In another instance, Dubin misrepresented my Complaint and memorandum as saying that my ex-wife “holds together” the defendants. The Commie Ho was a mafia prostitute, recruiter of other prostitutes and money laundered, not a capo. Although one day, who knows? She had dealings with the defendants, just as anyone belonging to a large organization and its affiliates would end up working with any number of different persons in different sections and locations.

Paulsen’s attorney filed a short reply in addition to signing onto the joint reply in which he flat out lied that my Complaint only accused his client of crimes occurring in October 1998.

That would mean the four-year period in which to bring a RICO suit against Paulsen had run before I filed the Complaint. I'm not that stupid. The Complaint alleges, present tense, Paulsen imports and sells pornography from Russia into southern California. Paulsen's mentally challenged attorney also puffed himself up to self-righteously declare my Complaint a "vindictive assault" and "act of vengeance" that the Court should not countenance in order to "maintain the integrity of the judicial process," which is lawyer lingo appealing to the desires of many judges for expediency over justice. Paulsen's attorney even threw in the comical overstatement that his client "vehemently denies all the allegations of the Complaint." Just "deny" would have sufficed.

Flash Dancers' attorneys also included a short reply in which they couldn't even distinguish between my papers and those of the defense's joint reply when they complained to the Court about me submitting a "book of exhibits." The number of my exhibits were five, which added up to 35 pages; the defense submitted 47 separate documents of over 200 pages.

Flash Dancers' reply tried to correct its lawyers' earlier mistake of ignoring many of the Complaint's allegations against it by calling them immaterial and redundant. They weren't, but these lawyers needed to gloss over their sloppiness somehow. They also called my pointing out their failure as "nit-picking." "Nit-picking" when they get caught, but an "egregious fraud on the Court" or "admission of wrong doing" if I had done it. Flash Dancers' attorneys, as with Mundy and Petrovich's, also mischaracterized some of the allegations against their clients in order to leave out important sections to which they had no defense. When I caught them, they told the Court, it was an error of no consequence. Nice tactic, if a lawyer gets away with it, a court may rule in his favor, if he gets caught for lying, it was inadvertent and unimportant—a no lose situation. In another trick, the lawyers misled the Court about one important case by claiming the case addressed a different issue than it actually did. Obviously they were betting the Court would never check. Regardless of their subterfuges, at least Flash Dancers' lawyers didn't engage in personally insults.

Detective Henning's attorney, Vikrant Pawar, didn't put in a reply; he just went along with the lead defense attorney in the joint reply as did the Commie Ho's lawyer, Jack Sachs. Sachs was an old guy, and I couldn't help thinking with a smile about the line from the movie Raging Bull, "Did you fuck my wife?" Sure she was no longer related to me, thank goodness, but he, like hundreds of other guys probably did. Only in this instance, she was paying him rather than he her.

To sum up, during this early stage of the case, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure required that the District Court ignore all the claimed facts presented in the defense lawyers' memoranda of law and exhibits because the Court is supposed to focus only on the allegations in my Complaint in order to determine whether the law can provide a solution. Dubin and the other defense lawyers, however, ignored the rules to argue the merits of the case during a motion to dismiss in order to finesse the Court into using their false and one-sided depictions of the facts to determine the defendants were innocent angels persecuted by me the devil; therefore, the case should be dismissed. Had the defense lawyers played by the rules, fat chance, and waited for the proper time to submit their so-called facts against me, I would have had the opportunity to shoot down their claims for lack of evidentiary foundations or use cross-examinations to show they lied. But by throwing in their accusations during a motion to dismiss, no such opportunities existed. Very tricky, this Star Chamber tactic that eviscerated my due process rights on which the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are based. So I did the only thing I could, cited the law that showed such a tactic improper and moved the Court to exclude from its decision the smears, extraneous exhibits and alleged facts the defendants submitted.

Party Lights

After reviewing the defense lawyers' joint reply and the short individual replies from a couple of the defendants, I decided not to work six days a week preparing for an oral argument, even though it represented my last chance to convince the Chief Judge that the defense attorneys were lying and violating the rules. The chances of the District Court granting me oral argument were slim to none because of its animosity for civil RICO cases and the popular perception that men no longer deserved the protection of the institutions they had created. Instead, I used my time to continue investigating the defendants, writing this magnum opus<sup>1</sup> and waiting for the Bank of Cyprus to file its separate motion to dismiss.

Out of all the foreign defendants in Russia and Cyprus that I had tracked down and served, and there were nearly twenty, only the Bank of Cyprus bothered responding. The papers for the Mexican defendants were still bouncing around Mexico's Direccion General de Asuntos Juridicos, which under Hague Convention was delegated to serve the papers. The Russian and Cypriot defendants ignored the action brought against them in a U.S. Federal Court, as would the few Mexican defendants that were finally served eight months later by a Writ of Notification. Everything takes longer south of the border.

Except for the Bank of Cyprus, which had an office New York City, the U.S. Government couldn't touch these other mob associates. The District Court couldn't enforce any decision against any of them unless their respective governments abided by the promises officials made in international treaties. An unlikely occurrence since governments riddled with corruption, such as Russia, Cyprus and Mexico, don't live up to their agreements unless it benefits their citizens at the expense of Americans. Besides, the foreign officials responsible for executing an American court judgment will simply take bribes from the foreign defendants to do nothing. In those countries, the line between government and organized crime blur to indistinction. Enforcing a U.S. court decision even in a civilized country like England often ends with the same result but for the different reason that the cost in time and money is too high unless multi-millions of dollars are involved.

---

<sup>1</sup> A magnum opus is an overly long text written to justify the author's existence. The problem is that such works are so long that no one reads them, so the author's effort to justify his existence fails.

So much for the long arm of the law unless you're rich or a corporation, which was why my case against the American defendants was crucial. If the District Court dismissed my case against them and not the others and neither the Second Circuit Court of Appeals nor the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the District Court, then, technically, I could still go ahead with the case against the Vasilyevas, who wouldn't bother defending, and the foreign defendants who were served but never appeared. The problem, however, was enforcing it. The Vasilyevas, like all Russian criminals, keep their assets well hidden and outside America, and enforcing a judgment in Russia, Cyprus or Mexico didn't promise much, if any, success. But there was another problem as well. If the case against the American defendants, except the Vasilyevas, was thrown out of Court, the Chief Judge might not even allow me to obtain a default judgment against the foreign defendants. There might still exist a shot at one against the Vasilyevas, but as for the overseas mobsters, the District Court would probably rule that requiring them to show up in New York City would be so "oppressive and inconvenient" for the foreigners that the case should be brought in a foreign court.

The Court could also dismiss the case against the Vasilyevas even though they didn't put in a formal motion for such, which would assure the Court getting rid of my case against the foreign gangsters. It's called dismissing a case for forum non conveniens, and the reason courts do so is supposedly to increase the chance of a fair trial. But when civil RICO cases are involved, the courts use it to get rid of the lawsuit, even when it leaves the plaintiff with no alternative but to go into an overseas court. Talk about inconvenience and oppression: the expenses and problems in dealing with the even more corrupt court systems of many foreign countries simply make the plaintiff drop the case. But many American judges don't care, so long as the case is out of their courts—once again expediency rules.

My investigations during June 2004 came up with one interesting piece of information. One of the two brothels in Limassol, Cyprus, which mobsters in Krasnodar owned and the Athanasiou family operated, advertised on the Internet. The Tramps website, www.cytramps.com, touted international entertainment, showed partially naked hos and advertised exclusive lap dances, which meant intercourse, blow jobs and the like in a private "Lap Dance Lounge."

While I was looking over the site, Mark called to see whether I could meet him at a local club later that night. After telling him about the website I found, he suggested looking up who ran the site for which he gave me the name of an Internet service that kept such information. Christakis Charalambous created and operated the Tramps' site. This guy had the same last name as the defendant who was a chief in the Cypriot Migration Office. My Complaint accused Andreas Charalambous of receiving bribes for providing Russian prostitutes with Cypriot visas in order to keep the Athanasiou brothels stocked with hos, and using his contacts with American immigration officials to expedite travel visas to America for some of the Russian sluts. Two guys with the same last name didn't mean anything. For all I knew, Charalambous might be as common in Cyprus as "Jones" in America. To make a connection between the two would require the private detective my Moscow lawyer Xenia used to investigate the other Athanasiou brothel Zygos, where the Commie Ho once sold sexual favors. In order to save money, that task went on my hold list until the Court ruled on the dismissal motion.

It was the weekend, so I headed down to Houston Street and the club Carnaval that Mark currently promoted. In New York City, nightclubs, big and small, hire guys, called promoters, to drum up business. The promoters often get a percentage of the money spent at the bar based on how many customers from the promoters list show up. Promoters also try to get people to hold private parties at a club for which they also receive a cut. Mark introduced me to one of the owners, the female bartender and the bouncer at the front door: all friendly, cool people. These weren't the dishonest slime populating the courts and halls of power in America.

The Carnaval folk were a mixed group: the owner I met was Dominican, the bouncer black and some of the bartenders and waitresses white chicks. It was also an easy place for meeting pretty young babes—too easy and too many of them white, but who am I to complain. Usually when I go up to a pretty young white broad in a club she freezes, sometimes even backs away—too many demon tales from her Feminazi mother about older men. But when Carnaval's owner or Mark introduced me as their lawyer to the white chicks hanging out at the club, the girls started pumping pheromones in my direction. If I got too close, I could actually feel them seeping into my body along with the heat that young girls naturally radiate. By the time they turn into Feminists, however, they're absorbing rather than emanating it. Enjoying the company, I lived in the fantasy that these tomatoes were interested in me when in reality my connection with Mark, the owner and the bouncer gave me what they really wanted: the currency to get them in the club without standing in line or that most important of known commodities to young babes—the free drink. Okay, I played along, kind of, got free drinks for myself but never a girl. So I exploited their perception. Why not, dames tricked me plenty of times.

One night, Mark and I were standing in front of Carnaval making like big shots talking to a couple of babes Mark knew, one from Italy and the other Croatia. New York City is full of girls in their late teens and early twenties from overseas, especially in the spring and summertime. They come here to ho their firm bodies, find suckers to spend money on them and to tell their friends back in the old world about their sexcapades in Manhattan. Anyway, we were all laughing, smiling, flirting, they're smoking and I'm telling a few absurdities about my Russian experiences when up pulls a taxi with the Flash Dancers' advertisement on its roof with the Commie Ho's picture gazing at us. "Oh no," I said and every one looked.

"Mark said, "That's his ex-wife from Russia."

The girls remarked, "She's beautiful."

"Yeah, but you should see what's inside," and before Mark could stop me, I was on a rant. "Now let me tell you a thing or two about gorgeous girls. Nuts, dangerous, psychotic, truly demented cuckoos and as cute and cuddly as a flight of tracer bullets. They can have lovers the way other people eat cherries, but if you take another girl, even to the luncheon or drive-in, then wham-o! They lie to me and to you and to their husbands, to their lover, to their analysts and the cashier in the supermarket. Oh, I know, I've been accused of treating girls badly, and I have, but only in self defense."

Looking a little taken aback, the two girls asked in unison "What happened to you?"

"Noooo, don't tell the story!" Mark cautioned trying to save my prospects with one of these two, assuming both hadn't already started searching for an escape from me. He always warned against my telling the ho story, shaking his finger "no" and then laughing because he knew I would anyway with the inevitable result of once again sinking my chances with a babe. Control was beyond my grasp, so as usual I blabbed on evoking the usual shock, laughter and pretenses of commiseration. Maybe I told the story to be the center of attention, but more likely I enjoyed rubbing the faces of pretty young babes into the reality of the evil they cause men. The two girls excused themselves and scurried to the safety of their other girl friends in the club.

Mark asked, “That stuff about gorgeous girls was new. Did you just make it up?”

“No, I memorized it from a movie.”

“Well that alone sure alienated those two.”

“Yeah, but there’s plenty more where they came from. Let’s go back inside.” Mark went over to another female friend of his, and I hit on some babe at the bar.

All girls want men who are dumb to their metahomorph ways, so they can wheedle something they want from a guy. Whenever a broad hears my story of the Commie Ho, she knows this guy understands her tricks, so better for her to attend to someone less enlightened. But as deep as my understanding may go, some metahomorphs still succeed in scamming me. For instance, my Salsa teacher Isabella set off all the warning bells not to become romantically involved with her—so I didn’t. But I did trust her to teach me Salsa. During our private lessons in 2003, I was making progress, even Mark said so on the few occasions some girl asked me to dance Salsa or Mark nudge her to ask me. When the private lessons ended, Isabella told me to take her group class on Friday nights to keep from losing what I had learned—made sense to me. Eight months later, my dancing had worsened, and I felt more confused then ever out on the floor. At first, I assumed middle age made it next to impossible to learn any new physical activity, but I pressed forward suckling on the feel of the nubile young bodies in my arms during class.

One day a couple of other students asked me if I knew the difference between Salsa on 1 and on 2. Never heard there were different ways to dance Salsa, so we asked our teacher Isabella. She said it didn't matter, that at some point we'd be able to do both. Well, I just wanted to do one of them but couldn't. So, I did some research. Turns out the music for Salsa on 1 and on 2 differ by which beats the music emphasizes and that signals the dancer what to do when. Most of the Latin music played in New York is written for Salsa on 2 dancing while in Cuba it's for Salsa on 1. Since I had no intention of immigrating to Cuba despite the plethora of cars from the 1950s, Salsa on 2 was for me, and that's what Isabella had taught me in the private lessons, but her group lesson danced Salsa on 1. She tricked me! Conned me into taking her group class by covering up the distinction between Salsa on 1 and on 2 with that fib about starting differently in order to get into the turns more quickly. The dance routine in her group class started differently because it was a fundamentally different version of Salsa dancing than what she taught me in the private lessons. Thanks to her, I now had two conflicting ways of moving to Salsa music battling me into a wallflower. What is with these girls? My own teacher, instead of helping me, exploited my reliance on her knowledge to make a lousy few hundred bucks extra. That's called fraud, and I could sue her in small claims court, but I had other things to do. From here on I vowed to mistrust broads completely about everything, and have nothing to do with them on any level except partying.

Look at what happened to Bill O'Reilly. He thought chicks deserved a fair chance, so he hired some to do research and production on his show. Jobs traditionally held by men because men are best suited for such positions. One of the females, probably at the instigation of some Feminazi attack group or the girl's weekly consciousness lowering coffee klatch, sued O'Reilly for millions, injuring his reputation and credibility, but making lots of money for herself out of a settlement or, more accurately, “sex-mail.” Interesting that blackmail is a crime but sex-mail is not. So in the end, O’Reilly knew how Justice Clarence Thomas felt.

Guys have got to learn that the days of chivalry are dead. Broads are the enemy—wise up, that’s the way they see men. Dames will do any harm to any guy to make money or to vent vengeance over some illusionary slight to their princess egos. They are on a crusade to let loose every evil desire against men that enters their chemically unbalance brains using the rationale that men deserve such for shielding girls from much of the horrors of life all these millennia or that men are the ones responsible for causing females to harm men. Don’t look at me, it’s feminine logic, and you or some guy you know is probably next.

Girls always twist a way to blame men for something bad that happens while stealing credit for the good. Take the view of a white college coed I flirted with one Saturday night at Carnival. While I watched her tits as we chit chatted, she said, “I’m lucky I have such great parents. Most of my college girl friends were abandoned by their fathers.”

Red alert! Red alert! Feminazi propaganda on the attack, I put the alcoholic buzz from my vodka gimlet—Absolut and Roses Lime—on hold and stepped on the gas speeding my brain to find a dagger of reality to stab into her bigoted brain.

“What do you mean their fathers abandoned them?” I asked in a civil manner trying to set her up.

“Lots of my friends’ parents got divorced.”

“So the divorce caused the abandonment?” I feigned naivety, waiting for her belief in feminine superiority to box her in.

“Of course it did! Otherwise the fathers would have stayed at home.” Now I had this ditz.

“But why do your girl friends blame their fathers for abandoning them when 80% of divorces are initiated by the wife?” I mildly stated this statistic, one of many the Feminazis conveniently ignore in their bible of hate against men.

“Eighty percent! I don’t believe that!”

I didn’t expect her to, so I pushed my knife of truth a little deeper. “It’s an old figure from when I was in law school, probably higher now with the increase in female liberation.” I added a slightly mocking tone to the last two words.

“Well, I’m sure the husbands probably caused the wives to file for a divorce.”

“Unfortunately, there’s no statistics on that, since most states are no-fault divorce. But despite who was at fault, what usually happens when a couple with children gets divorced?” I wasn’t finished with this acolyte of American feminine ignorance.

“What do you mean?”

“Who ends up with the kids?”

“The mother.” At least this bane-in-waiting got that right.

“And even when the husband wants the kids, the courts usually give them to the mother. Sounds like discrimination to me. So who’s causing the father to abandon the kids then?”

“I don’t think the father wants the kids very often.”

“Alright, so in the typical divorce the husband pays the mother money to take care of the children.”

“Not all the time, some fathers don’t pay.”

“But most fathers do. Don’t forget that there is only one type of person in America that can be put in jail for not paying a debt, and that’s a father who doesn’t pay child support. Funny,

I thought one of the reasons the founding fathers broke with England was over debtors' prisons. I guess they were only thinking of girls at the time."

"The fathers should be made to pay for the children, since they're making most the money."

"Are they? If you work out the the amount of money earned on a per hour basis, girls actually make more than guys, and an analysis of a university study shows that girls control over a majority of the wealth in America." My reliance on what for her was higher math went right by her, so I said, "Despite the money lots of girls have, I don't see any girls paying for any dates or to get into clubs?" Perhaps I should have said drink; maybe she would have bought me one. "But assuming you're right about who's wealthier, a father that doesn't pay goes to jail. So what happens to a mother who moves out of state with the children away from the father's work place?"

"Why should anything happen to the mother? She can go wherever she wants."

"In our typical divorce settlement, the court orders the father to pay some or all of the support for the kids and tells the mother to make the kids available for the father to visit, usually on the weekend."

"Right, so?"

"But if the mother moves the kids out of town, maybe to keep them away from the father, what can the father do?"

"Go back to court."

"But the court can't make the mother move back to where the family lived before the divorce. That's against the U.S. Constitution. It's also against the Constitution to put people in jail for failing to pay a debt, but the courts over look that legal nicety. So in the end, the father has to pay money or go to jail, but the mother can keep the kids away from the father by moving out of town. Who then is responsible for the abandonment?”

“That doesn’t happen that often.” Just the type of dismissive remark I’d expect from a budding Feminazi.

“Maybe yes, maybe no; maybe rain, maybe snow.” A saying I adopted from a Young Communist Pioneer of the former Soviet Union. The flirtation dead and my instruction in reality over, I excused myself for another drink.

The other evil perpetrated by a mother to alienate the father from his kids, I left out of my argument. It’s an all too common scenario where the mother drums into the children’s dear little ears that their father didn’t care enough to send money for them when the wife actually used that money for jewelry or some other vanity. Whether wife, mother, ho or stockbroker, broads have an uncanny aversion to honesty that somehow enables them to escape paying for the harm they cause. No reason to waste anymore of my time disabusing this girl of her biased illusions. Females always ignore the truth when it knocks them off their self-created pedestals.

Hustling girls at Carnaval made me miss the challenge of approaching babes no one knew, preferably of a darker complexion, and pitching an ad-lib line from which to spin off other verbiage in my quest for telephone numbers. So, I started hanging out at the China Club in Times Square. My new Salsa instructor, whose group class I began taking after the annoying experience with Isabella, promoted the China Club’s Friday night Salsa with free admission for both girls and guys before 11 PM. Most clubs in town let the hos in for free before a certain hour, usually midnight, but not the guys. In the old days when guys had money and girls didn’t, it made sense, but today, with broads relentlessly stealing guys’ jobs, it discriminated against men. The clubs should respond to the times by cutting in half the price for men while making the girls pay the same as guys. It's only fair, and the clubs will make just as much because girls want to dance more than guys. But no, fairness doesn't apply to men in America.

The China Club attracted Latina ghetto girls, tourists and white thirty-somethings. Since Mark spent his evenings promoting Carnaval, I began chasing girls with a guy from the former Soviet Union. When hunting at a club, I always preferred having a partner. Maybe it's a precaution reaching out of the genetic mists of prehistory when guys hunted dangerous animals. After all, what more dangerous animal is there today than a broad letting loose the viciousness within her? Then again, maybe the company alleviates my insecurity. The Soviet Union guy, also middle age, went for the older white broads. He was relatively new to this country but would soon catch onto which girls were most desirable. For me, the young ghetto babes looked just delicious, but I found it difficult to pull them into a conversation. Maybe their English wasn't too good; still they did dance with me. My Salsa dancing never approached those girls' abilities, but they possessed the civility to smile, laugh at my jokes and touch my arm with a thank you. The arrogant, eastern, quasi-intellectual, white-trash Feminazi elite could learn a lot about manners from these women.

As summer approached, Mark found a better deal promoting a club across the street called the Flat. The Flat didn't start moving until after mid-night, so I'd go to the China Club until around 1 PM, when the Soviet Union guy went home, and then head over to the Flat for free drinks. At first, I didn't think much of the place until one night I wandered into the back rooms. Whoa! A little bit of heaven right here on earth. Lots of beautiful black babes, all made up, dancing with each other or waiting impatiently for some guy to ask them. The young girls, late teens to mid-twenties, outnumbered the young guys, always good news for me considering my middle-agedness. Most of the young black guys in their knee length shirts and bell-bottom pants with the bell part beginning at the waist just stood around moving their bodies in place to the music. I didn't get it. Okay, it wasn't the culture I grew up in, but when young babes are clearly anxious to dance, the guys should pounce. Don't let that prey get away. Well, they did, except for one or two guys. Find with me, since it gave me more candies to pick from, but being the only cue ball in the room, I knew I needed some credibility. I went downstairs and asked Mark to help me out. Something I did for him at times when he was eyeing some white babe. He came upstairs with the white chick he was hustling. Mark and I talked a little so that the black girls saw I was cool and with my credibility established, I started flirting and dancing, yummy. The Flat quickly became my favorite club in New York City.

Walk Like A Man

On the Summer Solstice of 2004, the District Court notified me of a change in judges. The Chief Judge unloaded my RICO case on a recent appointee to the bench, Peter Kevin Castel. At least the new judge was also a man, although after decades of intense Feminazi anti-men indoctrination, it might not save me from the feminine Federal Government's pervasive bias against my sex.

Judge Castel graduated St. John's Law School in New York City, considered an adequate school but nothing special—third tier. He did, however, reach the partnership ranks for Cahill Gordon & Reindel, a prestigious New York City law firm that made lots of money during the corporate takeover days of the eighties. Near the top of his profession and making lots of money, he accepted, at age 54, President Bush's nomination, and a significant salary cut, to become a judge in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. A Republican appointed judge might show some objectivity, but these days, even the heirs of Eisenhower and Reagan fawned over the Feminists, only not in as servile a manner as Democratic hermaphrodites. President Bush's National Security Adviser, after all, was a female and instrumental in bringing us the stupidity of the 2003 Iraqi war, America's second defeat. The only hope with Judge Castel was that as a former partner in a hotshot law firm he might have a brain.

Judge Castel required both sides to produce a joint status report that outlined the nature of the case, scheduling deadlines, motions made, motions undecided and other procedural matters. The lead defense counsel Dubin telephoned me to say he had run into a lot of difficulty getting the other defense attorneys to agree on even a tentative status report and thought it would take too much time for him to also broker in changes that I would surely want. He asked me to agree that each side does its own report, which I did.

The defense lawyers did their usual sniping in their version of the status report: the plaintiff is "pro se," which implied I didn't know what I was doing; "suing sixty three defendants," actually it was nearer to seventy; "spanning the globe," which implied conspiratorial delusions; filed "a 91 page, 915 separately numbered paragraphed, complaint," which told the new Judge this case would take a lot of time and energy; and "this action, as well as the plaintiff's abusive litigation preceding this action, are nothing more than an attempt by the plaintiff to use this forum to re-live the consequences of his marriage to and divorce from the defendant Alina Shipilina while at the same time attempting to punish Ms. Shipilina and anyone who has ever come into contact with her or assisted her in preventing him from harassing her," which painted me as the cliché Dirty John tying innocent Nell to the train tracks, or buzz saw, while Dudley Do-Right, in the form of Mundy and other defendants, rush to Nell's aid.

In modern times, however, toadying lawyers and the Feminazis use different terminology for demonizing a man as Dirty John. Today the catchwords include "abuse," "harassment" and “white male rage,” which the defense lawyers implied, in order to peg me as the modern-day leper against whom any action, no matter how violating of my rights, is justified. Any man in 21st century America who dares to use the law in fighting for his rights against a scheming, lying female who breaks U.S. laws will end up smeared and even put on domestic court pink lists. Just another tactic for coercing men into subjugation before the Feminazis’ bloody throne.

In responding to the lawyers’ status report, I reverted to my old TV news writing style:

“Pimps, prostitutes, pushers, pornographers and assorted criminals from the former Soviet Union have joined with underworld characters in Western markets over the past decade to create a global web of smuggling, protection, extortion, counterfeiting, tampering with witnesses, revenge, evasion of taxes and other illegal activities. The R.I.C.O. complaint alleges a Russian-New York enterprise [enterprise is the legal word for a R.I.C.O. group] that violates R.I.C.O. and numerous other laws. The enterprise brings prostitutes to New York and other states in the U.S.A., passes drugs and huge sums of money back and forth between the countries, creates and traffics in pornography, and threatens physical violence to anyone who might get in its way. A central associate and site of the enterprise’s illegal actions is the establishment called “Flash Dancers Topless Club,” located on Broadway and 52d Street in New York City. In addition, the enterprise often acts in other countries where there is a link of some kind, such as a connection to brothels in Cyprus and Mexico City that some defendants run, or to specific participants in the enterprise traveling in other places.

“The plaintiff, a business consultant and attorney representing himself pro se and former writer and political producer for WNEW and WABC TV News in New York, instituted the R.I.C.O. suit to recover damages for loss of profits to his business, loss of business opportunities, harm to his business reputation and other injuries, which resulted from the plaintiff unwittingly falling victim to one of the enterprise’s schemes: duping and secretly feeding narcotics to American men so that they will marry Russian mafia members, usually prostitutes, in order for these mafia molls to obtain legal entry into the U.S.A. to carry out and expand the enterprise’s activities.”

“This case grew out of discoveries by the plaintiff that began while managing Kroll Associates in Moscow. A number of the plaintiff’s witnesses in Krasnodar, Russia have been threatened, and the plaintiff has received threats. The F.B.I. has identified the threatening caller, but is afraid that by interviewing him it would provoke him to harm the plaintiff. As such, the F.B.I. has told the plaintiff not to open his door to anyone he does not know and to be careful when out in public.”

“This is a civil R.I.C.O. action under 18 U.S.C. 1961-68 against the Russian Mafia, the Chechen Baraev Islamic Terror and Crime clan and a relatively small number of alleged members and associates of those organized crime groups.”

Judge Castel set a conference for July 13, 2004 in order to map out a schedule for any remaining motions. The Commie Ho's attorney, Jack Sachs, asked the Judge to excuse him from the conference since he had already booked a cruise. Fine with me, but Sachs used his request to repeat some of the lead lawyers' swipes by harping on the number of defendants and the "unusually voluminous papers considering the action was brought by a single individual." If I had been a single corporation, I guess volume wouldn't matter to him. Sachs was out of line with his querulous complaining in a letter requesting excusal, so I sent a response to the Judge:

"I don't see what bearing it has on Mr. Sachs' request to be excused by saying he represents 'one of the sixty-five defendants, in various parts of the world....'

Sachs and the lead attorney, Dubin, apparently used different systems of counting for determining the number of defendants.

"Mr. Sachs is clearly trying to bolster the defendants' position as presented in their memoranda of law, which criticizes the number of defendants and their locations.

"I also believe it improper for Mr. Sachs to unilaterally respond to your Honor's request for a joint status report, and under the guise of doing so, imply there is something amiss with an individual filing papers of many pages, which again is another argument presented in the defendants' memoranda of law.

"There is a proper place and time for presenting arguments, and I do not believe it is fair to use ministerial letters for reiterating one sides' position."

After Judge Castel's status conference notice and the tiff with Sachs, the Bank of Cyprus submitted its separate motion to dismiss with a memorandum in support, and I began working on my opposition memorandum to it.

On July 4th, five years to the date of my arrival in Hell to work for Kroll Associates, I tuned in a movie on TV after doing some work on my opposition memo to the Bank of Cyprus' motion. The first time I saw the movie Tombstone, starring Kurt Russell, was eleven years earlier in Moscow. Back then, I was in town writing a couple of articles for a Moscow business weekly and visiting my Russian girlfriend of the moment.

One day, she calls me up sobbing, “Roy, my father came home drunk and attacked me.”

Even then, I wasn’t so dumb as to believe this completely. “What happened?”

“He came into the kitchen and demanded I cook him some soup.” Isn’t that what daughters are supposed to do I thought but didn’t say.

“And..., anything else?”

“I told him, ‘Do it yourself’ and he attacked me!” More sobs.

“Relax, did he hurt you?”

“No, I’m all right, but I want you to come over and beat him up!”

“Now? Can’t this wait?”

“No! You must come right away while he’s still here. You’ll come if you love me.” I didn’t love her but did enjoy her 20-year-old body.

“Okay, I’ll hop the Metro.”

Walking from the Metro stop to her apartment, I kept wondering what am I doing in the middle of this in Russia of all places?

At her apartment, my girlfriend takes me into a room where her father, Vladimir, is lying on the couch with a rag over his face and her mother is standing a yard or so away from him looking like the Queen of Hearts who misplaced her axe.

Okay, so I start acting tough, “Come on Vladimir, get up, let’s duke it out.” All the time hoping he doesn’t accept since he’s bigger and younger than me. His wife and daughter are constantly railing at him in Russian.

Vladimir sits up dejectedly and says, “I don’t want to fight,” as the rag falls from his face exposing a huge black eye. Immediately, his wife rushes in and whacks him hard with her hand across the injured eye. Oh brother, get me out of here, I’m thinking.

“What happen to your father’s eye?” I asked my girl friend.

“When he asked me to make him some soup, I threw the tin of Campbell’s at his head, telling him to do it himself.”

“You bounced a can of Campbell’s soup off your father’s head?”

“He deserved it. He should treat me with more respect.”

Wanting to escape as quickly as possible, I let it ride and decided to dump this broad at the first opportunity.

Later, I talked to my girlfriend’s best friend who told me the truth that Vladimir never attacked her over the soup incident and never abused her at any time. My girlfriend blew up at her father for who knows what reason and got away with nearly blindly him in one eye. If anyone was in need of a battering, it was she, but this was Russia emulating America. The father did nothing, not a thing, just took these broads’ punishment because the combination of Czars and Commies had emasculated most men of Russia, including him. Exactly what the Feminazis were doing to modern-day American men.

Anyway, back to the movie. In the lead up advertising campaign to the opening of Tombstone in Moscow, the producers used the slogan: “Just Is Coming.” In 1993, if ever a place needed justice, it was Russia. Russell did a great job playing Wyatt Earp, as did Val Kilmer portraying Doc Holiday. The movie embellished the true story, but the character portrayals most likely depicted what these men were really like. No bowing and scraping to evil for them. Justice and honor meant more than living as someone’s dog, even a broad’s dog.

In real life, Wyatt Earp showed up in Tombstone, Arizona with his brothers to make money, which led to them running a gambling saloon. Tombstone's power elite, the Clanton Gang, interfered with Earp's business, so a feud ensued that led to the gunfight at the O.K. Corral where three of the Clanton Gang ended up dead. The Clanton Gang used its political clout to put Wyatt Earp, his brothers and Holiday on trial for murder even though they acted in self-defense. The jury acquitted them, so the Clanton Gang murdered one of Earp's brothers, shooting him in the back, and crippled another brother in an ambush. Since the Clanton Gang controlled the town, any appeal to the law was useless. Wyatt Earp, his injured brother, the Earp wives and Holiday left Tombstone, probably to the jeers of the power elite, the Clanton Gang. Wyatt Earp and Holiday regrouped with a few friends and went back looking for the four members of the Clanton Gang that killed Earp's younger brother and crippled the other. One by one they tracked them down and shot them dead.

Was it vengeance or justice? Webster's Dictionary defines "vengeance" as "the inflicting of punishment in return for an injury or offense," and defines "justice" as "the assignment of merited punishment"—not much of a difference, if any. Perhaps people with guts call Earp's actions justice while cowards denounce it as vengeance. In the movie, Doc Holiday said that Wyatt Earp was not on a quest for vengeance but for a reckoning. Okay, but either way those four dead perverters of power got what they deserved.

The corrupt government in Tombstone, Arizona, which stood by while the Clanton organized crime group murdered Wyatt Earp's brother, issued warrants to arrest Earp, Holiday and their friends for murder in killing the four Clanton members. Why is that not surprising? But back then, as long as Earp and friends stayed out of Arizona, no other state would bother them. So by taking the law into their own hands, Wyatt Earp and Doc Holiday won one for justice.

What ever happened to those olden days when American society praised heroes rather than cowards pumped up with psychotropics who stand idly by as their rights are violated in order to preserve their pathetic little lives and creature comforts in a genderless hell? The 21st century American version of justice has replaced the finality of bullets with a Feminist corrupted federal government that reaches into every state where arrogantly mouth words of coercion, falsehoods and chicanery carry no consequences. For example, lawyers can now say pretty much anything they want, no matter how out-of-line, and get away with it.

In my RICO case, just before the status conference began in Judge Castel's courtroom, attorney Vikrant Pawar approached me in the hallway. As an attorney for the City's Corporation Counsel Office, he represented Detective Henning, the cop who threatened me with arrest in order to intimidate me into not cooperating with the INS.

With no one else in the hall, just the two of us, Pawar said, "Off the record, can I say something?"

This surprised me, what could he possibly have to say. Reverting to my old news days, I said, "How do you define off-the-record? Information that I can use but can't attribute it's coming from you, or information I can't use?"

He ignored my question and said with a smirk, "I hope you survive this motion to dismiss!"

What the devil did that mean, my mind raced for an answer? He couldn't be so stupid as to threaten me in the courthouse, maybe he wanted to psyche me out before the conference or just try to bully me. Pawar looks and sounds like he's from India or Pakistan, so I toyed with saying, “Haven’t they out sourced you yet?” But played it conservatively and in lawyer jargon responded, “That’s an inappropriate remark that I’ll raise with the Court.”

Grinning, Pawar said, “I’ll just deny it,” and walked into the courtroom. If this country still allowed dueling, Pawar never would have dared made such a remark because of the possible consequences.

The courtroom was empty except for the seven defense attorneys on my case. Claugus avoided the routine hand shaking, maybe he carried a grudge, so I purposely went over and said hello to him. A group of law school summer interns entered to sit in the jury box as observers, and then all rose for Judge Castel’s entrance. Judge Castel referred almost exclusively to the defense attorneys’ status report; I wondered why? As he asked us questions, he seemed a little slow on the uptake and unfamiliar with the case. When going over the motions made so far, he missed completely my pending request to throw out most of the defense’s exhibits and references to them in the defendants’ memoranda that tried to improperly interject at that stage of the proceeding their factual allegations against me. After reminding the Judge and describing the gist of the motion, he set a schedule for the defense’s opposition memorandum and my reply.

On the Bank of Cyprus’ motion to dismiss, Castel shortened the schedule set by the original judge for the Bank to file its reply. Claugus pleaded for more time until September 3rd by invoking the same old whine used by Dubin that my papers, but not the defendants’, had been “voluminous to say the least.” Castel denied his request, “You put an awful lot of pressure on the court because I want to get this motion done quickly, and that I will view as coming out of my time.” His time, what’s he taking about? His time is the public’s time. He no longer serves the pecuniary interests of himself and his former law firm, but the public’s. Guess he was planning a couple of weeks in the Hamptons at summer's end, and didn't want this case interfering. Did that bode good or ill for me?

After Castel set the schedule for all the remaining papers, I requested the Court's help in serving the Complaint on some of the foreign defendants for whom I couldn't find addresses.

"There are a number of defendants whom I have not been able to serve process on, and I am requesting the court's assistance under Federal Rule 4(f)(3), which allows service by other means as directed by the court. If you will just bear with me, I have three separate groups here.

"First, there are three defendants, Khachaturyan Aspyan, the Albatross Club, and Rey, a well known procurer. What I am requesting of the court is a letter to the Chief of the Department for Fighting Gangsterism and Corruption in Krasnodar, Russia. His name is Vladimir Naidenko. I believe a letter to him from the Court requesting his department to provide the Court with the addresses for these three persons will enable me, under the Hague Convention, to serve those defendants. I can provide the specifics as far as Mr. Naidenko's address, and if you want, to draft a letter, whatever is required, I can provide all that information to the court.

"Second, the Baraev Terror and Crime Clan in Chechnya. I have no way of finding out the address of its current boss. However, the G.R.U., which are the initials for military intelligence in Russia, has a southern operation, and a letter from the court to that office may result in an address for the current boss. The G.R.U. knows who is the current Islamic Terror and Mafia don for that clan and may have an address to which I can send the Complaint and Summons in accordance with the Hague Convention.

"Third, I have been unable to find the addresses for four other defendants, although one of the defendants, Ms. Shipilina, has knowledge of the addresses for those people, but I don't think she would be willing to provide them unless the court was to order so. They are Tanya-Phodes Studio prostitute, Stephanos, Juginta Raszyukevichina and Salvador-Phodes Studio partner."

Castel ignored ruling on the letters to the Krasnodar Department for Fighting Gangsterism and Corruption and to the G.R.U. Either he forgot or didn't want to bother doing the work at that time, so I would have to remind him down the road. He did, to my surprise, order the Commie Ho to provide me with the addresses of the last four defendants, if she had them. She did, but I also knew she'd lie by saying she didn't.

Sure enough when Jack Sachs, her attorney, returned from his summer cruise to Alaska, the Commie Ho perjured herself by claiming she didn't know any of the addresses. What did she care; American laws couldn't touch her. However, not only did she lie under oath about not having the addresses, Sachs allowed her to lie about the nature and extent of her relationships with these four. Castel didn't order her to recount those relationships, just whether she knew their current addresses. There was no way I could prove she had their current addresses, but I could prove by using her diary that she lied about the kind of relationships she had with them. So what did that matter? Except for impeaching a party's credibility, courts don't care about false statements unless they impact an important issue in a case, and that's what the Commie Ho did by lying about her relationships with those four defendants because the relationships among the defendants are a material issue in any R.I.C.O. case. Lying about those relationships was perjury, another Federal felony—but, again, who's counting?

Two Faces Have I

The Bank of Cyprus' motion to dismiss papers adopted the personal attack strategy of the other defense attorneys, but the Bank's lawyer, Claugus, added a new wrinkle—self-righteous disdain. Claugus arrogantly assumed a lawyerly perch of all-knowing superiority to pompously hurl personal invectives with no bearing on the issues and to foist advice and criticism he had no right to make. He haughtily advised me, the plaintiff, “to look else where for the cause of his misfortune, including to himself.” He sarcastically remarked, “The marriage seems not to have been made in heaven” and presumptuously declared, “the plaintiff's beliefs are unbelievable,” pure “imaginings,” an artful way for calling me paranoid. My opposition memorandum emphasized the cheapness of his tactics: “Such subjective and snide remarks are meant to taint the plaintiff. It's a subtle form of litigation by personal destruction, but just as malicious in its attempt to mock a party and distract the Court.” I requested the Court to reprimand Claugus and the other defense attorneys for the same shared strategy of personal attacks.

Claugus' effort to tear me down personally required twisting, spindling and mutilating the Complaint to such an extent that it led him to some lame falsehoods, but what else could he do? Claugus claimed I had accused the more than sixty defendants of "conbing to cause the Plaintiff's marriage to Alina Shipilina and their subsequent divorce." The Complaint didn't allege that, and Claugus knew it. But he also knew the Court might buy his lie, which would help sidetrack the Court from the merits by painting me as delusional. The defendants who combined to sucker me into marrying and bringing the Ho to America were her, her mother Inessa, her Moscow pimp Leo and drugs. These three humans made up one tiny part of the Russian mob's empire building activities, the drugs one of its businesses.

After the Ho landed in America, I became suspicious that something was wrong and started looking for the truth, which led to a cascade of events, twists, turns and harm that four years later resulted in the RICO suit against the collaborators of the Commie Ho of whom I was aware. These confederates, now defendants, violated various laws under RICO in order to make sure the Ho, a Russian mafia prostitute and mid-level manager, remained in the U.S. making profits and laundering money for the mob.

Claugus' falsehood had copycatted the lawyers for the American defendants who previously misrepresented the Complaint as saying that the defendants had banded together, looked up my name while I worked in Moscow and said, "Let's get this sucker." The Complaint never stated or implied anything like that, but it didn't stop Claugus and the other defense lawyers from saying it did to make me appear delusional.

Claugus' effort to paint me as delusional exposed his ignorance of the RICO statute. Under RICO, not every defendant needed to have met with all the others in some dark alleyway to plan the Commie Ho's ascension to the U.S. market or keep her there at my expense.

The defendants only had to participate in some activities connected with the Russian mafia to the extent of having some discretionary authority for carrying out parts of these activities.

Confederates and members who didn't even know the Commie Ho existed could still be held liable for the harm down to me because, as the U.S. Supreme Court ruled, people who actively and knowingly work for a criminal organization that engages in criminal activity are liable for the criminal acts of other members and abettors. Scales v. U.S., 367 U.S. 203, 226-27, 6 L.Ed.2d 782, 81 S.Ct. 1469, 1485 (1960). Under RICO, even though people involved with a criminal organization did not directly cause someone harm, if they played a consequential role in the organization, they were still liable for the harm others inflicted.

In my case, all the defendants actually knew and interacted with the Ho, that's how I found out about them. They all were involved in some form or another by supplying assets and marketing products and services to hard currency markets, keeping Russia mafia personnel in those markets, providing legal and financial services and making lots of money for themselves by doing so. Some of them used prostitutes mixed with narcotics to create fraudulent marriages; some engaged in immigration fraud, white slavery, importing pornography, bribery; some trafficked in drugs; some used coercion, intimidation, murder-for-hire, perjury and official misconduct to protect mafia allies; and others maximized profits with tax evasion and money laundering. Claugus patronizingly dismissed all those criminal activities as merely "colorful" or "unfortunate affairs," implying them a product of my delusions. Skipping over his implications, I assumed a Claugusian air of pomposity for my attack: "Perhaps the Bank of Cyprus does not consider the Russian mafia or organized criminals in general as a threat to civilized societies, but Congress does. The impact of organized crime is to 'weaken the stability of the Nation's economic system, threaten the domestic security, and undermine the general welfare of the Nation and its citizens.’” Beck v. Prupis, 529 U.S. 494,496, 146 L.Ed.2d 561, 120 S.Ct. 1608 (2000)(quoting Pub.L. 91-254, 84 Stat. 922).

The paranoid portrait Claugus tried to draw of me included “Plaintiff has come to believe global organized crime” caused his “loss” and made him a “pawn in their activities.” At least he didn’t deny the existence of worldwide crime syndicates, which the lawyers for the American defendants had done. To fend off this sortie, I told the Court that the RICO suit, rather than being a paranoid nightmare, simply depicts the business acumen of modern day Russian organized crime and how far and deep it reaches into many aspects of American life. In this age of a global economy, Russian gangsters have also gone global in order to prey on victims any way they can.

Claugus even tried to recast the Complaint’s allegations of money laundering by the Bank of Cyprus for the Russian mafia as domestic relations. That’s a bit of a stretch, but one Claugus intentionally used to remind his Honor about the perils in modern-day America of using the Court’s powers to enforce the rights of a middle-age man tricked by a pretty young lady, even if she is a front for the Russian mafia. In my response to this common lawyerly ploy of exploiting trendy societal biases, I wrote:

“The Complaint does not allege the Bank culpable for errant matchmaking as the Bank’s memorandum infers with: ‘Defendants did not marry Ms. Shipilina. Plaintiff did. Defendants did not divorce her. Plaintiff did. The Bank played no role in this sorry affair.’ True, it would have been better them than me, but that’s not what the Bank is accused of doing. The Complaint alleges the Bank furthers the Russian mafia’s Scheme of infiltrating and expanding the mob’s activities in America by laundering the illegal funds made by mafia prostitutes, pimps, pornographers and pushers. The Bank’s marriage to the underworld of the former Soviet Union clearly produces heavenly benefits in the form of lucrative profits. A divorce between these powerful entities seems unlikely unless the purpose of RICO as stated by the U.S. Supreme Court is fulfilled in eradicating organized crime, which is a ‘highly sophisticated, diversified, and widespread activity that annually drains billions of dollars from America’s economy by unlawful conduct.’ Such a parting of the ways would be fortunate, not just for the plaintiff, but others victimized by the Russian mafia.”

Consistent with his self-enthroned grandiosity, Claugus condescended with “His is a personal misfortune common to half the population and, like others, he must seek a personal recovery. The Court should facilitate this recovery by dismissing the Complaint.” Obviously, he referred to America’s 50% divorce rate, but I responded by bending his meaning as he and the other defense lawyers so often did mine:

“I would not put the number anywhere that high, but the statement does indicate the Bank possesses information concerning other victims of the Russian mafia. Regardless of the Bank’s effort at denigration, the Complaint alleges harm to the plaintiff’s business and financial interests, which does pertain to a particular individual, the definition for ‘personal’ in the American Heritage Dictionary. The Bank, however, might be using ‘personal’ in the sense of ‘personal injury.’ The Complaint does not request recovery for personal injuries. Still, the Bank seems compelled to provide legal advice to the plaintiff on just that issue when it states, ‘he must seek a personal recovery.’ The Bank then goes on to provide legal advice to the Court by stating it ‘should facilitate this recovery by dismissing the within Complaint.’ I am unaware of such a legal standard that calls for the dismissal of a RICO suit because it will in some mysterious fashion aid in the recovery for personal injury, especially when the Complaint clearly states the harm to the plaintiff from the Russian mafia’s Scheme was to his business and financial interests. Perhaps the Bank’s real intent was to personally belittle the plaintiff for seeking from the Court redress of the harm caused by the Russian mafia whose money it allegedly launders.”

Following in line with the other defense attorneys, Claugus attempted to push the Court into trying the case on a motion to dismiss in violation of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. This was not the time in the process for the Judge to act like a kindergarten schoolteacher listening to disputed versions of what happened; that would come later. But Claugus ignored the rules in order to corrupt the process by submitting affidavits from a few Bank of Cyprus employees and asking the Court to accept as true their untested say-so. Had Claugus waited until the proper time, either on a Summary Judgment motion or at trial, many of the so-called facts in his affidavits would have been shown as false and misleading.

One affidavit portrayed the Bank of Cyprus as a small, parochial savings and loan operation that knew all its customers personally. The Bank provides Internet and telephone banking services around the globe—can’t get more impersonal than that. With a little sarcasm, I told the Court, “Such an electronic global reach must make it difficult for the Bank to personally know its clients.” It does, however, make it easy to launder money since a click of the mouse or a telephone call could discretely send money whizzing into virtually any financial institution on the planet by way of the Bank’s 2300 correspondent relationships. This lawyer-proclaimed small bank was actually the leading financial institution on the banking and tax haven of Cyprus where, according to the U.S. International Crime Threat Assessment, banking and corporate secrecy, little or no taxes, and simplified incorporation procedures make it easy for terrorist groups and organized crime groups to launder funds. Gee whiz, did the most successful bank on the island do such things? Clausus’ affidavits also failed to mention that the Bank used special procedures to keep secret the real owners of the businesses that used its services, maintained a branch in the offshore center of the Channel Islands, ran a “busy” office in Moscow and, through a wholly owned subsidiary called CISCO, ran an international brokerage firm and managed investment funds.

Another Claususian method of misleading the District Court with the affidavits involved switching an allegation against the Commie Ho to one against the Bank so that by using a little slide-of-hand, he could claim to prove the newly transferred accusation wrong. Yes, a motion to dismiss isn’t suppose to resolve fact disputes, and Clausus’ tactic is all part of the defendants claiming they’re the good guys so the Court will throw the case out. My Complaint accused the Ho of keeping a small portion of her RICO profits in the Bank’s Global Equity Fund. My private detective in Canada, Elaine, dug up the information from her sources in Cyprus, along with the account number. Clausus’ affidavits claimed a search of “all relevant Bank records” had found no account in the Commie Ho’s real name. The slide-of-hand Clausus used was that the word “Bank” in his affidavits referred only to the Bank of Cyprus, Ltd., which is just part of the overall conglomerate called the Bank of Cyprus Group. The conglomerate also contains Bank of Cyprus Mutual Funds, Ltd., CISCO and other legal entities. But the search of records didn't include those other subsidiaries, which was strange, since the Complaint specifically stated the Commie Ho kept an equity fund account, not a checking or savings account, which are the only accounts the Bank of Cyprus, Ltd. maintains. If they wanted to confirm the equity account, they should have searched the other subsidiaries. Perhaps they didn't want to find it. Turning my verbal blade a little in Clausus' ego, I remarked in my opposition memorandum to the Court:

“The Bank's chivalrous act of spending time, money and effort to aid Shipilina with two affidavits must be greatly appreciated by her, but raises the question as to why the Bank would try to help a person it considers is just one of many 'disparate' defendants. Actually, it looks more like a family associate helping out one to whom it is joined at the pocketbook. The Bank's affidavits that refute the allegations against Shipilina in the Complaint raise more questions than they answer, which can only be resolved in discovery. But after magnanimously assisting a fellow 'disparate' defendant, the Bank states, 'Nor has the Bank ever done business in New York with the plaintiff or any defendant.' The plaintiff never alleged he did any business with the Bank. But the real purpose behind the Bank's statement is to improperly interject this so-called fact into a motion to dismiss. A motion to dismiss raises only an issue of law, not of facts. Other lawyers do the same thing as though they were in state court trying to argue the factual righteousness of their cause whenever they open their mouths rather than following the proper procedure. There's a time and place for everything. Trying to three-card Monte so-called facts before the Court on a motion to dismiss is procedurally incorrect. The facts will be determined through discovery.

Throughout his memorandum, Clausus just couldn't let go of his simulated all-knowing air, “The dispute, if there is one, is between Plaintiff and his ex-wife. Organized Crime did not cause Plaintiff's misfortune.” In my response, I wrote, “How is it that the Bank of Cyprus' attorney knows the Russian mafia did not cause the plaintiff's claimed harm? Is the Bank omnipresent or perhaps, more tellingly, on intimate terms with the Russian mafia.” Without coming up for any humility, Clausus' memorandum condescendingly continued on “The Court, the Bank, and Plaintiff all have more productive uses for their resources.” Where did this guy get off speaking for me or even the Court? I'm surprised his ego could fit through the Courthouse entrance. My response, "Perhaps the Bank's attorney is referring to the lucrative business the Bank conducts with confederates of the Russian mafia. The plaintiff, however, can think of no more productive use of government resources than, as the U.S. Supreme Court stated, 'bringing to bear the pressure of private citizen attorneys on a serious national problem for which public prosecutorial resources are deemed inadequate.'" Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Associates, 483 U.S. 143, 151; 97 L.Ed.2d 121; 107 S.Ct. 2759, 2764 (1987). As with all defense lawyers, Claugus presented his client as the victim and demanded a "measure of justice" by throwing my case out, to which I responded, "By allowing the case to proceed, the Court can prevent more than a measure of injustice to the plaintiff." But did anyone care?

Laugh, Laugh

My opposition memorandum to the Bank of Cyprus' motion to dismiss and its vituperative memorandum had included a footnote recounting the comment by Detective Henning's attorney outside Judge Castel's courtroom before the July status conference. Pawar's behavior was used as an example of the proclivity for the defense lawyers to avoid the truth:

"The willingness of defense counsels to hide the truth was demonstrated just before the July 13, 2004 conference before your Honor. Vikrant Pawar, attorney for defendant Henning, approached the pro se plaintiff in the hallway outside the courtroom and said with a grin, 'I hope you survive this motion to dismiss.' The plaintiff responded, 'That's an inappropriate remark, which I will raise with the Court.' Pawar smilingly retorted, 'I'll just deny it.'"

Pawar didn't like that footnote, bullies always turn to cowards when their prey fights back. When he received his copy of my opposition memorandum, Pawar telephoned me.

"I received your papers and I'm upset. I'm a bit surprised although honored"—if honored, why was he upset? No, the honored part was him trying to appear untouchable, a common attorney ruse. "Honored that you would include me in your papers and mention our conversation that you placed entirely out of context. So I'm not going to respond to it in writing,"—gee, thanks, as if I cared—"but I am surprised that you would resort to the same tactics you accuse others of doing..."

I cut him off. He wasn't going to get away with accusing me of anything nor play his game of covering up his own stupidity. "Look Mr. Pawar, if you have an objection, I suggest you bring it before the Judge as I have done. As I told you at the time you made the comment, it was out of place, and just looking at it on the face, it almost sounds like a threat." Then with sarcasm dripping from my voice, "But I don't think you're that stupid. So if you have a problem with what I wrote, send a letter off to the Judge. You said it and that's it."

"I'm not going to trouble the Court with this trivial matter..."

I interrupted him again, this time bristling with anger, "Trivial, huh, okay fine, if you think it's trivial than good."

Pawar then tried to pass the buck of his boorish conduct to me. Lawyers, as with broads, always try to scapegoat others for the wrongs they have done. "You should know that if you're going to mention a conversation taking place between two parties, the least you could do for the Court is to mention the entire context of the conversation not just pick what you think would be appropriate to color the Court's judgment." The only part of the conversation I left out of my footnote was Pawar asking me whether he could say something off the record and my asking what he meant, but he never answered, so there was no off the record agreement.

"Look," I said, "there's no way that conversation could ever be construed as settlement talks, and if it was a settlement talk, then the conversation could not be mentioned to the Court. The conversation was pretty obvious. It was basically a threat, but I'm not even going to bring that up." Why bother, it wouldn't do any good anyway in America. "If you've got a problem, I suggest you bring it to the Court. You've registered your objection with me. In fact you did it right at the end of the conversation when you said you would deny what you had just said."

"If you perceived it as a threat, I'm sorry you felt that way." He was sorry for nothing, except that I complained about his statements to the Judge. "It was a comment between two attorneys who were conversing about stuff..."

"The only conversing was you making that comment. That was the sum total of the conversation. You didn't come up to me to say you wanted to talk settlement or negotiate, which would have been off the record and can't go before the Judge."

In response, this refugee from the Indian subcontinent tried to move up a caste while belittling me. "In my court experience and my dealings with many Federal judges, I've come across many pro se attorneys"—that's considered an insult among lawyers—"but for you to take my comments out of context, well I'm just going to let my objection stand. I have been discreet, and I'm sad to see that you included the conversation in your papers." About as discreet as an 8th Avenue hooker, I said to myself.

"You have the ability, and you have the recourse, and there's a procedure for you to put your comment in context, as you call it. So it's all up to you."

"I know what I have, and it's not a big deal to respond to something like that." No, it was a big deal because he got caught acting like some schoolyard tough and couldn't come up with a reasonable explanation. All he could do was hope the Court missed the footnote. He wasn't about to bring any more attention to his foot-in-mouth disease by sending the Judge a letter complaining.

"Okay then you shouldn't have even bothered calling me," I disdainfully replied.

"I called to let you know how I felt about it."

To which my breath exhaled in exasperation. Who cared what this guy felt, he didn't give a dam about anybody else. "Well I'm sure you know how I felt about it, so now we're even. I know how you feel about it, and you know how I feel about it." Pawar finally hung up—good riddance!

Switching back to my battle with the Bank of Cyprus, I contacted my Moscow lawyer Xenia to see whether her investigator in Cyprus had any useful information on the Bank. After Claugus replied to my memorandum, my only opportunity to expose the lies he would most assuredly include in his reply would come in an oral argument, assuming the Court—slim chance—granted one. But if it did, I wanted more information for beating Claugus over the head with even though at this stage of the case the Court should focus on what's in the Complaint and the law. Xenia agreed to ask him, then said in a nice way, "Roy you spend many years for struggle, but Alina lives in N.Y., and everything seems to be OK with her. You work on this case 4 years, and you still think that she will be deported? Maybe you just forget about her experience, and start to live for yourself. Sorry—it is not my business at all, but I think that she will stay in the U.S. anyway."

"I understand your point of view and appreciate the input. My friends here say the same. But for me, nothing is more important than justice. You have no liberty, no freedom, no pursuit of happiness without justice, so I push on. I'm sure some more interesting things will happen."

At the end of August, I received Claugus' reply to my opposition memorandum. It wasn't nearly as nasty as the first one and less pompous, probably because another attorney was involved in the writing. The reply, however, continued harping on the "voluminous output" of my papers. What was with these lawyers? Didn't they ever take an Evelyn Woods speed-reading course—J.F.K. did. The papers I filed under the first judge followed his rules, and my opposition memorandum to the Bank submitted under the second judge, Castel, kept within his page length requirements. The defense lawyers sounded like broads reaching for any ammunition to get back at someone who exposed their duplicity. The Bank's lawyer even criticized me for daring to oppose the motions to dismiss. What was I suppose to do, say they're right, never mind and go home—truly a delusional expectation.

Putting such lame rebukes aside, the Bank's reply continued one of the defendants' key connivances of trying the case on a motion to dismiss. The Bank stated I failed to "establish" links among the defendants, failed to "establish" the Bank played a role in Russian mafia operations and failed to "establish" the Commie Ho's bank account—they skipped over the fact that it was an equity account in a separate subsidiary of the Bank of Cyprus Group. Under the law, "establish" means "to prove," but, once again, the function of a federal complaint in 2004 was to give notice to defendants of the accusations against them. The proof comes later after discovery. The Bank of Cyprus' attorneys and the District Court know all this, but still the defense attorneys argued as though all the evidence had already been produced and introduced in a summary judgment motion or at a trial. So why did the Bank's attorneys circumvent the proper procedure? To get the Judge and his clerks, to do the same thing. Lots of judges and their clerks don't want to do a lot of work, are sloppy thinkers and make decisions based on their personal emotions rather than the law. The Bank's attorneys, along with the other defense lawyers, tried to color the Judge's perception of the case so as to influence him into making the type of knee jerk decision that the rules prohibit: determining what occurred based on the Judge's personal proclivities rather than evidence, then covering it up with a fabricate legal argument. It happens all the time.

The Bank's attorneys presumptuously claimed that a dismissal "will spare all parties—including Plaintiff—any further disruption, turmoil, or expenses." These two-faced lawyers were trying to appear magnanimous before the Court in their concern for my well being. They could have saved the keystrokes that composed their hypocritical compassion and inflated self-importance as to dare to speak for me. I was in this war until the end of days.

When arrogance didn't serve the ends of the Bank's attorneys, they, true to form, continued to lie about my Complaint and even distorted the meaning of an affidavit from their fellow defendant the Commie Ho. The Bank's attorneys claimed, "The only specific associations alleged by Plaintiff between the Bank and any of the defendants is [sic] that between Ms. Shipilina and a 'Stephanos' and an account she purportedly maintained with the Bank." Not so, the Complaint accuses the Bank of laundering money, the Ho's account is an equity fund in a subsidiary of the Bank of Cyprus Group and not necessarily connected with Stephanos, one of the Ho's frequent customers at the brothel Zygos in Cyprus, who may be an employee of the Bank or some other financial institution in Cyprus.

The Commie Ho had sworn in a prior affidavit: "I knew a man named Stephanos, who worked in a bank there. I never knew his last name, nor do I remember in which bank he worked. I never had any reason to know his address, not can I tell if this is the same person to whom plaintiff refers." The Bank's attorneys distorted the Commie Ho's affidavit to conclude that the Bank "has never done business with Ms. Shipilina." Even the former Soviet Union's version of the New York Times, Pravda, would find such an inference hard to buy. The Commie Ho's affidavit never mentioned the Bank of Cyprus and never denied her keeping an equity account with it. It talked about a guy named Stephanos working in some bank in Cyprus. But that didn't mean the Commie Ho never did business with the Bank of Cyprus. The Bank's lawyers used the simple trick of setting up a false premise from which to spin off equally false inferences.

The attorneys never checked the records of the Bank of Cyprus' subsidiaries that held mutual fund accounts, or if they had, they didn't tell the Court whether they found the Commie Ho's equity fund or not. Instead, they argued no such account existed because I didn't provide the Court with a copy of her equity fund statement. It's a nice Catch-22 tactic. Putting aside the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that do not require a complaint to present evidence, the only way to legally obtain a statement copy was for the Court to issue a subpoena, but the Court would not do that until the case moved into discovery. Sure, I could have acquired a copy from my private eye, but the moment I submitted it to the Court, the defense attorneys would let loose a cacophony demanding the prosecution of me for privacy invasion. So in the Orwellian logic of many lawyers and some courts, because I didn't have a copy of the Ho's bank statement, the attorneys declared no connection between the Russian mafia and the Bank, which meant the Court should throw the case out; that is, throw it out before I got a chance to obtain a statement copy through discovery.

The Banks' attorneys, dancing through their lies and intentional muddying of the Complaint, again twisted, ignored and rewrote the law to fit their misrepresentations of my Complaint. Repeating the same trick they used in their first memorandum, only this time referring to a different case, the Bank's lawyers omitted the same crucial part of the law for determining whether to dismiss a case: "On a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), the court must accept as true the factual allegations in the complaint." Harris v. City of New York, 186 F.3d. 243, 247 (2nd Cir. 1999). They also, not surprisingly, left out that case's warning that "any party moving for dismissal faces a difficult (though not insurmountable) hurdle."

As for the law of RICO, the Bank's attorneys declared that a person is liable for violating RICO only if he "conducts or directs" the entire organization. That's wrong under U.S. Supreme Court decisions, wrong in the Second Circuit and wrong in the First Circuit Court of Appeals. A defendant need not be an executive so long as he participates in the operation or management of the organization. Another trick out of their bag of deception used rulings from cases that didn't apply, such as a fraud case even though no accusations of fraud were made against the Bank. But for the Court to discover that those cases used by the Bank's attorneys weren't relevant required the Judge or his clerks to read them. Would they take the time? Not likely.

The Bank's attorneys also came up with some new names to call my allegations after I debunked their former labels of "insufficient," "conclusory" and "bare." All of the defense attorneys prior to the Bank filing its reply had used that trinity of adjectives but never defined the words' meanings, so I used Federal cases that did. The cases made clear that such descriptors didn't apply to my Complaint. The Bank's attorneys must have agreed since in their reply memorandum they started using "wild speculations" and "lacking even the most tenuous support" to replace the former adjectives. The cases still showed my allegations weren't either of the new descriptions, but I'd have to wait to tell the District Court that at oral argument, assuming the Court allowed one.

Other subterfuges used by the Bank's lawyers included switching allegations from one section of the Complaint that satisfied a particular requirement of RICO over to another section dealing with a different part of the law. How did attorneys so full of themselves miss the boldfaced underlined headings of my Complaint on their way to rearranging its allegations? They didn't, but hoped the Court would. In addition, they regularly ignored paragraphs in the Complaint when convenient for their arguments, used the type of lingo that comes from watching too many Perry Mason shows and gave the wrong citations to cases to hide their misstatements of the law.

The Bank's lawyers concluded their reply with possibly prophetic words: "The unfortunate problem that exists in this case cannot be solved in a court of law. Plaintiff must look elsewhere and the Court should facilitate this effort, to the extent it can, by dismissing Plaintiff's complaint." The problem with looking elsewhere is that no elsewhere existed. It made no sense to look to the U.S. Government for protection because it's not about to open a wide assault on the Russian mafia, its collaborators and those who profit from its operations. High-ranking Washington officials want the government of Russia to support the War on Terror and contain Russian nuclear stockpiles. Since many mobsters in Russia are either members of the Russian Government or exert influence on it, this means letting the Russian mob and its confederates profit in America. And why not, the Red Menace wouldn't hurt the rich, only the average powerless American who will have to take to the courts for justice. But if the bureaucrats stop him there, where else can he go—public with civil disobedience?

You Talk Too Much

At the end of August 2004, I waited in hope for the Southern District Court to allow oral argument on both the American defendants and the Bank of Cyprus' motions to dismiss and to help me serve some Russian gangsters in Krasnodar and the Baraev Islamic Mafia Clan in Chechnya. The first request for the Court's assistance to serve those defendants was in July, but civil servants tend to forget because remembering doesn't increase their job security. So I reminded Judge Castel with a letter asking the Court to contact the Krasnodar Department on Fighting Gangsterism and Corruption for assistance in serving the Russian mobsters and to contact Russian Military Intelligence for Southern Russia for assistance in serving the Baraev Terror and Crime Clan. As the letter stated about the Chechen clan, “Since the death of Movsar Baraev, I do not know who is heading this Clan now, and although the Clan controls an area just south of Grozny, Chechnya, I’m not about to visit the area to inquire as to the new head and his address.”

While waiting on the Court, I also drafted a Supplemental Complaint and requested a pre-motion conference for approval to make a motion to file it. Each Federal judge creates his own rules for certain procedures in his court, such as the length of papers, which motions require a pre-motion conference and how to contact the Judge’s chambers. Judge Castel, unlike the Chief Judge who previously handled my case, required that before making most motions, a party must first request a pre-motion conference. It’s probably part of the U.S. Government paper work reduction act or bureaucratic desire to read as little as possible. At a pre-motion conference, a judge tries to get both sides to resolve the procedural issue without having to file motion papers.

The Supplemental Complaint would update my original Complaint with events that occurred after April 2003, when the Complaint was filed. A basic policy of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires that a party be given every opportunity to join all of his grievances against other parties regardless of when they arose, and supplemental complaints were the means for adding additional claims and defendants after a suit had already begun.

My Supplemental Complaint included the F.B.I.’s interference in my efforts to checkout the information in the Vasilyevas’ letter to the District Court. Special Agent Babler was not added as a defendant because that never looks good to a court, but I did recount his key role in trying to run me out of town. The new defendant from that episode was my favorite tailor shop manager Cynthia Zahnow. The Supplemental Complaint asserted that Babler, Zahnow and Anastasia agreed on a course of action at Babler's suggestion to intentionally thwart my investigation by having Zahnow make false harassment accusations against me to the local police. Their aim was to scare me off my investigation and back to New York. The Supplemental Complaint included as an exhibit the letter from David Larson, Acting Chief for the F.B.I. Investigative Law Unit that confirmed Babler gave advice to Zahnow or Anastasia or both to contact the local police concerning me. The conduct of these three amounted to tampering with a witness, victim or informant, but I only accused Zahnow and Anastasia of that crime.

The next set of allegations in the Supplemental Complaint accused Mundy of committing mail fraud by using the U.S. Postal Service to file his Disciplinary Committee complaint against me and tampering with a witness, victim or informant by trying to use the Committee's power over attorneys to scare me into withdrawing my RICO suit. Since the purpose of his Disciplinary Complaint was to prevent the RICO case from exposing the illegal efforts to keep the Commie Ho in America, it amounted to an attempt to further those efforts by keeping them secret from the District Court. It didn't matter whether anything Mundy said in his complaint was true or not, only that he sent it through the U.S. mail, which meant mail fraud.

Finally, as to my favorite defendant, the Commie Ho perjured herself and committed a couple of additional RICO crimes when answering the Court's order to provide last names and current addresses for a number of the foreign defendants. Her lawyer allowed the Ho to swear to a paragraph in which she lied about her dealings and relationships with each of the four defendants by claiming only minimal contacts. As with all pathological liars in fear of getting caught, she spent her effort trying to create a plausible cover to trick the Court into believing she only fleetingly knew these people: "In 1999, in Moscow, I was introduced to a woman named Tanya, who I believe at the time was seeing one Leo Perlin, another co-defendant, who I believe was a principal in Phodes Studio Co., yet another defendant in this matter. From the start we did not get along, and the few times we were together were very unpleasant. I did not socialize with her, nor did I have any reason to know her last name, or address.” About defendant Salvador, the Ho lied on with “I met a man named Salvador during my brief stay in Mexico, in 1999. I was never informed as to the nature of his business connection, if any, with Phodes Studio. I never knew his last name, and although I was at his house once or twice, I went with other people, and was unaware of his specific address. I have had no contact with him whatsoever since I left Mexico in 1999.”

The Ho’s diary paints a different picture. In August 1999, she, Tanya and Leo flew to Mexico City together. Salvador, Leo’s partner, met all three at the airport and took them to their hotel. Salvador showed the Commie Ho around Mexico City, took her to restaurants, a beauty salon and even carried a nude picture of her he got off the Internet from Leo’s website. The Commie Ho, Leo and Tanya traveled to Acapulco together where Salvador joined them. Salvador paid the Ho’s expenses and for her. Leo had brought the Ho to Mexico, in part, for Salvador, and most of the time when at Salvador’s house, she was alone and usually naked. Tanya and the Commie Ho both ended up working as strippers and whores at The Men’s Club and even roomed together for much of their three month stay until Mexican immigration arrested the two and bounced them out of the country on the same flight back to Moscow. After her deportation from Mexico, Salvador blamed the Commie Ho for the problems his prostitution and pornography business subsequently ran into with Mexican authorities. She probably spilled her guts to the immigration authorities.

Although, Leo wasn't one of the four defendants in the Court Order, lying about her relationship with him still amount to perjury because she made her statement under oath. The Commie Ho's diary clearly shows she knew Leo very well as the sole owner of Phodes Studio and her Moscow procurer for years. The diary even admits she entered into a business deal to recruit prostitutes for Leo to send overseas. In addition, Leo took the all-nude photographs of her that she sold to "grandpa" in Cyprus as evinced by her diary and handwritten letters to Leo. According to Leo, he also used the nude photos to advertise her sexual services and arranged for her to star in the masturbation video that defendant Paulsen shot in one of Perlin's apartments in the same complex where I had once lived.

The Commie Ho's sworn affidavit about her relationship with Azul admitted a few facts, but committed perjury by what she left out. The Ho always believed that telling the truth did not mean the whole truth, or lying did not include leaving out facts that would change the entire meaning of what she said—a Feminist by any other name. "I first met Azul during my brief stay in Mexico in 1999. After I left Mexico, I had only one contact with her, a telephone call to me in New York in the year 2000. I believe she said she was calling from the Netherlands at the time. During the time I knew her I became aware that she traveled a great deal, and in the short time I knew her she never gave me any address, let alone one at which she could be reached years later." Azul did travel a lot, especially in Mexico when she and the Commie Ho went together on prostituting junkets with their clients from The Men's Club to Cancun, Puerto Vallarta and Acapulco. The two were best friends, and after the Commie Ho left Mexico by way of the immigration boot, they stayed in touch. The old address I had for Azul came from the Commie Ho's papers, but after Azul's husband learned of her whoring, he kicked her out, and she went to live with one of her customers in the Netherlands. The Commie Ho, when she still lived with me—what a revolting development that was, called Azul every so often in the Netherlands.

That's how I got the number for Azul and even talked with his latest sucker a couple of times to pump some information until the Ho told him to shut up.

The fourth defendant, Stephanos, was the Commie Ho's favorite customer when she hoed at Zygos. Although not very well endowed, she liked his "smell," and in September 2000 she visited him in Cyprus at the bank where he worked—all according to her diary.

By making such false, misleading and incomplete statements in order to protect the Russian mafia and its confederate's efforts to keep her in America, cover up the mob's illegal activities and with the foresight that the document would be mailed to the Court and other parties in the case, the Commie Ho committed mail fraud, a RICO crime. In misleading the Court with her misrepresentations, prevarications and half-truths, she corruptly influenced and impeded the administration of justice—a Martha Stewart crime, also covered under RICO. She also committed perjury, but American courts don't care if girls lie—it's expected.

Two of the defense lawyers opposed my request for a pre-motion conference concerning the Supplemental Complaint by responding as though the motion had already been made rather than just arguing for or against the conference. They knew better, but some lawyers always use any communication with a court to mislead it and carp against their opponent—it's a requirement of litigation by personal destruction. Once again, I counterattacked, first against Dubin's deceptions:

"The defendants' lead lawyer falsely claims that the proposed Supplemental Complaint, as it concerns Mundy, is 'merely repetitive of the allegations and predicate acts already set forth in the plaintiff's initial complaint.' Unless he ascribes to a Doctor Who view of time, his statement as to the factual allegations makes no sense. The Supplemental Complaint alleges events that occurred only after the filing of the original complaint; therefore, the events in the original complaint and Supplemental Complaint cannot be 'repetitive', since the events in the Supplemental Complaint had not yet occurred on filing of the original complaint.

“In addition, the defendants’ lawyer claims, ‘all other allegations set forth by the plaintiff in his proposed Supplemental Complaint have been addressed,’ by the motions to dismiss. There are no references in any of the memoranda of law to the events that transpired in August 2003 or to Shipilina’s delusive declaration to this Court.”

My response to Jack Sachs, the Commie Ho’s attorney, made for a more interesting knife throwing contest. The Ho must have flipped when Sachs told her the Supplemental Complaint had used her sworn affidavit to charge her with more felonies. Not that she worried about committing crimes, she didn’t, but the Supplemental Complaint meant more money to pay for Sachs’ time in responding.<sup>2</sup> In order to calm her down over the additional outlay of assets, Sachs wrote a particularly emotional and virulent letter, probably with the Ho’s input, objecting to the pre-motion conference. The knife I used for this duel aimed at personally aggravating Sachs as much as possible, since that’s what he tried to do to me.

“Jack Sachs’ August 30, 2004 letter to the Court opposes the plaintiff’s request for a pre-motion conference but then rambles on to argue as though he were responding to a motion already made using the type of vitriolic invective that overly protective boyfriends do: ‘Plaintiff’s wrath, as befits a scorned lover, manifests itself in the supplemental complaint.’ Who is Mr. Sachs trying to impress with this sophomoric name-calling? His client is not accused with breaking hearts but breaking the law.

“Mr. Sachs complains that some of the allegations in the proposed Supplemental Complaint ‘libel’ his client. All the attorneys know, including him, that no matter what names he and the others call the plaintiff in this proceeding there is no recourse to a libel claim, so why even raise that non-issue.”

No, that last sentence is not a writing error. I intentionally switched the phrase that logically followed—“that no matter what names I called the defendant”—to the one written in order to throw the Judge off, make him stop, question what he just read, so he’d go back and re-read with more care than just breezing through my letter for its gist.

---

<sup>2</sup> Under VAWA, the Department of Justice Office on Violence Against Women pays an alien’s legal fees and expenses once she has accused her U.S. citizen husband of abuse. The Office pays for immigration proceedings and any domestic relations cases, such as for a divorce. The office, however, will not pay an alien’s legal fees and expenses when an alien is accused of criminal conduct. Since the basis of even a civil RICO action is criminal conduct, an alien defendant has to foot the bill for her defense whether she wins or loses.

“Me doth think Mr. Sachs protests too much, especially when the proposed Supplemental Complaint paragraphs he claims as libeling his client, don’t deal with his client unless he now represents Inessa Shipilina and two notorious organized crime figures in Krasnodar: Magomet Ali Kurban and Viktor Vladimirovich Kononenko.”

Overly wrought by the Commie Ho’s anger, Sachs had confused some paragraphs in the Supplemental Complaint as dealing with the Ho when they didn’t. His fervently induced sloppiness caused me to laugh.

Continuing on:

“Mr. Sachs emotionally objects to alleged ‘pejorative adjectives,’ but doesn’t specify them. Further, he doesn’t claim they are false because much of the Supplemental Complaint’s section on Shipilina is based on his client’s own diary. Mr. Sachs also calls the allegations in that section ‘unsubstantiated conclusory statements’—a little redundant on those modifiers. But, a complaint that complies with the federal rules of civil procedure cannot be dismissed on the ground that it is conclusory or fails to allege facts. The federal rules require (with irrelevant exceptions) only that the Complaint state a claim, not that it plead all the facts if true would establish that the claim was valid.

“In a somewhat whiney manner, Mr. Sachs complains that the original complaint is too long and the proposed Supplemental Complaint ‘is duplicative’ of much already pled. As concerns his known client, Alina A. Shipilina, the original complaint does not deal with Shipilina’s false declaration to the Court. That event occurred after the original complaint was filed, so the Supplemental Complaint cannot be duplicative.

“The pre-motion conference request is for permission to move for a Supplemental Complaint, not to supplement evidence. We are not at that stage although that hasn’t stopped Mr. Sachs from demanding proof. Mr. Sachs absurdly believes the Supplemental Complaint must prove to Mr. Sachs’ satisfaction its allegations. A supplemental complaint stands with the original and is a mere addition to, or continuation of, the original. U.S. v Russell, 241 F.2d 879, 882 (1st Cir. 1957). And the function of a complaint is to give notice, not prove. NOW, Inc v. Scheidler, 510 U.S. 249, 256, 127 L.Ed.2d 99, 114 S.Ct. 798 (1994).

“To compound his sophistic arguments, Mr. Sachs claims that certain accusations are ‘fabrications’ or ‘rampant speculation’ largely because the plaintiff used the term ‘on information and belief.’ Mr. Sachs may not like it, but the courts permit plaintiffs ‘to assert facts that they believe to be true, but that lack evidentiary support at the time of pleading,’ especially when the evidence is within the defendants’ knowledge or control. Moore’s Fed. Prac., 3rd Ed., § 8.04[4]. Besides, complaints do not provide evidence. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 500-01, 91 L.Ed. 451, 67 S.Ct. 385 (1947); Geisler v. Petrocelli, 616 F.2d 636, 639-40 (2d Cir. 1980). Of course, these types of arguments should wait for the formal motion, if the Court allows such.”

Sachs harping on my lack of proof included his assertion “it appears that few, if any, of the events cited in the Supplement Complaint ever really happened, as the rule requires.” He knew that wasn’t what the rule required; he just wanted to add to the chorus calling my Complaint and Supplemental Complaint a fiction. Sachs, like the other lawyers during this initial stage of the case, intentionally misread the law as requiring that my Complaint include admissible proof of the accusations against their clients when they knew very well that couldn’t happen until after the discovery phase—again a Catch-22. The defense lawyers used this tactic because it allowed them to call me a liar, delusional, paranoid and other opprobrium in order to bias the Court against me. That’s just the way mentally challenged attorneys fight legal disputes.

One final dig at Sachs:

“In closing, it appears that Mr. Sachs’ unnecessarily nasty letter, which makes arguments more appropriate of an opposition to a motion rather than a request for a pre-motion conference, is largely the result of the inartful drafting of his client’s affidavit that gave rise to supplemental allegations against her, and, therefore, Mr. Sachs’ strident effort to prevent a pre-motion conference.”

Sachs obviously felt like a buffoon in front of the Commie Ho for doing such a bad job in preparing her sworn affidavit, so, under the stress of redeeming himself, his letter went a little too ballistic.

Tired Of Waiting For You

My efforts to interest the news media in my RICO case, so far a failure, continued with sending Lou Dobbs a letter. His show seemed a logical choice because it did plenty of stories exposing the U.S. Government’s failure to stem the wave of illegal aliens into this country. Although the Commie Ho didn’t slink her way across the Rio Grande, she and other Russian mob prostitutes illegally sleazed their way into America and remained here thanks to mobsters, crooked lawyers and do-nothing bureaucrats. Dobbs’ show never sent me a reply, so next I tired the columnist Michelle Malkin. Sure, she's a career female, but I didn't think her a Feminazi because of her redeeming features of Asian heritage and having written an excellent book, Invasion, on the horrors caused by the incompetent and corrupt INS, such as illegals senselessly slaughtering some Americans and increasing taxes for the rest of us. Again no reply, maybe all girls, regardless of ethnicity and politics, are the same. Next on my media list was an attempt at cashing in on my one semester at Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs, which I attended before switching over to the Business School. A Graduate Fellow at the School of International Affairs, Stephen Handelman, wrote the book Comrade Criminal, which I had read to help prepare for the job with Kroll Associates in Moscow. The book detailed the dual personality of the Russian government as both state institutions and organized crime groups. Handelman also worked as a columnist and commentator on Russian crime, so he might have some interest in my case, but once again, I never heard back from another member of the anti-masses media.

My last shot with the media was Joe Conason, or Conoclone as I used to good-naturedly call him. He was working as the national correspondent for the New York Observer and previously wrote the column "Running Scared" for the Village Voice. Joe was the reporter at the Voice to whom I started slipping information on the mafia judge backed by Roy Cohn and the Gambino and Mangano crime families. Eventually, I went on the record with what I knew about that small segment of corrupt politics in New York City, but that was over twenty years ago, would he remember me, would he care? Over the years, he appeared on television a number of times arguing with other political pundits. He seemed to have turned into a rather self-righteous ideologue of political correctionalism, always interrupting his opponents as though freedom of speech meant only the freedom to agree with PC. He, like so many other Jewish intellectuals, had fallen for Feminazi propaganda, probably something to do with domineering mothers, but I assumed his hatred of injustice stronger, so I sent him a letter with the summary of the RICO case. Guess I was wrong; he too never bothered to respond.

The news media had always been corrupt to one extent or another. Not so much by money but by chasing social status, currying access to the powerful and foisting its members personal values on society at large. Reporters are observers, not players, and they resent that. After all, the point in life is to make the news not report it, so media members try to excerpt influence by coloring or creating a story that will exalt their beliefs, portray as evil their philosophical opponents, gain them admittance to an exclusive night club or invited to a fat cat's private party.

For example, back in the 1970s, when I wrote part of the weekend news show at WNEW TV, Senator Church's Committee was investigating the C.I.A. One of the Committee's revelations was that the C.I.A. used reporters to spy for it when they traveled overseas. The Saturday anchor for WNEW's news show had done just that. When the news of reporters spying for the C.I.A. became public on a Saturday, my producer assigned me to write the C.I.A. story. The anchor, however, came over to me to say he'd write the story, which he did and in such a way as to make an alliance of spooks and the free press look natural for a democracy.

Today, the key corruption in the news media—whether left, right or middle—is the insinuation of Feminazi tenets into stories as a result of so many broads now working in the media. Any girl in a position of power will exploit it not for justice but herself and her special interest group. As a result, they always belittle and blame men while aggrandizing and excusing females. As for the alleged men in the news media, their childhood fear of mother and teacher cause them to grovel for female approval, not unlike a lap dog.

Even more gutless than news reporters are politicians. They generally bow lower and scrape harder before Feminazi deceit. An article from the Daily News that my pal Alan sent me reported on the New Jersey Attorney General going after some Russian guy for allegedly tricking Russian broads into coming to America to work as musicians only to take away their passports on arrival and “force” them to work in strip clubs. The Attorney General pontificated, “The fearful plight of these women, who were forced to dance nude and perform other abhorrent acts, cannot be measured in a 12-count indictment. Their plight can only be measured in human tragedy.” This Feminazi-sycophant politician made me boil to the point of sending him a letter to verbally slap some reality into his delusional view of broads, but I doubted it would have such an effect.

“With all due respect, you don’t know a damn about the Russian mafia’s underground pipeline for bringing Russian prostitutes and strippers to America. These ladies come of their own free will to make big money. The average monthly salary in Russia is $150. They can make many times that in one night at a lap-dancing club and even more as prostitutes. Prostitution was always the former Soviet Union’s key capitalistic enterprise with the pimps being both men and women. Now it’s Russia’s key earner of hard currency because the fall of the Iron Curtain unleashed tens of thousands of prostitutes and assorted criminals into the world.

“The Russian sex industry works quite simply: model agencies throughout Russia, some run by men, some by females, are swamped with pretty young girls wanting to sell their assets in hard currency markets. The agencies, often via bribes, obtain the girls travel visas so they can work overseas in lap-dancing clubs and brothels. Some agencies send the ladies to work at clubs in Mexico City, such as The Men’s Club, and then smuggle them into the U.S. The girls know before they leave what they are going to work at, how else could they hope to make so much money. They sell their bodies willingly because that’s how they become millionaires by Russian standards.

“The standard agency fee is around 20% for making the travel and visa arrangements and paying the airfare. The strip club or brothel takes around another 15%. That leaves the prostitutes and strippers 60 to 65% beside the private prostitution deals they cut with their customers and whatever they can cheat from the money they owe their agencies. It’s rather difficult for a model agency in Russia to keep track of how many times a girl gives a lap dance or performs sexual acts in America. These Russian model agencies also function as matchmakers, suckering American men into bringing these prostitutes to America, and pornography producers for the American market.

“I suggest you talk to the Deputy District Attorney for Los Angeles County, Marcia Daniel, who recently prosecuted the largest prostitution ring in Los Angeles’ history, run by a 42 year old Ukrainian woman and her 22 year old daughter. Ms. Daniel will tell you how the underground railway funneling Russian prostitutes into America works. But you are probably not interested since you are obviously pandering to the female vote. Oh, and by the way, when a Russian has her passport stolen or “confiscated,” all she needs to do is contact the nearest Russian Consulate to obtain a replacement.

“You may feel like a white knight, but the folks in Russia and those here that understand the twisted nature of that country are laughing at your gullibility. You should take a lesson from former President Harry Truman, ‘Those Russians, they lie.’ And Russian women are the best at it in large part because they can cry at will.”

New Jersey’s protector of Russian prostitute chastity never responded to my letter.

The Daily News article, surprisingly, did get a couple of facts straight: the Russian mob operated the pipeline funneling hos from the former Soviet Union to America and ran some of the strip joints, or brothels, in which they worked. If the District Court for the Southern District of N.Y. only knew as much as the Daily News did about the Russian mafia, my RICO case chances would improve.

Fed up with reporters, politicians and bureaucrats who childishly believe snow white didn’t pay for her room and board with sex, I vowed never again to waste my time on trying to enlighten brainwashed giriemen.

As for the class action lawsuit against Salomon Smith Barney that I had joined two years earlier, progress consisted of one lateral pass after another going nowhere. The moldering case kept switching me from one law firm to another with each firm uncannily lacking the ability to obtain my records from the prior firm. The fourth firm had recently requested from me the same documents all the others had and warned that if I didn’t provide them, the firm could not proceed on my behalf. Proceed to do what, pass the case off to another firm? I sent the records for what good it would do.

Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend

Over the Labor Day weekend, Mark and I caught a new club on 10th Avenue and 17th Street called The Park. Mark had been telling me about the place for a few weeks as great for chicks. One of Mark's previous martial arts students, Vincent, a black belt, ran security at the club. Vincent helped us look like big shots at the club, always useful with chicks since to them appearance counts more than substance. When Mark and I arrived, we walked to the head of the line passed the little princesses watching and wondering who were those two guys? In their eyes, we looked professional, but did we have pull? The bouncer at the door knew Mark and called on his walkie-talkie for Vincent to come to the door.

Vincent and the two of us stood outside in the summer weather talking while the girls waiting to enter the club scrutinized three guys, two black and in their thirties, one with dread locks, one with a shaved head and a middle-aged white guy with gray hair cut in a butch from the mid-twentieth century.

This was the first time I met Vincent, an intelligent guy and clearly one for watching your back in any type of altercation. Besides his job, he was doing what I regretted not doing my entire life—studying physics. Once he got his doctorate, Vincent planned to work in Puerto Rico, another dream of mine never fulfilled: warm tropical weather and hot brown-skin girls. What a great life style he was working towards, but more than a comfortable life drove Vincent. When he mentioned the philosophy and Tarot courses he also took, I knew this guy, like I once did, wanted to understand how the universe worked and why things happened. I envied him his future, but for me, I had already lived mine. All that remained was my reckoning with evil.

After looking like V.I.P.s talking with Vincent outside, he escorted us into the club with the door bouncer parting our way passed those in line. The girls eyeing Mark and me now knew we had the pull to treat them in accordance with their self-professed birthright as princesses by getting them into the club without waiting in line. Vincent showed us around the club for my benefit, since it was my first time there. The club's building previously functioned as a parking garage, hence the name. The place was large with a couple of bars and a restaurant on the first floor and a combination lounge dance area upstairs that flowed out onto a large balcony with a hot tub. Checking out the tub, no girls yet. Downstairs, Vincent offered us free drinks from the bar, always a bounty that we readily accepted, and a good marketing tool, since we'd recommend the club to others who would pay for their drinks.

Vincent went over to the bar while we waited standing in a walkway from the restaurant area into the bar. Not looking at anything in particular with Mark talking on my right. In another plane of existence, Andy Devine says, "Plunk your magic twanger Froggy!" poof, not Froggy, but a gorgeous, drop-dead blonde in her early twenties stands in front of me. She's tall and I'm looking up caught in the trance of her eyes streaming promises of bliss, hope and happiness. Struggling out of those pools of blue, my eyes move down to a luscious smile, big balloons and the long legs of this six-foot-three tomato, but like a magnet, my eyes jump back to dreaming inside her gaze. Already on the ropes, she takes my hand with a warm squeeze and purrs close to my face, "Will you show me where the ladies room is?"

I almost gushed I'll show you anywhere, but I didn't know where anywhere was so instead said, "I don't know where it is, but let's find out," as I involuntarily volunteer.

"I drank too much," this smiling bacchanal bubbled.

Holding her hand, I wasn't about to let go, we went off to find the big girls room for this seemingly child-mannered object of desire. We could have gone searching for the Minotaur's lair or the Susquehanna Hat Company for all I cared. Leading the way, as men always do when helping a fair damsel who exuded unspoken delights, I asked a bouncer. He directed us down stairs. Down we went, my hand in hers, talking about nothing I can now remember, although I did detect an accent. At the bottom, we stopped before the ladies room; she turned to face me.

I asked, "So where are you from?"

"I come from Brazil." I'm thinking a Brazilian blonde, loves sex, she's any man's prime desire.

"That's a great country. I always wanted to go there. Are you visiting New York?"
Maybe she'll invite me to her hacienda.

"No I live in Newark." Wonder what she's doing in Newark?

Before I could ask, she said, "My name's Andrea."

"Nice name," I usually say that when a girl tells me her name; they like it.

"Mine's Roy. Here, let me give you my business card."

"What do you do?" she asked, swaying a little under her cups of wine.

"I'm a lawyer." She got closer, put her right arm on my shoulders around my neck, smiled down at me, laser beaming her pheromones and planted wet kisses on my cheeks, caressing the corners of my mouth.

"Thank you," she smiled and went into the ladies room.

Next move was to wait for her, but something uneasy in my unconscious tilted me to go back upstairs.

Still in a revelry, I went over to Mark and Vincent and said with a grin, "That was easy."

Mark asked, "Did you get her telephone number?"

My revelry crashed, but I couldn't decide whether it mattered, "No."

“Oh no, not again,” he laughed. “You always do that. Girls are too scared to call a guy like you. You’ve got to get their numbers.”

Mark was right. Unless someone reminded me to get a girl’s phone number, I usually forgot, not always but more often than I should—probably an unconscious shield against the horror of another unrepentant psychopath. Maybe that kept me from waiting for this Brazilian who reached as high into the sky as the Ho, smiled just as sweetly and initially approached me out of nowhere.

“Let’s go find her, and this time get her number.” Mark said as we set off on a quest necessitated by my hidden fears or fate. Mark had an uncanny knack for finding people in a crowded New York City nightclub, so I followed him through the caverns of The Park with a growing sense that our expedition would end badly. Rounding one corner into the restaurant, Mark asked, “Is that her?”

“Sure is,” I answered, looking at her standing by a table getting ready to leave with a short Latin guy in his fifties with dyed black hair standing on his tip toes trying to smother her lips in kisses. Andrea was giving him the same treatment she gave me, only now I recognized it as a forced professional smile that looks warm as fire when on the receiving end, but from the side lines, really isn’t anything at all.

Mark and I looked at each other using the same Ludacris lyric, “She’s a ho.”

“Figures,” I said. “The only girls attracted to me are hos, and seems like the only ones I’m attracted to are hos. It must come from my mother.” Mark laughed, and we went upstairs to checkout the talent.

Stumbling home that night from the Hudson to the East River, no buses, so I walked, I asked myself how could some girls wheel so much power over guys. With all my past experiences and the understanding gained from looking inside the Commie Ho's head by way of her diary, this ho from Brazil wrapped me around her wishes in seconds. How did girls like her do it? What they promised but never fulfilled just wasn't that important to make up for the harm they caused by suckering a guy into believing he was something special or the only true one for them. Whether professional or amateur hos, which together covered most girls, the only socially redeeming value of hos were repeated episodes of sensual gratification, but, as with temporary bouts of consciousness altering through alcohol or drugs, that doesn't provide a guy sufficient reason for living. Life for a man required more, a purpose. No matter how these hos plied their tricks, they were dangerous, at least the blonde ones. Many fears plague me, but the only one that scares me is not being able to do what is necessary to meet my reckoning, which is now my purpose. My resolve told me to stay away from tall blondes, real and bottled—maybe.

Time Has Come Today

What's interesting about the ending days of a person's life is that nothing good happens, so it becomes important to revel in the bad—to see it as good.

On returning home from the law library, my mail for September 29 included the District Court's decision on the motions to dismiss. I flipped to the last page where judges always sum up their conclusion: "Plaintiff's Complaint and Supplemental Complaint are dismissed with prejudice." He threw my case out and from the tenor of his concluding section slammed the District Court doors shut behind it as though warning me, "And don't come back here again!" Oh yeah! No bureaucrat tries to intimidate me; back I would come.

Judge Castel dismissed over the issue of "proximate cause." Proximate cause is a nebulous area of the law, especially concerning RICO actions, which allows judges to use a number of different tests or even make one up in order to decide whether the acts of defendants are closely enough related to the harm suffered by a plaintiff. The law is so imprecise on this issue that it allows judges to dump a case they don't want, and that's how Judge Castel used it. What I didn't expect was for him to deny me at least one chance to amend my Complaint to meet his objections—to allow me one more bite at the apple. But Castel doomed that possibility by using the words “with prejudice.” Very unusual, since Federal courts almost always allow a plaintiff one more shot at drafting his complaint. Maybe the politically correct news media didn't touch my story because it knew more about how the court system really worked than I did. Fine, next stop the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, which takes appeals from the U.S. district courts in New York, Vermont and Connecticut.

It took me until the end of the week to finally sit down and thoroughly read Judge Castel's decision. When I did, I seethed with indignation at this alleged “Honor of the Bench” who most likely only skimmed my memorandum of law, if that. He claimed, however, to have “carefully and thoroughly considered” my memorandum but said, “Plaintiff made no request to file an amended Complaint in the event the motions to dismiss were granted.” My memorandum stated at page 41, “If this Court dismisses the Complaint or part of it under Rule 12(b)(6), then the plaintiff requests leave to amend.” The memorandum made four more similar requests concerning specific issues throughout the memorandum—five times in all, but somehow Castel, and his clerk, either a broad or girieman—read Feminazi or Feminazi sycophant, missed them. So much for “carefully and thoroughly considered.”

More evidence that these bureaucrats, probably trained in Russia, gave short shrift to my papers was their false accusation that I had violated Castel's individual practice rules. Any schoolchild looking at the record would have seen that. Castel and his clerk simply rewrote the procedural history in favor of their convenience. Sounded to me like the same tactic 60 Minutes used against President Bush over his National Guard Service: they decided the result they wanted, then made up the facts to fit it. It was now clear that Castel wanted to quickly dismiss my case and pressure me into not appealing, so he and his clerk lambasted me with the falsehood of violating his rules in order to give them an excuse not to fully consider my papers and discredit me before the Court of Appeals. The District Court's rush to trample my rights in the name of political correctionalism and expediency didn't end there. The Judge and his clerk also tried to scare me off an appeal with insults, sarcasm and misleading statements. They probably liked the way the lawyers for the defense handled themselves, since instead of reprimanding the defense for its personal attacks, the Court joined in the character assassination.

Castel and his clerk were subtler in their litigation of personal destruction while relying on many of the phony conclusions the defense improperly interjected into their motions to dismiss. Copycatting the defense attorneys' ridicule of me and their misrepresentations of my Complaint showed that Castel and his clerk carefully read the defense motion papers but not mine. Castel and his clerk simply concocted a legal argument based on their claiming my Complaint didn't say what it said but said what they said it said in order to dismiss it for lack of proximate cause.

The two even ridiculed my efforts to seek protection from the courts and report the defendants' crimes to law enforcement agencies by sarcastically describing me as "one who is having a difficult time being heard." They'd never, never dare say that if I was a broad and the Commie Ho a male Russian mob pimp!

These bureaucrats, who pushed the law in any direction they personally wanted, probably feared the Feminazi criticism that would result from allowing a middle-aged man to fight for his rights against a prostitute, a respectable profession under Feminazi thinking, and those that aided and abetted the Ho to enter and stay in America. Also playing into the dismissal with prejudice was the hostility toward civil RICO cases demonstrated by nearly all the lower federal courts in the U.S. All civil RICO actions are brought by individual citizens. In the early nineties, 77% of such RICO cases were thrown out of court in the beginning stage, as was mine, while other types of cases were rarely dismissed.

Congress had intended civil RICO to encourage an army of private citizens to take on complex racketeering actions, but federal judges, except for the Supreme Court, have imposed their own restraints on the statute by writing in requirements that aren't there. Congress feared such might happen, so it wrote into the statute that "The provisions of this Title shall be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purposes." But that didn't stop the lower federal courts from impeding the statute's operation, so the Supreme Court has repeatedly told federal judges to knock it off. Once the Supreme Court rebuked a lower court with "The short answer is that Congress did not write the statute that way." Russello v. U.S., 464 U.S. 16, 23, 104 S.Ct. 296, 300, 78 L.Ed.2d 17 (1983). The lower federal courts, however, continue to systematically dismantle civil RICO by creating numerous obstacles to keep plaintiffs from reaching the trial stage.

When the Russian mafia showed up on the District Court's steps in the form of my RICO action, Castel and his clerk naturally believed they had the PC right to impose whatever restrictive judicial limitations necessary to dismiss. Lawmakers call this "negative judicial activism" in which appointed judges change the very meaning of and reason for a statute passed by elected representatives. In my case, Congress had passed civil RICO because previous laws had offered too little protection for the victims of organized crime.

Castel and his clerk didn't care about any male rights. They were too steeped in toting the Feminazi line of modern day America as evidenced by the creepy euphemistic language they used. For example, the decision calls brothels and strip joints "exotic dancing clubs." Nobody, other than hos, pimps and Feminazis, call dens of flesh peddling "exotic." Exotic means mysterious, romantic, picturesque, glamorous and out of the ordinary. Brothels and lap-dancing clubs don't fall within any of those definitions. There are over 2000 lap-dancing joints alone in America, and who knows how many double as whorehouses. Both thrive on crass commercial exchanges, just like stock markets and cattle yards but only the activities in strip clubs and brothels are driven by greed and lust rather than greed alone—nothing exotic about either desire. The decision also sanitized "call girl operations" to "escort services." The Court used Orwellian Newspeak in order to disguise the sorted-criminal reality depicted in the Complaint.

Feminazis and totalitarian lefties use Newspeak all the time in describing theirs and their supporters' nefarious acts. They picked it up from Orwell's 1984 or the Japanese three monkeys: hear no evil, see no evil and speak no evil unless it serves Feminazi interests. By controlling the words used in discourse, vested interests can manipulate reality to appear as it does not exist. Control a person's view of reality, and you control that person.

Castel and his clerk's politically correct, elitist efforts to twist my Complaint and the law brought home to my gut what I intellectually suspected all along: there was no redress for my grievances within the American judicial system. In 21st century America, the nobler sentiments of men are left for the movies made in the first half of the last century. If I won on appeal, unlikely given the like-mindedness in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, the case would end up back with Castel who would then finesse another reason to dismiss it. Even if everything went my way, it would be back and forth like a ping-pong ball between the District and Appeals Courts, and that's what Castel wanted me to take away from his opinion. The message was clear: the Judge was not going to allow my case to ever reach discovery. If I persisted, and luck kept bringing me victories in the Court of Appeals, I would have to pay a prohibitive toll in costs, time and stress. But if lady luck failed me even once in the Court of Appeals with a ruling in Castel's favor, then the only legal option left would be the U. S. Supreme Court, which only hears about one-percent of the eight to nine thousand cases that apply for review every year. So the chance of the U.S. Supreme Court ever hearing my case was nil. Castel's decision made it eminently clear that the only justice in America for a man without fortune or fame was injustice. All those law school cases, TV shows, Hollywood movies and comic books where truth and justice lived synonymous with the American way meant nothing for American men in the 21st Century.

Despite Castel's warning between the lines to stay out of the judicial system, I wasn't going down without a fight. At the law library, I researched whether I could do anything legally right away, rather than waiting months for the appeal. Sure enough, I could make a motion for Castel to disqualify himself from the case, and, if successful, ask the new judge to reconsider the motions to dismiss. Maybe a new judge would at least read my papers through, follow the law and not rewrite my Complaint. The chances, however, were small of Castel bouncing himself off the case, but his response might provide some ammunition for attacking his decision in the Court of Appeals. The motion would also get on the public record in the District Court the tawdry tactics Castel used to discredit me. And, since the record of the motions would also end up in the Appeals Court in the form of the "joint appendix" when my case reached there, I wouldn't have to use some of the limited space in my appeal brief explaining Castel's falsehoods and ridicule.

To make my motion, Judge Castel's individual practice rules required sending him and the defense lawyers a letter that requested a pre-motion conference to discuss the issues. The letter gave me the chance to criticize him the way he did me:

"My years of living in this society have made me relatively tolerant of backhanded sniping, even when it impugns my honor by subtly calling me a liar who spins tales or makes fanciful allegations.

Castel's decision started smearing me as a delusional liar on the very first page by claiming the Complaint "spins a tale," and, in the very first sentence of that page, he repeated a sarcasm used by the defense lawyers throughout their papers to ridicule my case and me. My Complaint states the Russian mafia is an organization that "spans the globe." The defense lawyers had picked up on that phrase, twisted it to apply to only the defendants, rather than the Russian mafia, and only to a domestic relations' case, rather than a RICO suit. According to the defense's distortion, my case concerned a worldwide, domestic relations conspiracy—I don't think so. Still, they used the phrase throughout their papers as a moniker for calling the Complaint farfetched and characterizing me as delusional. Lawyers can ridicule all they want, but when a judge repeats their derision in a written decision, it becomes a different matter entirely.

Castel included another attack on my veracity in his opinion by selectively editing an accusation by Jack Sachs, the Commie Ho's attorney, so that it sounded even worse than the one Sachs made. When Sachs opposed my request for a pre-motion conference to file my Supplemental Complaint, he wrote, "it appears that few, if any, of the events cited in the Supplemental Complaint ever really happened." Castel decided to go one better when quoting Sachs' accusation by writing, "few, if any, of the events set forth in the Supplemental Complaint ever really happened." Castel didn't bother to include Sachs' qualifier of "it appears." Then to make this slap across the face appear acceptable while returning a back swing to my other cheek, Castel wrote, “It is not the Court’s role at this stage of the litigation to assess the truth or validity of plaintiff’s allegations, no matter how fanciful they appear or how difficult they may be to prove.” Every law student knows on a motion to dismiss that a judge doesn’t decide fact questions, so why bother including Sachs’ edited quote at all? The only possible reason was to brand me a liar and add a backhanded slap to make sure the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, the defense and I knew that the Judge didn’t believe the Complaint’s allegations and that he thought they couldn’t be proved. Where did he get off violating the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure by making such conclusions before any discovery? He’s a judge appointed for life, so he can do pretty much what he wants.

My letter requesting a pre-motion conference continued:

“But I do find particularly trying when manifest partiality or personal prejudice singles out me, the pro se plaintiff, for criticism, especially when such censure is based on a false premise used to justify a chain of events that led to dismissal with prejudice of the Complaint.”

Castel had falsely accused me of violating his individual rules. He said in his decision, “plaintiff, without prior consent of the Court and in contravention of my Individual Practices, filed a 147-page memorandum of law, along with an affidavit and exhibits.” To which I wrote:

“Yes, I filed a 147-page law memorandum with five exhibits in opposition to the defendants’ joint motion to dismiss while their two key memoranda totaled 148 pages with 47 separate documents attached, but you saw fit to rebuke only me, and that rebuke was unfounded.

“You claim my 147-page memorandum of law contravenes your Individual Practice Rules, but it did not contravene Chief Judge Mukasey’s rules who was the sitting Judge when it was filed. You were not on the case at that time—Chief Judge Mukasey was and my memorandum complied with his rules. Had I known then that you would end up with the case, I would have requested “prior consent,” but I’m not that prescient. Your rules for which you wrongly accused me of violating in a written order did not apply because the case had not yet been transferred to you and there was no notice to me at the time that it would be.

“More important, however, is that the above incidents of partiality or personal prejudice and error in applying your Individual Rules contributed to overlooking controlling decisions cited in my memorandum, not fully considering the legal arguments I advanced and fundamentally misconstruing and overlooking allegations in the Complaint, which was reinforced by your failure to fully consider my memorandum of law. Other indications in your opinion also infer an ignoring of my memorandum but not the defendants’. And no, the motion I made to strike some of the defendants’ extraneous exhibits did not request striking my memorandum of law.

“After having been burnt once and not wanting to be falsely accused of violating any more rules, I am requesting a pre-motion conference in order to move for your disqualification from this case because of partiality or personal prejudice so that an impartial judge may hear any request for reconsideration of your decision to dismiss the case.”

As hindsight now made clear, Castel likely had decided soon after his assignment to my case to dismiss it, which explains his comment at the July conference when he didn’t want to give the Bank of Cyprus any extra time to reply because it would come out of his time. It also explains him admonishing me in his opinion for filing the Supplemental Complaint while the motions to dismiss were pending. The Supplemental Complaint required Castel and his clerk to put in extra time and effort to fashion an additional legal argument for dismissing it along with the original Complaint. That must have annoyed them, and in their rush to throw my case out, they created their own rules of procedure. It didn’t matter to them that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure not only allow but also encourage a plaintiff to file a supplemental complaint whenever new events occur in a case. Castel and his clerk wanted rid of my case, so they ignored the rules by treating my Supplement Complaint as an Amended Complaint—two distinctly different court papers, but it gave them an argument for dismissing my case “with prejudice.”

Dubin, the lead defense lawyer, responded to my request for a pre-motion conference with a letter that took every opportunity to ingratiate himself with Castel, “I regret having to burden this Court with any further correspondence on this matter.” Right, this pathologically fibbing lawyer knew as I did that Castel screwed up by accusing me of violating his rules because if I had violated them, then so had Dubin, but neither of us did because the Chief Judge had the case at the time. Dubin naturally failed to mention that. Instead, he gave Castel a couple of arguments, actually lies, for getting around what the Judge had written. Dubin twisted Castel's admonishment of my rule violation into merely a statement made "in the context of providing nothing more than procedural history." Baloney, the statement was false and rebuked only me but not Dubin when by Castel's faulty reasoning Dubin had also violated the Judge's rules. Dubin also suggested what Castel would probably do: deny the common sense meaning of the Court's opinion by simply declaring that nothing Castel or his clerk wrote indicated a failure to fully consider my memorandum—false, but impossible for me to prove.

Other chicanery used by Dubin in opposing my request to make a motion to disqualify omitted the full truth. And why not—a half-truth is often more effective than a full one. Dubin claimed anymore time spent on the case, so far 18 months, would "greatly prejudice the defendants." But he conveniently left out that five of those months of delay resulted from his requests for extensions of time to file papers. Dubin also declared with lawyerly pomposity that Castel should not disqualify himself, which would open the way for another judge to review the case, because two federal judges had already "considered" the RICO action. Technically true, but the amount of time put in by the first judge, the Chief Judge, was miniscule, consisting of one short conference in which he set the schedule for submitting the motions to dismiss. That's hardly enough to satisfy the definition of "considered." Dubin even argued that another judge "should not be burdened with having to address all these papers." But most of the papers he had submitted for that very reason: to so burden Castel that the Judge would dismiss the case on any grounds just to avoid dealing with so many documents.

Dubin finally argued that I had the opportunity to submit lengthy papers that showed I had a fair and reasonable chance to argue against the motions to dismiss. Is he kidding, what's fair and reasonable about submitting papers the Judge barely looked at? That's no opportunity, unless you live in George Orwell's 1984.

Castel allowed me to make my Motion to Disqualify but refused to grant a pre-motion conference. Rats! I wanted the confrontation; watch him try to explain why he singled me out for criticism.

My motion accused Castel of acting in a manner that raised questions about his impartiality. That's all I needed: show there existed some doubt about his fairness. Too bad I couldn't also make a motion to bounce him off the case for re-writing the civil RICO statute, but the rules don't allow for that. The Motion to Disqualify criticized Castel's falsehoods and snide remarks:

"Such comments by Judge Castel are unnecessary, inappropriate and do not bolster the legal basis for the Decision, but they do discredit the plaintiff for when he appears before the Second Circuit to argue his appeal. As such, the only conclusion is that these remarks manifest Judge Castel's partiality above and beyond that already held by Second Circuit courts against civil RICO actions."

Dubin's papers, as usual, attacked me personally and declared I fabricated a claim of partiality against Castel and misread as sarcasm the Judge's objective words. The lead defense lawyer also claimed, "Plaintiff is desperate and figures he now has nothing to lose." For once Dubin got something right, but he didn't realize it. He just threw it out as a personal attack.

Castel denied my Motion to Disqualify but at least corrected his opinion that my 147-page memorandum didn't violate his rules because when it was filed the Chief Judge had the case. Still, he failed to mention why he had initially singled me out for criticism but not Dubin for filing two memoranda totaling 148 pages. Oh well, sloppiness generally results when a judge follows his visceral reaction to dismiss a case and then has to play catch up to maintain the visage of exhaustive judicial deliberation.

Castel did use Dubin's suggestion about not ignoring my memorandum by saying he had given all papers "careful and thorough" consideration. As for the personal ridicule Castel had thrown my way, the Judge claimed he didn't say what he had said, or what he said didn't mean what it meant. Actually, he should have declared he didn't write what had been written, since the dramatic difference in writing styles between Castel's ruling on my motion and the opinion to dismiss indicates he likely didn't write the dismissal decision. My criticism of the Judge in the Motion to Disqualify must have caused him to deal with it personally. But as for the defendants' motions to dismiss, he most likely had told one of his clerks to dismiss the case with prejudice and let her, or an androgyny, come up with the reasoning and write the opinion. Castel must have relied on her to get it right, but she didn't. As a judge, he should have paid closer attention, but even so it would have ended with the same result. Castel wanted rid of my case, so any illogical reasoning would do.

Even in Castel's denial of my motion for his disqualification, shades of 1984 appeared. Castel claimed the statement in his dismissal opinion about me filing a Supplemental Complaint "with the defendants' motions to dismiss in hand" was not a personal criticism. Rather it meant that when I filed the Supplemental Complaint, I should have used that opportunity to also change my original complaint to meet the objections in the defense lawyers' memoranda that I then had in my hands. Wait a minute! The defense attorneys aren't the Judge in this case or any case, and a plaintiff doesn't have to accept their arguments and change his complaint accordingly. If a plaintiff has to rely on the defense lawyers interpretation of the law, which is that the plaintiff has no legal recourse, there would never be any lawsuits, and judges like Castel would be out of a job. The reason we have judges is to interpret and apply the law impartially. We don't use defense lawyers for that, especially four-flushing ones.

Even more absurd was Castel's reasoning that would require plaintiffs, maybe only male civil RICO plaintiffs, to read the future. Normally, after a judge makes his decision to dismiss a case, a plaintiff is granted the right to amend the complaint to correct the problems raised in the judge's decision. Obviously, a plaintiff can't amend his complaint to cure mistakes pointed out by a judge, if the plaintiff has to do so before the judge issues a decision. The law doesn't require plaintiffs to foretell the future because most courts realize humans can't do that, so they usually allow a plaintiff to amend his complaint at least once after a judge issues a decision to dismiss. But according to Castel, I should have filed an Amended Complaint correcting the errors his decision would list before that decision was issued. It's a neat way to Catch-22 my Complaint out of court without the opportunity to amend. Next time, I use a fortuneteller.

The process of appealing to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals began, but my take on future judicial results had changed. Even though Castel had written such an abortion of a decision, I no longer expected further defeat at the hands of the bureaucratic judiciary—I was assured of it. As the lead defense lawyer said when he made that comment about desperation, Castel's decision to dismiss my case did just enough to nudge me over the line into the realm of nothing to lose. When a man loses everything, and there is no justice to be found, he becomes a ghost on the road to Elysian. The courts are useless, unless you are a broad, celebrity, rich or a large corporation, then they'll give you what you want—whether justice for you or injustice for your opponent. Time would come for other action. No point in possessing power if it is not used. I still pursued my legal recourse in the Court of Appeals but more for the chance of making a stab for the Supreme Court rather than any hope of success.

Smooth Talking Criminal

The time I spent preparing the papers for getting into the Court of Appeals and dodging the hidden traps that slam shut the Court's doors took a few weeks in October during which I missed some Salsa lessons and working out at the gym. Throughout that period, the simmering reaction of fury and hate in my gut kept boiling up. One Saturday night, I almost got into a fight with a twenty-something Asian guy and his friends. Mark had to step in as peacemaker. On another weekend, I made a few unnecessarily nasty remarks to some broads and refused to move out of the middle of the tiny dance floor at Gonzales y Gonzales when some guy asked me so that he could dance with his girl. Good grief, I was acting like I did back in my college days when destination Vietnam hung seemingly forever before me. I didn't need this. It became clear very quickly that Salsa, working out and chasing girls of a darker complexion served a more important purpose than staying in shape or entertainment: they kept me from exploding or doing something really dumb like falling for another blonde.

The weekend before Halloween, Mark suggested we try a place on Fifth Avenue and 13th Street called Luan. Free admission and Salsa, how could we lose? We arrived early around 11 PM, the place was nearly empty and no talent except for a few girls barricaded behind tables. Some broads always enthrone themselves in back of a table. What are they protecting—their imaginary virginity? Are they waiting for some prince to scale those ramparts? Too much work and too visibly embarrassing if the guy doesn't come back with the damsel.

On our way to the bar was this tall, tall blonde, blonde cocktail waitress standing directly ahead. My persona immediately changed from Dumb to Dumber. My eyes saw clearly, the club wasn't too dark and she was in range of my less than 20-20 contacts vision; still I walked up to her, to the edge of the psychologically fog-enshrouded cliff. Looked up into the face of a six-foot, three-inch girl in her early twenties who looked the twin of the Commie Ho and began the pickup. What was I doing? Had Mother Nature programmed me for destruction at the hands of blondes whether real or dyed?

Cocktail waitresses are always easy to talk with—too easy—because they want those tips, as did this one, but getting their telephone numbers while they work is usually difficult. We flirted, or I flirted, while she acted throughout the evening. Mark and I bought our drinks through her, as she requested, instead of at the bar. She and I even danced a little, touching bodies, feeling, holding each other with kisses dangerously near the mouth: clearly a death wish on my part.

“Lucky,” as she called herself, also worked as a model—why was I not surprised. Beautiful, whose barefoot height reached six-foot-one and under contract to Welhelmina, a hotshot model agency in the City that paid for her 85th Street and West End Avenue apartment, an affluent residential neighborhood. Lucky came from a small town in Mississippi, which gave us something more to talk about given my recent trip there. But that minor coincidence didn’t matter since Lucky knew how to carry on a conversation with any man, especially one that looked like money. She even asked flat out, “Do you have money? To which I honestly answered, “No.”

Before Lucky moved to New York City, a few months earlier, she traveled around the country appearing in beauty pageants for Hawaiian Tropic tanning lotion. That sounded familiar, although Lucky apparently had more success than the Commie Ho with Hawaiian Tropic. I kept dancing on the cliff’s edge, laughing at the abyss below when I should have been fleeing as hard and fast as possible from my own stupidity. Lucky wheedled me into going outside to the corner store to buy her a handful of her favorite chocolates, each the size of a golf ball wrapped in red or blue foil. She particularly preferred the red ones that night. Rather than turning the handful over to her at once, I doled them out one at a time over hours, which reminded me of teasing my cat when a kid. But who was teasing whom? When Mark and I left, Lucky gave me her telephone number.

My dance on the edge now turned into a fall powerless for me to stop. The moment we left Luan, Lucky started living in my mind, playing my emotions. Trying to reduce her sway, I presumptuously encapsulated her value to me.

“So what do you want from her?” Mark asked.

“Sex,” I answered. But was that really all? Too bad girls can’t be separated from their bodies.

“You may also want to keep your options open by being her friend,” Mark continued. “Not the big brother type who solves her problems and listens to her complain about her boy friends. Guys always fall into that trap because nature made us problem solvers and caretakers. Girls know that, and they know how to use us for it because they can’t solve problems or take care of themselves. It’s happened to me lots of times, and I’m not doing it anymore.”

“That’s what happened to me with Traviesa.” I replied. She was always bending my ear about this guy or that guy and using me to fix the idiocy she caused. Who needs listening to their moaning and groaning about the problems they get themselves into? What a bore.”

“Right. So, after you call her up once or twice, she’ll make clear whether she’s interested in sex or a big brother or doesn’t ever want to see you again. If it’s big brother, just don’t fall into that role. Go out some place fun with her and flirt. If she starts talking sob stories, be firm and tell her, ‘Listen I came out to have a good time,’ and she’ll knock it off. Keep flirting with her, and she’ll realize you’re not going to play big brother, so she’ll flirt back. Girls always want guys to flirt with them even if she's not thinking sex—it justifies their existence. And by being a friend, you'll get to meet the other models she hangs around with, and so will I. You can even throw a party at The Park for her and her friends. Vincent will help in making it seem special, and it doesn't cost anything, you're just bringing some people to a club."

"Yeah," I said, sounding like Eddie Haskell, "Vincent will make us look like big shots, always impressive to models."

"Exactly."

Mark's advice, as always on these matters, was excellent. But should I even pursue this physical clone of my ex-wife? The primal archetype emotions stirring in me threatened so much danger, but I couldn't help myself, guess the season of the witch never ends for men. On my first call to Lucky, I got her voicemail, so I left a message. A few days later, I called again, same voice mail, different message: "I thought I'd call for a little Southern sunshine, but you're not around. Maybe I need to take another trip to Mississippi although it rained most of the time I was in Biloxi last. By the way, I have some Red and Blue chocolates you might be interested in. Give me a call, maybe we can work out a deal or just chat or have a drink." She never called back; I was saved, so long as I kept away from the club where she worked.

Lucky's failure to return my calls initially caused me to blame it on my age, but then I remembered my younger days at Cravath and in television news. Girls immediately became more interested when I told them where I worked. Twenty years ago, they saw me as a potential money maker whom they could sucker into providing them the Life of Riley while they spent their time cheating with whoever was in reach. So age didn't really matter. If young, the guy's potential finances mattered; if older, his bank account, but it still all came down to money, and as for the girls, fidelity on their part belonged in another dimension. Lucky, as with all pretty girls, looked for big spenders with high net-worth or the promise of such, to justify using their most valuable commodity on a guy—time. Like tomatoes, these hos don't stay plump and ripe for long. So a ho is not about to waste time on a guy without promise or cash. Lucky for me, I told her I didn't have money.

The rationale girls use to justify gold digging is obvious: they believe themselves princesses, so men should give them the keys to the vault, no questions asked. Not dissimilar from the Feminazis demanding preferential treatment for whatever they happen to want from society. But what delusion do girls use to justify their pathological faithlessness until finally the laments of the young girls who were once friends coalesced in my head. They always criticized their boyfriends for not lasting long enough inside of them so that they could enjoy the multiple orgasms that Mother Nature had designed them for. A bizarre complaint, probably just more carping against men since Mother Nature isn't stupid. Evolution made a lot of changes over millions of years in order for guys and girls to copulate frequently to assure the species' survival. After all that effort, Mother Nature wasn't about to miss her goal because of sexual dissatisfaction that left girls hungry for more orgasms and guys condemned to just one. It would make no sense. Mother Nature, therefore, gave both men and girls the ability to have multiple orgasms. The problem for puritanical America is that most of its girls, and lots of the guys, haven't gotten the message. They believe ejaculation as the only form of orgasm a guy can experience—it's not. When nearing ejaculation while inside a girl, the guy only needs to relax, stop pumping away and tensing all his muscles in a futile effort to save himself. By relaxing, letting his body go limp, which wouldn't affect the part inside the girl, he can, with some practice, ride the sensations into an orgasm without ejaculating, which produces an experience not unlike the type girls feel running through their bodies. The guy can do this over and over, never exiting the girl, until she becomes too sore to continue, usually after an hour. For well-worn sluts, it's longer. The orgasms will start off as small and minor, but with practice and over time, they'll increase in strength, and when the man finally ejaculates, it'll be more satisfying.

The guy, however, needs a girl to follow his lead in this, just like with Salsa. The girl must respond to the guy for both to enjoy the potential that Mother Nature gave them. If the girl is a Feminazi, it wouldn't work because she believes it is her birthright to take charge and end up on top. Following her Feminazi beliefs will simply drive the guy to a quick ejaculation because Feminazi propaganda, like all special interest groups, rarely reflects reality. Her ignorance and arrogant disinterest in how guys function will leave her unsatisfied for which she will naturally blame the guy. So Feminazis and girls like Lucky use their ignorance about the ability of one man to run them through their multiple orgasms to justify their whoring around and any other underhanded conduct that harms a man.

Girls of the Lucky ilk threaten more prosaic harms as well. The week of her haunting my being nearly distracted me into missing a District Court deadline that would have ended my RICO case for eternity. The deadline to file the required Notice of Appeal fell on Halloween, which was during the weekend when the District Court was closed so that gave me until Monday. Had it not been for that coincidence, which gave me extra time, I would have missed the deadline—whew, that was close.

To celebrate this gift of the fates over feminine evil, I went to Gonzales' All Hallow's Eve costume party. Long ago I gave up the delusion of the Great Pumpkin and instead went looking for tomatoes on Halloween or any other weekend night. One twenty-something girl at Gonzales' was dressed as a little schoolgirl in knee-high white socks, short-short blue plaid skirt with suspenders and a virginal white-buttoned blouse. Couldn't tell whether she was Jewish or Latina, a failing of mine that sometimes causes me to hit on Jewish babes, which I classify as white for lunatic asylum. No matter, I wasn't going to allow my line to go unused. Walking up to her, I leaned over so she could hear me and asked, "Would you like some candy little girl?" Good line, huh? I even had the candy in my pocket that I bought with a tip to the attendant in the men's room. Well, she freaked, her eyes widened, she drew back and her voice quaked as she stumbled over words trying to find a response. Her reaction surprised me. Maybe she had gone too deep into the character of her costume; however, a real little girl likely would have handled it much better. Then I realized the broad was white, probably with a Feminazi mother and girlieman father. The mother, seeing a potential rival in her daughter not just for the husband but other older men, probably did what all Feminazi momsters do, brainwashed the daughter into believing older guys evil so the daughter would avoid the pool of men the over-the-hill mother wanted. Even girls have to be taught to hate and fear since a little girl that escaped such programming would figure out a way to get the candy for nothing.

The Cheater

My Second Circuit Court of Appeals strategy focused on Castel's failure to pay, as he claimed, "careful and thorough" attention to my Complaint and law memorandum. The aim was to expose his ignoring what my Complaint said and then rewriting it to fit his legal argument for dismissing my case—the same tactic the defense lawyers used. Some judges, especially in civil RICO cases, do this all the time. They often make a knee jerk decision to throw out a case, usually one they personally don't like with a powerless plaintiff, choose a legal reason from the list of those most commonly used to dismiss a lawsuit and then distort what the plaintiff's complaint states to fit that reason.

Castel based the crucial part of his legal opinion on the claim that in August 2000 I discovered the Russian mafia had tricked me into bringing the Commie Ho to America. That was clearly false, but it didn't stop Castel. It wasn't until I talked with Jeff in the summer of 2002—two years later—that I realized the Russian mob's involvement. Perhaps Castel has trouble with mathematics, some people do, but I doubt it, since his reasoning for dismissal depended on that falsehood. August 2000 was when I started investigating whether the Commie Ho was providing prostitution services to her Flash Dancers' customers, not investigating the possibility of a RICO lawsuit and the Russian mafia's interference in my life. Even had my Complaint stated that I knew in August 2000 about the Russian mafia standing in the shadows behind the Ho, scheming to get her assets into America, Castel's legal reasoning for dismissal still wouldn't wash with U.S. Supreme Court decisions, but it might with the Second Circuit. Anyway, my Complaint didn't state such because I didn't know it at the time.

Despite Castel's declaration of "careful and thorough" consideration of my papers, he missed when I first suspected Russian mafia involvement. But that miss was necessary for the Judge and his clerk to conclude that all the harm caused me after August 2000 was my fault because that's when, according to their fabrication, I learned about the Russian mafia's scheme and started investigations and court proceedings to fight against it. They claimed it was my fighting that caused me harm, rather than the criminal acts of the defendants I fought against. The temporary order of protection taken out against me, the costs to defend against it, the threats by mafia goons, the time lost from my business in seeking protection from a government that didn't care, the damage to my business reputation, the foregone business opportunities and lost profits, the cost of investigating to find out what the hell was going on so that I could put a stop to it and the expenses for fighting these clowns in court to protect my rights were all my fault rather than those of the defendants trying to protect and further the Russian mob's profits concerning the Ho and others. That's the reasoning that Castel's simple editing of the date allowed him to use to dismiss my Complaint, and it meant that gangsters who caused harm by protecting or concealing their earlier crimes cannot be held liable under civil RICO. Purely Orwellian, but in the Southern District Court of New York, if the plaintiff learns of RICO acts committed against him, the criminals are then allowed to use more RICO violations to prevent or interfere with the plaintiff's access to law enforcement authorities or the courts.

Castel's rewriting of my complaint actually contradicted the Supreme Court in NOW v. Scheidler, 510 U.S. 249, 256, 114 S.Ct. 798, 127 L.Ed.2d 99 (1994), which I used in my appeal. In NOW, that organization alleged that the RICO conspiracy "had injured the [plaintiffs'] business and/or property interests ..." and that a defendant had threatened reprisals. The Supreme Court concluded that "nothing more is needed to confer standing on [the plaintiff] at the pleading stage," which was the stage of my case. I liked the irony of relying on a case brought by the enemies of all men: the National Organization of Witches.

As for those members and comrades of the Russian mob, Leo, the Commie Ho and Inessa, who also violated RICO before August 2000 in their efforts to transplant the Ho's profitable ass to America, Castel argued they could not have reasonably foreseen the harm their acts would cause me after August 2000, so he dismissed those claims. Get real, these three plotters couldn't foresee the harm to my business, which they knew full well about, the time away from it and the expenses they would cost me by feeding me drugs and tricking me into bring the Ho to America; they couldn't foresee the use of goons if problems arose and the litigation and time costs to me for dealing with such hoodlums; they couldn't foresee bribing public officials, a common practice among Russians, to keep me from reversing the harm of their scheme and recovering the costs it would cause me; and they couldn't foresee using perjury, an even more common Russian practice, as part of judicial proceedings to sledge hammer me into silence while depleting my financial resources. When people, especially Russians, intentionally engage in fraudulent conduct, all of that and more are reasonably foreseeable harms caused the target. But the Court ignored that intending an end is meaningless unless the means are also intended.

In effect, Castel drew a Maginot line at August 2000. Any harm caused me after August 2000 as the result of RICO violations by the defendants didn't matter because either the harm was not foreseeable by the culprits, such as the Ho, Inessa and Leo, or my fault rather than that of the defendants. Castel's Maginot line, however, prevented him from using it for dismissing the harm caused me before August 2000. He couldn't argue that my fight against the mob, which he claimed began in August 2000, caused me harm before that date. Even the Court of Appeals would laugh that lunacy out of the courtroom—I think? So what did Castel do? He just ignored parts of my Complaint by declaring the whole Complaint did not allege any harm before August 2000. Simply amazing, given the Complaint specifically stated I put my business on hold in the spring of 2000, which cost me money and consulting opportunities, while waiting for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow to process the Commie Ho's immigration papers. There were also travel costs, filing fees and time lost in bringing this Russian mob slut to America. But that didn't matter to the Judge or his clerk.

By fabricating the August 2000 date in order to rule all injury after that time as my fault or not foreseeable and ignoring my allegations of harm before that date, Castel violated the U.S. Supreme Court's requirement at the time that on a motion to dismiss, a judge must accept all the complaint's allegations as true and draw all inferences in favor of the plaintiff. California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 515, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642, 92 S.Ct. 609 (1972).

Instead, Castel drew his inferences in favor of the defendants.

Castel also goofed by not using the U.S. Supreme Court and other Circuit Courts' test for determining whether an injury from a RICO act is reasonably foreseeable to the defendants when they embark on their criminal venture. Rather, he reached into the grab bag of ad hoc rules that courts in the Second Circuit often use for throwing out civil RICO cases, and pulled out the "specifically intended injury" one. It states that mobsters must intend the exact injury a plaintiff subsequently suffers. For example, when the Commie Ho and Leo decided to trick me into bringing the Ho to America, which involved immigration fraud, they would have had to plan precisely how I would bring her. Had they planned on me buying a ticket for the Ho from Krasnodar to New York, they wouldn't be liable because I ended up buying a Moscow to New York ticket. For me to recover the cost of the Moscow to New York ticket, Leo and the Ho would have had to plan that I would take her to America by that route. Nuts, and it's not the law nor even remotely realistic. The plans of criminals usually lurk in their minds, so it's next to impossible to allege or prove all the specifics, assuming that criminals even go into such exacting details. And that's just the way many of the judges in the courts want it, so they can throw out civil RICO cases.

For a case to escape dismissal under the "specifically intended injury" test, the defendants would need to use a crystal ball to foresee the exact harm or expense that actually befell the sucker and then intend to cause it to him. The plaintiff would then need a mind reader to tell the court that this is what the defendants specifically intended. An absurd reading of the law, since the RICO statute requires that the mobsters only create a risk of harm to a plaintiff. They don't have to intend the exact manner in which the plaintiff is injured, just create the risk of it occurring. So when Leo and the Ho schemed to trick me into bringing her to America, they created the risk that transporting her for-hire ass would cost me money, which it did.

Castle, and his clerk, also took the facts in my case and spindled, bent, folded and shoehorned them into a group of civil RICO cases called “employee termination,” “whistleblower” and “shareholder and creditor derivative” actions.

The “employee termination” and “whistleblower” cases involve situations where an employee refuses to go along with his employer’s RICO activities or blows the whistle on them, so the employer fires the worker or retaliates against him in some manner. The reasoning in the employee cases hold that the injury to the worker came from a management decision to fire or punish the employee not from the employer’s RICO crimes. True, if it had not been for the company’s illegal criminal activities and the employee’s whistle blowing or refusal to help, management wouldn’t have decided to fire or punish him. So logically, there is a string of causes and effects, but firing or punishing an employee is not a RICO crime, and the company’s RICO activities were not aimed at the employee but someone else. The obvious distinction between the employee cases and my case is that I was never an employee of the Russian mob, nor terminated by it, at least not yet.

In the “shareholder and creditor derivative” cases, management commits some RICO crimes to destroy the competition, win a contract, escape a debt or some other way to increase profits. Management gets caught, the public learns about the criminal activities and the company’s value sinks. The shareholders or creditors then sue the company and management for the money they lost. The shareholders and creditors can’t win such a case because the RICO activities were meant to benefit the company and, therefore, them. In my case, the Russian mafia could be considered the “company” that used RICO crimes to benefit itself, but I was never a “shareholder” or “creditor” or, more accurately, a member or associate who benefited from those crimes. Rather, I was a customer, although an unwitting one, but that doesn’t count as a shareholder, creditor, member or associate of the Russian mob.

The Supreme Court simplifies matters by classifying “employee termination,” “whistleblower” and “shareholder and creditor derivative” actions as “pass along” cases. That means the RICO crimes injure someone and because of that person’s injury the plaintiff ends up harmed. In such cases the plaintiff cannot recover. For example, a publishing house uses RICO crimes to cheat its customers, the customers find out, stop doing business and the publisher’s salesmen lose sales. One salesman sues the publisher under RICO but can’t recover because the harm passed through the customers to him. The customers could sue under RICO because the publisher’s RICO crimes cost them money, but not the salesman because his losses were the immediate result of the customers deciding not to buy. Sure, the customers decided not to buy because of the RICO crimes but that doesn’t matter under the law because the harm passed through the customers to the salesman.

Another example of a “pass along” harm case in which RICO did not apply occurred in the 1980s when American Express conducted a clandestine campaign to defame a rival financier, Edmond J. Safra. Safra mounted a global investigation to find out who was attacking his reputation, which was injuring his banking business, and brought lawsuits to fight the defamations popping up in the foreign media. When he discovered American Express executives behind the campaign, he forced the CEO to admit the company’s misdoings and pay $8 million to charities, the cost of Safra’s investigations and legal fees. American Express stock tanked, and shareholders sued the company and top management under RICO. The shareholders lost because the RICO crimes harmed Safra and only as a result of the harm to him, which was made public, did the stock decline in value. Safra was a person in the middle between the executives committing the crimes and the shareholders; therefore, the shareholders couldn't recover.

Legal commentators and even the Second Circuit admit that had Safra brought a RICO suit himself against American Express, such a case would not have been thrown out of court. The reason is not because defamation is a RICO crime, it's not, but the means by which American Express carried out its plan to ruin Safra's reputation were RICO violations. Congress passed RICO in order to reach a variety of complex criminal problems, so it doesn't matter what the conspirators' aims are, whether to defame Safra, gain the Commie Ho permanent residency or cheat on a contract. If the conspirators engage in certain acts in pursuing their ends, they violate RICO.

All of this means that people harmed by the spillover effect of injury to the intended victim can't recover. The RICO crimes have to be directed at the person suing, which in my case was me. There was no middleman between me and the defendants' RICO violations. Of course, Castel and his clerk found differently by saying that my "alleged injuries arise not as a result of any conspiracy directed at [me], but rather as a result of [my] discovery and investigation of that conspiracy." District Court Order, p. 11. If Safra would not have been bounced into the street for suing under RICO to recover his investigation and legal expenses, then why was I? Because I'm not rich.

Castel and his clerk made lots of other goofs in dismissing my case—over 50 in all, but my appeal focused only on the following:

- Den Hollander discovered the RICO Scheme involving defendant Shipilina in August 2000—false;

- the Complaint alleges harm from RICO violations after August 2000 as mostly resulting from Den Hollander's discovery of the Scheme—false;
- allegations of other injuries after August 2000 were general and conclusory—contradicts Supreme Court rulings;
- the Complaint didn't allege RICO injuries prior to August 2000—false;
- employee termination and shareholder RICO actions apply to this case for determining proximate cause—wrong, I was not an employee of the Russian mob and didn't own its stock;
- the injuries to Den Hollander were not to his business or property—wrong;
- the Scheme involving defendant Shipilina only aimed at entry into the U.S.—false;
- the Complaint did not allege Den Hollander was an intended victim or target—false; and
- Den Hollander did not request leave to amend the Complaint—intentional falsehood; that is, a blatant lie.

Keep On Dancing

The Friday before Thanksgiving 2004, Mark and I planned on checking out the Cherry Lounge uptown at 138th Street, which advertised a Salsa party—free admission. But Mark's younger brother said some female trainers from Bally's health club on East 106th Street planned to show up at Luan. Firm young female bodies are always an attraction, but Luan was where Lucky worked, and although her schedule didn't include Friday, I wasn't confident about not running into her. So I punted, left the decision to Mark whose only ambivalence was the price of admission, usually $20. He decided on Luan, so I printed out a couple of free passes for Saturday night, crossed out Saturday, penned in Friday and put them in my pocket with a grin. At the club's door, the promoters asked whether we were on a guest list, which would get us in for $10 each instead of $20. We weren't, so I pulled out the altered free passes, the promoters laughed and let us in for $10.

Not too many folks were inside, and no Lucky, whew! More people soon started arriving, and one tall, black chick caught my eye or I caught hers. She walked over to the bar near us looking in my direction. It was obvious what she wanted, but against my religion to buy females a drink. Then she came over to stand next to us by the D.J.'s stage waiting for me to say something, so I did—that's not against my religion.

"Why isn't anyone dancing?" I asked. The place reminded me of the Flat, hot looking black babes standing around waiting for the young guys to dance with them. Only these guys sported really big gold or gold plated medallions hanging on gold or gold plated chains around their necks to go with their extra large jerseys and pants.

"I don't know," she said. "It's always like this. All a guy has to do is hold out his hand and say 'May I have this dance' or 'Would you like to dance?'" Boy, I made sure to remember that line. Obviously, she wanted to dance, but for some reason I didn't go along, and she left to flirt with one of the bouncers. Mark leaned over to say, "She's not interested in dancing but sleeping with you." No matter, the role of quarry didn't suit me.

A co-worker of Mark's younger brother showed up, cute girl but where were the rest of the female trainers from Bally's? There were too many guys in the part of the club we were standing, so I went hunting in a different valley. If I had known the girl from Bally's was only nineteen, I would have stayed put. On my reconnaissance, I talked to a few girls, but none were very friendly, not interested or too nervous to flirt. I threw a few lines at another tall, black chick who answered only in monosyllables. She was real pretty, so her verbal capacity irrelevant. But while waiting for more inspiration from the muses, her girlfriend returned from the ladies room and they left. So I returned to home base next to the small stage on which the D.J. booth sat. A group of five black chicks, short and one very wide stood by or sat on the stage. Making my move, I started talking and they laughed at some of my jokes.

“Does the D.J. ever play any Rolling Stones?” I asked.

“No! This is Hip-Hop!” Said the cute one with a sexy smile while sitting on the stage with her legs apart between which I happily moved nudged along by the crowd.

“May I have this dance?” I asked holding out my hand.

“No.”

Okay I remembered, still holding out my hand, “Would you like to dance?”

“No.”

Something was wrong, or that girl earlier in the evening lied to me. I kept flirting with these girls, but as the place filled up I noticed other guys asking girls to dance and getting the same glass of cold water in the face. So I asked Mark what was going on?

“Black girls always do this. They have a combination princess and inferiority complex. The princess in them demands supplication, assurances you want her for a steady girlfriend or wife. The inferiority makes them afraid of being used or made a fool of. Lots of young black girls walk around at home with a white towel over their heads wishing they were a blonde, so some of the inferiority comes from color. The whole thing is an attitude I don’t want to deal with.”

So, as is usually the case in America, guys weren't the fault but girls. The reason for the small amount of dancing going on was the chicks, who as masters of the art of deception covered it up by dancing with each other. These black female temptresses couldn't live up to the advertising of their tight fitting jeans. Well, those babes may not like their skin color but I do and started talking again with the five by the D.J. booth.

Once again, I asked the cute one to dance to which she repeated her third no, but this time she also questioned my ability to dance hip-hop. Maybe she had a point. Somewhere along the line, I started dancing with one of the other five whose back was to the D.J. booth. Apparently, my Rock 'n' Roll moves from decades earlier weren't going down well, so the D.J. stepped outside his booth, and from the stage started showing me what to do. The girl I was dancing with couldn't see him standing behind and above her or that I was just copying his moves. All of a sudden, I had a lot more room to dance when some of the home boys and home girls moved back to enjoy the mini-show the D.J., the girl and I were putting on. I still threw in a few moves from the 1960s, such as squatting down with my face in front of the girl's snatch and moving in closer while holding her hips until like an embarrassed virgin she turned away burying her face in her hands. The D.J. and my friends laughed hard, the crowd got a kick and I enjoyed myself. What a great place and great people.

Walking home that night, I mused, as I often did after a particularly fun night at a club and with the remnants of a few vodka gimlets with Absolut and Rose's lime in me, that my life could have really been enjoyable, interesting and worthwhile had the Matrix allowed me to pursue my first best destiny—Physics.

The following weekend, Mark, three of his female friends and I hit a bizarre club, bizarre as to one-third of it anyway. On the lower Westside near 10th Avenue, Spirit, a large club fashioned out of an old warehouse, played different music in different sections of the building. Upstairs, a room for Salsa and one for Hip-Hop while downstairs Trance, whatever that meant? When the club finally got moving, I decided to do a little exploring downstairs in the Trance room. Before reaching bottom, I not only heard but also felt the dull mind-numbing thumping of the music. On the dance floor, with little if any discernible variation, the music unpleasantly vibrated to the inner core of my body. There was no hiding from this sound. Lots of fog swirled about creating a clammy Sherlock Holmes London night with illumination too tired to light, except for the periodic bright shafts of a strobe beam that for an instant made a piece of existence perceivable. Through the fog and dark, I made out shadows of young people moving like automatons to the monotonous music. This must be the utopian vision of today's psychiatrists, Feminazis and lefties—Zombieland, a psychotropic hell with no human emotions anywhere. Armageddon aside, I couldn't figure out why they kept it so dark. The near absence of the visible electromagnetic spectrum made it impossible to check out a babe, the very reason for clubs. Girls display themselves, guys make an offer and the girls accept, decline or play games.

Roaming around, I squinted through the haze until I saw a couple of girls standing at the top of some stairs in a doorway of light apparently coming from another room. I headed up the stairs toward them. They were wearing shades, guess the other room's light was too bright for them, but at least I'd be able to see. They were also smoking, weird because New York City law forbids lighting up in a club. At the top, I could see the two were nice looking, so I threw my line gesturing to the doorway of light, "So, what room is this?" "The street," the blonde said in a voice as lacking in variation as the music. Looking out, I replied, "Ahhhhh, reality!" Turned and went back to the floor for another try at flirtation with some girl. In my search through the darkness for a pretty face, I finally caught on to following the fleeting illumination of the hectic fire of the strobe light beams. It briefly lit the lovely face of a black chick dancing with another girl right in front of me, but the next flash of luminosity answered my bewilderment as to why the paucity of light in this lower depth of the club. They kept the room so dark in order to hide the cold dead eyes involuntarily staring straight ahead into nothingness through the slits of swollen eyelids of these apparent humanoid chicks. Dead or not, this girl with large balloons was good looking. I waited. Her dancing partner moved away toward someone else, but the black chick just kept dancing as though she still had a partner. Seeing my opportunity, I approached her from the side, “How long can you dance to this?” Not bothering to even look at me but still fixed on some abyss in front of her, she insipidly said, “Forever.” Ooooookay, that was enough for me and headed back upstairs to the Hip-Hop room, thinking the disco scene in Blade looked like a nuns’ convention compared to this Trance room. Next time in Zombieland, I bring a cross—that should cause a commotion.

On December 4, 2004, I finally finished the first draft of this still unfinished story, four years to the day I bounced the Commie Ho out of my apartment. And no, I didn’t plan that irony.

Tired of Waiting For You

The appeals process aims at resolving a case within six months but often takes longer. After I filed my Notice of Appeal, I waited for the Second Circuit’s Civil Appeals Management Office to schedule a Pre-Argument Conference. At such conferences, lawyers for the Second Circuit explore the possibility of a settlement between the parties or try to simplify the issues before the case goes to a three-judge panel for a hearing and decision. The defendants weren’t about to settle, why should they, the odds favored them because I belonged to the class of America’s modern day scapegoats and outcasts.

The Second Circuit channels appeals from the district courts along one of two tracks: “Counseled” in which the party appealing has a lawyer and “Pro Se” in which the party is representing himself. Although I represented myself, I’m a lawyer, so the Second Circuit’s rules required handling my case as a “Counseled” appeal. Fine with me, since “Pro Se” cases usually receive the bums’ rush out the courthouse doors. The “august” Second Circuit Court of Appeals didn’t want average citizens traipsing through its halls, wasting the Court’s time searching for justice.

When the Clerk’s Office for the Second Circuit received my case, they naturally put it on the wrong track: Pro Se. It took me three times to enlighten the Clerk’s Office before that bungling bureaucracy got it right. The Clerk’s Office also lost my Pre-Argument Statement papers along the way. Good thing I had a date-stamped copy from when I originally filed them; otherwise, the Court could claim I didn’t submit the papers on time and kick my case out, which would have ended my RICO lawsuit for good. Was it incompetence on the part of the Clerk’s Office for the second most prestigious court in the land or had someone been paid off to liquidate my papers. I’d never find out for sure, although a buddy who works in the Court told me it was probably just laziness in filing the papers. The Clerk’s Office even lost one of the procedural rulings the Court made in my case. Maybe the clerks only use circular files, but that Office is renowned for sloth among the employees of the Second Circuit who don’t work for the Clerk. Something told me that had the Clerk been a man rather than a female, then whatever happened to my original papers or the ruling would not have.

The delays from the Clerk’s screw-ups, however, fitted into my plans, and definitely didn’t interfere with my weekend clubbing. From January into May 2005, I worked on the second draft of this story, which I finished on May 19, 2005. Five years earlier to the day, the Commie Ho headed to Italy for her prostitution fling with the fat Mexican Alfredo. Time for these ironic coincidences to end.

Goin Uptown

With Memorial Day approaching, I remembered something I had forgotten to do. A few years earlier, Svetlana, my Krasnodar dyed-blond lawyer, had obtained sworn affidavits from three people in Krasnodar who described the Commie Ho's local prostitution business. My intention was to send them to the INS at the Moscow Embassy, but my short-term memory wasn't too good this millennium—neither was my luck, either in this or the prior millennium. I contacted the Embassy directly and even used a backdoor channel to see whether the INS was interested—they weren't.

The ex-wife was still hoing around New York pretending to be a model, which was easy to tell by simply searching “Angelina Shipilina” on the Internet. In one search, up popped the slut's latest scam. At www.brideus.com, she claimed she was 23 and a bride to be, which allowed her to compete for a $10,000 prize. A real life Gretchen right out of Goethe's Faust, “It's gold that counts, money that matters.”

Her age was a lie, since she was 28, but what about marrying again? Her marriage to me was simply to get a permanent green card so she could ho in the most lucrative market on the planet for hoing—America. Under the VAWA waiver, she was pretty much assured a green card by claiming I abused the “innocent” slut, since the INS VAWA Unit in Vermont, which makes those decisions, was run and trained by Feminazis and the law written by the Feminazis prevented the Unit from relying solely on information provided by me.

So why the marriage? It couldn't be for love, she loved only herself, so it had to be for money, but was it because the groom was rich or she wanted to make sure she would stay in America hoing? There was no way for me to find out who the groom was, since marriage records are kept confidential in New York. And, there was no way to find out what the VAWA Unit was doing or not doing because I was the former husband and the one accused of “battery,” “extreme cruelty” or an “overall pattern of violence.”

During the Memorial Day weekend, Mark called and said he and Ron, one of the black belts who trained with Mark and who cracked my ribs now and then in class, were going to a cookout uptown.

“Free food! I’m in. What should I bring?”

“Just something to drink,” Mark said.

“So how do I get there?”

Ron gave me subway instructions and the street address that was between Eight and Seventh Avenue. Hopping an IND train going north, I exited by Morningside Park and walked east. Found a bodega, bought some Smirnoff Ice and continued walking east looking for Eighth Avenue. My memory told me Eighth Ave was closer to the park, but it had been decades since I last spent any time uptown.

Back in those days, I was working undercover on a couple of stories for WNEW TV News. One was about how Percy Sutton, then the Manhattan Borough President, and his buddies were using their political clout to land State contracts for the development of the State Office Building on 125th Street along with renovating some properties they discreetly owned. Naturally, none of these guys had any construction or urban development experience, and their front company that applied for the State contracts was nothing but a shell. The story delayed for a few years their scheme, but they eventually got what they wanted.

The other story had me driving around uptown and the south Bronx carrying a wire and posing as a salesman for a medical laboratory. Medicaid and methadone clinic managers were extorting cash kickbacks from medical laboratories, which did the testing required under State law on the clinics' customers. The laboratories then passed the increased cost of doing business, the bribes, along to the State—read taxpayers. We caught a couple of clinic managers on audiotape demanding kickbacks and some ineffective reforms were made. All in all, this do-gooder stuff is just a waste of time—it never lasts, knocks off a couple of crooks but has little systemic effect.

My search for the cookout continued east looking for Eight Avenue, where was Davy Crockett when I needed him. It must be around her somewhere, I kept thinking. One street sign read, "Frederick Douglas Blvd." Okay, I knew who he was but didn't remember any avenue named after him. Next block was "Adam Clayton Powell Blvd." Which one, I asked myself: Junior or the III. The III had helped with the story on Sutton thanks to an introduction by State Senator Sidney von Luther for whom I had once worked and who had come up with the tips on both the State Office Building and Medicaid stories. Junior of course was the former Congressman who spent much of his time on the island of Bimini. It was a nice day, so I kept walking east looking at the large brownstones and enjoying the quiet, very peaceful up here. A man sitting on a stoop could see I was lost and asked me where I was going.

"Between Eighth and Seventh avenues," I answered.

"They're not called that anymore. They changed the names years back."

"Good grief! So what are they now?"

"Seventh is that one you just crossed, and Eighth the next one toward the park."

“Thanks,” and I headed in that direction. Just then Ron called me on my mobile to tell me he was standing outside the address. I spotted him right away.

The cookout was in the backyard of a spacious, nicely decorated brownstone. I hadn’t seen such a classy interior since I crashed a party at Senator Kennedy’s suburban Washington, D.C. home marking the end of his 1980 run for the Presidency. Okay, it wasn’t exactly a crash. One of Kennedy’s campaign press aids invited me, but they still got upset about having a guy working for the media in their mist—too bad, I wasn’t leaving. Instead, I headed over to the only hot looking chick in the place with the obvious line given the cast on her leg. “So what happened?” Her reply didn’t register as I gazed at the bare part of her thigh just above the cast—yummy. Can’t recall whether I signed the leg or not but tend to think I did just to get a closer view of that young thigh. In later years, she became the divorced wife of a governor of California. Something about him playing around with a maid.

The cookout had two tables, and Ron introduced me to everybody. At one table were his long-time buddies going back fifteen or more years to high school and Mark, and at the other were the parents of one of Ron’s friends, they owned the brownstone, and two others from my generation but all beyond my age of emotional maturity. Most of the time, I sat with Ron and his buddies and proceeded to laugh for the next two to three hours straight. These guys worked like multiple tag teams of comedy while lounging around one of those patio tables with the big umbrella, with coolers of beer, mainly Corona, and now some Smirnoff Ice, strategically planted, so no one had to move unless they wanted food off the grill. They told stories about their passed adventures, ad-libbed and played jokes on each other. I laughed and laughed and once in a while contributed some humor. The best summer holiday of any I ever had. These guys would be great to get into trouble with and the adults from my era to get us out.

Hot Fun in the Summertime

The Second Circuit's Civil Appeals Management Office scheduled a Pre-Argument Conference for the summer solstice, June 21, 2005. When I arrived, I was surprised to see most of the opposing attorneys, who always showed at the last minute, already present and engaged in conversation that suddenly ceased as soon as I entered the room. Probably planning some deviousness.

We met with a staff counsel for the Court, an arrogant androgyny. What do you expect for a federal bureaucracy? They aren't allowed to higher men.

"Is everyone here?" the staff counsel asked.

"Counsel for the Bank of Cyprus is missing," answered one of the defense attorneys.

That surprised me because next to Mundy's lawyers, Claugus was the most vitriolic and dissembling of all the defense attorneys, as though he took the litigation personal.

The staff counsel remarked, "We're not going to wait, so one of you apprise him of what went on." The staff counsel then started with a question that had been bothering me for a while. When Castel made his decision, there were over 50 defendants in the case but only 13, including the two Vasilyevas, had made any type of request to throw my case out. All the others just ignored it.

"There's a possible ambiguity in the District Court's decision," he said. "The decision doesn't say whether the case is dismissed in its entirety with respect to all the defendants or just those who moved for dismissal. That's probably because Judge Castel just came on the bench. What can we expect from new judges?"

That and worst I wanted to say, but instead chimed in that the decision apparently left open whether Castel did dismiss the case against all the defendants.

“ I’d like the plaintiff to send a letter to Judge Castel seeking clarification as to whether he meant to dismiss the case for all the defendants or not. And copy the letter and Judge Castel’s response to me and all the attorneys in this case.”

“Okay,” I replied, and made a request about the Joint Appendix.

The Second Circuit requires that only one appendix, called the Joint Appendix, accompany the briefs for both sides, and it should contain only relevant documents needed for the panel of three judges to reach a decision. On the appeal of a district court dismissal, as in my case, the Joint Appendix would include the Complaint, Supplemental Complaint, any opinions or orders issued by the District Court, a few procedural papers and other documents agreed to by both sides. The Court’s rules prohibited including memoranda of law filed in the District Court unless staff counsel and the parties agree.

The Second Circuit receives all the documents filed in the district court but doesn’t want its judges wasting their time thumbing through the entire record to understand the case. If a judge wants a document not in the Joint Appendix, he can pull it from the entire file. The plaintiff has to pay for the Joint Appendix, but when the defendants try to balloon its cost by stuffing the appendix with irrelevant documents, such as the hundreds of pages of exhibits the defendants filed in my case, the plaintiff, unless ordered by the Court, can refuse to pay. The defendants then have to pick up the added cost of including unnecessary documents in the Joint Appendix. This keeps the opponents of the person appealing from making the appeal so expensive that the appellant gives up.

My request was to reproduce a handful of paragraphs from my law memorandum to show the Second Circuit that I had actually made certain statements and requests to the District Court. The staff counsel and the opposing attorneys agreed given the small amount of material involved. Then it was the defense attorneys turn to bring up their requests for inclusions in the Joint Appendix that they had sent me just a week before the conference. Nothing, only silence, and my sensors went to red alert. Their silence made no sense. They had requested to include over 190 pages of extraneous documents, including 54 pages that had been thrown out by the District Court as irrelevant. Something was up.

“Have there been any settlement discussions?” the staff counsel asked.

“No,” I replied and motioned to my opponents. One of them said no, and the staff counsel quickly realized there would be none. He then said, “Over turning a district court dismissal is a difficult task.”

What’s that suppose to mean, I thought. Should I give up right now—never!

We touched on the issues I intended to raise and worked out the briefing schedule with my brief due August 11th and the defendants’ papers in September unless they wanted an extra month, which they ultimately did.

Later that day, I sent the requested letter to Judge Castel:

“Dear Judge Castel:

An issue has arisen in the Second Circuit concerning your dismissal with prejudice of this case. Your Memorandum and Order of September 28, 2004 does not make clear whether the action was dismissed for only the defendants who moved under Rule 12(b)(6) or was also dismissed for the defendants who did not make a 12(b)(6) motion or did not appear.

Would you please clarify the extent of your dismissal now that the issue of finality has been raised in the Second Circuit and the case is currently scheduled for briefing?”

The letter also reminded the Judge of my request from the previous year for reimbursement from the defendants for the costs of paying a process server to formally serve the Complaint by hand because they had refused to accept it by mail. Castel responded somewhat indignantly and unhelpfully, “Page 2 of the Memorandum and Order of September 28, 2004 makes plain that ‘... plaintiff’s Complaint is dismissed with prejudice.’” Dismissed with prejudice means I don’t get a chance to amend my Complaint and try again. It has nothing to do with whether the case is dismissed with respect to all the defendants, including those who did not move for dismissal. The staff counsel was right about the problems with new judges. While the words told me nothing, the level of his indignation said get lost and don’t bother me about this anymore. As for my request for costs in using a process server, it was put off until after the Second Circuit made its decision because of a legal technicality.

Most of the summer, I spent in the law library working on my brief that repeated most of my criticisms of Castel’s decision. One new argument about proximate cause was added, which came from an opinion by Justice Clarence Thomas. The Second Circuit would never understand it, but the Supreme Court would, if I got there. Also included was an estimate of the Commie Ho’s tax-free earnings since coming to America, over $750 grand in six years, to bring home the motivation behind the Russian mob’s RICO violations for scheming to transplant Russian sluts to the U.S., and I called Judge Castel a liar one and a half times:

“The District Court lied when it stated, “Plaintiff made no request to file an amended Complaint in the event the motions to dismiss were granted,” Order 16-2. Plaintiff’s Memorandum in Opposition p. 41-2, states, “If this Court dismisses the Complaint or part of it under Rule 12(b)(6), then the plaintiff requests leave to amend.” Plaintiff also made similar requests with respect to specific issues throughout his Memorandum in Opposition pp. 49-1, 70-2, 76-2, 119-3.”

That’s one time.

“The District Court claims RICO violations occurring before August 2000 “are not alleged to have caused plaintiff injury,” Order at 11-2, 12-1, but the Court lies (perhaps unknowingly).”

That’s one-half time.

Malicious no, accurate yes, but why do it, since the defense attorneys will jump all over me for it. They’ll self-righteously rant how dare I call a member of the justice system a liar, and then go about doing their mercenary best to pervert that system and prevent justice with their own falsehoods. The reason was to see whether the Second Circuit bothered reading my brief with the diligence that most Americans believe judges use. If the judges read those statements with any amount of awareness, it will cause them to lambaste me during oral argument. If they don't, they wouldn't.

My entire brief boiled down to this: "Where defendants fraudulently induce a plaintiff to take actions and make expenditures, the financial injury is compensable under civil RICO. Standardbred Owners Ass'n v. Roosevelt Raceway, 985 F.2d 102, 104-05 (2nd Cir. 1993)."

Before filing my brief in August, a problem came up with the Clerk's Office—naturally. Back in February, when the case was still in the "Pro Se" section, the Clerk had made some mistakes in listing all the plaintiffs and defendants, so I submitted the corrections as required by the Court's rules. The list of all the plaintiffs and defendants, known as the "full caption," is required on the cover of certain documents, such as the briefs, or the Court wouldn't accept them. A week before filing my brief, the Clerk's Office had still not made the corrections, so I needed to get the Clerk's Office to do its job.

My case was now in the "Counseled" cases section after its transfer from "Pro Se." The employee assigned as gatekeeper and who entered papers on the Court's docket in my case was Shatisa Gibbs, young, cute, and I might have pursued her had I met her at a club.

In a telephone call, I told Gibbs that the full caption had not been corrected.

"It's not our section's responsibility to correct the caption. Pro Se should have done that before they transferred the case."

The old bureaucratic buck-passing routine, but I was cool.

"So does it go back to Pro Se for them to do now what they should have but never did?"

“No, I’ll correct it.”

“Thanks,” I said and dropped off the revised caption. She was good to her word for which I sent her a “Thank You” card after filing my brief.

A couple of weeks later, Mark had a birthday party at the Amsterdam Café across from Columbia University. At the party, I met this bond trader, an arrogant thirty-something Asian guy straight out of The Bonfire of the Vanities. Such yuppies don’t bother me, since I was one once, working at the law firm mentioned in Thomas Wolfe’s critique on the presumptuousness of greed in the 1980s. Such hubris still strutted the avenues and bars of Manhattan twenty-years later. After drinking a few rounds of shots, the bond trader suggested hitting a bar in the meat packing district—the then and still current trendy scene for feeling superior to others where inflated egos prowl for recognition in a part of town known for death, stench and now, the flies of Argos. We jumped into a cab and exited on 14th Street by the docks in front of the Gaslight Bar. The place was packed with yuppies, conceit and hos, but would we find Ingrid Bergman inside? No, although I spotted a couple of black chicks at the bar, good looking and tall, at least compared to the bond trader.

Going up to the black chick standing, the other was sitting on a barstool, I said something inconsequential—can never remember my opening lines, and added, “My buddy’s a rich bond trader.” So I’m obnoxious, so what, and I was grinning because I knew what her reaction would be.

“Is he buying drinks?” she asked shifting her body closer to me with intense attention.

“Always!” I replied.

She pushed in right next to him at the crowded bar and turned on her brights. He was a goner. My attention shifted to the other chick sitting on the stool, but she was too drunk to articulate a complete sentence. Instead, she started the physical pawing interspersed with feeble female slaps to my chest, bemoaning in broken phrases the misery of her existence for which, as do all broads, she blamed the nearest man, which was me at that point in time. I'd seen this feminine self-pity all too often before and wasn't buying. It was her life, not mine. To get rid of her, I suggested she take a cab home to which she surprisingly agreed. Usually, they refuse and want to argue. Maybe she thought I was paying her fare home—fat chance! I helped her outside. The Boy Scout is tough to die, but soon there will be no more of them thanks to the Feminazis. At the curb, she decided to take a seat. No, I wasn't joining her. The last time I sat on a curb listening to some stupid broad so that I could get into her pants was back in my hippie days. Since then, I had grown up, and there were plenty of girls back in the bar that I wanted to hustle. Finally, she got up, with a little help from the Boy Scout left in me. I hailed a cab, opened the door, she poured herself in, told me where she lived, I told the cabbie and closed the door—goodbye problem.

Back inside, I hit on some white chick or maybe Latina, but she wasn't so drunk she couldn't talk, got her email, and then the bond trader came up to me all excited about the chick he'd been buying drinks for.

“Roy, she keeps grabbing me, she keeps grabbing me! Where do you know her from?” He mistakenly thought the black chick was a longtime acquaintance of mine whom I sent over to show him a good time. Sure I did send her over, but had never seen her before I walked into that bar.

Laughing to myself, I said, “Good, she must like you (meaning his money) get her number.”

He went back, played around with her for a while and then we left. All this yuppie bond trader could talk about as we crossed the street for a bite to eat was how this chick kept fondling him. For him and most other egotistical yuppies, such occurrences are big-time, which only illustrates the phoniness of their conceit.

He then says to me, “I run with a fast crowd, if you want to hang out call me,” and gives me his business card. Stifling a laugh, I thought if his crowd is as fast as him, I don’t think I could walk that slowly. Never saw him again after that night.

After Labor Day, Mark and I met one Friday night at the bar Cancun. A name that once elicited visions of the Commie Ho sexually entertaining her customers in the resort town of Mexico, but now only reminded me of the dizzy blonde, Kelsey, whom I had met in the Cincinnati airport in 2003 when returning home from my encounter with the Midwestern G-Men. Today, the “G” means “Girlie,” since these government agents not only take sensitivity training sessions so as to act more like girls than men but also carry out the bidding of Feminazis to violate the rights of men. No wonder the F.B.I. can’t stop terrorists when they know they’re coming, however, these G-Men always get their paid vacations, early retirements with inflated pensions and parking spaces.

My pal Alan ran into a G-Man, or more accurately G-Shemale, who kept parking her car in a “No Standing At Anytime” zone on his street in the Upper Westside of Manhattan. The reason for the “No Standing” zone was so that fire engines could turn the corner on the narrow street to get to a possible fire in time. Did this Federal Bimbo of Indolence care—no. Alan told her one day that she shouldn’t park there. She just flashed her badge, which in her twisted thinking gave her the right to endanger citizens because the “No Standing” zone provided her a convenient parking place. Broads have always thought they were princesses, better than everyone else and not subject to the rules of law or civilized behavior, but now that the Feminazis have stolen positions of authority, females are creating dangers for those they are suppose to serve, which is an oxymoron, since broads only serve themselves.

Walking into Cancun, I looked around on the odd chance that I might spot Kelsey. She had said she often hung out there, but all the times I was there, she wasn't. By now she was probably married and intensely unhappy.

"So who are these babes we're meeting hear?" I asked Mark.

"One is a girl I've know since school days and the other is her friend—both Latina and both married."

We laughed.

I said, "Likely told their husbands they were just going out with one of their girl friends."

"Don't girls always?"

"Absolutely, and then rationalize their cheating. Demons of self-justification made of snakes, tales and everything fake."

"Easy, we're here to have fun."

"I know, just trying out a new attack line that's a take off on sugar and spice."

Both of the girls were in their early thirties, a little old for me, but every time I turned around another drink appeared. Couldn't figure out where the drinks were coming from because I had not brought that much money and neither had Mark. We left Cancun, bounced in and quickly out of a typical boring yuppie New York City bar, and landed at Iguana, a restaurant with a dance floor in the basement. Downstairs, I couldn't see a thing. Didn't this club pay its electric bills? They could have at least provided infrared goggles for spotting the warm bodies. No matter, we had two hot Latinas with us and an evening of fun. Dancing, drinking and fondling a girl's body in the dark are second nature for a man. His first is individual liberty; for without it, he serves others rather than his destiny.

Just One Look

On October 13th, I received the defendants' opposition briefs. It wasn't a Friday, but did the number bode ill for me? By this stage of the Furies curse on my life, I didn't care.

Schopenhauer philosophized that every man could see a theme running through his life when looking back from near its end, I finally saw mine: I try to fight everyone who violates my rights; I don't often win, in fact I usually lose, but I still fight, and wasn't about to change now, no matter what the Matrix was telling me. November 9th was the deadline to file my reply.

One quick read of the defendants' briefs showed that the defense lawyers—Dubin for Mundy, Rudofsky for Flash Dancers and Sachs for the Ho—were up to their same old trick of character assassination, or what the legal profession, the second oldest, refers to as *ad hominem*s.

Blacks' Law Dictionary defines ad hominem as “appealing to personal prejudices rather than to reason; attacking an opponent's character rather than his assertions.” Sounded familiar; it's the crux of virtually all attacks by the Feminazis, their sycophants and mercenary lawyers. Dubin and Rudofsky also added a few new cheats that along with the *ad hominem*s violated the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, the Second Circuit's Local Rules or both. Detective Henning's lawyers from the City avoided the name-calling but joined in the other procedural breaches. So I made a motion to require these four lawyers to redo their briefs without the parts that violated the rules.

Dubin, true to form, resorted to personal attacks the most. If this were the age of Aaron Burr, he wouldn't have lived this long. The Second Circuit's Local Rule § 28 requires that briefs must be free from scandalous matter, which includes personal attacks on opponents. Dubin's brief of *ad hominem*s called me delusional, an extortionist, a harasser of the Ho and Mundy, a liar, an intimidator, unethical, lacking in common decency, abusive and vexatious.

Dubin packed most of his name-calling into the “Statement of the Case” section of his brief. Under the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, which governs all the U.S. Courts of Appeals, a brief is required to contain certain sections that do specific things. The “Statement of the Case” part is supposed to tell the Appeals Court the type of case, the result in the District Court and any procedural history, such as motions that were made. Dubin, however, used that section to replay his strategy of character assassination by personally maligning me with lies and false innuendos in an attempt to shut down the argument and marginalize me so as to avoid a decision on the merits. In doing that he violated Fed. R. App. P. § 28(a)(6). Dubin defended his conduct with the rationale that if the “Statement of the Case” contained the elements required by the rules, it could also be packed with vitriolic vituperative assaults on the opposing party. Under Dubin’s Russian type logic, because the rule commands, “thou shall” rather than “thou shall not,” he could include anything he wanted. Even former President Clinton would likely construe the rule that way.

Flash Dancers’ Rudofsky basically characterized me as delusion while the Commie Ho’s lawyer Sachs submitted a two page brief with only one derogatory clause: “the flights of fancy in Hollander’s pleadings, the florid and offensive language in his brief, and the continuous vilification of Shipilina.” Clearly the Ho didn’t want to pay him any more money or sexual favors to spend the time drawing up a longer brief with a lengthier litany of opprobrious remarks.

Dubin also brewed into another section of his brief under the misnomer “Facts” the same false or half-truth counterclaims and allegations he made in the District Court that were irrelevant there as they are on appeal. The Second Circuit and the District Court during the first stage of any case are required to consider only the plaintiff's pleadings, my Complaint and Supplemental Complaint, as true, not the defendants' opinions nor their self-serving protestations or duplicitous counterclaims and allegations. Dubin included lots of irrelevant material for two reasons: one, the chance that it would sway the Second Circuit to uphold Castel's decision—after all, it worked in obtaining a dismissal in the District Court, and two, to trick me into using up the limited space in my reply brief to counter his disinformation, which would distract the judges from the legal issues as did Dubin's opposition brief.

Flash Dancers' brief also threw in lots of irrelevant and disingenuous material to spin reality. For example, their attorney Rudofsky actually referred to stripping as “performing” or “dancing” and claimed Flash Dancers, that highly profitable bazaar of naked bodies, a law-abiding and squeaky-clean operation. Filth was more like it. Not that I have anything against dirty girls, such sluts can be fun, but don't try to convince me that they and they're pimps are doing heaven's work.

Rudofsky used audacity to defend his violation of the rules: He criticized me for making the motion to delete parts of his brief, even though that's one of the purposes motions serve in the Second Circuit. Rudofsky argued the issues raised by my motion should have been addressed in my reply brief, which only confirmed the defense's strategy to trick me into loading up my reply brief with the distractions of their procedural violations.

Dubin and Rudofsky even resorted to a real sophomoric tactic in their briefs by citing to a total of 17 cases without including the specific page in the case to pinpoint the support for the position they claimed. This didn't violate any court rules, but it did breach the system of referring to cases that lawyers everywhere in every court in the U.S. use. Why'd they do it? To get away with lying about what the law says. They knew the Second Circuit was not going to track down the exact page, so the clerk reading their briefs filled with *ad hominem*s might think, gee whiz these defense attorneys must be right about the law because this plaintiff isn't politically correct.

But of all the tactics that Dubin, Rudofsky and the City's attorneys for Detective Henning used to exploit bureaucratic sloth, the most glaring violation of the rules, and the one that my intuition sent me to red alert during the Pre-Argument Conference, was their citing to documents not in the Joint Appendix. Fed. R. App. P. § 30(a) & (b), Local Rule § 11(e) and the Second Circuit's on-line instructions for appeals require all parties to reproduce in a joint appendix documents to which they wish to direct the Court's attention. That means if a party cites to a document as supporting a statement made in his brief, the party must include the document in the joint appendix. Dubin, Rudofsky and the City didn't do that because they wanted the Second Circuit to believe their lies, which was more likely if they made it time consuming and inconvenient for the judges and clerks to dig up the documents from the record because then the judges and clerks probably wouldn't bother. The three attorneys even failed to include the specific page in a document that they claimed supported their statements in order to make it even more unlikely that the Court would check their veracity. My motion called them on their violations of the rules to which they responded in truly Orwellian fashion.

Every joint appendix must contain a copy of the district court's docket sheet, which is just a list of all the legal filings. Dubin actually argued that because the docket sheet in the Joint Appendix listed the legal filings that contained the documents he cited in his brief, those documents were really in the Joint Appendix. That's the same as saying all the people listed in the Manhattan telephone book are really in that book. Would the Second Circuit Court of Appeals actually buy that? Dubin ended up referring 25 times, usually without giving a specific page, to 35 documents, totaling over 380 pages not in the Joint Appendix. Some of the documents had even been originally thrown out of the case by the District Court. Dubin also tried to justify his end-run around the Joint Appendix by accusing me of a “frivolous attempt to shield this Court from reviewing the full record.” Lawyers, like scoundrels and broads, always attack those who expose their underhanded conduct.

Rudofsky took the Russian approach to justify his using documents outside the Joint Appendix—he lied. Rudofsky claimed that I “wrongly declined” to include in the Joint Appendix “26 documents” that he and Mundy’s lawyers’ had requested. To support this lie, he used as an exhibit only the first of four letters detailing the negotiations over the Joint Appendix, which was sent before the Pre-Argument Conference in June. That letter from Mundy’s attorneys and Rudofsky actually requested 54 separate documents—not 26 as Rudofsky claimed.

At the Pre-Argument Conference, when the defense lawyers kept unusually silent about the documents they wanted in the appendix, I realized I would have to create a record to keep them from pulling a fast one. After the Conference, I sent a letter asking whether they had finalized the documents they wanted, but they never answered that question, hoping I’d let it ride so that later they could claim I never denied their request for so many documents. To head them off at the pass, I sent another letter telling them I wasn’t going to include the unnecessary documents they wanted. Under Fed. R. App. P. § 30(b)(2), they could still have those documents included in the Joint Appendix, but they would have to pay for them. They didn’t and once again failed to respond, but it didn’t matter, since I now had a record of my refusing their request.

Rudofsky also excused the defense's use of documents not in the Joint Appendix by saying Fed. R. App. P. §30(a)(2) states: "Parts of the record may be relied on by the court or the parties even though not included in the appendix." True, but the purpose of that rule is to allow the Court leeway to check the full record if it thinks it's necessary. The rule does not give Dubin and Rudofsky an excuse to ignore their obligations under the Court's procedures or to load up the Court with hundreds of pages of irrelevant documents in order to prevent it from taking the time to expose their lies and prevarications.

The defense attorneys disinformation that they falsely claimed was supported by hundreds of pages of extraneous documents to which they made no specific page cites, their failure to cite to the exact page of some legal cases and the character assassination all played together to exploit bureaucratic sloth. Think about how these guys would have operated in The Third Reich or the Soviet Union. First they'd label me as an enemy of "right-thinking" people in those particular societies—Nazis or Commies. Then they'd throw in a mass of documents and cases to which they fail to give specific page cites knowing that the bureaucrats are too lazy to go through all the material to confirm or contradict their statements. The bureaucrats in those societies, ever obedient to their prime directive to avoid work, would consciously or subconsciously rationalize that since I didn't conform to Nazi or Commie conventions and ideology, the defense attorneys were right about what all the documents and cases said. The bureaucrats rule in the defendants' favor and off I go to a concentration camp. In feminarchy America, it's off I go to the poorhouse and social ostracism—no gulag, yet.

Dubin, Rudofsky, the City and Sachs tried to game the system by picking which rules they would follow and which ones they would ignore, it not only wasted everybody's time, but if successful, would make suspect the system of justice in the Second Circuit.

The return date of my motion was set at November 8th, which meant that by the following Monday, the 14th, the Court should make its decision on whether to require those attorneys to delete the material that violated the rules.

During the back and forth of papers on my motion, the defendants even tried to finesse the Second Circuit into denying me oral argument. Dubin's boss sent a letter to the Court that "In light of the extensive record before this Court, the number of parties that would have to appear and the amount of time having been devoted to defend the plaintiff's claims, it is respectfully submitted that a further appearance before this Court is unnecessary." That I didn't expect and couldn't figure out why they were bothering. If the defendants didn't want their attorneys to put in the time necessary to prepare for an oral argument, they could simply waive it and save the lawyers' fees. But to try to have the Court deny oral argument for me wouldn't happen. The rules allow any three-judge panel to dispense with all oral arguments in certain specific situations, none of which applied here. Also, the Second Circuit generally follows the principle of allowing oral argument for any party that wants it. So why bother with the request to keep me from making an oral argument? Perhaps they just wanted to increase the pressure by eating up my time in opposing their request, since during this period, in addition to making the motion to delete parts of their briefs, I was also working on my reply brief.

As busy as I was in October and early November 2005, I still went clubbing at least one night on the weekend to keep my sanity in this insane society of political correctionalism. One of the guys in my salsa class, a member of the Freemasons, started managing Club Havana in the Bronx. He and his wife, also a salsa student, invited the class to the Club for a fundraiser to help the victims of Hurricane Katrina and its accomplices the Three Stooges: Larry - Governor Blanco; Moe - President Bush; and Curly - Mayor Nagin. Sounded fine to me, not because of the do-gooder purpose, but because there would be lots of south of the border chicks.

My new salsa instructor called me Saturday night to say he and some of his students were driving to Club Havana from the upper Westside of Manhattan. Since I lived on the eastside further down, it made sense for me to meet them at the Club, and for some reason, I was looking forward to a lonely, solitary ride on the Number 6 train to the northern reaches of the Bronx. The subway took about an hour, nice and peaceful with few passengers. At my stop, while walking down the stairs from the elevated station to the street, the place became vaguely familiar. Stopping to look around for a clue as to why, the memory from my unconsciousness nagged my waking mind until the answer surfaced.

Over three decades earlier when I worked in the libraries at Columbia University, I dated a co-worker who prior to our playing around used to spit in anger every time she passed a white guy, which made me think she must have run out of saliva frequently. She was also about to join Farrakhan's Nation of Islam, which sounded cool to me. I always liked watching Farrakhan's speeches on cable television. This guy had guts and honor, unlike so many others of various hues in America who were nothing more than pimps and sellouts. Maybe she would become one of those hot chicks dressed in white that guarded Farrakhan during his speeches, but for the time being, this good-looking babe in her Afro was with me. My hair was relatively long then, so I often freaked her out by running her hand through it, which had an alien texture to her. When we started going out together, even riding the bus in Manhattan—not Mississippi in the 1870s, but New York City in the 1970s—it put us through an evil eye gauntlet from all the bigots. It didn't matter the neighborhood, both ends of the color spectrum and everyone in the middle dissed us. So we spent time by ourselves at her place in the Bronx.

During our short romance, I helped instigate and lead a workers' strike against Columbia University. During contract negotiations, our union, Local 1199, had cut a secret deal with Columbia in which the union bosses agreed to keep wages low and prevent a strike in return for Columbia investing in the union's pension fund. When we learned about the conspiracy, we struck, took over a building in the tradition of 1968, and won, a little bit. Columbia's President "Dollar" Bill McGill seethed with anger over our temerity and the hit to his budget while the union maneuvered with my boss in the library to terminate my employment. So what, I thought the strike a small victory for justice and felt good about my part in it, but my co-worker girlfriend said I acted like a fool by making speeches and leading demonstrations against Columbia. So much for the male illusion of impressing girls with victories over injustice and arrogance.

My co-worker was first and foremost a female, and all females want a man to serve them, to sacrifice doing what is important for him in order to provide an environment in which he abides by their lunatic rules that change with the erratic bubbling of those runaway chemical reactions in their bodies. Money is the key, which is why girls are so cheap unless a guy is paying. For guys, money is great too, but sometimes a guy gets pretty sore and money doesn't matter anymore. Back then, I was sore at Columbia and the union for violating people's rights, as I was at the RICO defendants in this new millennium when I walked out of that subway station. Now, however, I was wiser, knew girls had nothing of value to say to me other than "yes" or "no," and that since 1750, when the world's population reached one billion, the only value girls had was partying.

Today, the Feminazi media and female pandering politicians always shout about pollution, global warming, depletion of resources, illegal immigration, war and the violation of civil rights—but these are just symptoms. The root-cause is overpopulation—too many broads having too many babies. Females should choose to exercise some control over their bodies for the good of future populations, but that will never happen because most broads only care about themselves, which means having children, not creating a valuable life, but to acquire another asset. To most girls, kids are just capital that can be cashed in when the mothers are running low on the funds they bamboozled, or more accurately bam-boob-zled, from men, or when these sanctimonious moms need another sucker because the members of the “fairer sex” finally put their husbands in the grave. Men don’t live as long as females because over the passed hundred years medical resources have concentrated on extending the lives of broads, so when a girl’s main sucker is dead, there’s no better economic substitute than children, who are often easier to manipulate.

Some guys do want children, but usually it’s the girl talking the guy into it. He goes along for her sake not realizing the burden of providing and protecting will fall the hardest on him. Sure, the Feminazis will argue that’s why they want men’s jobs: to help support the family. If that were true, then why do these ardent Feminazis, once they’re married to a successful guy, want to leave work in order to raise the children? The key reason Feminazis want a man’s job is to increase their chances of meeting a guy with money. Why do you think all these hos go to business, law and medical schools—to find an up and coming prospect, or when in the work force, one that’s already made it. They use Feminazi propaganda and intimidation to gain admission to professional schools or land a job with a high paying company, where they can find a sucker, get knocked-up and leave the work force. Their scheme not only wastes the resources used to train them but also steals those resources from some man who would have used the acquired skills in a long and productive career. It’s the same old story of broads bam-boob-zling men out of money, which in feminarchy America also means jobs, and irresponsibly pushing to have children.

Even the evils caused by overpopulation are more exacerbated by girls than guys. For example, most of the stores on Fifth Avenue and lower Broadway cater to females because the average girl consumes more fashion goods than the average guy. For broads, fashion changes yearly with each season, so to dress themselves as fashionable sex objects requires girls to buy the latest in cloths, shoes, handbags and whatever. But next year, the latest is dated, so out it goes. The same repeats every year to which is added the tons of makeup washed down the drain at the end of every day. Girls end up causing not only more pollution but also a greater depletion of resources in order to keep themselves looking fashionable. Since a chief cause of war is when one country tries to steal another country's resources, females are major contributors in that deadliest of events for men. Looks like broads play a bigger role in the evils plaguing the earth then they let on.

Finished with my reminiscing, I turned north towards Club Havana. Eleven at night and the streets up here were full of small groups of people hanging out. Didn't they have some place to go? Club Havana was in the basement of a building and fairly large. Inside, I headed to the bar but was intercepted.

"Would you like a drink?" asked this delicious, young Latina babe holding a tray of shots.

"How much?"

"It's free! They're made of Absolut Vodka," she said with a Spanish accent.

Hmmm, my favorite kind of vodka and kind of girl. "Are you sure it's free?" I asked, never believing a girl gave away anything for nothing.

“Yes, it’s my job to give away these drinks.”

“Really?”

“Yes, believe me.”

I’ve heard that before, but said, “Okay.” I took a shot, rather good. She started to leave, not so fast I thought. “Here’s a tip.”

“You don’t have to do that.”

“Quid pro quo.” I always try to let these pretty young things know I’m a lawyer. To them it means Benjamin Franklin, as in currency. I added, “You have to make a living don’t you?”

“Yes, thank you.”

She left to ply her wares elsewhere. Looking around for members from my salsa class, I couldn’t find them, so I entertained myself by hitting on a couple of babes and then the Absolut girl was back with another drink. I imbibed and tipped some more.

“So where are you from?”

“I come from Columbia and here for six months with a relative.”

And off we embarked on a conversation. She was 22, lived in Queens and worked promoting Absolut Vodka in clubs, usually Wednesday through Saturday. What else she did for money, she didn’t say. I asked her to dance, but she said she couldn’t while working, and off she went on her rounds.

Trying to estimate how many offers she received each night of work and to annualize it, I gave up having left my calculator home. My mobile didn’t have one, at least I thought it didn’t, maybe it did, but I’d never know. The plethora of services from modern-day electronics short-circuits my memory. As long as my mobile rings, which it did just then, that’s all I need. Aki, a Japanese girl from my salsa class, called to say she and the others wouldn't make it to Club Havana because they decided to go to a Dominican club on 167th Street and Amsterdam Avenue that had strippers.

"I didn't know you liked female strippers Aki?"

"I don't," she emphatically said, "but they play great salsa there. The guys want to go, so I don't mind. I'll just dance."

As I hung up, the Absolut girl came back to offer me an Absolut t-shirt and a dance. I accepted both. Guess the tipping and lawyering worked.

Dancing salsa is not my strong point, and sometimes I end up with a girl who can dance but emphasizes different beats than what I'm familiar with. The Absolut girl could dance, but she moved on different beats, so the dance started badly. Then I remembered a trick my salsa instructor told me: whenever he had difficulty with a girl's style and liked her body, he just held her close—years ago it was called the grind. So I held her close barely feeling the thin dress between us and ground against her stomach and firm young thighs that wielded a truly dangerous power. Once again, I was on the ropes. Her face looked young and innocent, but her body told a different story. She knew how to use sex to get what she wanted. So do the Feminazis, but they use it as an accusation rather than a lure. But whether with the normal girl or Feminazis, for females, it's always about sex.

Two allegories will demonstrate the point:

A girl rips open her blouse, juts out her bare balloons and says to a guy, "You don't get to touch these unless you give me a car!"

Another girl rips open her blouse to show her naked breasts and says, “Talk dirty to me, touch me!” So the typical guy does, and then the girl says, “Give me a car or I’ll sue you for sexual harassment and offensive remarks.”

In the first case its solicitation, in the second extortion, but either way the broad gets the car because of T & A power.

After my dance with the Absolut girl, she handed me some words that were nice to listen to and gave me her telephone number. Watching her walk back to work, I thought that all the academic hubbub over the purpose of females wasn’t nuclear physics. Just look at what a girl’s body is built for. No sense using a car to sail the seas, a plane to drive the highways, a boat to fly the skies or a girl for anything but partying.

Later on, we flirted some more, and I caught the Number 6 local back to Manhattan at three in the morning. Early in the week, I called her, left a message, she called back and we set a date for the Copa. She ended up canceling, saying a job came up in a club in Westchester County. Maybe yes, maybe no, maybe rain, maybe snow. Perhaps, I should have tried one more time, but her work schedule just didn’t jive with mine. She wouldn’t be lonely, and a month later, I saw her at LQ with some Latin guy. Good for her, if he was rich.

I like You (A Lot)

In my Reply Brief to the defense attorneys’ opposition briefs, I mainly countered their legal arguments and interpretations rather than bogging down my Reply refuting their false allegations of fact for which they referred to the extraneous documents never included in the Joint Appendix. Their factual lies and deceptions didn’t go unchallenged; rather I relegated my exposure of their mendacity to a footnote at the end. Sure the facts weren’t relevant on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, but in case the Court wanted the truth, it was there in the footnote.

The defense attorneys again tried to rewrite my Complaint to support their legal arguments. They claimed my Complaint did not state that I had suffered injury to my business or financial interests but only personal harm, such as emotional distress. Under civil RICO, a plaintiff cannot recover for personal injuries including stress, broken legs or even death. The defense attorneys knew, but tried to hide, that the personal injuries stated in my Complaint resulted from the non-RICO causes of action that were also brought against the defendants. The defense was trying to deceive the Court by calling all the injuries personal, which they weren't and the Complaint didn't say they were. The defense lawyers also tried to use cases that didn't apply to my situation to argue the harm caused me was speculative. But their cases all concerned damages that might occur in the future. The harm to my business and financial interests had already happened.

On the proximate cause issue, the defense said I was not the specific target of any of the RICO acts nor did the defendants specifically intend any of the harm that befell me. Civil RICO does not require specifically intended targets or harm. If it did, there could be the absurd result that one could be liable under RICO for destroying a shop only if one aimed a bomb at it, but not if one aimed at the shop's key executives, missed and hit the shop by accident destroying it, or if one aimed at the key executives who happened to be in the shop at the time.

Besides, if I wasn't a target of the defendants' intended harm then who'd they trick into sponsoring and paying for the Commie Ho's fraudulently obtained immigration visa, who did they con into paying for her flight to America, who were they attempting to coerce into lying to the INS that included bringing a fraudulent restraining order against, whose witnesses did they intimidate into not providing information to the New York State court, who'd they cost thousands of dollars to defend against a false arrest and for whom did they increase the expenses of the RICO action by attempting to obstruct it? All that was aimed at me and intended to make justice too costly to pursue and thereby protect the defendants.

The defense attorneys even tried to cover up some of the dumber errors of the District Court. For example, Dubin claimed the District Court's Maginot Line irrelevant and even argued that my actions on and after August 2000 caused the injuries I suffered before that date. Guess he had been reading too much Lewis Carroll where cause and effect are reversed.

The defense attorneys also raised a few issues not addressed by the District Court and misstated the law, as usual, even when the Second Circuit and Supreme Court had explicitly rejected what they were contending. Dubin claimed RICO only applied to criminal associations that would continue to exist if all their criminal activities stopped. That's not the law in the Second Circuit, but even if it was, the Russian mafia controls legitimate businesses, so if it ceased all criminal activities, it would still exist. Rudofsky argued that all RICO allegations must include greater detail than normally required in a complaint even though the Supreme Court ruled that's true for only certain RICO crimes, such as mail and wire fraud.

What a way for attorneys to practice, ignore the cases and just make up whatever serves their interests of the moment. My Reply ended with "The modus operandi of the defense attorneys is clear: misrepresent the law and the allegations, add a good measure of demeaning, denigrating, defaming, demonizing and dissing the plaintiff, and presto, their opponent has no rights left that the government will recognize. It's worked so far."

The week after filing my Reply, I hit a club called Temple on 52nd Street between Broadway and Eighth Avenue. My salsa instructor was promoting the club, so I showed early enough to get in for free—a rare occurrence for a guy in New York City. Most clubs let girls in for free up to midnight—the witching hour—or 1 AM, but guys almost always have to pay.

Clearly a violation of the civil rights of men, and if I had the time and money, I'd bring a class action suit against the clubs that do it.

Girls naturally love the preferential treatment. They steal a guy's job, get into a club for free and then expect him to buy them drinks. Chicks make up over 50% of the labor force, and control well over 50% of the nation's wealth that they earned the hard way—they married it. In virtually every urban center in America, girls in their twenties, the only ones worth partying with, make more than guys in the same age group. So who's oppressed? Females claim they are, so affirmative action should apply to them. Not unless they were raised in a trailer park, and most of them weren't, although most of them act like they were.

Temple was near empty, 10:30 PM and only a few people, not uncommon for City clubs. A buddy from my salsa class and I hung around the bar hitting on the barmaid. Then my sensors turned me around to spy two young, hot looking, tall brunettes standing patiently together waiting for the party to begin. Coming up with a line, I moved in their direction. When I got within the range of my contact lens, I saw they were twins—all right! They responded, a little shy at first, but as we talked, I began to feel as the quarry rather than the hunter. Each of them took up a position at a 45 degree angle to my right and left, a "V" pattern, with me almost cornered. Okay, they can devour me; they were pretty and tall in their high heels. Both went to Columbia College, majored in chemistry, which reminded me of cooking, had turned twenty-one in September, the same month as my birthday, although I hadn't seen 21 for decades, and came from a town in the Catskills in upstate New York. A town I used to pass every summer as a kid and later as a teenager when heading to the family cabin in the mountains.

These two were a trip. They turned their high beams on in a coordinated assault on my senses. One picked up the conversation as the other left off, sometimes in mid-sentence, and they giggled like little girls simultaneously as though on cue. Was it possible that somehow their two minds were metaphysically one? A couple of my childhood buddies were twins, but they didn't have the synchronicity of these two. Did they read each other's mind or somehow live each other's life. I liked them immediately—a lot. Tried for their telephone numbers, but they weren't giving, so reluctantly they provided me their emails. Part of my hustle included talking up my salsa class about which they expressed interest when I mentioned there were usually more guys than girls. It was then I realized I knew these girls or, more accurately, girls like them. They were the girls I had chased all those summers in the Catskills. Girls who grew up in that part of New York had an openness about boys. I still remember this one ten year old girl from upstate answering when asked what she liked to do: “Chase boys!” Unlike Feminazis, the girls up there liked boys and refrained from blaming guys for all the vagaries of life.

We talked on and off during the evening, even danced once until they turned and walked away at exactly the same moment. Oh, well, I had gotten their email addresses, and had agreed to send them the information on my instructor's salsa class. Don't remember too much more of that evening, but a buddy from salsa mentioned I was making out with some tall black chick. To which I asked, “Was she good looking?” He said yes, and I believed him but couldn't find any number or email other than the Twins. My short term memory only recalled a black chick calling me her nemesis, but was she the one? At least it wasn't the blonde I danced with whose pheromones invited men to run their hands all over her. She was with two guys who looked like paying customers.

The Twins responded to my email about the salsa class and gave me one of their mobile numbers. They were in the middle of finals, so couldn't start the class until after the Christmas break, but finals didn't keep them from going clubbing on the weekends. One Saturday Mark, his younger brother, Chanan, and I met them at Deep after running into a familiar problem at the door of City nightclubs that girls don't. On the Internet, clubs sometimes advertise free or reduced admission for guys before some early hour such as 11 PM. The ads tell a guy to sign up for a "Guest List" or printout a pass from the club's website to take advantage of the bargain. The three of us showed at Deep at 10:45 PM, nearly the first in line, presented our passes for free admission before 11 PM and "Sorry, these are no longer good," the bouncer says.

Chanan wasn't buying this, "What do you mean? We just printed them off your website not an hour ago. Your policies changed since then?"

"Management has instructed me that these pass are no longer good. You'll have to pay $15."

"That's not fair," Chanan continued. How can you advertise one thing, and then switch it when people show up because of your advertisement."

The lawyer in me chimed in, "It's called bait and switch."

"Yeah," Chanan replied. "They trick you into coming all the way down here to their club and then change the deal. That's not right."

The bouncers were apologetic, since they were just following the manager's orders, but to go inside would cost us $15 each. We paid, because, I had arranged to meet the Twins inside, who, being girls, were able to enter through the back door for free. This bait and switch directed only at guys was a common tactic among the clubs. The China Club had pulled the same stunt on us earlier in the year. This wasn't going to happen again. When I go to a club now, I bring along a copy of the City's Consumer Affairs Department rules prohibiting false advertising. The Department licenses all these joints, and violation of the rules can result in suspension of their licenses.

Deep had two floors, lots of space and, as the night wore on, plenty of friendly chicks. We ran into the Twins and Mark and I started dancing with them. Chanan, a professional Hip-Hop dancer, started doing his thing by himself. He didn't need to ask girls to dance because when they saw him hip-hopping, a few always gathered around to watch, and one or two would start dancing, or rubbing their bodies against him, usually their derrieres against his crotch. Some of these club chicks sure liked dancing doggy-style. Time for me to learn that dance as delusions of being a babe magnet danced in my head. The Twins nicknamed Chanan "Dancer Man."

A couple of weeks later, Mark called. "I've been looking at your resume and thinking for the passed few days about a way for you to make some money out of the hell you've been going through for the last, what is it, six years?"

"Yeah, it's pretty close to six years. What's the idea?"

"Go public with a website. What you're always saying about the feminists and how they've twisted the system against men is what most men are thinking, but wouldn't say publicly for fear of losing their jobs or being sued. You can take what's happened to you and become a lightning rod for men against the feminists. With your resume, you have the credibility to do that."

The moment I heard Mark's idea, I knew I was going to do it. As Supreme Court Justice Brandeis observed, "sunlight is the most powerful of all disinfectants." The gears of the universe clicked together. By pulling open the curtains, I could expose the sophistry of Feminazism, which had enabled sluts like my ex-wife to commit crimes with impunity, and the Feminazis real desire to create a tyranny over men.

“So how would this work?” I asked, feeling the excitement of another battle on the horizon.

“You set up a website. Write articles for it and publish on the site the story about the Ho that you’ve been writing. You can even serialize the story to keep people coming back to see what happens next. Visitors to the site can make comments or start their own discussions about the articles or the story. It’s called an interactive website. You might even expand into providing legal advice to men on how to defend themselves against the feminists. And the way you make money, is to ask for donations. On the site would be a “Donate” button a viewer could click that would take him to PayPal for making a contribution.”

“This sounds good. I’m running out of money, and my attempts to find a book publisher went nowhere.”

“So publish it yourself. Go directly to the men on your side. There are guys all over the country who feel the way you do. You can be their voice and they’ll support you. Guys will be able to register for the website anonymously, if they want, say what they want and contribute.”

“Right, the men in America, especially the white guys, are too intimidated by the Feminazis to take back their rights. I can be their point man.”

“Exactly, but you’ll take a lot of heat for it.”

“Wouldn’t be any worse than what I’ve been going through, screw those Feminazis. If broads can’t love you, they might as well hate you.”

Over the next month, Mark and another of his brothers helped me refine the concept of the site and how viewers could participate. It took me another few months to set the site up, in part, because creating web pages weren’t up my alley. My old class action RICO site was replaced with the new anti-Feminazi assault but kept the same Internet address: www.been-scammed.com.

Girls! Girls! Girls!

In early December 2005, a guy in my salsa class told me about a Hip-Hop class he was taking at Broadway Dance Center. Never heard of the place, but here was my chance to try to learn Hip-Hop. The moment I walked into the Beginner's Hip-Hop class, I felt like a kid in a candy store. The room was packed with around 45 pretty young babes displaying various bare sections of their breasts, legs, stomachs and lower abdomens. Most of their pants or shorts were skin-tight around the ass through which showed the straps of their thongs for the ones who wore any undies. Of the five or six guys in the class, all were gay, except for my buddy and me, no competition here, and I was the only gray-haired Benjamin Franklin in the place. This was too good to be true as a grin swept over my face, but it got better.

The class lasted ninety minutes and was as tough a workout as martial arts only no cracked ribs. During the first half, our instructor Bev B, a hot looking black chick with a great smile, ran us through warm-up drills. One had us doing a body roll leaning back with arms stretched in front and then bending forward at the waist, arms behind with our faces looking straight ahead. I found myself gazing into the rear end of a young babe in tight pants that outlined the source of every young girl's power inches from my face. If I ever have a heart attack, I hope it happens in class during that exercise, so I can fall face first into some young babe's booty. Once in the middle of that drill, the voluptuous Latina in front of me stood up in surprise with her hand on one cheek as though someone had grabbed her rear—must have been my astral body.

After the warm-up, Bev taught us a routine by repeating the steps a few times and then moving on to new ones. As she built the routine, the class became hotter and hotter, the girls sweated more and more, parts of breasts and abdomens glistened, adrenalin and endorphins pumped through brains while the pheromones of these overheated pretty young things filled the air. These cold and distant candy bonbons began melting on their shelves. Hitting on one during a break, she smiled and replied with sweet sounding words. How could she not with all those drugs pumping in her brain and me one of only two heterosexual guys in the class. This was too easy for meeting chicks, although physically, I barely made it through the class. I thanked Bev, clearly one of those few teachers who cared about her students, and left the room to hit on some other hot-sweaty girl watching another class.

The classrooms at Broadway Dance Centre all had big windows on the inside that allowed other students outside the classrooms to watch a class. Students stood two and three deep around these windows or sat in chairs arranged for viewing. The reason for this escaped me, since most the guys there weren't hunting chicks. Maybe it was just the thing to do. Fine with me, since it made my hunt easier by congregating game in a small place—not unlike a watering hole on the African savannah. It also gave me lots of opening lines: “Oh, what class is this?” “Would you tell me what room number this is, I’m wearing my contacts and can’t read the number although I can see the girls?” That usually got a laugh. A variation on that theme, “Would you help me? I’m trying to find a number on my pre-millennium mobile but can’t read the names because I have my contacts in.” “So how do you tell what dance style this is? I haven’t been able to distinguish dances since law school.” That made them think I had money and often got a laugh. “Are you a professional dancer? No. You could have fooled me.” That one worked really well on the teenagers, since a lot of professional dancers went to Broadway

Dance and every teenybopper girl dreams of being discovered. Sometimes, however, I couldn't distinguish the teenyboppers from the twenty-somethings—a confusion that didn't bother me a bit. Anyway, the lines, like girls, were overflowing. As Elvis Presley once sang: “Girls, big and brassy, girls, small and sassy, just give me one of each kind, I'm just a red blooded boy.”

Nearly every Friday, I went to Hip-Hop, fairly often got a number, and after a while, girls whom I hadn't hit on would walk into class and give me a knowing smile that said they knew why I was there. Some months later, I learned that my instructor Bev B was famous in the dance world. She had danced with and choreographed Kool & The Gang, Janet Jackson and Salt & Pepa—very impressive. She also carried the title Reverend, which explained that tough Gospel Church like compassion she had for others. Maybe I should have met her twenty years ago. The human heart often yearns for salvation, but I've learned since never to trust the heart again. My approach to heaven and hell is purely that of a lawyer or businessman—I hedge my bets.

Since my philosophies don't cover everything in the universe and what they do may not be right, I've accounted for the possibility of a heaven and a hell. The management structure of hell will logically have the worst at the top, the angel who rebelled, with a chain of command descending through those of lesser evil down to folk who arguably shouldn't be there at all. Just as in America or a banana republic, those who commit greater crimes lord over those who perpetrated minor ones. Unlike Dante's vision that inverted the structure of hell to serve the plot of his story in castigating his worldly enemies, a top down management structure makes the only sense for hell or any organization devoted to destruction, like the military. Those better at carrying out an organization's purpose will logically occupy positions of more authority. The commander-in-chief in hell is not about to be told what to do by a second lieutenant sitting on a higher ledge. So the more evil the person, the higher up the management ladder he's placed. My task then is to insert myself in the management structure at just the right level where I'll have direct authority over those whom I want to torment for eternity: Feminazis, the rich, my parents and the Ho. Not an easy chore considering the depravity of my enemies, but possible. However, if there is no hell, then it doesn't matter.

The Saturday after my first Hip-Hop class, surprisingly, I could still move, so Mark and I went to a party in Williamsburg given by a girl to whom I had introduced him. Not much of an introduction, I saw this tall blonde with a hot body in a crowded bar and started talking to her about something I can't remember. She was friendly, but not my type, so I moved on. Later, when she walked by me on her way out for a smoke, I introduced her to Mark. Turned out she was stripper.

She and her three female roommates were throwing a party. Oh boy, I fantasized; they'll probably invite lots of hokettes. But I should have listened to the Twins who said that when girls host parties, they make sure there are always a lot more guys than girls. The Twins were right. What a waste that party. Half the night was spent hustling two plain looking girls who at the end of my efforts turned out to be lesbians, the other half arguing with a Feminazi and the third-half fondling a French tart trying to convince me that "love" was not a scam invented by females to manipulate guys.

"Someone must have hurt you," she said. How many times have I heard that, which meant you just met the wrong girl, the rest of us are really decent human beings, like me.

Baloney, most girls are created in the image of Mary Magdalene—a prostitute.

"You're right," I answered. "Let's start with the Nazi Ho, my mother, and work our way through all the girls I went out with down to the Commie Ho, my ex-wife." I thought but didn't say, "It's hos all the way down on my journey to hell." Instead I told this French hokette, "To girls, 'love' means a scheme to get what they want from men. For them, it's very real and of the utmost importance, as are frauds to criminals. When a girl says, 'I love you,' she's really saying 'I'm tricking you.'"

She did a quick 180 and returned to a back room to resume making out with the same guy she had left earlier to flirt with me. Guess the flirtation helped her ego or was it genetic. All humans are promiscuous; otherwise, we wouldn't have survived, and the more promiscuous the person, the more likely their gene for playing around was passed on to future generations. But only girls are hos. Hos use sex and its accoutrements to get something, usually consumer goods but also status or an underserved advantage. For them, sex is a weapon to shakedown guys; it's a means to an end. For guys sex is fun, a recreational end, but not a means. The French tart realized she wouldn't be sexploiting me any time soon, so she returned to her first sucker.

There once was a time in America when hos were kept in their place: brothels, strip clubs and backdoor rendezvous. But, now, with the Feminazis either running the media or intimidating it into toting their propaganda, all these low-lying, four-flushing sluts are considered victimized saints. Take that whore who married Prince Charles. She hos this guy, she hos that guy, and her life style finally lands her dead in a car crash. She's a slut, but the media blames Prince Charles and turns her into a saint while some sappy song about her out sells the classic Christmas tune "White Christmas."

It's always men who are at fault in the Western media and girls the Pollyanna victim. No one ever dares mention that the real fault rests with the lies the Feminazis feed girls growing up today. They teach girls to put themselves on a pedestal, not of femininity, but one of superiority to men in strength, courage, independence and toughness, which, when coupled with the Feminazi belief that girls have a universal right, almost an obligation, to give free reign to their whims and desires, puts these girls in dangerous situations that an evolutionarily correct girl would avoid. The Feminazis have socialized young girls into believing they are Super Girls, gave them capes, but when the girls try to fly in the real world, they can't. It's the she-male princess syndrome: all the sex appeal of Aphrodite but stronger than Hercules, an illusion that works only in Hollywood.

Please Mr. Postman

The Second Circuit scheduled oral argument on my appeal for the following month of January 2006. The defense attorney's had failed to weasel the Court into denying me 10 minutes to argue my case and answer the judges questions. Not much time, but that's generally all the time allotted each side. The Court's decision on my motion to throw out parts of the defendants' briefs for violating the procedural rules still hadn't come down, which presented a problem. Preparation for oral argument always depends on the content of the papers before the Court. If sections of some of the defense briefs were going to be deleted, it would help to know that before oral argument; otherwise, both sides would have to spend extra time preparing to deal with those sections before the three judges who would hear the argument. Logic dictated that the panel of judges should make a decision on my motion beforehand. But, then again, I was dealing with the Second Circuit.

Contacting the administrative lawyer in the Civil Appeals Management Office of the Court, I asked what was going on with my motion. He told me the panel could make a decision on my motion anytime they wanted, whether before or after oral argument. This sounded too arbitrary, so I checked the rules but couldn't find any requiring the Court to decide motions promptly, although according to the Appeals to the Second Circuit, p. 50 (8th ed, 1997) published by the Committee on Federal Courts of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, most motions are decided within a week of the return date, which for my motion had long since come and gone. Something didn't fit. The motion papers weren't that long and the defense attorneys' violations clear—no complex issues involving grey areas of the law, so why not make a decision now? As with so much else in this story, I knew the workings of the universe would eventually reveal the answer.

New Year's Eve and Mark and I decided to go hunting at the Copa, even though I had a nagging premonition that something unpleasant would happen. Before we entered the club, I told Mark about my foreboding to which he said, "Stay alert." The Copa was packed, lots of single chicks hoping guys would hit on them so that they wouldn't feel like losers being alone on New Year's Eve. Fine, we were happy to help them out. We walked around, hit on some chicks, danced with them, went looking for some more, split up and I went to the bar for another drink. While standing behind a short stocky guy and his very hot Latina date, the guy seemed somewhat edgy. Maybe she was ragging on him. Waiting for the barmaid, I checked this guy's date out—she was nice, but I wasn't about to hit on her. Unlike some guys, I didn't believe in interfering with another guy's hustle. Just then, the short guy pushes back into me. Okay it was crowded, and I let it go, one of the usual minor run-ins in New York clubs. Then he does it a second time, which seemed intentional. What's with this guy, I didn't say a word to his girl. Was he reading my mind?

On the metaphysical side of my life, I can often sense something bad coming my way, possess the ability to divine water with a forked-stick and, at times, can apparently project my thoughts. Was the overflow of my paranormaling lust for this guy's girl splashing into his mind? Who knew, who cared, but I told the guy not to push me again. Naturally, with his girl there he had to and did. I moved to my left, he turned to face me, and I gave him an open hand martial arts strike to the throat. He retreated about five feet holding his neck, trying to breathe normally. Suddenly the area around me wasn't crowded anymore. His hot chica then tries a right forward kick with her high heel to my groin. Broads always go for the most vulnerable spots, but they should stick with assaults of emotional distress and duplicity in which they use their tongues as guns. They're too lame when trying to physically hurt a man. Barely paying attention to her, I easily dodged her kick. My focused on the guy, waiting for him to recoup and charge into the front thrust kick I had planned. Just then Mark appears out of nowhere and pulls me away from the scene in the blink of an eye. Good he had my back for the bouncers were probably on their way. We continued our carousing and I finally left the Copa around three in the morning and Mark at five. All around, an enjoyable New Year's Eve.

During January, while preparing for oral argument, all the defense attorneys waived their right to oral argument—they weren't going to show, including the Bank of Cyprus that never even submitted a brief. Attorneys never do this. Although oral argument is short, it often clarifies the case for judges and sometimes even changes their minds. Former Supreme Court Justice William Brennan once said:

“Oral argument is the absolutely indispensable ingredient of appellate advocacy. Often my whole notion of what a case is about crystallizes at oral argument. This happens even though I read all the briefs before oral argument. Often my idea of how a case shapes up is changed by oral argument. Oral argument with us is a Socratic dialogue between Justice and Counsel.”

Socratic dialogue means the judges ask the lawyers questions about the case and the law to which the answers help the judges reach a decision.

So why were the defense attorneys foregoing oral argument? What did they know that I didn't? Was the fix in? Had someone slipped crucial information to the defense lawyers? Had the appeal already been decided in favor of the defendants, which was why the Court ignored my motion to delete parts of their briefs? Whatever it was—something had happened. This was not how appeals in the federal courts were suppose to proceed, maybe in state courts in the rural south, but definitely not the Court of Learned Hand and Henry Friendly, two great judges who had sat on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. Decisions aren't made until after the oral argument, which is why lawyers don't skip oral argument. Was the Court just going through the motions of allowing me an oral argument that was meaningless because the decision had already been made? If so, that wasn't only unfair, but a violation of my due process rights under the Constitution of America. Then again, this was no longer America, for men that is.

In the Second Circuit, every panel of judges has a presiding judge who usually writes the opinions for the cases a panel hears. Normally, the Second Circuit keeps secret until a few weeks before oral argument all the judges hearing a case so as to prevent any undue influence or attorneys slanting their arguments towards a particular judge or judges. In my case, however, because of my motion to delete parts of the defendants' brief, I learned, and so did the Russian mafia defendants, on November 3, 2005 that the presiding judge on the panel deciding my case was Sonia Sotomayor. At the time, I didn't care who she was, and wasn't going to tailor my argument for any Second Circuit judge. Why bother? The Second Circuit, contrary to the intent of Congress and Supreme Court decisions, exhibits a distinct animosity toward civil RICO cases. It made no sense to cater to that Court, since my only legal hope, as it had been from the beginning, was the Supreme Court. But because of the recent bizarre events of the Court ignoring my motion and the defendants' waiver of oral argument, I decided to do a little research on Sotomayor.

Back then, before our first female president, Barack Obama, made Sotomayor a Supreme Court Justice in accordance with the Peter Principle, Sotomayor was 52 years old, prime age for a Feminazi, born in a housing project in the South Bronx with Puerto Rican ancestry. She graduated Yale Law School, but so did Billy-Bob Clinton, and neither made it through with honors. She worked as an Assistant District Attorney in Manhattan, not very prestigious for a graduate of Yale or any law school. In 1984, she joined the nondescript law firm of Pavia & Harcourt, which recruited lawyers fluent in Spanish, Italian, French and Portuguese, and eventually became a partner. In 1992, President Bush Sr. made her a district court judge, and in 1998 she landed on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, thanks to Hillary Clinton who pretty much determined President Clinton's judicial appointments.

Sotomayor, as with all federal judges, was appointed—not elected—for life. The Wall Street Journal and a number of Senators opposed her elevation to the Second Circuit because she's a judicial activist. Sotomayor believes judges have the right to change the law in accordance with their own personal views regardless of what Congress or the electorate says. It's a "Judges Know Best" philosophy and contrary to the U.S. Constitution's separation of powers where Congress makes the laws, not the courts. The founding fathers knew from looking at European monarchies that when the different functions of state power are concentrated, the wielders usually abuse it. In order to avoid America becoming another country ruled by princes and princesses, the U.S. Constitution adopted the principle of the Massachusetts Constitution written by John Adams:

"In the government ... the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them; the executive shall never exercise the legislative and judicial powers, or either of them; the judicial shall never exercise the legislative and executive powers, or either of them: to the end it may be a government of laws not of men.

Sotomayor apparently believes that last word "men" doesn't apply to females or princesses.

Activist judges, such as Sotomayor, probably consider themselves in the vanguard of a class struggle where the separation of powers interferes with their vision of society, so usurping the power of the legislature is justified. Whenever government officials succeed in grabbing more than their allotted share of state power, they become less accountable for their actions because citizens begin to fear stopping them. As bureaucrats continue to exercise power they shouldn't, they may reach the point where there's no one left in society with the courage to call them to account, and then, they can do pretty much what they please. For these activist bureaucrats like Sotomayor, every grab for power is facially justified with some lame rationale, such as the Feminazis claiming passed oppression at the hands of men. Why do you think Sotomayor ruled against those Connecticut firemen—a ruling that the Supreme Court eventually over turned? They were all men. Then again, maybe she was just angry that nobody had invited her to her high school senior prom.

Once any group corners the market on state power, than the government and its bureaucrats become something to fear as in Nazi Germany, the Soviet Union and, today, in feminarchy America. The key to liberty, as Montesquieu said decades before the American and French revolutions, is that “government should be set up so that no man need be afraid of another” or of a female during the wrong time of the month or on menopause, but such is no longer the case for men in the U.S.

Sotomayor's seizing of legislative power earned her the “Court Jester Award” from the Family Research Counsel when she ruled in 1998 that a female, who had failed the New York bar exam several times, could take it again and have additional time to complete the exam because she was a slow reader. Sotomayor rewrote the Americans with Disabilities Act to reach the absurd result of applying the statute to a girl who had previously earned a Ph.D., J.D. and passed other exams, such as the LSAT and GRE, without being given any special treatment. Thanks to judicial legislating, preferential treatment for females and in the spirit of unfairness to others, the girl took the bar exam again, was given extra time and promptly flunked it again.

Despite Sotomayor's less than stellar record as a jurist, her sex and Latin heritage has caused political correctionalist politicians, pandering for female and immigrant votes, to win her a spot on the U.S. Supreme Court. Another example of the propaganda of soma induced delusions replacing reality in America. Had Gore or Kerry been elected, she might have made it there by the time of my appeal—good for me, bad for the country. As a Supreme Court Justice she sees herself as speaking “in a female ... voice” and admits “our experiences as women ... affect our decisions.” So much for justice being blind.

When I arrived at the Court for oral argument in the morning on Thursday, January 26, 2006, I was surprised to see the lead defense lawyer Dubin there but the presiding judge Sotomayor not, although she would likely write the opinion. Perhaps the onset of menopause was making it tough for her to concentrate, so she took the day off, or perhaps the case, as I now felt, had already been decided, and she didn't want to waste her time.

To Dubin, I asked, “What are you doing here? I thought you had waived argument.”

“We did,” he answered. “I just wanted to watch.”

Mumbling to myself, “Watch, watch what? There's nothing to watch.” Another move by the defense that made no sense, since Dubin's clients, Mundy, Petrovich and their law firm, were not going to pay him to watch me talk, unless he was here to make sure the Court stayed fixed.

The clerk called my case before the two judges who at least were men.

Normally in oral argument, a lawyer starts with a prepared statement of the arguments as to why the Court should rule in his favor, and after a couple of sentences, the judges interrupt to ask the questions that occurred to them while reading the appeal briefs. Since my intuition told me this was probably just a show hearing, I chose a different tack, and started by arguing my motion to delete parts of the defendants' briefs. That would allow me to accuse the Second Circuit of discriminating against me by not deciding the motion before oral argument.

“Good morning your honors. I’m Roy Den Hollander the pro se plaintiff versus certain Russian mafiosos, members, cohorts and confederates of the Russian mafia. In November, I put in a motion to strike certain sections of the briefs of the Russian mafia defendants for violating the Federal Rules of Procedure and the Local Rules of this Court for including irrelevancies, ad hominem and failing to cite to specific pages. Another reason for the motion was to avoid using the limited space in my reply brief to deal with the defendants continuing litigation of personal destruction and disinformation and to counter their citing to 380 pages in their briefs that are not in the Joint Appendix. They had an opportunity to include those documents in the Appendix but they declined to. The defendants used those documents to castigate me and to avoid arguing on the merits and to overburden this Court. I put in this motion to strike their references to those documents, some of which were excluded by the District Court, but nothing has happened. My view is that I have been treated unfairly because this motion has not been decided even now.”

To which one judge said in his deep voice, “It’s a very common thing for motions of that nature not to be decided prior argument because the panel very frequently feels it will be in a better position to understand what’s pertinent to the case at the time of argument. It’s often quite difficult to deal with a motion like that well in advance, and it’s not uncommon at all that such a motion is simply put aside to be dealt with as part of the case in its entirety and that happened here.”

No way, I thought to myself. The motion was for the defendants violating the rules of procedure in the Second Circuit; it didn’t deal with the pertinent legal issues of the appeal of the District Court’s decision. The defendants cited to documents not in the Joint Appendix, engaged in character assassination and failed to give specific page cites. It was all there in black and white in their briefs. What's there to understand about pertinence to the case? There is none, that's why parts of the defendants' briefs violate the rules.

I responded, "Ooookay, my view then is that the defendants violated my rights and they got away with it."

The same judge rationalized, "There's a lot of gamesmanship that goes on in litigation. To some extent litigation is about gamesmanship, there are strategies that lawyers use and sometimes they succeed in taking advantage of an adverse party by doing it. But in any case we are here to hear your appeal and would be interested in hearing you on that."

Unbelievable, this Second Circuit judge was condoning the violation of the rules of this Court and every other Court of Appeals in the country, but I euphemized my response.

"I agree with that your honor, attorneys try for advantages over their opponents, but when the rules of procedure say what you are doing violate those rules and my due process rights, I believe the Court should be more timely on ruling on a motion such as that."

Then I switched gears, "Now as far as the substance of my appeal are there any questions?" That caught them flat-footed. Judges always have questions for oral argument but not these and not for me.

So I started through the list of the District Court's legal errors and accused it of re-writing my Complaint. Even raised the issue from my brief where I called Castel a liar when he claimed I never requested to amend my Complaint if it was dismissed.

"I asked FIVE TIMES that if the District Court ruled against me and threw me out that I would have an opportunity to amend." To emphasize my point, I stepped aside from the podium and raised my open hand with five fingers out stretched. "Five times I asked that. The judge said I never asked for it.” Then I paused for the judges to slam me for calling Castel a liar in my brief, but nothing happened, so I moved on to other points until my 10 minutes ran out.

Leaving the Second Circuit, it was clear the two judges hadn’t read my motion papers or my brief or my reply. No Court of Appeals’ judge would knowingly claim that the violation of the procedural rules for assuring fair and just consideration of a case was “gamesmanship” or allow a lawyer to get away with calling a District Court judge a liar in a brief. It just didn’t happen, so the oral argument must have meant nothing to the two judges either because the panel had already decided against me or Sotomayor told them she’d handle the opinion, which she had already decided or maybe even written.

One week later, the Second Circuit issued its decision—that was too quick. They really wanted rid of me. The case was back in the street again with the U.S. Supreme Court my last chance. The Summary Order gave the defendants everything they wanted by upholding the District Court decision in total—not even allowing me one chance to amend my Complaint. The Order also denied my motion. Guess violating the appellate rules of procedure pays.

The Second Circuit, or more likely Sotomayor, ruled that the RICO statute, my Complaint and Supplemental Complaint didn’t say what they said, but said what she said they said. Sounded like deja voodoo to me of all those arguments with girls who simply put words in my mouth in order to win. Perhaps Sotomayor’s experience as a female not only affected her decisions but also her methods in reaching those decisions. Sotomayor made the decision a “Summary Order,” which meant it wouldn’t be published in the volumes that carry Second Circuit cases and couldn’t be used as authority for anything in another case. It’s a neat trick for disposing of cases without bringing publicity to them and assuring that a court’s errors about the law can’t come back to haunt it. In effect, it allows the Court to make a decision based on who you are rather than what happened to you—think feudal Europe. If the judges consider you an inappropriate person, they can make up any rule they want to make sure you lose, and that rule can't be used in the future against persons the judges like because that rule only applies to you. Think of it as your own personal gulag or jurisprudence. The laws that apply to the rest of society, or at least those considered acceptable by the current ideology, don't apply to you because you're a modern-day nonconformist—separate and unequal.

Next legal stop, the U.S. Supreme Court, but that Court hears only about one percent of the cases that apply for review. The Supreme Court's purpose is not to correct the mistakes a Court of Appeals makes, intentionally or not, in reading a complaint or even in misunderstanding the law. The Supreme Court focuses on correcting injustices of a national importance in which other Courts of Appeals or the Supreme Court say something different about the law or haven't said anything at all. One consequence of the Supreme Court's selectivity is that Judges on the Courts of Appeals have near absolute power in disposing of cases brought by those without money and influence, the politically incorrect and society's other outcasts, which was why the defendants used so much character assassination to paint me as a modern-day pariah—it works. So much for the democratic sentiment that to promote social stability, our society encourages resort to the courts rather than resort to force and violence. Deck v. Engineered Laminates, 349 F.3d 1253, 1258 (10th Cir. 2003).

Let Me In (Wee-Oop)

My banging on the U.S. Supreme Court's door for admittance began with drafting a "Petition for Writ of Certiorari." A petition basically says, "Hey guys, one of the Courts of Appeals goofed at interpreting the law to conclude something different than what other Courts of Appeals say, so here's your chance to make the law uniform throughout the land," or, "the Court of Appeals thumbed its nose at one of your decisions, and here's your chance to straighten that Court out."

The defendants could, if they wanted, file briefs in response to my petition to argue why the Supreme Court should not review the Second Circuit's decision, and I could then file a short reply to address any new issues raised in the defendants' briefs. The Supreme Court Justices either read the filed papers or assigned a clerk to summarize them and recommend granting or denying review. If any Justice believes a case should be reviewed, he adds it to the list of cases that will be discussed at a weekly conference of all nine Justices. A vote in favor of review by four Justices is required for the Court to hear a case. If the Justices decide to hear a case, they don't rerun all the issues, just those they believe are important to keeping America a nation ruled by law. The Court, therefore, could hear just one issue in my case and even if it ruled my way on that issue, the Second Circuit or District Court might still be able to uphold the dismissal. It happens all the time, but I'd have to chance that. If the rule of law existed anywhere in America for me, it was the Supreme Court. The likely outcome, however, would be the Court denying to even hear my case—then my legal road against injustice would end.

The Second Circuit's revisionism of the factual allegations in my Complaint made it difficult to write a petition that the Supreme Court would grant. At the heart of the Second Circuit's decision was the conclusion, also made by the District Court, that my lawsuit looked just like the civil RICO case American Express Co. Shareholder Litigation, 39 F.3d 395 (2d Cir. 1994), which the Second Circuit had also dismissed. In the law, when the fact situation of one case is identical to that of another, then the results should be the same. But in my case, the Second Circuit falsely claimed I was in a similar position as the American Express shareholders when my position actually resembled that of Safra. The Russian mafia defendants' crimes were directed at me and intended to cause me harm, not some third party who stood between that crime syndicate and me. Although my case didn't look anything like American Express, the Second Circuit ruled it did, not only to dismiss it, but for another very important reason: to minimize the chance that the Supreme Court would review it.

The Supreme Court was not about to hear a case in which a Court of Appeals had twisted factual allegations to make them fit another case in order to engineer a dismissal. Even when such conduct involved the Second Circuit, which the Supreme Court had reversed a number of times before in RICO cases and actually criticized for trying to eliminate civil RICO actions, the Supreme Court usually stayed away from disputes over factual allegations and facts. My task, therefore, was to convince the Supreme Court that the Second Circuit's decision was not merely a deceptive editing of my factual allegations, but a symptom of it exceeding its constitutional authority by disregarding Supreme Court rulings and the plain meaning of the civil RICO statute with the end result of the Russian mafia and other organized crime syndicates escaping liability in the Second Circuit, unless the Supreme Court put a stop to it.

To bring home to the Supreme Court the Pandora's Box that the Second Circuit was opening by continuing to emasculate civil RICO, my petition's "Facts" section ran a little long so as to give the Justices a taste of how some in the Russian mafia operated and the dangers they posed.

Facts

The defendants in this case comprise a relatively few members or associates operating in different sections of the Russian mafia, which, according to former Central Intelligence Agency Director John Deutsch, reaches across international borders. Emergency Net News Service, May 3, 1996, Vol. 2-124. Echoing the C.I.A.'s assessment, former F.B.I. Director Louis Freeh said, "Evidence that organized crime activity from [Russia] is expanding and will continue to expand to the United States is well-documented." Id. Russian criminal operations in America, such as money laundering, illegal money transactions, prostitution, narcotics trafficking, extortion and fraud are often carried out in cooperation with La Cosa Nostra. Report on Russian Organized Crime, 1997, Task Force headed by William H. Webster, Center for Strategic and International Studies.

The Russian mafia, once a hierarchical structure under the Soviet Union, diffused with the end of Communist Party power into a confederation of crime groups using modern-day management principles and which includes Chechen, American, Cypriot, Mexican and other nationalities. It now resembles a diversified worldwide conglomerate, or enterprise, with all the attendant business relationships. (Complaint ¶¶ 10, 11, 14, 874). The smarter members of the Russian mafia, no longer confined to scheming for rubles, are chasing hard currency by expanding their criminal operations to the wealthy West. (Complaint ¶¶ 2, 13).

Bringing Russian crime to Western shores requires an ongoing transfer of money-making assets to foreign markets where the successful utilization of assets employs a strategy of (a) using money from criminal activities to set up and expand Russian mafia businesses, such as prostitution, pornography, strip clubs, drug smuggling and money laundering; (b) protecting those businesses through criminal activities, such as tampering with informants and witnesses, obstructing justice, bribery and intimidation; and (c) running the businesses by using crimes such as white slavery, immigration fraud, importing pornography and drug trafficking. The Russian mafia uses a complex, intertwined web of racketeering acts to maintain and continue expanding its activities in a drive for new targets and more money that causes widespread and varied harm. (Complaint ¶¶ 879-85).

The Russian mafia's expansion into the West has created a vertically integrated business of supply, service, protection, profit maximization and reinvestment with a huge appetite for human capital. Each Russian mafia prostitution asset in the U.S. makes a relatively small amount of $100,000 to $150,000 tax-free a year, but considering the large number of them in the U.S., the syndicate is making substantial sums.

At the tactical level, the success of the Russian mafia's objective for one of its human-capital assets involves the following:

Step One: Transplanting a willing member or associate from Russia to the U.S. where she starts working in one or more syndicate businesses—prostitution, stripping, pornography or procuring. This involves the predicate acts of white slavery, 18 U.S.C. §§ 2421 & 2422, importing an alien for immoral purposes, 8 U.S.C. § 1328, fraud and the misuse of visas, 18 U.S.C. § 1546, and eventually procurement of nationality unlawfully, 18 U.S.C. § 1425. To keep the customers coming back for more from the new asset often also means drugs, 21 U.S.C. §§ 841 & 952.

Step Two: Protecting the mafia's human capital from deportation, arrest or imprisonment, which would ruin their money-making potential, often requires tampering with a witness, victim or informant, 18 U.S.C. 1512; threats made by mail or wire, 18 U.S.C. 1341 & 1343; use of interstate and foreign facilities in aid of the racketeering operation, 18 U.S.C. 1952; bribery, 18 U.S.C. 201; and even conspiracy to commit murder-for-hire 18 U.S.C. 1958, as in this case.

Step Three: Assuring that the mob's profits from its asset escape the taxman involves money laundering, 18 U.S.C. 1956, and failing to file reports on exporting amounts over $10,000, as required by 31 U.S.C. 5316.

This RICO case concerns just one asset, one string of events and injuries arising out of the Russian mafia's operations of transplanting prostitutes to New York and other states, passing drugs and large sums of money back and forth between countries, and threatening as well as executing reprisals against any person or business that might get in the syndicate's way.

Petitioner-plaintiff and attorney Roy Den Hollander owns and operates a one-man, unincorporated business that provides legal services and business consulting. The defendant Russian mafia members and associates include Flash Dancers Topless Club and Cybertech Internet Solutions that together sell call-girls and pornography over the internet at www.flashdancersnyc.com, www.stripclubnetwork.com, and www.exoticavip.com; the Baraev Chechen Special Islamic Regiment (responsible for the 2002 Moscow Theater hostage taking) used by certain defendants to threaten reprisals against Hollander and various of his informants and witnesses living in Krasnodar, Russia; assorted Russian Mafiosi, including the crime boss for southern European Russia; corrupt Russian government officials; gangsters in America; a corrupt New York City policeman; Alina Shipilina, a Russian mafia prostitute, money launderer and drug smuggler; the prostitute's Russian mother who is affiliated, as is her daughter, with the Baraev crime group and Russian criminals; Leonid Perlin the president of Phodes Studio in Moscow, www.phodes.net, a syndicate call-girl operation fronting as a model agency for which Alina Shipilina worked; lawyers Nicholas Mundy and Peter Petrovich<sup>3</sup> who manage and facilitate immigration matters in New York for the Russian syndicate; Marc Paulsen who produces and imports Russian pornography into southern California; and the Vasilyeva crime family that runs the premier model agency in Krasnodar which doubles as a call-girl operation sending prostitutes overseas to places such as Cyprus and America, where two of the family members now reside.

These and other defendants work hard and ingeniously to enrich themselves in furthering a key objective of the Russian mafia: to infiltrate and expand its illegal and ancillary legal activities into hard currency markets, especially the U.S. Each defendant plays a role in importing assets or keeping the assets here and makes lots of money doing so. Some use narcotics and prostitutes to create fraudulent marriages; some engage in immigration fraud, white slavery, bribery and importing pornography; some traffic in drugs; some use coercion, intimidation, murder-for-hire, perjury and official misconduct to protect the mafia's assets; and others maximize profits with tax evasion and money laundering while others engage in various combinations of such criminal acts. But they are all fellow travelers seeking fortune and for some glory by furthering the Russian syndicate's expansion to the West.

One method of supplying the syndicate's sex business in America is tricking American men into sponsoring and financing Russian mafia prostitutes and procurers for U.S. residency and citizenship through, unbeknownst to the American, a fraudulent marriage. Because the trail of harm originates with a sham marriage rather than a fraudulent business transaction, the injury to property interests is no less serious.<sup>4</sup> A scheme to defraud is measured against a standard of "moral uprightness, of fundamental honesty, fair play and right dealing in the general and business life of members of society." Gregory v. U.S., 253 F.2d 104, 109 (5th Cir.1958). When criminal instrumentalities exploit human emotions of the heart rather than the pocketbook, a man does not lose his rights under U.S. law.

The fraudulent marriage for citizenship contrivance coupled with surreptitiously feeding petitioner Hollander narcotics is what ensnared him. Defendants Shipilina and Leonid Perlin decided in July 1999 to target Hollander as part of the Russian mafia's ongoing operations to infiltrate and expand its operations in the U.S. (Complaint ¶¶135-40, 153-54, 164). At the time, Hollander was working in Russia as a consultant-manager for Kroll Associates. After Hollander completed his contract with Kroll, the conspiracy to transplant defendant Shipilina to America succeeded in marrying her to Hollander in March 2000 in Krasnodar by, in part, secretly feeding him narcotics just before the wedding to assure he would go through with it. (Complaint ¶¶ 173-183).

---

<sup>3</sup> Nicholas Mundy is admitted to practice in New York State and Peter Petrovich is admitted to practice in Russia.

<sup>4</sup> "Congress sought a broadly based statute capable of addressing a variety of complex criminal problems." Michael Goldsmith, Judicial Immunity-The Ironic Demise of Civil RICO, 30 Harv. J. on Legis. 1, 27 (1993).

The first predicate act that injured Hollander was defendant Shipilina's subsequent perjury on her visa petition form filed in March 2000 with the Immigration and Naturalization Service ("INS") at the Moscow Embassy. (Complaint ¶¶ 190-91). Had Shipilina told the truth about her past prostitution, money laundering and narcotics trafficking activities, Hollander would not have paid the filing fees, nor put his business on hold, nor supported his wife nor incurred expenses living in Moscow while the forms were processed. (Complaint ¶¶ 187, 188). He would have returned immediately to New York City to resume his business there.

The second predicate act in Russia that caused Hollander to pay more filing fees, continue to keep his business on hold and continue living in Moscow and supporting his wife was Shipilina's perjury on her visa application to the State Department at the Moscow Embassy in May 2000, which repeated her earlier perjury of not working as a prostitute, money launderer or narcotics trafficker. (Complaint ¶¶ 192, 193). Had defendant Shipilina told the truth, Hollander would have left Moscow then and not have incurred those expenses.

Damages from the business interruption due to Shipilina's predicate acts in fraudulently obtaining a visa are included in the loss of profits, interruption expenses and loss of business opportunities alleged in the Complaint at ¶ 907(a)-(c).

From the beginning, the Russian mafia's agent or front was defendant Shipilina. Initially, defendant Perlin and other organized crime members in Russia stood immediately behind her. But once she entered America on her fraudulently obtained visa, other comrades in crime came out from standing in the shadows to help directly and indirectly with the syndicate's plan of keeping her in America making money. On entering the U.S. in July 2000, defendant Shipilina became a conditional permanent resident, but she was not as secure from deportation as a permanent resident or naturalized citizen. (Complaint ¶¶ 205-212).

After a few months in New York City, Hollander realized that Shipilina was working as a prostitute and had married him just for a green card, but he was still unaware of the Russian mafia's involvement. (Complaint ¶ 220). Hollander demanded a divorce which would threaten Shipilina's chances of obtaining permanent residency, so Russian mafia members Mundy and Petrovich intervened. Defendants Mundy and Petrovich are attorneys who operate an immigration mill for fraudulently obtaining Russian mafia assets visas, green cards and naturalizations, in addition to managing numerous immigration matters for the Russian syndicate in New York. (Complaint ¶¶ 27-34, 221, 222).

In October 2000, defendants Mundy, Petrovich and Shipilina tried to connive Hollander into participating in a fraud on the INS so as to assure that defendant Shipilina became a permanent resident and eventually a naturalized citizen—Hollander refused. (Complaint ¶¶ 223-226). Defendants Mundy, Petrovich, Shipilina and others then resorted to further racketeering activities to prevent the discovery and exposure of the Russian syndicate's plan as it pertained to Shipilina in order to assure its success and keep hidden the Russian mafia's operations for transplanting more human capital to America.

The defendants: (1) attempted to intimidate Hollander into committing perjury before the INS. That amounted to tampering with an informant, witness or victim and mail fraud, which harmed Hollander's business reputation and incurred costs and time to defend against a fraudulently obtained order of protection and a false charge of extortion (Complaint ¶¶ 228-30, 234-41, 901, 906, 907 (e)); (2) used coercion communicated by interstate wire to avoid an annulment/divorce trial with the result of increasing Hollander's legal costs and injuring his business reputation (Complaint ¶¶ 243-45, 273, 901, 906, 907(e)); (3) interfered with pre-discovery investigations and silenced witnesses in Krasnodar to prevent Hollander from obtaining information for the annulment/divorce proceeding and the INS. Defendants engaged in tampering with witnesses, wire fraud, aiding a racketeering enterprise and money laundering that increased the cost and time of Hollander's investigation and necessitated a second investigatory trip to Krasnodar. (Complaint ¶¶ 256-60, 265-72, 903, 906, 907(d)); (4) threatened Hollander over interstate wire into not making a motion for a trial, which harmed Hollander's cause of action and amounted to tampering because the state court trial evidence would have been provided to the INS, which had initiated deportation proceedings against defendant Shipilina. (Complaint ¶¶ 280-84, 901, 906); (5) attempted to intimidate Hollander into silence before the INS, which was conducting an investigation of defendant Shipilina, and the Krasnodar prosecutor, who had indicted another defendant, all of which amounted to tampering and wire fraud that cost Hollander time away from his business and money to investigate and protect against the threats. (Complaint ¶¶ 285-90, 316-18, 906, 907(c) & (d)); (6) intimidated witnesses into recanting their testimony before the Krasnodar prosecutor by engaging in wire fraud, aiding a racketeering enterprise and money laundering that resulted in harming Hollander's business reputation. (Complaint ¶¶ 293-97, 903, 906, 907(e)); (7) bribed Krasnodar officials to close the case against one defendant, which required money laundering and aiding a racketeering enterprise that resulted in harming Hollander's business reputation and costing him money to reopen the case so as to clear his name. (Complaint ¶¶ 298-304, 902, 906, 907(e)); (8) attempted to have Hollander arrested twice on bogus charges that amounted to tampering and involved wire fraud with a cost to Hollander of over $3,500 in attorney fees, time away from his business to defend himself and injury to his business reputation. (Complaint ¶¶ 306-15, 901, 906, 907(c) & (e); Supp. Complaint ¶¶ 22-24, 34-38, 43); (9) attempted to intimidate Hollander into staying out of Krasnodar and not prosecuting this RICO action, which consisted of tampering, aiding a racketeering enterprise and wire fraud that cost Hollander time and money in responding to the threat and injured his RICO cause of action (Supp. Complaint ¶¶ 2, 9-10, 12, 13; Complaint ¶¶ 906, 907(c)); (10) started disciplinary proceedings against Hollander to prevent him from proceeding with this RICO case, which involved tampering and mail fraud that harmed Hollander's business reputation and cost him time and money to defend against. (Supp. Complaint ¶¶ 49, 50, 52, 53, 55; Complaint ¶¶ 901, 907(e)); (11) obstructed justice by filing false and misleading documents in this case with the District Court that injured Hollander's RICO cause of action. (Supp. Complaint ¶¶ 59, 61-63, 70; Complaint ¶¶ 901). All of these racketeering activities by the defendants were intended to make justice too costly to pursue and thereby protect the syndicate's operations.

Whether discovery and exposure of the Russian mafia's operations was to come by way of testimony in the INS's removal proceedings against defendant Shipilina, a state court trial or Russian criminal case, it was on its way to federal law enforcement officials until the defendants' racketeering activities effectively shut down the legal process. By covering up the Russian syndicate's operations as pertaining to defendant Shipilina, the defendants also protected the activities of other Russian mafia members and associates (Complaint ¶ 882), which was why it was so important to "prevent Hollander from investigating [the conspirators]," Cir. Order p. 3 ¶ 4 (court's emphasis). In the end, the policy of promoting social stability and justice by encouraging resort to the courts rather than to force or threats of force proved to be no more than nice sounding words.

My “Legal Argument” section focused on the Second Circuit exceeding its authority in rewriting the civil RICO statute as interpreted by other Courts of Appeals and the Supreme Court.

The first three arguments criticized the Second Circuit’s holdings on proximate causation. The Second Circuit has ruled nearly every which way on proximate causation rather than create a coherent standard that would assure justice is actually achievable in civil RICO cases. There’s no consistent standard because the Court wants to preserve its ability to exercise power in an arbitrary way, which allows it to dismiss a case it doesn’t like or keep one it does. By acting Orwellian in its logic and inverted in its reasoning, the Court can, and has, pulled out of the hat proximate cause arguments never intended by Congress. The Supreme Court even criticized the Second Circuit, “We do not believe ... it is a form of statutory amendment appropriately undertaken by the courts.” Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 500, 105 S.Ct. 3275, 3287, 87 L.Ed.2d 346 (1985). Re-writing legislation is not what courts are suppose to do under the “rule of law” principle, which Aristotle first postulated and the Anglo-American legal tradition considers a guard against the despotic use of arbitrary rulings in individual cases to crush the human rights of government critics or nonconformists.

1. The Second Circuit’s decision in my case created a loophole in the statute that allows members and associates of a criminal syndicate to use RICO crimes to prevent the exposure or discovery of earlier RICO violations. After gangsters conspire and commit RICO crimes, they are now free to commit additional RICO violations to conceal their previous felonies and conspiracies. In effect, it’s amnesty for RICO crimes used to cover up prior offenses and contrary to decisions in other Courts of Appeals. The Court’s argument is so bizarre that were it applied to the Nixon Administration’s crimes of covering up illegal campaign activities that occurred before the Watergate break-in, the cover-up offenses wouldn't matter because they were used to conceal the White House's earlier felonies and prevent investigations by the Washington Post, F.B.I. and Congress.

The Second Circuit cut the heart out of the very purpose of the civil RICO statute as stated by the Supreme Court, "The object of civil RICO is ... not merely to compensate victims but to turn them into prosecutors, private attorneys general, dedicated to eliminating racketeering activity," Rotella v. Wood, 528 U.S. 549, 557, 120 S.Ct. 1075, 1082, 145 L.Ed.2d 1047 (2000), to encourage victims to go after gangsters that government prosecutors don't, Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 493, 105 S.Ct. 3275, 3283, 87 L.Ed.2d 346 (1985). Now, in the Second Circuit, victims are discouraged from fighting against gangsters harming their business or property because any additional injury caused by the mobsters trying to shutdown or hinder a private citizen's investigation or legal action will not be the fault of the criminals but of the citizen.

It's an interesting Catch-22: if a plaintiff allows his attorney to do what every lawyer initially does concerning a new case, start an investigation and legal proceeding, that investigation and proceeding can be hampered or shutdown by RICO crimes without such crimes violating civil RICO. But if a plaintiff prevents his attorney from starting an investigation and lawsuit, how is the plaintiff to discover what is going on and to prevent further harm or rectify pass injury through the judicial process? He can't, at least in the Second Circuit, because with its decision that court shifted fault to the victim who takes legal steps to put an end to the harm affecting his business or property. It's fight, you lose; don't fight, you still lose.

2. The Second Circuit rewrote the Supreme Court's rule requiring a "direct" injury to the plaintiff. Under the Supreme Court's "direct" injury test, the harm from RICO crimes cannot pass through someone standing between the plaintiff and the illegal acts of the defendants. “A plaintiff who complained of harm flowing merely from the misfortunes visited upon a third person by the defendant’s acts was generally ... at too remote a distance to recover.” Holmes v. Sec. Investor Prot. Copr., 503 U.S. 258, 268, 112 S.Ct. 1311, 1318, 117 L.Ed.2d 532 (1992). The Supreme Court requires this unimpeded flow of harm for practical reasons. To understand why, consider a chain reaction of car collisions:

The driver in the first car, a man from the 1950s, sees an amply endowed young broad standing alongside the road by her broken down car waving a handkerchief. She’s carrying a trendy-store bag, filled with cocaine for distribution in the next state, but the man doesn’t know that. As his car nears her, he starts slowing down, but she jumps in front of it to make sure he stops to give her a ride. Not being one to flatten a couple of large knockers, he steps on the breaks. The car behind him, driven by the typical pushy Feminazi is tailgating. She screams, lets go of the wheel, some how stomps on the break, but it’s too late and she slams into the guy’s car. The third car has a bimbo driver talking on her cell phone, switching the radio channels and stuffing her oral cavity with chocolates while she’s suppose to be hitting the brakes. She careens into the Feminazi. The drug smuggling broad then hops a ride with some other guy who comes along after the pile-up.

Imagine the problems in trying to determine the amount of damages the drug smuggling broad’s action caused the Feminazi’s car as opposed to the Feminazi tailgating or the amount of harm the broad caused the bimbo’s car as opposed to the bimbo’s extra-curricular activities while driving, or the amount of damages the Feminazi’s tailgating caused the bimbo’ car. It just becomes too complicated, but all the harm to the guy’s car flowed from the broad jumping in front of it in her effort to get the drugs to the next state, so he was directly injured.

In my case, the Second Circuit changed the law by using the legal reasons for preventing recovery by third parties, the drivers in the second and third cars, to avoid recovery by a plaintiff—the driver in the first car, me—who was on the frontline of harm emanating from the defendants' illegal acts.

3. The Second Circuit wrongly ruled that when the exact harm a victim suffered was not planned beforehand; the defendants weren't liable. This requirement of a "specifically-intended consequence" or precisely contemplated injury by the criminals when planning their conspiracy makes it near impossible to win a civil RICO case because of the unlikelihood of showing what the mobsters really thought. It also violates the Supreme Court's admonition that strict proximate cause requirements not be erected as obstacles to private RICO litigants, see Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 497-98, 105 S.Ct. 3275, 3285-86, 87 L.Ed.2d 346 (1985).

The Supreme Court and other Courts of Appeals only require that a reasonable man in the position of the defendants would foresee the consequences of their RICO crimes. They don't have to plan the details of the harm they actually cause because their conduct creates a substantial risk of such an injury occurring. When a mother locks her young children in an unventilated car parked in the summer sun, she doesn't contemplate their death—then again maybe she planned it so as to have more freedom to ho the paper boy, however lets assume she didn't—but she sure created the risk of it occurring, and any guy would have foreseen the likelihood of death as a result.

Members of the Russian mafia aren't blind. They understand that when they initiate a scheme for making money illegally that contingencies will likely arise making it necessary to use additional crimes to lull a target, to prevent the mark from discovering and exposing their scheme, to conceal their operations and more. The harm caused by such criminals dealing with contingencies may not be specifically intended in the beginning of their conspiracy, but in order to reach their goal, they willingly created a substantial risk of such harm occurring to the victim. That harm is foreseeable because it is inextricably intertwined with the success of the conspirator's plan, and whether an injury is reasonably foreseeable or anticipated as a natural—not specifically intended—consequence of racketeering acts is the rule under civil RICO. See Holmes, 503 U.S. 258, 267-70, 112 S.Ct. 1311, 1317-18, 117 L.Ed.2d 532 (1992); Kaufman v. BDO Seidman, 984 F.2d 182, 185 (6th Cir. 1993).

The RICO defendants in my case may not have specifically intended me “to cease work and thereby lose profits...,” Cir. Order p. 4 ¶ 1, but they created a substantial risk of that occurring by using a fraudulent scheme to make sure the Commie Ho entered America and stayed there generating money for as long as possible. Actually, the defendants couldn't help but anticipate that I, a lawyer and manager of a private detective agency in Russia, would become suspicious and start an investigation that might uncover their scheme, which would require them to engage in more RICO crimes that would cause out-of-pocket expenses, legal fees, distraction from my business and loss of reputation and goodwill in order to pressure me into giving up by making the price to my livelihood too great.

The Second Circuit's “specifically-intended consequence” rule has the result of allowing gangsters to use racketeering acts on an ad hoc basis to protect criminal operations as they move toward their goals because the harms from such acts were not part of their thinking when they embarked on their money-making scheme. That's not the law, but another manifestation of the Court's willingness to act in an imperial manner to further its bureaucratic interests in expediency and Feminism over justice.

The other arguments in my petition didn't deal with proximate causation but did attack the Second Circuit for more transgressions of the law as determined by the Supreme Court and other Courts of Appeals. Two of them were the Second Circuit's revision of the definition for injury under civil RICO and its use of two archaic procedural rules to help bounce my case out of court.

1. The Second Circuit goofed by ruling the defendants' interference with my annulment/divorce action, my defense to the fraudulent restraining order and my RICO case didn't violate the statute because lawsuits aren't property interests that can be injured. Civil RICO requires an injury to "business or property." 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c). The Supreme Court and other Courts of Appeals hold that the nature of a property interest is an individual entitlement determined by state law. Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co., 455 U.S. 422, 430, 102 S.Ct. 1148, 1155, 71 L.Ed.2d 265 (1982)(citations omitted); e.g., Isaak v. Trumbull Sav. & Loan Co., 169 F.3d 390, 397 (6th Cir. 1999); Doe v. Roe, 958 F.2d 763, 768 (7th Cir. 1992); Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. DuPont De Nemors, 431 F.3d 353, 364 (9th Cir. 2005) (citations omitted). Under New York State law, a cause of action, case, lawsuit, defense or whatever you want to call suing or defending in court is a property interest. Loucks v. Standard Oil Co. of N.Y., 224 N.Y. 99, 110, 120 N.E. 198, 201 (1918); Hein v. Davidson, 96 N.Y. 175, 177, 1884 N.Y. Lexis 481 (1884). As such, the harm to my lawsuits and legal defenses from the defendants' illegal acts were injuries to property and, therefore, violated civil RICO.

2. The Second Circuit also screwed up by following the District Court's lead in ruling that some of my factual allegations about injuries were "general." This is a characterization used to dismiss a plaintiff's allegations that harkens back to the beginning of the last century before the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure gave it the old heave-ho. In 2006, some lawyers and judges still resorted to it for dismissing parts of a RICO complaint. The judges simply say “general” and poof the allegations are gone even though it violates the Courts of Appeals decisions in Trollinger v. Tyson Foods, Inc., 370 F.3d 602, 615 (6th Cir. 2004), and Mendoza v. Zirkle Fruit Co., 301 F.3d 1163, 1168 (9th Cir. 2002), as well as the Supreme Court in NOW v. Scheidler.

The Supreme Court held in NOW that “general factual allegations of injury resulting from the defendant’s conduct may suffice, for on a motion to dismiss we presume that general allegations embrace those specific facts that are necessary to support the claim.” NOW v. Scheidler, 510 U.S. 249, 256, 114 S.Ct. 798, 803, 127 L.Ed.2d 99 (1994)(quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561, 112 S.Ct. 2130, 2137, 119 L.Ed.2d 351 (1992)(citations omitted). All that the federal rules required in a complaint in 2006 was that a party should set forth the allegations, which can be made with great generality. Wright & Miller, Fed. Prac. & Proc.: Civil 3d § 1215. Discovery, not the complaint, bears the burden of filling in the details. Id. The petitioners in NOW, as with me, alleged that the RICO conspiracy had injured their business and property interests and that a defendant had threatened reprisals. The Supreme Court concluded that “[n]othing more is needed to confer standing on [petitioners] at the pleading stage,” which means a RICO complaint should not be dismissed for making “general” allegations about injuries.

The Second Circuit, as did the District Court, used another archaic magic word, “conclusory,” to dismiss allegations for which its other reasons would appear too absurd even for that Court. Both the Second Circuit and District Court used Kadar Corp. v. Milbury, 549 F.2d 230, 233 (1st Cir. 1977) to eliminate some of my allegations as “conclusory,” but the two courts used Kadar misleadingly by deleting the qualification that if the allegations reasonably followed from the plaintiff’s description of what happened, then they are not “conclusory” and must be accepted as true. The Second Circuit also ignored that a complaint can allege conclusions if they provide the defendants with a minimal notice of the claims, Kyle v. Morton High School, 144 F.3d 448, 455 (7th Cir. 1998). My RICO Complaint easily gave the defendants fair notice of the basis of the claims against them, after all it was 91 pages long and the Supplemental Complaint another nine, and both complied with the rules. “A complaint that complies with the Federal rules of civil procedure cannot be dismissed on the ground that it is conclusory or fails to allege facts. The Federal rules require (with irrelevant exceptions) only that the complaint state a claim not that it plead the facts if true would establish ... that the claim was valid.” Higgs v. Carver, 286 F.3d 437, 439 (7th Cir. 2002)(Posner, J.)(citation omitted).

My Supreme Court petition concluded that the Second Circuit exceeded its Constitutional power by amending the civil RICO statute:

“Since civil RICO first captured judicial attention, the lower courts [District and Courts of Appeals] have systematically sought to dismantle the civil remedy. Despite a series of Supreme Court decisions rejecting various judicially imposed limitations, the lower courts have continued to create numerous obstacles to civil RICO litigation.” Michael Goldsmith, Judicial Immunity for White-Collar Crime: The Ironic Demise of Civil RICO, 30 Harv. J. on Legis. 1, 41 (1993). No longer does the statute say what it says but now says what lower federal courts want it to say.

In this case, the Second Circuit continued to ignore Supreme Court guidelines by unduly narrowing the statute. But unlike the Second Circuit’s other cases that have created a virtual immunity for white-collar crime, see id. at 4, this case extends that immunity to Russian organized crime. Perhaps, it is understandable that lower federal courts would engage in judicial revisionism to avoid commercial fraud cases brought against some of society’s most respected businesses. But rejecting the claims of a directly injured victim for lack of proximate cause and specificity in a suit against the “FBI’s most formidable criminal adversary the Russian mafia”<sup>5</sup> eviscerates RICO where Congress most obviously intended the law to apply—against the archetypal, intimidating mobsters of organized crime.

---

<sup>5</sup> Russia’s international professional criminals have caused the most economic damage in the US. Scott O’Neal, Russian Organized Crime, FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, May 2000. “Blending financial sophistication with bone-crunching violence, the Russian mob has become the FBI’s most formidable criminal adversary, creating an international criminal colossus that has surpassed the Columbian cartels, the Japanese Yakuza, the Chinese triads and the Italian mafia in wealth and weaponry.” Robert I. Friedman, Red Mafiya: How the Russian Mob Has Invaded America, p. xix. Unlike the former Communist Party that was out to bury us, today’s Russian syndicate is out to fleece us.

If the Supreme Court permits the lower courts to rewrite civil RICO, then any federal statute is vulnerable to judicial revisionism that undermines the legislative process. “It is easy by very ingenious and astute construction, to evade the force of almost any statute, where a court is so disposed .... Such a construction annuls ... the law, and renders it superfluous and useless.” Pillow v. Roberts, 54 U.S. 472, 476, 14 L.Ed. 228 (1851), 1851 Lexis 872, 1851 WL 6699.

No way Sotomayor ever read that last case or ever would.

Younger Girl

From mid-February to mid-April, struggling to finish my Supreme Court petition, I kept up my Salsa and Hip-Hop classes as a counterweight to my chronically stupid life.

During a Salsa class, one of the Twins was more preoccupied than usual with her cell phone. She looked pensive and even upset. Something I had never seen before in either of those two bubbly personalities.

“What’s wrong?” I asked.

“It looks like the guy I’ve been dating is not going to take me to the senior formal. We’ve kind of broken up.”

Uh-ho, I thought. Columbia College’s senior prom and one of the Twins might miss it. Looks like trouble in paradise.

“What about your other beaus?” I replied trying to solve her problem—the foolish second nature of any man dealing with a pretty young lady in distress, which usually ends up costing him money, something of other material value or a lot of grief.

“The formal is in two days. Everybody has dates. He may change his mind, but if he doesn’t, I don’t have the time to find someone else.”

I wasn’t about to let that opening fade into eternity. “If he doesn’t come around, I still have a tux from my days working on Wall Street. I’d be glad to take you.” I said with earnest while inside licking my chops and grinning from ear to ear.

“You won’t need a tux, just a suit and tie.”

“I’ve got plenty of them, let me know.”

Boy would that be great, taking one of the Twins to the Columbia formal. The dance would have plenty arrogant, self-righteous, dogmatic teacher and professor chaperons who adamantly believed themselves the sole possessors of the truth, the harbingers of a new brave sexless person-kind and the founders of a thousand-year lefty Reich of hypocrisy and condescension—the true minions of the antichrist. Just think of all the effete, eastern-intellectual, white trash, elitist Feminazis I could thumb my gray hair at. What a great arena for violating the Feminazis’ number one taboo: middle-aged men shall not date hot young babes.

The Feminazis come up with all sorts of lame reasons for this totalitarian commandment: an older guy has nothing to talk about with a young girl or older broads are better sexually, or is that genderly. Idiots, just talking about the weather with a pretty young chick pumps out more adrenalin and endorphins in a man’s brain than anything a Feminazi could do. Besides, girls just out of high school or college have spent the passed 12 to 16 years working their brains to understand new concepts almost daily. If anyone can carry on an intellectually challenging conversation with new takes on old concepts, it’s them, not some old broad who reads romance novels, has been doing the same thing for decades or cites by rote Feminazi propaganda. The young mind is an inquisitive mind not yet crippled by habitual thinking. The Twins shear brainpower could beat any group of Feminazis. As for the sexual side, great artists don’t carve statutes of flabby old broads.

The real reason for the Feminazi taboo is to sucker men from listening to Mother Nature telling them to chase pretty young things. If older guys followed their genes, there would be few males for the over-the-hill Feminazis to inculcate with their lunacy by coercing the fools that date them with: “you can’t have any unless you believe the penis is inferior to the c---.” Also known as “p < c” brainwashing. When will guys learn that it makes no sense to go against Mother Nature, who can’t be fooled forever, just to satisfy a special interest group that has their harm at heart.

My chance to bring the battle of liberty to a Feminazi stronghold never materialized. The Twin’s boyfriend took her to the dance, after which she promptly dropped him.

The Twins came to salsa class religiously through the spring. Not being able to decide which one I lusted after the most, I did a little probing to see whether my intuition could read the possibility of a ménage a trios, “So what happens when the both of you meet a hot guy? How do you decide who gets him?” The Twins were always on the alert for “hot guys” as they called them. Once upon a time, I was a hot guy, but now, nothing but cold blue anger.

“That’s up to the guy, he chooses,” they said.

“What if he chooses both?” They just giggled, not much to go on there, since they always giggled. Although the guy allegedly chose one or the other, it didn’t mean they sat by dumb and passive. They competed with each other, fiercely, for that hot guy.

The Twins always went to Club Cache after Salsa to practice the steps from class. Our instructor got his students in for a reduced fee that didn’t discriminate against guys--cool. I went as often as I could so as to dance with the Twins. They especially liked turning, which reminded them of when they were kids spinning around as fast as possible until they fell down. So I turned them as much as possible because they often lost their balance and needed someone, me, to catch them. My older brother’s instructions for catching a football came in handy: use both arms and your chest! Their hip-hugger jeans also tended to inch downward after a few spins, requiring me, always the gentleman, to help them pull their pants up.

The Twins unfortunately graduated and went to pursue their Ph.D.s in Chemistry at Berkeley. Lucky them, the University I had always wanted to attend out of high school, but the President of my hometown's Board of Education, my father, made sure the guidance counselors prevented that. When the Twins left, I gave them a Salsa CD and an album by "Fever Tree," a group they never heard of, but their parents probably had. The reason for "Fever Tree" was the group's biggest hit "San Francisco Girls," which was what the Twins would become, for me anyway. These two were the type of girls that make a man forget what he has to do, but unlike in the song, my future was in NYC and not San Francisco.

On finishing the writing of my Supreme Court petition, I discovered the cost to have it printed in accordance with the Court's rules would run well over $5,000. An amount I could no longer afford. My steady girlfriend, Jihada, was not only a jealous mistress but a very costly one as well and would be the death of me yet. Since I was now a member of Bakunin's "lumpenproletariat," I made an in forma pauperis motion that would allow me to file my petition in a different format costing a couple of hundred dollars. In America, only the poor or rich can afford to use the legal system, but the poor generally don't know enough about their rights or are too intimidated to fight for them in court. That leaves the rich as the only group with meaningful access to justice American style.

Jeff knew my economic plight and after reading over my petition volunteered to contact a partner he knew in a prestigious Washington, D.C firm to see whether the firm might take my case pro bono because the issues were interesting. If so, the firm would pay for the printing, rewrite the petition and donate its time. The firm would also handle the oral argument, which I didn't like, because I wanted to verbally battle with the Supreme Court Justices. However, having that firm's name on the brief would increase the chances of the Court accepting my case for review. The Supreme Court rejects review of 90% of pro se cases while refusing to hear 60% of cases in which the petitioner is represented by a lawyer that's not the petitioner. Jeff's contact tried to interest his firm, but the pro bono committee decided not to because the committee only took cases involving non-government organizations, that is, do-gooder groups. So I continued as a lone gun and filed my petition in forma pauperis.

Despite my poverty, I wasn't about to give up partying. One Friday night, I journeyed uptown with some of my fellow Salsa students to a Dominican club at 167th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The place was small but the music great—all Latin. There were too many guys, however, but it didn't matter. Three chicks from class came along, so I danced with them and tried to hustle a native girl here and there.

The club had one restroom, so the best place to hit on the babes was while standing in line for the toilet. They weren't about to walk away if I didn't appeal to them. One, however, did ignore my opening lines, although it's hard sometimes in New York City to know whether the girl's not interested or doesn't speak English. Perhaps, I should have mentioned "Benjamin Franklin" that's a universal language. A second babe was polite, but the third really responded, laughing at me jokes while intermittently touching my arm—sure sign she's interested. Losing her after the commode, I went on a search and fine mission. Spotted her with some guy wearing an extra large gold chain. She saw me, smiled without the guy noticing, and I smiled back. Both of us knew and wistfully regretted we weren't going to hookup because the next step would have caused unpleasantness for all, so I went back to my friends to dance some more.

The next time on my way to the bathroom, some lady with a large posterior bumped into him and sent me tumbling over the bandstand onto the floor, flat on my back. As I laid there like a drunken Russian, a young guy, wearing a couple of gold chains, reached down and pulled me to my feet. Thanking him, he nodded you're welcome. That's what I liked about places with the demographics of that club. The people were civilized. This young guy actually showed some concern. If I had fallen in an Eastside, preppy, white bar, they would have gone about their partying stepping over or on me. Education and money don't breed manners. But had I done something obnoxious or disrespectful uptown, I would have been bounced out on my head, which I would have deserved, as do so many arrogant yuppies in the downtown bars.

Stupid Girl (Stones)

Since the Second Circuit ruled in the Russian mafia defendants' favor, they could recover from me the costs for printing their briefs. Under the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, the defendants had to request printing expenses within 14 days of the Appeal Court's judgment. No one did, although Flash Dancers' attorney Rudofsky made a motion for his client's costs after the 14-day deadline had passed. Rudofsky asked the panel of judges presided over by Sotomayor to excuse him for missing the deadline because:

"I was attending a Bar Association meeting in California when the Clerk's written notification regarding the submission of an itemized bill of costs was received and due to several sets of motion papers and briefs required to be filed in several other matters, immediately following my return to New York, I did not see this item."

Rudofsky screwed up because of a junket to California during the cold weather and bad eyesight and was now trying to make me pay for his mistake. He also tried to slip in a couple of charges not allowed under the rules, such as the cost of mailing Flash Dancers' brief to all the parties involved in the appeal.

My response told the Second Circuit Court that he belongs to a three member firm, which means when he's out-of-town or dealing with other cases, his firm must have procedures in place to prevent missing legal deadlines. At the very least, someone must open his mail and keep him apprised of court decisions, but if not, California has Internet service and Rudofsky could have gone on line at any time to check whether the Court had made a decision, assuming he wasn't on the beach catching rays. Rudofsky was simply trying to shift the consequence of his firm's negligence to me by asking the panel to suspend the deadline required by the rules of procedure. No man should be allowed to escape the consequences of his own wrong, which is what negligence is. He represented Flash Dancers—not me. The harm Flash Dancers suffered because of its attorney's incompetence was not my fault. If anyone should pay for the printing, it was Rudofsky. In addition, I asked the Court for sanctions against Rudofsky for wasting the Court's and my time.

Rudofsky replied he “has been an honorable member of the Circuit Court Bar and practitioner in that Court for more than thirty (30) years.” So what! That's no excuse for violating the rules, if anything, he should know better, so I told the Court:

“What we have in Mr. Rudofsky's bill of costs motion and his opposition to plaintiff's sanction's motion is not a law firm that got caught in a force majeure but rather a firm that shuts down when one of its three members is voluntarily in California because of an inept system or no system for tracking cases. That is not the fault of the plaintiff or this Court, and it is unbefitting of a long-time practitioner before this Court to blame everyone else for his firm's mistakes.”

In the Second Circuit, however, who was at fault no longer mattered, especially with the man-hating Sotomayor at the helm of a panel. Sotomayor's panel denied my motion for sanctions and granted Rudofsky his costs, minus the ones he tried to pad his bill with.

The Sotomayor panel decision ignored the law in the Courts of Appeals. A court can excuse a party for missing the 14-day deadline, Apex Oil Co. v. Belcher Co. of N.Y., Inc., 865 F.2d 504, 505 (2d Cir. 1989), but only “for good cause,” Denofre v. Transportation Ins. Rating Bur., 560 F.2d 859, 860 (7th Cir. 1977). So the question was whether Rudofsky's junket to California coupled with his firm overlooking the papers notifying him of the appeal judgment amounted to “good cause”? Cases from a few Courts of Appeals said it did not.

In Sims v. Great-West Life Assur. Co., 941 F.2d 368, 370 (5th Cir. 1991), the lawyers claimed they had “inadvertently misplaced the blank Bill of Costs form that accompanied their copy of the judgment” and had not become aware of the 14-day period until receiving a motion from another party. The Fifth Circuit found these excuses “patently insufficient to demonstrate good cause to enlarge the time limits in question.”

In Denofre v. Transportation Ins. Rating Bur., 560 F.2d 859, 861 (7th Cir. 1977), the Seventh Circuit ruled “[t]he fact that the attorney of record was absent from his office [out of town on other matters] during the relevant times does not save the situation. We do not think that good cause is shown to enlarge a time period expressly specified in the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure by the mere in attendance to the daily chores in one’s law office, particularly by a firm of fourteen lawyers.... If attention had been given promptly to incoming matters which ... involve deadlines, there was sufficient time at least to have filed within the fourteen days a motion for extension of time....”

In Mollura v. Miller, 621 F.2d 334, 335-36 (9th Cir. 1980), the Ninth Circuit stated, “in attendance to office chores and good faith mistakes are not sufficient to show good cause. Claims for costs should be filed promptly after the entry of judgment. The definite time limit must be scrupulously observed by litigants.”

The situations that the Courts of Appeals considered “good cause” are those beyond a lawyer’s power, such as receiving a judgment after the 14-day period had expired because of Christmas mailing delays, Knoblauch v. C.I.R., 752 F.2d 125, 128 (5th Cir. 1985), or as a result of the shutdown in aviation, including U.S. Postal flights, following 911, Tickmor v. Choice Hotels International, Inc., 275 F.3d 1164, 1165 (9th Cir. 2002).

Trips to sunny Californiay and overlooking Court correspondence do not “good cause” make, but Sotomayor and her panel ruled it did. So I appealed by filing a petition requesting that all the judges in active service on the Second Circuit reconsider the panel’s decision. The full court can overrule any decision by a three-judge panel, but first a majority of the judges must agree to hear the matter, which requires a Petition for Rehearing En Banc. The Second Circuit grants very few en banc petitions a year, but I filed one anyway. A copy of my petition would be circulated to every judge, so I figured, assuming the judges actually read it, the petition would at least expose Sotomayor and her panel for making a decision clearly contrary to the law.

After filing my Petition for Rehearing En Banc, I receive a letter from Shatisa Gibbs, the employee in the Clerk’s Office, assigned to my case. Gibbs said the “petitiin,” her spelling, was not acceptable and wouldn’t be docketed because it had been filed too late after the February decision of my appeal, the Summary Order. Gibbs had obviously confused my petition requesting a rehearing by the full court of the panel’s decision on Flash Dancers’ motion for costs with asking for review of the original appeal decision, the Summary Order I was trying to get the Supreme Court to review. Okay, busy bureaucrats make mistakes, so I called her to clear up the misunderstanding.

Boy, what a nasty, arrogant and stupid girl she is. Gibbs said the rules didn’t allow me to file a petition for rehearing en banc of the Flash Dancers’ motion.

“Yes they do. I talked with the administrative attorney in the Civil Appeals Management Office, and he said such a petition could be filed for reconsideration of a panel’s decision of a motion. En banc petitions are not limited to the Circuit’s decisions of appeals.”

“I don’t care what he says. I don’t work for him. This is a different part of the court.”

“Are you an attorney?” I asked.

“No I’m not!” she said with hubris dripping in her voice. “I’m telling you, you can’t file that petition.”

Hanging up, I was amazed that an ignoramus like her worked in the Second Circuit, but of course, I shouldn’t have been. Additionally, I regretted having mailed her a “Thank You” card for doing her job the previous year. Should have sent her a white towel to wear on her head, so she could pretend at being a blonde, since she was just as stupid.

Rather than a towel, I sent her a motion asking the Second Circuit Court of Appeals to tell Gibbs to docket my Petition for Rehearing En Banc of Sotomayor’s decision requiring me to pay Flash Dancers’ cost. The Rules of Appellate Procedure state, “A majority of the circuit judges who are in regular active service may order that an appeal or other proceeding be heard or reheard by the court of appeals en banc.” My Petition for Rehearing En Banc of the decision on Flash Dancers’ motion fell under the “other proceeding” part of the rule, despite Gibbs’ proclamation to the contrary.

What a piece of work is female. They weasel a little authority and right away believe they can imperiously do what ever they want according to their emotional whim of the moment and expect men to genuflect in submission. There is a theory, so far proven true by the Feminazis, that power should never rest in feminine hands for they know no restraint in the harm they will gladly do men.

Eight days after filing my motion against Gibbs, the Second Circuit granted it. Nice to see the Court doing what it should, but the absurdity of the situation was simply amazing. In the 21st century in the United States of America a man has to file a motion with a Federal Court of Appeals to direct a female employee of that Court do her job.

You haven't heard nothing yet! Gibbs still refused to docket my Petition. In the face of a Second Court of Appeals directive, she still refused. It began to look like the Court had no power over princesses who worked for it of which Gibbs was clearly one with all the negative connotations.

Princess Gibbs then telephones me with her latest lunacy. "I'm calling regarding your petition. You filed a petition. Did you file a petition?"

Is she kidding, I'm wondering, but said nothing.

"That was my question because I see that you filed a motion to file a petition late, and I received a package of 25 copies. I think you assumed it was a petition but that's not actually a petition."

To myself in disbelief, can't you read ditz? It says Petition for Rehearing En Banc on the front page, and only petitions require 25 copies. Motions require a special cover, an original and three copies. But I was cool and said, "No it's a petition for rehearing en banc"

"Well, with a petition for rehearing, there is a limit of 15 pages [mine was seven] plus it has to have the decision attached to it [mine did], and it has to have a full caption [mine didn't]. Also, your petition is not fully numbered.

"What do you mean not 'fully numbered'?" She probably lacks the ability to count along with her inability to read the Court's rules.

"You have numbers, exhibit A then exhibit B and then it starts from numbers again."

That is how virtually every legal paper submitted to every court in the land is organized. The first part contains a narration of facts or arguments with the pages numbered in ascending order just like books, magazines and newspapers: 1, 2, 3, etc. The documents that the narration refers to are attached to the back as exhibits with each assigned a letter and arranged alphabetically: A, B, C, and so on. Each document included as an exhibit also has its own page numbers in ascending order. Now is that clear children. Princess Gibbs apparently needs to repeat the third grade. What a blooming idiot, but I was still cool and said, “Let me get the procedural problems down here. Number one is ....”

The Princess cut me off, “Let me direct you to the Rule 40 [wrong rule, it’s actually 35] if you have any questions.”

“I’ll review the petition and see if all this is accurate and if it is, I’ll correct it.”

The only accurate criticism, however, by Princess Gibbs was that the front page of my petition didn’t list all the parties. That’s what she meant by it not having the “full caption.” Everything else she said was wrong under the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, but then again princesses have their own rules that change with the emotions produced by the unbalanced biochemical reactions in their bodies, or, this princess was intentionally jerking me around.

After listing all the parties on the front page, I got Alan send Gibbs another 25 copies of the petition. By having Alan mail the copies instead of me, I had proof of service from a third party in the form of Alan’s affidavit. I didn’t put it pass Princess Gibbs to claim she never received the copies. As an added precaution, I sent a copy of the petition’s cover letter outlining her screw-ups to the Chief Deputy Clerk. He was the highest-ranking employee in the Clerk’s Office who was “apparently” a man. Even so, I still had no faith that anyone in the Clerk’s Office would do his or her job.

After a month with still no docketing of my petition, I wrote the Chief Judge a letter—my fourth attempt to prod Princess Gibbs into doing her job. If the letter went nowhere, I’d start a “mandamus” action against the entire Court, another interesting fight: me versus the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, and a “Bivens” action against Princess Gibbs. Any citizen can bring a mandamus suit, which means “we the people command” the Federal Government, or any part of it, to do what it’s suppose to do. The Bivens action allows citizens to sue individual Federal Government officials or agents for violating someone’s constitutional rights. Since the violation of a person’s rights by officials and agents exceeds the job authority granted by the Federal Government, only the individual can be dragged into court under Bivens, not the Government. Princess Gibbs’ refusal to follow the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and docket my petition as required by my motion that the Court granted violated my right of access to the Court, and if she did so because I’m a white, middle-aged man, then she also violated my right to equal protection under the 5th Amendment.

Subterranean Homesick Blues

During the battle with Princess Gibbs, I met a Rwandan aristocrat in my Hip-Hop class: tall, pretty, a model, Tutsi and friendly, although with a French boyfriend, as if that mattered. She was only in town for a month and had a strange schedule. Maybe not so strange, it was similar to the Commie Ho’s: up around 10 AM, lots of telephone calls in the morning and for the rest of the day out modeling or something. I called her mobile morning, noon and night, but she never answered. She hadn’t set up her voicemail, so I couldn’t leave a message, but she would see on her phone that I had called and would call me back. Unfortunately, I was always in the law library and never noticed she called until I left for the day. Then I’d try her again, which only started all over again the same whirlpool of man and girl futilely reaching out for each other. Her return calls eventually stopped, and I assumed she went back home.

One Saturday, Mark and I went to an Upper Eastside bar. I usually stayed out of these joints because the guys were embarrassments to men in general and white men in particular, which is where this stereotyping society places me. One bozo in a trio of blanco yuppies pulled a thong out of his pocket and tried to adorn some girl's head with it. What a dunce, not because he treated the broad like trash, which is what she was, but because that move wouldn't get him anywhere. The point is to take a girl's thong off, preferably with your teeth, not put it on the opposite end of her body. The only female vacuum of interest to a man is her lower not upper one. Mark and I just looked at this pitiful spectacle and smiled.

Some distance off to my right was another mixed-up and insecure guy standing next to a hot looking blonde who was sitting alone at the bar. The guy just stood there, kept looking at the blonde but didn't say anything.

"Look at this guy wasting valuable real estate," I said to Mark. "Why doesn't he move, so someone else can take advantage of that strategic position? These white guys have been so brainwashed by the Feminazis that they don't know how to pick up chicks anymore."

"Here's your chance," Mark said. I turned and the guy was gone, yes!

Her name was Brynn, which rang a bell from somewhere in the dim reaches of my memory. At WNEW TV News, I knew an intern called Brynn but this was not she, maybe her daughter. We talked about nothing, laughed a little and then I hit a chord. This hot young thing was bored silly of the leftover college and graduate school scene in Upper Eastside bars. When I started telling her about the social world beyond preppydom—Salsa and Hip-Hop, life gleamed back into her eyes. She wanted something new, but would she have the courage to try. She gave me her email address, and I sent her information on my Salsa class, but she never showed. More important, however, after talking with Brynn, it dawned on me that I had stumbled into a gold mine of nookie. Every bar on the Upper Eastside was probably full of girls like her—tired of the confused androgynous guys created by the first generation of Feminazi mothers. All I needed to do was to go mine that gold.

A couple of weeks later, Mark and I headed to upstate New York to catch a performance of the Hip-Hop dance troupe his younger brother Chanan danced with. Mark wanted some videotape to put together a digital resume for the group. I wanted to hit on some coeds and get out of the City for the first time in two-years.

The performance took place at Mount Saint Mary College west of Poughkeepsie, a rural area of more cows than people, or so it seemed to me, and too much rain. The dance troupe consisted of some guys Chanan had gone to Mount Saint Mary with, including his girl friend Pilly, who choreographed the group, and another a hot babe. Some of the guys I knew from when they would come into Manhattan to hit the clubs. These guys could dance! In a club, they'd form a circle and one guy or girl would jump in the middle to do a routine. Soon a crowd would gather around to watch, which I would exploit to tell this or that girl I was the groups' lawyer, a little white lie.

At Mount Saint Mary while the group went over their routines, I walked around the student union trying to corner one coed or another. Talked to a couple but nothing more. The show included a number of groups singing or dancing but they were all a snooze except for Chanan's. The bimbo master of ceremonies clearly reveled in the attention of the spotlight, but she didn't have the mental ability to think of anything witty to say, so she kept conducting a geography lesson by rote. She'd say "Puerto Rico" and the audience cheered, then "New York City," more cheers, "Brooklyn," some cheers, "Bronx," almost as many cheers as "Puerto Rico." Her favorite, however, was "Puerto Rico." She repeated it nearly every time an act finished. What about "Paterson, New Jersey," I kept asking of my birth place—nothing.

After the show, we went to a diner for dinner with most of the troupe and a few other students. Pilly and I sat next to each other with Mark and Chanan opposite us in the same booth.

The others were at a table to the back of us and across the aisle. We ordered. While waiting, I noticed this white, middle-aged couple diagonally across from Pilly and me staring at the two of us with daggers of bigoted condescension. I stared them down and figured that was it. My pancakes came, but the couple was still staring hatefully at Pilly and me. That was it! I had put up with this garbage years earlier while hanging out with a co-worker at Columbia and, during law school in D.C., with the daughter of a couple of black panthers, but no more, and definitely not when I'm about to eat my pancakes.

I got up, walked over to these two dirt farmers with a cumulative education of the eighth grade, if they were lucky, and said, "I'm a lawyer," slapping my business card on their table. "If you two don't refrain from your bigoted staring at my friends and me, I'm going to drag you into court for harassment. Not state court, but Federal Court!"

They didn't say a word. The guy pushed my card towards to me to which I said, "Keep it, I've got plenty," and went back to enjoy my pancakes. The dirt farmers moved to another table. They should have kept going until they reached Mississippi.

After dinner, everyone was going to hit a club, but that was a few hours off, so I ended up crashed on someone's bed in a dorm room without heat. Hadn't, I been in this situation before?

Around midnight, we all met outside a club in Poughkeepsie in the rain. Mark and I stood in the back of the short line, the others in the front. Some arguing started at the entrance between Chanan's friends and two white bouncers, so at Mark's suggestion, I went to see what I could do. The bouncers said management's policy prohibited customers from wearing a track sweatshirt with a hood, which some of the guys with us had on. They volunteered to put their sweatshirts in their cars despite the rain when just then up walks some bimbo in a sweatshirt and hood. Into the club she goes without any problem.

“Hey, how cum she can go in with a hoodie but we can’t!” Chanan and his buddies demanded.

“Yeah, why do you let her in and not us? This is bogus!”

The bouncers wouldn’t answer, so I told one of them to get the manager, hoping some reasoning with the boss might resolve the situation, since most bouncers just do what they are told by management. Out comes this white, arrogant troglodyte who comes up with a new reason to keep the Hip-Hop guys out.

“They’re pants are too baggy!”

Looking down at the pants the manager was pointing to, they weren’t any bagger than the “easy fit” Levis that I buy. Just then, up walks some white guy in pants as baggy as those prohibited by the manager, and into the club this guy goes without any problem. Now I’m ticked off and Chanan and his friends’ tempers start to flare. I threaten to sue the club for discrimination making sure they know I’m a lawyer. The manager retreats back inside. One bouncer retorts, the guy they just let in wasn’t white but Hispanic, to which Chanan and his buddies justifiably start cursing the bouncers. Meanwhile, I’m trying to keep myself between the white bouncers and Chanan’s group whose expletives are justifiably escalating. One bouncer, with the other standing behind him, begins venting his bigoted based anger on me. Fine, I’m used to hostility. Besides, the last thing I wanted was a fight in which Chanan and his young friends ended up behind bars in a part of the country that time had forgot. So I stayed in the middle, certain the bouncers wouldn’t hit a gray-haired, white attorney. But if they did, I could feel Mark somewhere behind me ready to intervene to quickly end any altercation. Just then a cop car rolls up. Great, it’s the Gestapo, or more accurately “Bull” Connor’s fan club. I turned from the bouncers and started a little crowd control with my arms out stretched motioning Chanan and his buddies down the street while they continued inveighing the bouncers who deserved that and more.

We made it to another club without the cops interfering, but by then I was seething inside. Not because some 80 I.Q. bouncer got in my face, but because ignoramuses can violate the rights of others without having their heads blown off. Mark said, “Try to put it aside,” so I had a couple of drinks and start doing a sandwich dance on this little white blonde friend of one of the hip-hoppers, Moss. He took up the rear and I the front with her in between—its new age dancing. But I wasn’t sure whether she was Moss’ girlfriend or just a friend until Mark pulled me off her. So I hit on a few other chicks without success. Mark and I caught a 3:30 AM train back to civilization. After my sojourn, I couldn’t understand why anyone would live in that part of the country. I’m white and I won’t.

Money

In April, a legal battle arose over a small amount of money. Judge Castel in the District Court finally got around to focusing on my request for reimbursement from the defendants of my costs in using a process server. The defendants violated the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure by refusing to accept my Complaint by mail, which required me to use a process server. The defendants’ attorneys decided to ignore the mailed Complaint out of the usual low-life lawyerly effort to increase an opponent’s workload and expenses even when it violates the rules. Judge Castel instructed the defendants to submit reasons why they shouldn’t reimburse me for the costs to use a process server.

Only Dubin and Rudofsky put up a fuss. The others paid, except for the Commie Ho, no surprise there.

Dubin made two main arguments, first:

Plaintiff's letter application provides absolutely no details or supporting documentation and utterly fails to satisfy the burden of demonstrating that plaintiff served a waiver of service upon the defendants, that defendants failed to respond, that plaintiff complied with the procedures designated under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d)(2)(A)-(G) and that plaintiff incurred additional costs by defendants alleged failure to respond.

Dubin essentially said, "Oh yeah, prove it, and prove that my client didn't respond."

Proving what I did was easy, I kept records. But proving that someone didn't do something or as it's called in the law "proving a negative" is well near impossible. It's a tactic the Inquisition used against scientists and Protestants, Stalin used against military officers in the 1930s purge trials, the Nazis used against everybody and the Feminazis always use against men.

Take the Justice Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings. Some broad, backed by the Feminazis, accused Justice Thomas of doing this and saying that at sometime in the past. How could Justice Thomas possibly prove he didn't? He would need a 24-hour videotape of all his activities to show that what the broad claimed had happened, didn't—that's the negative, which is impossible to prove. In America, before the Feminazis pretty much took over, the broad's accusations would require additional proof before anyone took them seriously because one of the main tenets held sacred by the founding fathers of this country was that the accused are presumed innocent until proven guilty. The person making the accusations had to do more than just say believe me. They had to provide evidence, but that cornerstone of liberty has largely vanished for half of America's population. Now, the presumption is all men are guilty until they prove themselves innocent and all broads innocent no matter what they do.

My response included:

Bradley E. Dubin has represented the above defendants throughout this case and, assuming he has not lost all or most of the papers submitted, has in his files all the "details or supporting documentation" that show the plaintiff has complied with Rule 4(d)(2). Mr. Dubin's clients chose to ignore their "duty to avoid unnecessary costs of serving the summons," Rule 4(d)(2), and now Mr. Dubin chooses to ignore his duty not to conceal or knowingly fail to disclose pertinent information to this Court, especially when he knows the details and supporting documentation that he now claims do not exist actually lie in his filing cabinets.

Mr. Dubin's objection falsely implies his clients did respond by stating the plaintiff fails to show that the "defendants failed to respond." The plaintiff, a lawyer admitted to practice before this Court, affirms the defendants did not respond; therefore, the burden shifts to Mr. Dubin's clients to show they did. Mr. Dubin's clients can do that by producing copies of the signed and dated documents of their response plus an affidavit that such were mailed to me.

Dubin's second argument claimed that his "logic dictates that plaintiff should not be entitled to recover costs of serving a frivolous action, which has been dismissed with prejudice and affirmed by the Second Circuit." To which I countered, "There's been no finding by any court that this civil RICO action is frivolous. Mr. Dubin's brand of logic is not the law," since the only way a defendant can escape payment requires a showing of "good cause," and just calling a suit "frivolous" is not that. Dubin lost that round, but what did it matter—nothing.

Rudofsky took a different tack. He claimed some of the costs I included weren't permitted under the rules, although they were. He also tried to mislead the District Court into believing a final decision had been made by the Second Circuit that I owed Flash Dancers the printing cost of its brief. Had the decision by Sotomayor and her panel been the end of the line in the Second Circuit, Rudofsky could offset the printing cost against the amount Flash Dancers owed me for my use of a process server. The Second Circuit, however, would not have a final decision until it dealt with my Petition for a Rehearing En Banc. Rudofsky lost on both issues but won on a minor one that saved Flash Dancers about $60 while costing it a lot more just to pay Rudofsky to make the objections. But what did Flash Dancers care? The owners save millions every year just by cheating on the strip joint's taxes.

Don't Play That Song (You Lied)

The Supreme Court allowed the defendants until the end of May to file their briefs opposing my Petition for a Writ of Certiorari, but no one bothered, except Flash Dancers.

Rudofsky filed a two-page, rancorous memorandum to which he attached my entire Complaint and Supplemental Complaint, which he failed to print on both sides of the pages in order to make them look more voluminous than they were—a subtle trick to subconsciously ward off busy judges and clerks from a case. Rudofsky was playing the same old defense song: load a court down with papers not needed to decide the issues, since the appendix I submitted already contained the pertinent parts of both complaints, and use acrimonious words to stir emotions against me so as to deflect attention from the legal issues of Flash Dancers’ RICO violations. Basically, try the individual, not the issues—usual Russian and political correctionalist scheme to divert government officials from fairly weighing the arguments. Rudofsky even made clear in his memorandum that his tactics were intended to submarine the reasonableness of my petition’s argument. But why bother? The odds were already overwhelmingly in his favor that the Supreme Court would not grant review of my case. Maybe he needed the billing fees he charged for his memorandum to payoff his trip to California.

Rudofsky accused me of intentionally trying to deceive the Supreme Court with my abridged versions of the Complaint and Supplemental Complaint by claiming they disguised my “bald assertions, periphrastic circumlocutions, unsubstantiated conclusions, or outright vituperation and subjective characterizations or conclusory descriptions.” The Supreme Court’s rules, however, don’t require the inclusion of the entire complaint in a petition for certiorari, just those sections essential to understanding the petition’s arguments. Sup. Ct. R. 14(1)(i)(vi). Even so, if Rudofsky was right in his characterizations of my complaints, then why didn’t he list for the Court the specific allegations to which each of his objections applied? Because he couldn’t, but more importantly, he just wanted to plant the seed in the minds of the Justices and clerks that I was duplicitous. He knew full well that neither the Justices nor the clerks were going to go through my complaints to confirm or disprove his accusations. Rudofsky was just using a Hitler tactic: if you're going to lie, tell a big one because the chances are people wouldn't bother to disprove it and they may buy into some of it.

Rudofsky's angry venting even claimed my case "patently incredible, patently vexatious and unreasonable"—not when it's against members and associates of the Russian mafia.

"The Russian mafia has been operating in the United States for years. Scott P. Boylan, Organized Crime and Corruption in Russia, Vol. 19, Fordham Int'l L.J., 1999, 2013 (1996). With the fall of the Soviet Union, the activities of Russian organized crime groups have spread to the United States and Europe. Id. 'Not only does the Mafia kill and steal in Russia, it does so in the United States as well.' Id. at 2001. Mafia members are involved in 'theft, extortion, money-laundering, gun-trafficking, drug running, prostitution, smuggling, loan sharking, contract killing and more.' Id. 'The U.S. Department of Justice has established task forces to deal with the Russian Mafia in New York, Los Angeles, and Miami.' Id. In 1994, the Russian mob had more than 300 members in the New York area alone, making it larger than the Bonanno, Colombo, or Lucchese crime families. Allan Friedman, The Organizatsiya: Brooklyn's Booming Russian Mob is Slicker, Smarter, and Much Meaner than La Cosa Nostra, N.Y. Mag., Nov. 7, 1994, at 50. Russia's international professional criminals have caused the most economic damage in the U.S. Scott O'Neal, Russian Organized Crime, FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin, May 2000."

Rudofsky also criticized my complaints as full of "subjective characterizations and conclusory descriptions." To which, I essentially answered, oh yeah, what about this!

"Flash Dancers openly operates a sexual bazaar in Times Square, New York City, which hardly puts it in a position to claim the allegations against it in this case are 'subjective characterizations or conclusory descriptions.' A quick scan of Flash Dancers' website, www.flashdancersnyc.com, reveals just some of the defendant's sordid activities. The site has been tamed down a great deal since this case started in the federal courts. Previously, the site sold pornography, escorts and the viewing of live sex acts over the internet in the same manner that New York Elites and Exotica 2000 did before U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement closed down those Russian mafia operations for prostitution and money laundering."

"Defendant Cybertech Internet Solutions, Flash Dancers' website administrator and designer, continues to advertise Flash Dancers at <http://www.stripclublist.com/c.asp?c=8534> with links to escort services that include travel packages sporting various prostitutes. Rather than continue to advertise such illegal interstate activity on its own website, Flash Dancers uses the vast Internet network operated by Cybertech for selling just about everything involving sex. Flash Dancers' other strip clubs, Private Eyes and NY Dolls, <http://www.nydollsclub.com/aboutus.asp>, are also advertised on the Cybertech network.

Rudofsky should like the analogy of Flash Dancers to New York Elites and Exotica 2000. Cybertech's Internet Network used to advertise Exotica 2000 before that whore operation was busted. Exotica and New York Elites, different names for the same call-girl service, operated in 22 states and overseas with over 200 hos, charging $500 to $1,500 an hour with the hos receiving 50%. The virtual brothel made $13.5 million in four years. Not bad, I'm clearly on the wrong side.

Rudofsky's memorandum even came up with a new personal attack in the defense lawyers' strategy of "don't confuse the courts with the law, just demonize the opponent."

"Any notion as to Hollander's good faith is quickly dispelled by review of his public website www.royandalina.com, which has titled Stupid Frigging Fool: The tragicomedy of an American lawyer and a Russian mafia prostitute, and has dedicated "To Mother, May She Burn in Hell."

How'd he find that? He couldn't have hired a private eye, since I wasn't that important to a multi-million dollar operation like Flash Dancers and its Internet partner Cybertech—or was I? Maybe one of the goons at Flash Dancers was trolling the web, but could any of them read? Besides the site should have been under construction. Who knows, but there it was, and I had to deal with it because Rudofsky was relying on the maxim that the truth always hurts the one who speaks it, especially unpopular truths. Defense wouldn't do, so I went on the offense.

"Character assassination ... has all too often been successful for the unscrupulous by hiding their nefarious deeds under the cloak of patriotism, religion or other popular views [meaning motherhood] depending on the particular time period in America's history.

"Flash Dancers' attorney forgets that the purpose behind the Bill of Rights, and of the First Amendment in particular, is to protect unpopular individuals [me] from retaliation—and their ideas from suppression—at the hand of an intolerant society. McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Commission, 514 U.S. 334, 357, 115 S.Ct. 1511, 1524, 131 L. Ed. 2d 426 (Stevens, J.)(1995). 'The proponents of the First Amendment ... were determined that every American should possess an unrestrained freedom to express his views, however odious they might be to vested interests whose power they might challenge.' Feldman v. United States, 322 U.S. 487, 501, 64 S.Ct. 1082, 1089, 88 L. Ed 1480 (Black, J. dissenting) (1944)."

Actually, it was the character of my mother that was odious, not the words used to describe the fate she deserved. My memory still recalls my seventh summer on this planet when I stepped on a rusty nail. Mother refused to take me to the doctor for a tetanus shot, so I spent those bucolic months waiting for my jaw to lock. But I didn't need to go there, in my reply to Rudofsky. The Justices of the Supreme Court know that appellations do not make the person. There are plenty of mothers out there who murder their children, boil their babies and otherwise destroy the living. Procreation does not a saint make. Even Rudofsky knows that, but he's the type of hypocrite who will pander to any popular belief in order to attack his opponent's freedom of speech while vociferously arguing that Flash Dancers' selling of porno and girls on the Internet is protected by the First Amendment as a form of commercial speech.

When I showed my buddy Blackie the quote Rudofsky used from that website, he laughed and laughed saying, "That's a classic, that's a classic." A phrase from our high school rah rah days that we used as a compliment for a cool act of rebellion. Thank you Mr. Rudofsky for that trip back in time when my classmates and I regularly mocked the hypocrisy of conventional delusions.

A minor sideshow occurred while I was drafting my reply to Rudofsky's memorandum. Two days after his papers arrived, which were also mailed to all the other defendants, someone called my mobile that Sunday morning but left no message. To me, if a stranger doesn't leave a message, then he shouldn't telephone me in the first place, so I didn't bother returning the call to the number on my caller id. Around two in the afternoon, I received a call on my landline.

"Hello, is this Roy?" Some middle-aged man nervously asked.

"Who's calling," I replied, expecting a telemarketer. If it was, I'd tell him Roy's not here, which I always do with telemarketers.

“John Jacoby. I’m calling about a web site and looking for Roy.” Okay, not a telemarketer, but some clown trying to pump me for information about the www.royandalina.com website that Rudofsky had learned about.

“Sorry, you’ve got the wrong number.” Having done plenty of these information-gathering calls when working in the news media, I was not about to participate in one that would likely cause me grief.

“I’m from the Federal Government,” Jacoby said. That was a mistake because I started to draw my verbal sword. Rather than scaring me, anyone from the Feds makes me want to punch them in the face. Couldn’t do that over the telephone, so I readied a verbal assault.

“Are you recording this?” I asked.

“No,” he lied. “I’m not calling on official business, just trying to figure something out about a web site.” I’m sure he was, but when he said the call wasn’t official and failed to identify the federal agency he worked for, I knew he was either a private eye or mobster.

“What’s your number,” I asked looking at my caller id, which registered (212) 212 1212.

“It’s (212) 212 2121.”

“Okay, that’s (212) 212 2121, got it!”—another lie.

“It’s a federal number,” he added. No it wasn’t, but I’d call to see whose it was.

“So you work Sunday?” Now I was just toying with him. I had worked for the Federal Government and no one worked on a Sunday.

“I work every day.” Maybe true, but not for the Federal Government.

“Too bad, take it easy,” and I hung up. Immediately my mobile rang. It was Jacoby again calling from (212) 212 1212, but I didn’t answer. Dialing on my landline the numbers from my caller id (1212) and the one he gave me (2121), I received a telephone company recordings that my calls couldn't be completed as dialed. Neither of the numbers existed. For the number that showed on my caller id, Jacoby had used a "black box" that allows a caller to send any number he wants to the receiver's caller id. Checking my mobile again more closely, I found that the first of Jacoby's calls came early in the morning. An obvious but lame attempt to catch me half-asleep in the hope I'd spill my guts. Jacoby also had made a second call to my mobile around noon, which I had missed completely. On that one he left a message.

"Yes, how are you? I was looking on your web site. I believe you and I can trade some information. As you'll notice my phone number is not trackable or traceable, so I'll call later on today and would appreciate it if you would pick up the phone call. I'm in the United States. I'm affiliated with certain government agencies, and I could use some of your information for a pending case, I guess you could say that is in the works. I'll try you later. Thank you very much. And have a great day."

At least he didn't say, "Have a nice day" as did John Madison a.k.a. Pierre.

Two days later I received an email from Onn Rapeika, ORapeika@Gti.Net:

"I find your site story very interesting but now site down and not working I not get chance to read all story, but story very good. Why site down? Can you please put back up? Or can you email me story? I on chapter 4. -Oveon Csheen"

To which I replied,

"Do I know you? I don't understand what you are talking about, please explain."

Of course, I did understand that it was the same guy using a different tack. What I couldn't figure out was who was behind it and why. Maybe Rudofsky, but he had already gotten into the site, which was now under construction as it should have been all along. If he or any of the defendants wanted the story, all they needed to do was go to www.been-scammed.com. They'd have to wait a while until the serialization was complete but so what.

That weekend, as usual, I checked the advertisements for various clubs to decide which ones were possibilities for hunting. The advertisement for club Deep assured I wouldn't be attending:

“Standard Saturdays. Open Bar. Hosted by Supermodel: Angelina Shipilina.”
You mean “Super Slut” don't you. How could she host anything besides whoring, she could barley speak English, and a Supermodel she wasn't. She, like all broads, was just constitutionally unable to tell the truth. The club should have at least changed its advertisement from “Open Bar” to “Open Ho.”

Heat Wave

Global warming finally turned the beginning days of summer in the City into the way they were before global warming—hot and humid with no place steamer than my Hip-Hop class. One sweltering Friday, most of the girls showed up in class dressed for Siberia: full-size shirt over a halter or bathing suit top and baggy sweat pants. Didn't they check the thermometer? They knew Broadway Dance didn't have air conditioning. Were they self-conscious because of a gray-haired chronic luster in the class trying to move up to molester? Who knows, but after ten minutes in that rotisserie, the shirts came off, the remaining tops rolled up to just below their boobs, the sweat pants down to the beginnings of their thongs and their pants' legs, or at least one in deference to fashion, pulled up as high as possible. The sweat started beading on their bare backs, firm bellies and around those breasts that still defied gravity. With every move, more sweat broke out, cascading into glistening streams down the curves of power Mother Nature had given them. One girl's thong had moved off from the center of her rear, so I stationed myself behind her for a time until distracted by another babe steaming up my eyeballs. They all looked so delicious that I hit on this one and then that one; I just couldn't make up my mind—cherry bonbons, gummy dips, dots, malt drops, juicy fruit, caramels, and chocolate squares. Oh, to lick the sweat from the snatch of every one of those babes. But as the old song advises, “Better go home son and make up your mind,” so I tried to focus on one of Bev’s assistants, a teenage something or other. She was friendly and laughed at my jokes, but I never made it to first base with her.

Salsa class brought a new opportunity one night in the shape of a tall Latina. Unlike Hip-Hop, a good deal of the dancing in Salsa class is with a partner. Everyone gets to dance with everyone. The instructor tells the girls to rotate to another guy, after repeating a routine with one partner. It reminded me of the make-out parties we used to have in sixth-grade, except then everybody was sitting and while kissing copping a feel. No kissing in Salsa, but now and then subtly copping a feel.

When the Latina rotated to me, I introduced myself.

“Hi, I’m Roy,” and held out my hand.

“I’m sorry, what’s your name?” she asked. Sometimes girls do this intentionally to throw a guy off balance.

“My name is Roy, but I usually just introduce myself as a lawyer.” She laughed and became friendly, thinking me overflowing with Benjamin Franklins of which I no longer had, but I wasn’t going to tell her that. Deception? Sure, but girls lie every chance they can to get what they want.

The Latina wore a tight, low cut top with tiny straps holding up large breasts of which ample amounts were visible. We started dancing the steps our instructor showed, and halfway through the song, I realized I had been staring at her tits the entire time. Not to be a complete cad, I shifted my revelry to her face—very pretty, but I could feel the tug on my eyes from those boobs as though they were magnets. I struggled to keep looking at her face so as to increase my chances of obtaining a closer inspection of those glands later on. Now I understood what Leni Riefenstahl meant by “Triumph of the Will.”

When the song ended, our instructor went over a new step. The Latina checked her mobile with its Technicolor screen.

“Does that take pictures?” I asked.

“Sure.”

I pulled out my mobile saying, “Mine doesn’t. It’s pre-millennium,” to which she laughed, a little.

“Did you get that in 1999?” she asked.

“Good guess, that’s when I picked it up, but I can’t see anything on the monotone screen because I’m wearing contacts.”

“You can’t see anything with your contacts?”

“Oh, I can see you, and if you were on the other side of the dance floor at the Copa I could pick you out.” She smiled at the compliment.

Moving closer to her under the guise of showing her the screen on my mobile, I said, “But when I go through the menu looking for a name, I can’t see a thing.”

“You mean you can’t read any of this?” she pointed, as I felt the heat radiate from that luscious Latina body with dark skin.

“Can’t make out a thing,” and I couldn’t.

“So how do you use it?”

“I ask some pretty girl to help me.” She gave me one of those knowing girl smiles.

When class ended, people stood around listening to our instructor give some information on upcoming events and Salsa techniques. Pulling out my mobile to make a call to this girl, I needed someone to find the number. So, I walk around with my mobile in hand looking for help and over comes the Latina with a smile.

“Do you need help?”

“Yes, I’m trying to increase the volume to high, would you do it for me?” I wasn’t so dumb as to ask her to find the girl’s number.

“Sure,” she said, taking the mobile. We flirted some more until the arrangement of people shifted while our instructor kept talking. Somehow I found myself in the middle of the dance room talking with two guys, including one from Russia with whom I chased girls when his wife was visiting their home country cheating on him. When I saw the Latina standing by herself near the room’s entrance, I left these guys to make my move for her telephone number or talk her into going to the Salsa club the class usually hit after our two-hour practice.

She smiled and said, “You’re a good dancer.”

I wasn’t, I stunk, but graciously accepted the compliment as one of her tactics to move our flirtation along. “Not as good as you. How long have you been taking classes?”

“Three months, but I grew up with the music.”

We were connecting, the pheromones were doing their job, but then my peripheral vision caught the gleaming, razor-sharp pendulum of the Matrix swinging in my direction again. This time it took the form of the two guys I had just left in the middle of the room. There they were, standing right next to me with grins spread over their mugs as they stared at the Latina trying hard to work up the courage to say something not completely inane. Unbelievable! These guys had followed me over to the Latina. I left them talking to each other so that I could hit on her, but they decided to interfere with my hustle.

The vast, vast majority of guys always do that, but only to a buddy or some other man they know. A guy will never, unless drunk or retarded, interfere with some stranger who's hitting on a chick, even if he saw the girl first or was previously hitting on her. Why, because he doesn't want a punch in the nose or he's afraid the girl will snub him. But when guys see one of their buddies or acquaintances hustling a pretty girl, the fear of a fight doesn't exist and neither does the dread of rejection because they already have an in with the girl through their connection with the guy who did the hard work of initiating the conversation. Insecurity toward girls also causes those guys' egos to push them into interfering. They're trying to prove to themselves and their buddy that they too can hustle girls, but they can't, unless their buddy breaks the ice first. It comes down to cowardice and self-doubt with a lot of stupidity mixed in.

Guys should realize that as soon as a girl has more than one man competing for her, she's at her most powerful. She'll grin with delight, play coy and even scold as she banks one guy off another. In the end, she'll either choose the highest bidder, pick one this week and another the next or reject them all while her ego inflates with the conviction that she is fulfilling her divine right to make guys stumble, bumble, mumble and trip over each other for her favor. That was a game I hadn't played since high school, and wasn't about to start again now no matter how big the Latina's pillows, so I went to the men's room ticked-off not at the girl but my alleged pals for ruining my hustle. And ruined it was, because by refusing to play her competition game, I insulted her. She knew why I left and likely said to herself, "He'll be back and when he is, I'll play with him like he was a mouse. How dare he not curry my favor!" I didn't go back.

A couple of nights later, an American guy and I went to Gonzales y Gonzales. A hot Latina babe paused to stand in front of the two of us. She'd have to wait until the second coming before the American guy hit on her, so I did. We flirted a little. She was looking for her friends in another part of the bar, so I temporarily halted my hustle figuring to pickup on her later by asking for a dance. She starts to go and immediately the American guy pounces. She fends off his overtures and moves on.

"What are you doing?" I ask him, really ticked-off.

He cavalierly answers, "You stopped talking to her, so I went after her."

"Don't you realize; I was setting her up for later?"

"Everybody does whatever they want," he says with laissez-faire, social-Darwinian disdain. That was something I had heard before, mainly in the former Soviet Union where nearly every individual religiously believes they are superior to all others. Such arrogance, really a product of insecurity, justifies in their eyes the astonishing lack of ethics and honor routinely exhibited by people from that part of world. They're willing to grovel like dogs, just to maneuver themselves into a position to rip someone off, take an unfair advantage or plunge a knife into another's back both literally and figuratively. You can take the person out of the former Soviet Union, but you can't take the former Soviet Union out of the person.

"Okay," I said, "if everybody does what they want, go hit on those two blondes sitting at the table over there. Go ahead! You drool every time you look in their direction. Walk over and hustle them."

This superior specimen of man just stood there with his brain short-circuiting.

“Go ahead hit on them,” I dared again. “I’ll even give you a line.” He just looked at them and turned to watch the dancers. Some people can only compete with a knife from the shadows.

To rub it in, I walked over to the two blondes, both very pretty, threw my opening line and started a fairly long conversation. Both were professional ballet dancers with the American Ballet Theatre—that was impressive. We talked about the Kirov and Bolshoi in Russia, laughed a little, and then I gave it a rest until the band started. With the first salsa tune, I started dancing with the taller of the two ballerinas. Leia couldn’t dance salsa, but that didn’t matter, since neither could I. She could, however, turn. Just one little movement of my hand and whooos, she was around in a flash with her arm seductively stretched above her head. Throughout our dancing, she wore this wide soft smile, probably her stage persona, but it still made me smile. Beneath her dress, I could feel a body of iron-band muscles. I wanted more, but she was moving to Seattle that Thursday. Too bad Mark wasn’t there. Had he been, I would have brought him into my earlier conversation with the two ballerinas, which might have led to a fun night for all of us. Leia was not about to leave her friend, typical for two girls out on the town, and I wasn’t about to help the American guy by introducing him to Leia’s fellow ballerina. After that night, I avoided hanging out with him. It’s tough enough picking up girls without having someone ready to interfere every time you’re on a roll. Besides, I’ve had my share of experience with the lack of scruples of insecure people.

The Chief Judge of the Second Circuit, as men born in the middle of the 20th Century always do, came through concerning my letter of complaint about Princess Gibbs. He referred the letter to the lady in charge of the Court’s Operations: probably one of those few females of competence so secure in her womanhood that she doesn’t need an emotional hatchet to deal with men. She sent me a very courteous letter of apology, something Feminazis like Gibbs are incapable of. Her letter confirmed that my Petition for Rehearing En Banc should have been sent to the full Court back in April and was now, months later, before the Court. The real justice came when she said she had a little sit-down with Princess Gibbs to explain how my petition should have been handled. That ought to teach Gibbs a lesson, for she sure needed one. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Scalia once wrote in a Court of Appeals decision, “No matter how bad someone is, [she] can always be worse.” But that’s not much solace when dealing with the Clerk’s Office at the Second Circuit of which Gibbs is just one example of belligerent incompetence. The Court eventually denied my petition, but at least some bureaucratic bimbo driven by feminine malice didn’t succeed in abusing her authority to obstruct the rights of a man. As for the money owed Flash Dancers for its printing costs, I never paid it. What was the man-hater Sotomayor going to do—send me to Guantanamo? Hot, humid climates were preferable, and, if I escaped, I’d get to ride around in 56 Chevys with hot Latinas and smoke Cuban cigars.

Before summer ended, I had lunch with Alan and one of the best tort lawyers in New York City. The lawyer and I had not seen each other since we were political enemies in the Riverside Democratic Club decades earlier. Despite our political warring, I always liked this guy and appreciated his superior verbal acuity in cutting me to ribbons. He was not someone to argue with, and all these years later had not lost his edge, especially when dicing bloodless, bureaucratic disciples of collectivism who overlook individuals in favor of “the people.”

Our waitress was very pretty, and I detected a familiar accent.

“Are you from Russia?” I asked, unable to stop myself.

“Yes, how could you tell?”

“By your accent. Where in Russia?”

“The southern part.”

Oh great! Would I never escape the curse that came from that part of the world?

Pausing, but I had to know and asked “Anywhere near Krasnodar?”

“Yes, in a little village outside of it.”

The Commie Ho had lived in a little village outside Krasnodar where I had visited her for the millennium celebration, which felt like two hundred years ago. The end to this conversation became apparent the moment I mentioned the name of the Ho’s village. “Is it Adygea?”

“Yes,” she said with great surprise, but I wasn’t. “Do you know Adygea?”

“I’ve visited there in another life.”

“That’s amazing that you were actually there. I’ve never met anyone here in America who has even heard of it!”

“I wish I hadn’t.”

“Why?” her pretty face asked with pretended concern.

“That my dear is a long story.”

Hey Joe

The U.S. Supreme Court made its decision to deny my Petition for Certiorari on September 25th—the birthday of the Commie Ho’s mother. From the dungeons of the Queens Family Court to the alleged lofty heights of the Supreme Court, there is no justice in feminarchy America for a man.

“Hey Joe” was suppose to be the final solution to this story, but I got distracted by an ancillary Jihada that grew into a crusade against the Feminists.

Stupid Frigging Fool

By Roy Den Hollander

Part 8

Ladies' Night

Christmas Eve 2006, bitter cold, and I'm standing in line with Mark and his younger brother waiting to get into club "Deep" on West 22nd Street. As we shiver, the girls in fashionable nothings strut to the head of the line, ignoring us, and enter for free—it's "Ladies' Night." Guys have to pay $20 and wait in the cold until the doorman allows them the privilege of paying to enter. In effect, the men are financing the girls' partying because the guys make up the price the girls don't pay.

Mark's brother grumbles, "How cum they get in for free, and we have to pay? Not just to get in, but to buy them drinks. They're the ones who live for sex; they should be paying us instead of acting like hos."

The other guys in the line agree, and a case from law school pops into my head: Seidenberg v. McSorleys' Old Ale House, Inc., 317 F. Supp. 593 (1970). In 1969, a couple of PC-Feminazis from NOW, the National Organization of Witches, walked into McSorleys' Ale House on the lower Eastside. The bar didn't have a doorman to stop them, just a policy of "men-only"—given the trouble girls often cause after a few drinks bought by some sucker. The bartender refused to serve them and escorted them to the door. The federal court in Manhattan ruled that the State's involvement with McSorleys' business was significant because of pervasive regulation by the state of the activities of the defendant, a commercial enterprise engaged in voluntarily serving the public except for women. Furthermore, the state has continued annually to renew defendant's license over the years despite its open discrimination against women, without making any effort in the exercise of the broad authority granted it, to remedy the discrimination or revoke the license which defendant must have in order to practice [discrimination]. . . . [T]he state's regulatory power in this area is far broader than in the case of an ordinary lawful business essential to the conduct of human affairs.

Because the State was pervasively involved, Equal Protection under the 14th Amendment applied, so McSorleys' sex-discrimination was declared unconstitutional for treating guys and girls differently, and the bar had to open up to girls.

Club Deep's Ladies' Night and all the other nightclubs in the City holding Ladies' Nights were just as pervasively controlled by the State as McSorleys' but treated guys differently than girls—a guy had to pay money to enter a club while a girl did not. Looked like a potential lawsuit for fighting against the discrimination of men and preferential treatment of females—the real objective and result of PC-Feminism. So I filed the idea away, and my buddies and I went to another club that was free for both sexes that Christmas Eve.

In May the following year, Mark and I were standing outside the club Taj on West 21st Street, which the Police closed to traffic on Saturday nights because there were so many clubs overflowing with parties. He was trying to call the hostess inside the club, a Swedish blonde to whom I had introduced him, to see if she could get us in for free. In the middle of the street were a hot black haired girl and a blonde, so while he dialed away on his mobile, I walked over and tried to pick them up. April, the black haired girl, was luscious. The discussion somehow came around to Ladies' Nights, and I told them of my idea to sue clubs for discriminating against guys.

April said, “And where will you find the time to bring such a suit. You lawyers are always busy.” She was right, and by that I knew she was dating a lawyer, which was probably why she didn't relinquish her phone number—she had her sucker hooked.

At that particular point in time, however, I did have the time, so in June 2007 I filed a sex discrimination lawsuit in the U.S. Southern District Court of New York against a handful of nightclubs running Ladies' Nights. That was the same court that had decided the McSorleys' case.

With the McSorleys' case as precedence, I thought I had a sure winner, since the only difference in the cases was that guys instead of girls were discriminated against by bars and nightclubs that the State "pervasively" regulated. In addition, my case presented an argument not used in the McSorleys' case—bars and nightclubs were carrying out a public or state function, so equal protection of the Constitution applied. The Constitution only applies where the government is involved, whether federal, state, or local. "[W]hen private individuals or groups are endowed by the state with powers or functions governmental in nature, they become agencies or instrumentalities of the state and subject to its constitutional limitations." Evans v. Newton, 382 U.S. 296, 299 (1966). Government involvement or state action may be found in situations where an activity that traditionally has been the exclusive, or near exclusive, function of the state has been contracted out to a private entity. Jackson v. Metro. Ed. Co., 419 U.S. 345, 352 (1974); Horvath v. Westport Library Ass'n, 362 F.3d 147, 151 (2d Cir. 2004). Guess what activity the states have always had exclusive control over—alcohol. The power of the state to control not just the sale and consumption of alcohol but the circumstances in which such occurs is an exercise of the ultimate sovereignty of a state. See Crane v. Campbell, 245 U.S. 304, 308 (1917). New York chose to delegate some of its exclusive functions to bars and nightclubs for operating premises where persons could purchase and consume alcohol. Bars and nightclubs, therefore, exercise a public or state function by which they are entirely dependent upon state decisions to operate successfully, See Flagg Bros., 436 U.S. at 158-59, so equal protection under the Constitution applies.

I also thought the media would ignore the case because the issue was discrimination against men.

The media, however, jumped all over it and me. But I enjoy being pilloried by public opinion—a sure sign that one is right as H.L. Mencken would say.

The real surprised, however, came in court before Judge Miriam Cedarbaum at the preliminary conference. Judge Cedarbaum, an avowed PC-Feminist, started by laughing and mockingly saying, “This is an unpopular case.” To which I agreed, and responded, “So what, popularity has nothing to do with constitutional rights.”

The hearing went downhill from there with Cedarbaum interrogating me the way TV talk show hosts do their non-PC guests. She’d ask one question that I’d start answering, then interrupt with another, so I’d start answering that one, then she’d interrupt with another, and all the time I was trying to get back to finish my answer to the first question but never did because the questions and interruptions kept coming.

Cedarbaum’s questions were based on papers that one of the defendant nightclubs had submitted a few days earlier as part of its motion to dismiss; that is, to throw the case out in the first inning. Under Cedarbaum’s rules, oral argument on that motion to dismiss was not scheduled to occur for another three weeks so as to give me time to put together my papers and arguments in opposition to the defendant’s motion. Preliminary conferences, unlike oral argument on a motion to dismiss, are used for case management, to set the case’s schedule and determine what issues can be settled.

Surprisingly, or perhaps not so surprisingly for a PC-Feminist, Cedarbaum treated the preliminary conference, for which I had all of one day’s notice, as the oral argument on the motion to dismiss. Cedarbaum and the defendant nightclubs had obviously laid a trap for me, figuring they could intimidate me into withdrawing the case by assuming I would not have any counter arguments or cases, since oral argument on the motion to dismiss was not for three weeks. But they goofed. Little did she or the nightclub attorneys know that I knew more about the law for this case than they.

The turning point in the conference came when Cedarbaum hostilely declared, “You have no authorities for this case!”

“Oh yes I do!” and I cited not only the McSorleys’ case, but a U.S. Supreme Court case that had used the McSorleys’ case—cases that the female defense attorney had left out of her papers, since they didn’t support her position. Something lawyers aren’t suppose to do, but then when did a PC-Feminist ever follow the rules. Cedarbaum ignored my cases at first, and said in a mocking fashion, “Are you a lawyer?” She knew I was, since I was admitted to the Bar of the Court where she was a judge and my complaint said as much.

Enough was enough, and I replied, “I move that you disqualify yourself from this case for bias toward me, bias toward the class of men that I represent and failure to recognize cases that are more relevant than those cited by the defendants.” That put her back on her Feminist heels, and she then asked for the citations to the McSorleys’ case and the U.S. Supreme Court case. Later on with some civility, she said, “You must respect me.” To which I replied, “I do, but you also have to respect me.”

That 40 minute battle, in which the defendants’ attorneys said virtually nothing, reminded me of arguing with a girl that I had gone out with too long. It also convinced me that Cedarbaum, in true PC-Feminist fashion, would find a way to rule against equal treatment for men, especially when to rule otherwise would cost girls money, and so she did.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit upheld her ruling and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case. The courts distinguished the McSorleys' case by ruling that the state's involvement did not occur at the door but somewhere between the door and the bar. Baloney! The state prohibits minors, drunks and terrorists from walking through the door of a bar, the state requires clubs to keep the lines of customers waiting to enter from making too much noise and becoming rowdy, the state has to approve the actual building in which the club is located and regulates any signs outside the club. If that's not pervasive regulation, then where does the state's control start? Is it the moment a person steps through the door to observe the unobstructed view required by the state? Is it where the luminance from the club's inside lighting falls requiring that a person be able to read a certain size print? Is it at the tables where the state requires a certain number based on the floor area? Is it at the restrooms where the state requires one for each sex, transgender or not? It goes on and on with what the state requires, but because PC-Feminism requires treating males as subhuman, the courts ruled against them.

As for the argument that the clubs were carrying out a public or state function that New York delegated to them, the courts ignored it. (Details of the court proceedings and arguments are at MensRightsLaw.net).

Imagine what the result would have been, if nightclubs charged girls to enter but not guys. The courts would have ruled that unconstitutional because it violated the PC-Feminist law that females must receive preferential treatment. It wouldn't matter that charging girls more was economically fair. Girls in their 20s who live in urban areas make more than guys in their 20s, and for those in their 30s, it's equal. Conor Dougherty, Young Woman's Pay Exceeds Male Peers', September 1, 2010, Wall Street Journal. Generally no one is interested in girls in their 40s, so it's girls in their 20s and 30s who frequent nightclubs. Charging them the privilege to find a guy to fleece only seems fair. Also, back in 2007, on a per-unit of time basis, the average girl, regardless of age or location, made more than the average guy. Guys had to work 44% longer to make the iconic $1 while girls made $.77. If the girls had worked as long as the guys, they would have made $1.08. They also likely made more than a guy on a per-unit of risk basis, since guys make up around 90 percent of the employees in the more dangerous jobs.

Most guys opposed the case and were in favor of Ladies' Nights because they thought it brought out lots of girls. Of course, most guys are idiots when it comes to girls. Ladies' Nights don't produce an overflow of chicks. One club owner told me he had ladies night as a way to attract men, which increased his sales of drinks—the real money-maker for a club. Guys show up expecting lots of babes, and while they wait, they drink, anticipating the babes who never come.

As for a girl who thinks Ladies' Nights bring out lots of girls, she'll see it as having to compete against more girls, which means fewer chances to attract a guy. Most girls aren't looking for chump change—free admission; they're looking for a chump to gold-dig. She'll simply add any admission fee to what she has already spent on a manicure, pedicure, leg waxing, hair styling, hair dying, latest fashions, and sexy shoes that are too tight. She's going where there's less competition. Take an informal sampling; go to clubs with Ladies' Nights and clubs without. See which has the highest percentage of girls. In NYC, there are more girls at non-Ladies' Nights.

If the Ladies' Nights case had been successful, the nightclubs would most likely have lowered the price to guys and raised it to girls. That would have meant every guy who entered a club would have more money to buy girls drinks. True the girls would have to manipulate more drinks from the guys to make up for their admission cost, but I was confident in their genetic ability to separate a man from his money.

Also, since the girls would have ended up drinking more, they'd have more fun and so would the guys. An added benefit was that in the morning, when the girls woke up with second thoughts about what they had done the night before, they could do what they always do—blame a man, in this case me, rather than the guys they partied with. It was a win-win situation for the guys, girls, and the clubs, but the PC-Feminists wouldn't have it.

Somewhere Beyond the Sea

Secrecy “‘provides a cloak for the malevolent, the misinformed, the meddlesome, and the corrupt to play the role of informer undetected and uncorrected.’
Appearances in the dark are apt to look different in the light of day.” Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 172 (1951)(Mr. Justice Frankfurter concurring).

Another case challenging the preferential treatment of girls and discrimination against guys, this time by the U.S. Government, charged that certain sections of the Violence Against Women's Act (VAWA), or as I refer to it, the Violence in Aid of Witches Act, or the State Violence Against Men's Act, violated the Constitutional guarantees of procedural due process, equal protection and freedom of speech for U.S. citizens, mainly men.

This lawsuit involved three other guys and myself as the plaintiffs representing the class of men who were targeted by VAWA, which was written by NOW, the Feminist Majority and other man-hating, non-profit corporations that receive federal funding. Vice President Joe Biden was responsible for its passage when he was a Senator, and Bill Clinton, or was it Hillary, signed it into law.

VAWA adopted some of the totalitarian ways of the Communist Party from the trash heap of history to control interpersonal relationships, mainly romance. It also funneled hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars into the pockets of private PC-Feminist organizations that provide advice to female aliens on how to fraudulently obtain citizenship.

Before VAWA, if a citizen husband decided to divorce his alien wife within two years of marrying her, the alien wife would be placed in deportation proceedings. If an American man who was dating an alien decided to break it off, the alien girlfriend would have to find another sucker to marry in order to avoid deportation when her temporary visa expired. Under VAWA, however, the alien wife or girlfriend, even if here illegally, can escape deportation and become a citizen by simply lying to Homeland Security and the Justice Department that her husband or boyfriend committed “battery, extreme cruelty, or an overall pattern of violence” against her. Those terms are so malleable under the Act that they include mockery, criticism, yelling, kissing her when she doesn’t want you to, calling her at work to see how she’s doing, not buying her the presents that she whines for, accusing her of cheating, or simply failing to do what she wants, when she wants by not reading her mind to determine what she really wants.

The moment she makes any of those or other accusations to the federal government, a veil of secrecy falls across the government’s determination of whether the American guy did what she claims he did. The secrecy is to shutout the American husband or boyfriend. He doesn’t receive any notice of the proceedings, and, if he learns about them, he can’t submit evidence to refute the accusations—any evidence from him showing he didn’t do it is ignored. The adversarial process is thrown out the window. It’s as though your favorite sports team is not told what stadium the championship game is in or the time for its scheduled defeat.

VAWA took the “he said” out of the “he said, she said.” Not only is the husband or boyfriend presumed culpable, but he’s not even allowed to prove differently, and that’s the intention of VAWA: to railroad and destroy American men by denying them due process. Even when the same accusations are made by the alien in a state court, and that court finds the man innocent, Homeland Security and the Justice Department ignore the state verdict and still find that the guy did what the alien says he did.

To be fair, the Act also applies to citizen females who marry or date foreign guys, but the vast majority, around 85% or more, of the U.S. citizens subjected to this Star Chamber proceeding are guys, which makes it a violation of equal protection by application. The words of the Act do not distinguish between the sexes, but in reality the Act is applied overwhelmingly against guys. And it happens to thousands of them every year.

After the federal government finds that a citizen committed a wrongful act, which can be anything from an innocuous insult to a felony, it promises that no harm will come to him because all its findings will be kept secret—except from (1) federal law enforcement officials, (2) state law enforcement officials, (3) local law enforcement officials, (4) Interpol (5) his ex-wife or ex-girlfriend, (6) federal agencies that provide her benefits, (7) state agencies that provide her benefits, (8) local agencies that provide her benefits, (9) private agencies that provide her benefits, and (10) nonprofit, nongovernmental groups that provide other services to his ex-wife or ex-girlfriend. All of those organizations have access to the VAWA fact-findings of wrong doing while the one against whom the facts were found—the American—does not.

If the American is looking for a job in government or a promotion within government, a background check will turn up the VAWA fact-findings—he won't get the job. If the American's job requires that he carry a gun, the VAWA fact-findings will cost him that job. He won't even know why because the law deters anyone from telling him with a fine up to $5,000. Just as the invisible hand of the McCarthy lists in the 1950s destroyed many innocent persons based on unsubstantiated accusations, VAWA does the same today—mainly to men.

Oh, and by the way, if any of the VAWA fact-findings about a citizen leaks or is intentionally made available to the general public, there is not a damn thing he can do—legally. There are no lawsuits or administrative proceedings he can bring to keep it from being published or to correct the false record once it's made public to prevent it from destroying his reputation, career, and life. The law is a modern-day witch hunt, only today the witches are doing the hunting.

Because VAWA's secrecy prevents any citizen from finding out exactly what the U.S. Government's fact-findings are and how they are being used against him, the U.S. Southern District Court for New York and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit ruled that our lawsuit's allegations of harm from VAWA were "speculative" and dismissed the case. Of course, the only reason the allegations weren't more specific was because the very statute the case challenged as unconstitutional prevented us from finding out what was going on behind the Government's closed doors, which is why we challenged VAWA in the first place.

By the courts' logic, proceedings authorized by Congress and carried out by the Executive Branch can make findings of fact against citizens, and those citizens cannot challenge the constitutionality of those proceedings or the accuracy of the findings because secrecy laws keep the proceedings and fact-findings concealed from them. Senator Joseph McCarthy would have loved that reasoning—there's no harm because Homeland Security and Justice violated your rights in secret and will not allow you to find out how its conclusions about you are being used to undermine your life.

Even the Inquisition allowed the accused to appear before its judges, although they were probably tied to the rack. The Inquisition at least gave people an opportunity to prove they did not do what they were accused of, but not the U.S. Government. With VAWA, you never know what you're accused of or who your judges are—they skip the rack and go right to finding you guilty. Under American justice, the PC-Feminists eliminated the need for the rack because confessions were no longer required—just the lies of aliens.

The impact of VAWA, besides destroying the careers of American men, is to deter guys from marrying or dating foreigners. After all, if females will squeeze their feet into tiny shoes with stilts on one end, constrict the lower part of their bodies in panty hose, interfere with their respiration with tight push-up bras, paint their faces with cancer causing colors, pluck their eyebrows, glue fake eyelashes to their eye lids, and conduct chemical reactions on their heads to change hair color just to catch a guy, they will surely use the government to violate a guy's rights if it increases their chances. Since not all Feminists are lesbians, but most are physically or psychologically unattractive, they needed a federal law to restrict American guys to the pool of American females; otherwise, what guy would be dumb enough to go out with a female who blames him for every stupid decision she ever made.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case. (Details of the court proceedings and arguments are at MensRightsLaw.net).

Woman's World

The third battle against preferential treatment for girls and discrimination against guys involved two lawsuits.

The first, Women Studies I, was against Columbia University's Women's Studies Program, the U.S. Department of Education for supporting the Women's Studies Program, and the New York State Board of Regents for both supporting the program and requiring that higher education adhere to Feminist dogma. The case claimed it was unfair for Columbia to have a Women's Studies Program but no Men's Studies Program in violation of Title IX and Equal Protection, and that the New York Regents and the U.S. Department of Education violated the Establishment Clause ban on government aiding religion by the Regents propagating the new-age religion of Feminism in higher education and the federal government supporting such.

In 2009 in New York, 57% of all college students were female, 63% of the Master's degrees and over a majority of the doctoral degrees went to females. Soon, females would receive 64% of the Associate's Degrees, over 60% of the Bachelor's Degrees, 53% of the Professional Degrees, and 66% of the Doctor's Degrees. If anyone was in need of special programs dedicated to the furtherance of their education and employability, it was men—not females.

Judge Lewis A. Kaplan of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York agreed with his Magistrate Judge's decision to dismiss the case. When a District Court Judge doesn't want to deal with a case, he assigns it to his Magistrate Judge and then accepts or rejects the Magistrate's decision. Judge Kaplan accepted his Magistrate's ruling on the Title IX and Equal Protection claims that the plaintiffs did not have standing because there was no harm to them under those two laws. As for the Establishment Clause claim, which the Magistrate largely ignored, Kaplan wrote, "Feminism is no more a religion than physics."

Now that might be true, but there is no way of telling without evidence of which there was none because the case never reached the stage where evidence is submitted to prove facts. The district court judge simply declared it such, not unlike the Kings and Queens of old. Despite this decree from on high, it was unlikely that any rational, non-PCer jury would find that the tenets of Feminism were as accurate as those of physics. A fundamental belief of Feminism is that the differences between the sexes are the result of social conditioning; that is, upbringing. Science, which includes genetics, evolution, and physics, disagrees. What's more irrational

(which is a characteristic of religion according to the U.S. Supreme Court) than believing sexual differences have nothing to do with genetics or evolution. The Judge was either an apostle who thought that Feminism was the one and only truth, or he was simply scared of the Feminists. I appealed.

In the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, during oral argument, one of the two judges resorted to a personal insult by asking me in a mocking matter, “Are you a lawyer?” I assumed he was a friend of the Ladies’ Night Judge Cedarbaum. Can’t these bureaucrats come up with original insults?

The Second Circuit upheld the District Court’s decision to dismiss. On the Title IX and Equal Protection claims, it ruled that any harm caused by the lack of a Men’s Studies Program was “speculative,” so there was no standing. Strange that the federal courts don’t say the same about the lack of a girl’s sports team when a college only has a boy’s team. Apparently the law is adjudicated one way for girls and another way for guys.

The Second Circuit also dismissed the claim that New York and the U.S. Government aided the religion Feminism because I did not state the obvious—that I was a taxpayer. Suing under the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment is the one instance where any taxpayer can be a plaintiff against the federal government. However, because I did not use the words “I am a taxpayer,” the Second Circuit dismissed that part of the case also. That type of pleading requirement had not been seen since the early 19th century when certain words had to be used or a case would be dismissed. A court of the modern era—late 19th century to the present, would have taken judicial notice of my being a taxpayer or sent the case back to the district court to allow me to present evidence, such as my income tax return. I requested the case be sent back so I could prove my taxpayer status, but the Second Circuit from the antebellum era refused.

The Second Circuit's decision was a Summary Order, which meant that the law and arguments used by the Court to throw the case out could not be relied on in other cases. Think of it as a medieval Queen free to make a decision in one case and a different decision in another case that was similar. Summary Orders are how the U.S. Courts of Appeals in nearly identical cases can rule against parties they don't like but later rule in favor of parties they do like. For example, assume girls bring a case against a Men's Studies Program for propagating a religion that states men are the chosen ones, and they fail to use the magic words, "We are taxpayers." The Second Circuit would ignore the decision against me and say the absence of those words doesn't matter. It's the exercise of arbitrary power.

Such Summary Orders are also near impossible to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court because they have no judicial importance, since the invented law and analyses only apply against the parties of that particular case. So if a Court of Appeals doesn't like who you are or what you believe, it simply makes up some law and arguments and you lose under a Summary Order. The law changes depending on whether you are a dissident or conformist—just like under the Commies in the old Soviet Union.

In an attempt to beat the Second Circuit's Summary Order and its reliance on discredited pleading rules that originated in the Middle Ages, I brought a second Women's Studies case alleging only a violation of the Establishment Clause in which I stated four times in the complaint that "I am a taxpayer." The Women's Studies II complaint also provided an over abundance of detail showing that Feminism is a religion under U.S. Supreme Court and Courts of Appeals' decisions, and that it was promoted and financed at Columbia by the state and federal governments. New York actually requires all college programs and studies in the state to conform to Feminist precepts under its Equity for Women in the 1990s, Regents Policy and Action Plan, Background Paper (1993), which is still in effect as the Regents' policy.

The District Court Judge from Women's Studies I declined to hear this second case. Guess he had enough of me, so the lawsuit was sent to another judge, a female—kind of cute actually. On All Hallows' Eve 2011, she conjured up a revisionist history of the Women's Studies I case so as to throw out the Women's Studies II case based on the technicality of collateral estoppel. It means once you completely litigate an issue and it is decided, you can't bring it again in a new case against the same parties (remember this for later). The Judge claimed that in Women's Studies I the Establishment Clause issues of taxpayer and non-economic standing were fully litigated and decided as they applied to me, the only plaintiff in both cases, so I didn't have standing in Women's Studies II. That's factually wrong, but try telling that to a female judge if you're a man.

In Women's Studies I, the Magistrate ignored the taxpayer and non-economic standing issues under the Establishment Clause, and Judge Kaplan only made a decree that Feminism was not a religion without hearing any evidence—that's not good enough for "fully litigated" in the America I once knew. As for the Court of Appeals in Women's Studies I, the most favorable politically-correct or Feminist spin that could be put on its proceedings is that the taxpayer issue was decided but not litigated, and the non-economic standing issue was completely ignored by the Court.

Right after the district court judge's decision in Women's Studies II, two other men came forward to join the Women Studies II case as plaintiffs. I made a motion to the female district court judge to rescind her decision, and permit me to amend the complaint to include the two new plaintiffs. Since the two new plaintiffs were not involved in Women Studies I, the Judge couldn't possibly divine facts that the prior case had fully litigated and decided Establishment Clause standing with respect to them—or could she?

She used a different tack by ruling the law didn't allow for an amendment to add new plaintiffs after the original complaint was dismissed for lack of standing. Strange that in the Women's Studies I case, one of the Court of Appeals' Judges admonished me for not trying to amend the complaint in that case after the district court judge dismissed for lack of standing. Guess what the law is depends on whether it will rid the federal courts of men fighting for equality.

The Women's Studies II case was appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. The three judge panel upheld the district court by saying that the issues of non-economic and taxpayer standing had been “fully litigated and decided” in Women's Studies I, when of course they hadn't, and the complaint could not be amended because the two “new plaintiffs are not new evidence,” even though the two new plaintiffs would have testified to new facts concerning them. Sounded like new evidence to me.

The kicker, however, was the three Judges' blatant abuse of power by threatening me with Rule 11 sanctions to forever ban me from representing anyone, in any case, raising the issue of whether Feminism is a religion. That's no different than a Jim Crow court in the 1890s threatening the attorney for the New Orleans Comité des Citoyens with fines, license suspension, or disbarment for bringing another Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537 (1896), suit with a different plaintiff on the same issue—separate but not equal. And no different than at the end of every year sanctioning the American Civil Liberties Union for bringing another action with new plaintiffs against Christmas displays.

So I asked the U.S. Supreme Court to not only reverse the Second Circuit's decision, but to tell it to rescind its threat of sanctions and to stop acting like King John of England by relying on their divine right of life long tenure to arbitrarily rule in accordance with their personal beliefs instead of the Constitution:

In the four men's rights cases, the Second Circuit has acted beyond its authority by deciding in accordance with the current popular ideology Feminism even though it is the imperative duty of the courts to support the Constitution, Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., 211 U.S. 210, 226 (1908)(Holmes, J.). "[The] constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by the judges, as a fundamental law." Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 78. Supplanting it with the tenets of Feminism is an act beyond a court's authority and its duty to obey the rule of law—not the rule of the "politically correct."

The Supremes, not surprisingly, refused to hear the case.

Many Feminist organizations receive much of their funding from all levels of government. If this case had succeeded, than all that aid would have stopped, which would have allowed the Feminists to show that they really are "strong and independent women."

(Details of the proceedings and arguments in Women's Studies I & II are at MensRightsLaw.net).

Do You Want to Dance

In 2009 and 2010, I stumbled my way through two Alvin Ailey hip hop Showcases choreographed by my hip hop teacher. After the August 2010 show, one of the girls sent me a photograph by way of Facebook of me sleeping in my costume on the floor before the performance. Part of the costume was a shirt, actually blouse, in a zebra pattern. I had originally planned to wear one of my rugby jerseys with the image of a bull on it, but at the last minute was told I needed a top that looked like the skin of an animal. Someone told me to check out H & M, but it only had girl's tops, so I was stuck with a blouse, size six, tight in the waist but loose in the chest.

Thinking that a Facebook photo was similar to a private email, I wrote the comment “I hope no one realizes that’s a girl’s blouse.” My hip hop teacher’s assistant responded, “Well if they didn’t, they know now lmaooo.” “Lmaooo,” reminded me of “lamooo,” which brought a smile to my face. I hadn’t been called that since I was a junior in high school awaiting trial for grand theft auto. My best buddy back then replaced “lamooo” with the nicknamed “Wheels.” I couldn’t figure out which term was more accurate for describing a guy who didn’t know how to drive, steals a car, and ends up totaling it and two other cars. Too bad they didn’t have hip hop back then for expressing one’s rebellious tendencies.

After learning that comments on Facebook are public, I wrote, “I hate computers. I thought this was similar to private emails. Hope Jimmy Norton doesn’t see it.”

Norton was a co-host on the Opie and Andy XM Satellite radio show that interviewed me about the case against Women’s Studies at Columbia. When I mentioned I took a hip hop class, he called me every derogatory name for queer under the sun. So, I challenged him to a duel, “Peru turns a blind eye to dueling, it’s a short flight, and no jet lag.” He declined. So, I challenged him to a traditional fist fight. He declined. So, I sued him for defamation. Didn’t win, given my very minor public figure status, but according to Norton’s attorney, it cost him a “ton of money”—probably around $75,000. Didn’t cost me anything but a few hundred dollars for filing and printing fees and some time, which was fun. As I told a reporter for the N.Y. Post, “If you’re an attorney, you don’t have to win a case to win a case.”

Opie, Andy, and Norton used an interesting trick to gain the upper hand over any guest who dared to disagree with them.

Guests on radio talk shows generally are not in the studio with the host. The interview is conducted over the telephone. The host or audio man in the studio controls the volume of the guest's words that go out over the air, and what the guest says is delayed to prevent people from using the seven dirty words. This way the host or audio man hears what the guest says before the audience, so he can censor it.

The three hosts, who in their spare time clean toilets with their tongues for inspiration, were interviewing me over the telephone, so when they didn't like what I said, they did what girls and girlie-males do—they started ranting epithets. These one synapse minds weren't about to intimidate or get the better of me, but when I responded, they simply turned down my volume so that the audience could not hear me. They didn't turn the volume down because I was using the seven dirty words, they were already yelling those, but because I was showing them up as not the brightest or courageous of individuals.

Private Eyes

Back to the Ho story. In January 2012, someone mentioned or I stumbled across an Internet posting that the number 800-898-7180 provided information on alien proceedings before the Immigration Courts, which are part of the Department of Justice. The existence of such a number seemed strange because those courts are prohibited from making available a list that the public can search to find out which aliens are before the courts and when their hearings are scheduled. The Immigration Courts can't even release their decisions because the Department of Justice believes that making these decisions public are "a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy" of an illegal alien's scheming to stay in America. Although the violations of many immigration laws are crimes, the reputations of alien criminals are protected while those of American criminals are not—PC bleeding heart stupidity. However, decisions of the Board of Immigration Appeals, also part of the Department of Justice, are available to the public—if you know how to find them on Westlaw.

Given America's cuddling of aliens—especially alien whores, I figured the 800 number would require a specific code known only to the alien in order to access the Court's information. As for the Ho, logic and time—11 years since the divorce, argued there wasn't any proceeding involving her because she was most likely already a U.S. citizen thanks to VAWA under which Homeland Security made findings of fact that I had committed "battery," "extreme cruelty," or an "overall pattern of violence" against the slut. Still, why not give the number a shot? After all, a decade earlier when checking whether certain people were registered voters for a Democratic State Committeeman and buddy of mine, I searched the Ho's name in the voter rolls just on a lark. That wasn't logical because she was an alien and couldn't register to vote, but registered she did and in doing so committed federal and state felonies—not that it mattered to the authorities.

So, I called the Immigration 800 number, and it did require a specific code to access the system about an alien, but if the Ho was in the system, I had her code—her alien registration number that Immigration had given her in 2000. Punching in the number, I expected nothing—but then the automated voice said her next "Master Hearing date is set for March 30, 2012 at 9:30 am at 26 Federal Plaza in Manhattan." Whoa Ho! What was this? Did she get caught lying, committing a crime, or concealing an important fact in acquiring permanent residency or in becoming a naturalized citizen? And what was a Master Hearing?

According to a lawyer with whom I was working on a case against some of the "too big to fail banks" that caused the 2008 Recession, a Master Hearing is part of a deportation proceeding—now called "removal proceeding" by the linguistically challenged PC totalitarians who think euphemisms can change reality. Could justice have actually caught up with the Ho? Not likely, but I didn't know without more information.

When Homeland Security decides to send an alien packing, it places her in a deportation proceeding before an Immigration Court Judge who decides whether she gets bounced or not. So what did the Ho do to end up in a deportation proceeding 12 years after I, like an idiot, brought her here? That might be unknowable given the Immigration Court's secrecy.

The Immigration Court, despite its name, is not a federal court but an administrative agency. The records of federal courts are open to the public—not so this administrative agency. Immigration Court hearings, however, are opened to the public, but what good does that do the public or press, since neither can find out who's appearing when without the alien's number. It's a ruse that allows America's commie-minded bureaucrats to claim transparency while keeping the proceedings of a particular case in a black hole.

Now, however, I knew when and where for the Ho's hearing, so why not just show up at the hearing? Problem was that there are certain situations in which aliens can have a hearing closed, such as a foreign whore claiming abuse. Not knowing exactly what was going on, I didn't want to screw my chances at finding out. My presence as an ex-husband might result in the judge closing the hearing, so I needed a third party the Ho wouldn't recognize. It just so happened that through an informal college reunion, an old buddy and roommate and now a one percenter, whom I hadn't seen in 30-odd years, volunteered. No way would the Ho recognize him.

On March 30th, my buddy, alias Mr. Hammer, showed at the Immigration Court, and texted me, "I'm the only American here."

To which I responded, "Ha, ha, ha, that's America."

Hammer replied, "I hope they speak English," which, considering Obama's obsession to turn America into a banana republic, was a real concern to finding out what was going on, since Hammer didn't speak Spanish.

The Ho, her latest sucker, a short guy, and her female Russian lawyer arrived and seated themselves in the courtroom. Apparently Mundy no longer handled her immigration matters. I wondered why?

When the Ho's case was called, in English thankfully, the discussion between the Judge and the Ho's lawyer revealed that the Master Hearing was to arraign the Ho for trial on violating the Immigration and Nationality Act by entering into a fraudulent second marriage. What second marriage? When I had previously discovered that she was competing for $10,000 in the www.brideus.com contest, I assumed it another one of her cons. Apparently not, but why a second marriage? It wasn't for "love." She should have had her permanent residency and even citizenship by now, unless something went wrong.

The Ho's attorney asked for a postponement in setting a trial date because the Ho was appealing Homeland Security's decision that her second marriage was a fraud, which meant she got married a second time just to obtain permanent residency. The Government attorney said Homeland Security had found the second marriage fraudulent based on the documents in the Ho's file from her marriage to me, which, according to the Government attorney, Homeland Security had also found fraudulent. All of that was news to me, but definitely good news—lol. The Ho and Mundy must have done something really stupid to have Homeland Security's VAWA Unit rule against an alien female claiming her U.S. husband abused her. The Government attorney went on to say that the Ho had appealed the decision against her on the first marriage, the one to me, but she lost that appeal in 2008 or 2009. More lol.

The Government attorney, however, didn't know about the Ho appealing Homeland's finding that her second marriage was fraudulent and the Immigration Judge didn't have any documentation as to such either, so he postponed the hearing until June 1st.

The Ho and her crew left the courtroom to discuss matters in the hallway as Mr. Hammer nonchalantly followed, sufficiently close to hear. The Ho's pint-sized boyfriend ranted that the documents in the Ho's file were created by her "nut" first husband—me, so they shouldn't have been used against her to find the second marriage fraudulent. The lawyer, however, said the Ho's file also contained reports from the F.B.I., D.E.A. and the D.I.A., and those could be used against her. Apparently the F.B.I. and D.E.A. had actually conduct investigations into the Ho because of the stink I was making a decade earlier, but what did they discover? Who knows?

The D.I.A.'s involvement, which is the Defense Intelligence Agency, was another story. I had never contacted them. What the devil were they investigating her for? Perhaps she was a greater threat than I ever imagined, but I would never find out. Anyway, the existence of those reports helped explain why Homeland Security denied her a VAWA "battered spouse" waiver with respect to her marriage to me. It surely wasn't because Homeland Security's VAWA Unit found me innocent of abusing her, which those Feminazis rarely if ever do, since men aren't allow to defend themselves in its proceedings.

So what actually happened between the Ho and Homeland Security concerning my marriage to her? Fat chance, I'd ever get my hands on those government reports, but maybe I could find the 2008 or 2009 appeal decision.

The Board of Immigration Appeals ("BIA") hears appeals from the Immigration Courts. The VAWA Unit decision concerning her marriage to me would have sent the Ho to the Immigration Court for a decision on deporting her. The Ho would then appeal a decision to deport her to the BIA. Unlike the Immigration Courts, the BIA publishes its decisions, but only the important ones are on its website, which didn't include any decision concerning the Ho. The only possible place that might have the decision in New York City was the Association of the Bar of the City of New York law library, and the only possible person that could find it was the reference librarian. It took him maybe five minutes navigating through a labyrinth of legal misdirections to dig up the decision—always nice dealing with people who know their stuff.

In re: Alina Shipilina was decided February 12, 2009, and the Ho's lawyer on the appeal was the same old man, Jack Sachs, who defended her in the RICO case. Guess he hadn't tired of being paid in sex. Maybe he was in partnership with the grandpa in Cyprus. Anyway, somewhere along the line, the Ho had dumped her immigration lawyer Mundy, probably because he had changed his taste from her cold body to cold hard cash.

According to the BIA decision, the Ho filed for a VAWA "battered spouse" waiver with the VAWA Unit on June 1, 2002, six months after our divorce. Back then, aliens could file after the judicial termination of a marriage, but today they have to file while still legally married. Two years later, on October 1, 2004, Homeland Security's VAWA Unit denied the waiver and deportation proceedings were started against her in the Immigration Court. She must have freaked. Yes! The VAWA Unit decided against her not because it found no abuse by me, but that the Ho did not marry me in "good faith"—no kidding Sherlock. The lack of good faith means she married me just to obtain admission to the U.S. and a green card, also called permanent residency.

The VAWA "battered spouse" waiver has two requirements:

First, that the U.S. citizen spouse abused the alien spouse for which Homeland Security relies on the alien's word, the word of the alien's lawyer, the word of the alien's Feminazi adviser (both adviser and lawyer are usually paid for by the federal government—your tax dollars), and any legal documents that do not include the citizen spouse's side. For instance, temporary orders of protection that are issued by a court without hearing from the citizen and complaints filed by the alien with the police, which also do not include the citizen's side of the story. Homeland Security also bars the citizen spouse from participating in its proceedings and ignores any exculpatory evidence he may submit even though its VAWA Unit is making fact-findings about what the citizen did. As for the one-sided legal documents—temporary orders of protection and complaints filed with the police—any subsequent records of legal proceedings showing that the alien lied to the court or police about abuse are either never presented to the VAWA Unit because the alien is not going to submit them or are ignored because the citizen sends them to the Unit. The VAWA Unit's kangaroo court procedures were created by the PC-Feminazis not to assure that girls have the last word, but to assure that they have the only word.

In my case, there were around 600 pages of apparent accusations and alleged evidence against me that I had obtained through an FOIA request from which I never expected to receive anything. Most of it, however, was redacted, but among the documents that weren't were the Ho's complaint to the police that I tried to extort money from her and the temporary order of protection she obtained by lying to the Queens Family Court. Sure, the cops never bothered to investigate the extortion charge and the order of protection was dismissed, but that didn't matter to Homeland Security because its procedures guaranty that evidence exonerating the U.S. citizen are never reviewed.

Once Homeland Security's VAWA Unit makes its unsubstantiated fact-findings about a citizen abusing an alien, they are kept from him, although the alien, all law enforcement agencies, and certain Feminazi organizations have access. So for me, I still don't know for sure what Homeland Security concluded, but it seems likely it found that I had committed battery, extreme cruelty or a pattern of violence against the alien ho. The BIA decision, however, did mention in passing one accusation against me that didn't fly: "[T]he respondent's [the Ho's] assertion that her ex-husband forced her to work as a nude dancer [stripper] in the United States is undetermined by the fact that she worked in this profession before and after her divorce." That hit the Ho where it hurt, since she always pretended she was just a go-go girl and not a nude dancer or stripper, which to Russians means prostitute. (Maybe I'll have the BIA decision disturbed in Krasnodar, as I did with her diary.)

That part of the BIA's decision indicated that the Ho's diary was used by both the VAWA Unit and the Immigration Court's Judge; otherwise, how did they know she was a stripper before my marriage to her—no way would she admit that. The diary probably came from the Moscow Embassy, since I had sent it to my contact there and he must have passed it along.

The second requirement for a VAWA "battered spouse" waiver is that the alien marry in good faith and not just to acquire a green card. The Ho and her attorney at the time, Mundy, must have really screwed up to blow that part. All they needed to do before the VAWA Unit was what lawyers and Russian hos are adept at—phony up some evidence. They wouldn't even have to worry about the other side, meaning me, exposing their counterfeit evidence because as an ex-husband I was exiled from the entire process. How could these two idiots fail to show that the Ho had gotten married out of some sappy romantic notion? There were plenty of lame cards and letters to show a courtship, there were photographs of the wedding, we lived together for a while, she was on my health insurance policy, and there are many Russians willing to bear false witness for a few dollars that we had a real marriage.

With all that going for her, she and Mundy still blew it before the VAWA Unit, in part, because of her pathological obsession to evade taxes. When the Ho filed her tax return for the year 2000 during which we were married, she file as “single” instead of “married filing separately” because she paid fewer taxes that way. The BIA decision indicates the VAWA Unit used that as evidence the marriage was not made in good faith. That’s what the Ho gets for being kopek wise but ruble foolish.

With the VAWA Unit’s October 2004 denial of her VAWA “battered spouse” waiver, the Ho’s whoring ass was put in a deportation proceeding before the Immigration Court. She dumped Mundy at that point because (1) he goofed on the good faith issue and (2) the Office of Violence Against Women in the Department of Justice no longer paid her legal fees because the removal proceeding charged the Ho with the crime of marriage fraud. The Office’s Legal Assistance for Victims Grant Program cannot pay for the criminal defense of a “victim” charged with a crime. However, it can and does pay to destroy the careers of citizens and bankrupt them in defending against false accusations by aliens made in family court cases. Without the federal government picking up her legal costs, the Ho turned to Jack Sachs knowing he’d give her a discount in return for more carnal knowledge.

In order to learn more about her deportation proceeding in the Immigration Court, I requested a transcript of the trial for which I fully expected to be denied—but strangely wasn’t. According to it, during the deportation proceedings in the Immigration Court, she applied for the second time for what she thought was the VAWA “battered spouse” waiver based on her marriage to me. This time the application was placed before the Immigration Court Judge in the deportation proceeding and not the VAWA Unit in Vermont. In Feminarchy America, hos always get a second bite at the apple. Sachs and the Ho hired a couple of experts and got the trial adjourned three times from 2006 to 2008 in order to put together evidence of my alleged “battery,” “extreme cruelty,” and “overall pattern of violence.”

It didn’t do her any good because Sachs got the law confused. He requested that the Immigration Court grant the Ho the “legal termination” waiver rather than the VAWA “battered spouse” waiver. The “legal termination” waiver is closely scrutinized by immigration judges to determine whether the alien married just to live in America and whether she was at fault in the breakdown of the marriage. 8 U.S.C. § 1186a(c)(4)(B); 8 C.F.R. § 216.5(e)(2). The VAWA “battered spouse” waiver, however, is not as closely examined for whether the alien married just to come to America and the alien’s nefarious activities leading to the breakup of the marriage are ignored. The idiot Sachs ended up requesting the more difficult to obtain waiver rather than the VAWA “battered spouse” waiver that the VAWA Unit had already denied her and for which she could have tried for again in the Immigration Court but didn’t because of Sachs’ screw up.

The actual trial didn’t occur until May 2008. Sachs and the Ho, believing they were going for the VAWA “battered spouse” waiver, tried to rely on unsigned documents as evidence—probably fakes, and failed to produce the polygraph expert they claimed confirmed the Ho’s testimony about my abusing her—probably because the expert found her to be lying. A PC-Feminist social worker did testify that the Ho was a battered bimbo, and that I abused her, in part, by forcing her to work at Flash Dancers. But it didn’t matter because the key issue for the Ho under the “legal termination” waiver was whether she intended to enter a traditional marriage with me—not that she was abused. The Judge kept telling Sachs the issue before the Court was whether the Ho married me in order to enter a traditional marriage—not whether I had abused her. The onus was on her to show sincerity in marrying me. But Sachs must have been distracted imagining himself the knight fighting valiantly for the fair damsel's honor and another assignation with the Ho.

The trial of errors ended with the Ho testifying. Responding to Sachs' questions, she said we had met at a "models party" in Moscow, which was actually the prostitute party that Perlin put on every Friday night back in 1999. She claimed I approached her when it was her pimp Perlin who sent her over to me. She proceeded to lie to the Judge that, "We got married through love, because of love, to be together," that she didn't know anything about green cards, and for her "it was important just to be with the person I loved, not where we lived." Oh puke, I thought reading that garbage. Then she started her prepared lies about abuse, which the Judge allowed but considered irrelevant because Sachs was trying to litigate the wrong waiver. "[H]e managed . . . for me to work in a strip club, but I wanted very much to work as a model, but I didn't have money for the [photograph] portfolio. [I]t hurt me [to work at Flash Dancers] because I love my husband and I just wanted to only do this for my husband." Yuk!

Sachs' questioning of the Ho confirmed that Homeland Security's VAWA Unit denied her 2002 "battered spouse" waiver based largely on her diary—ha, ha, ha, done in by her own sick vanity. Sachs' tried to argue that the diary wasn't hers and that I created it. The Judge didn't see the relevance of that to the issue of her intent to enter a traditional marriage and shut down Sachs' line of questioning. Sachs then started to say something about Mundy, but the Judge immediately went off the record, so there is nothing in the transcript of the trial about what was said. Perhaps Mundy got into a little trouble with the Ho—ho, ho, ho.

Back on the record, the Government started its cross-examination of the Ho at which point Sachs gets up to leave the courtroom, and the Judge actually has to order him to sit down. Talk about a disengaged lawyer—must have been beginning Alzheimer's. The Government lawyer destroyed the Ho's credibility about marrying me for "love" by showing she was a perjurer. The lawyer nailed the Ho on the lie that I had made her work at Flash Dancers by getting her to admit she worked there well after the divorce. "[I]f you worked at Flash Dancers for two years starting in about July or August 2000, you were still working there when you were divorced, correct?" The Ho, "Yes." "Well my question is, he wasn't forcing you to work there as you and him did not live together anymore after [the divorce], is that correct?" The Ho was cornered and had to answer, "That's right." Then the attorney drove home the stake by referring to Homeland Security's decision denying her "battered spouse" waiver by getting the Ho to admit that she stripped in Mexico before our marriage while on a tourist visa and stripped in Cyprus before we even met.

Pretty hard to appear credible under oath when she lied about my forcing her to work as a stripper, and the reason the Government knew that was because of her diary. The Judge summarized, "You're claiming that you were working at a strip club in New York because essentially your husband forced you to. It would appear, in fact, that you willingly worked in strip clubs even before that, and worked in the strip club in New York, even after you were separated from your husband." The Ho was exposed as a perjurer. The loss of her credibility meant all that malarkey from her about marrying for "love" went out the window.

The Judge then addressed the key issue—evidence that indicated the Ho had intended to enter a traditional marriage. "I'm trying to determine if there was any actual proof that the two of you had a legitimate relationship as husband and wife. I have no witnesses here who could attest to that. I have no documents in support of the joint relationship during the marriage." The Ho was doomed.

The Judge decided against her and wrote an opinion, but the Department of Justice refuses to release that opinion even though it provided me the transcript of the trial on which the opinion is based—go figure.

The Ho lost because Sachs requested a “legal termination” waiver not realizing that it was different from the VAWA “battered spouse” waiver. She then had Sachs initiate an appeal to the BIA in 2008. The Ho had to be paying him with sex because there’s no other reason for her to continue with such an incompetent. The appeal put her deportation on hold. For some lunatic reason those two bozos didn’t file an appeal brief. Realizing their mistake, they made a motion to the BIA to file the brief late. The BIA refused and upheld the Immigration Court’s decision.

Somewhere along the line in order to hedge her staying in America, the Ho married another American sucker repeating the strategy she used with me in the hope of obtaining a green card through marriage. It’s unknown how the second marriage turned out. Maybe the guy was even dumber than me and sponsored the Ho for permanent residency or perhaps her second marriage repeated the first with the second sucker wising up and divorcing the slut. Either way, when she applied again for permanent residency, this time based on her second marriage, Homeland Security said no way Hose. The first marriage was fraudulent and based on that, so was the second marriage. Bammo, the Ho’s aging ass is once again bounced into a deportation proceeding, which was the one attended by Mr. Hammer in March 2012. But then something third worldish happened.

At the Master Hearing on June 1, 2012, which was a continuance of the March 30th hearing where the Ho’s attorney said Homeland’s second decision to deport her was on appeal to the BIA, the Judge “administratively closed” the Ho’s deportation case, which meant she could legally stay in America. The Immigration Judge's Order states that the reason for allowing the slut to remain in America was that the "Board of Immigration Appeals reports it does not have the [Ho's] file." So where did it go? Did someone deep-six it? Was someone paid off? Didn't the same thing happen to the Ho's arrest record in Mexico City? Looked like America was turning into a banana republic where felons can get away with violating the law by paying bribes to disappear records and everyone will eventually look like Obama, except for the blonde hos, of course. The Ho was now free to continue her criminal activities in the U.S.A. as though she was a permanent resident—she won, for now anyway. Immigration could reinstitute the deportation proceeding, but unless Trump becomes the next President, that's not going to happen.

I made a stab at exposing the suspicious disappearance of the Ho's file with (1) the General Counsel for the Executive Office for Immigration Review in the Justice Department—never received a response; (2) the Inspector General for the Department of Justice—never received a response; and (3) the Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Charles Grassley—never received a response. Guess they couldn't afford the postage.

So, the Ho remained in America, making lots of money illegally, and still evading taxes. By my estimation, she's made well over two million over the past 15 years—not bad for a prostitute from Krasnodar. But she had help. The Ho simply exploited that which the Feminazis and PCers have corrupted—the immigration system and America as a whole.

My Little Bimbo[s] Down on the Bamboo Isle

"To impose any strait jacket upon the intellectual leaders in our colleges and universities would imperil the future of our Nation. No field of education is so thoroughly comprehended by man [or females] that new discoveries cannot yet be made. Particularly is that true in the social sciences, where few, if any, principles are accepted as absolutes. Scholarship cannot flourish in an atmosphere of suspicion and distrust. Teachers and students must always remain free to inquire, to study and to evaluate, to gain new maturity and understanding; otherwise our civilization will stagnate and die.” Keyishian v. Board of Regents of University of State of N. Y., 385 U.S. 589, 603 (1967)(Mr. Justice Brennan).

As a result of the publicity generated by the men’s rights lawsuits, a professor in New York City asked me to teach a section on men and the law as part of a Male Studies Program to be offered online by the University of South Australia. The program was going to focus on guys the way Women’s Studies Programs focus on girls so as to provide some balance to the one-sided PC-Feminist propaganda that is blindly accepted as the “truth” on college campuses. It would be the first college program of its kind in the world.

My three-week copyrighted section of one of the eight graduate courses being offered would look at how the law treated the different sexes in America and England from the beginning of the industrial revolution. Australia, like America, inherited its law from England, so I figured the students would be interested in what occurred in both America and England. My research showed that for the past 250 years, the law largely favored females—not males. Sir William Blackstone’s statement in 1765 proved prescient, “So great a favorite is the female sex of the laws.”

After the entire program was put together and on the eve of being offered to the University students, two yellow, female-dog-in-heat reporters jumped on their electronic broomsticks and scared the administrators of the University into canceling six of the eight courses, including the one with the section I was going to teach. They guillotined the teaching of the courses by lying that their content expressed “radical” and “extreme” male views by men’s rights extremists who hate females. Neither reporter ever read any of the courses’ summaries, nor interviewed me before they prominently denigrated my section and me to over seven million of their readers.

The bacchanalian-like frenzy of these two PC-Feminist, zealot reporters (they believe there are two sides to every story: the Feminist side and the politically correct side) was reminiscent of the 1933 Nazi book burnings at German universities. Back then, Joseph Goebbels said, “The era of extreme Jewish intellectualism is now at an end.” The two reporters, Tory “the Torch” Shepherd for the Rupert Murdoch owned newspaper The Advertiser Messenger Sunday Mail in Adelaide, Australia, and a reporter from the Sydney Morning Herald, owned by another multi-billion dollar global corporation—Fairfax Media Publications, could now say the same about any intellectualism in Australia that wasn’t pro-Feminist. The two sanctimonious, PC reporters didn’t go into the University and take knowledge, ideas, and facts in the form of books and throw them on a bonfire. Instead they used the modern-day torch of the electronic media to incinerate views they personally disagreed with. The end result was the same—censorship of ideas by way of verbally mutilating the ideas and those who don’t conform to current, trendy ideology.

The message was clear. On college campuses, whether in Australia or America, everybody’s freedom of speech was limited to parroting PC-Feminist propaganda as determined by self-appointed members of the “PC Ministry of Truth” and other purveyors of ignorance, mindless unanimity and hatred of men.

The high-tech book burning started when Tory the Torch, in January 2014, told an official at the University of South Australia that I had been “identified as belonging to extreme right-wing groups in the USA.” She then published articles falsely characterizing all of the courses as being “extreme” right-wing diatribes against women and the courses’ creators as right-wingers. As for me, she was correct, if having been an active member of Students for a Democratic Society, an officer in the Riverside Democratic Club in Manhattan, a New Democratic Coalition Delegate, a Union Delegate for Local 1199, an undercover researcher for the Village Voice into a mob judge's campaign financed by Roy Cohn and the Gambino and Mangano crime families, or being a member of the Bar of various courts, and an abuser of vodka gimlets instead of drugs means I'm right wing. Of course, it doesn't, she was just lying as Feminists do in order to get their way. Then again, perhaps she confused my playing right-wing forward for Old Blue rugby with being right-wing.

Her fellow traveler in "to not tell the truth" was Amy "McNeuter" McNeilage at the Sydney Morning Herald. "McNeuter" because that's probably the way she likes her boyfriends, unless in bed. Amy, instead of picking "extreme" from the male-hating Feminist reporter's grab bag of disparaging words, pulled out "hardline" and "radical" along with "anti-feminist," a term also used repeatedly by Tory, as if that is a crime. Amy applied "radical" to the courses and their creators to mobilize public opprobrium against both because she knew her readers would never realize that the following were also depicted as "radical" in the past: America's founding fathers, the Declaration of Independence, abolitionists, the Emancipation Proclamation, the South Australian Fabian Society, Australian Lucy Morice, the group Radical Women, the Paris Commune, Edward R. Murrow's expose on Senator Joseph McCarthy, anti-Vietnam War demonstrations, environmentalists, and assorted fighters against intolerance. As for "hardline," I guess that's what she dreams of.

Tory and Amy used their "anti-feminist" accusation to mean anti-female. If there was something none of the Male Studies courses or creators were, it was anti-female, assuming for me she's young and hot. More important was that we defined Feminism the same way Women Against Feminism define it—real-life feminism has come to mean the "vilification of men, support for female privilege, and a demeaning view of women as victims rather than free agents.” So by that definition, I plead guilty to being “anti-feminist” because I’m too intelligent not to be. Tory and Amy knew that about me because reporters in the past had publicized such; the down-under girls just chose to ignore it. I also don’t agree with Communism, Nazism and whatever the Ku Klux Klan or Obama is pushing, but they didn’t mention that either.

Regardless of whether I curtsy to sanctimonious PC-Feminism or not, what’s that got to do with teaching a course on the history of the law? Is education now limited to history that is approved by a couple of not very bright female tabloid-reporters? Apparently, yes. Tory and Amy used the “anti-feminist” label in order to take a page from the tactics of Joseph McCarthy and Roy Cohn in the 1950s. Back then, certain words were used to label persons and their creations as sub-human, anathemas and pariahs—”communist sympathizer,” “fellow traveler,” and “red,” while today self-righteous PC-Feminists use terms such as “anti-feminist,” “right-wing,” “hardline,” “masculine” and “man.”

The American hunters of communists in the 1950s had their “blacklists,” which were kept by private organizations and used by the media to destroy a person’s livelihood, or at least seriously interfere with it, by claiming he was a lefty. Today the hunters of the evolutionarily correct keep their “pinklists” on the Internet, thanks to the many man-hating PC-Feminist bloggers and reporters out for revenge because no guy asked them to the senior prom.

The pinklisters, along with reporters like Tory and Amy, have taken the place of the 1950s “loyalty review boards” that carried out so-called investigations for universities, governments, and businesses in order to certify that their programs and employees were not communistic or socialistic. Today, however, it’s the PC-Feminists who mark for economic destruction programs and people that do not adhere to their ideology.

Tory and Amy's character and course assassinations are not unlike a reporter for Pravda in the old Soviet Union calling a person and academic curriculum "anti-communistic." Under the evil empire, all right-thinking, or more accurately left-thinking people and policies were communistic, and under today's Evil Eve Establishment, all correct thinking people and policies are Feministic and politically correct. At least a Russian commie reporter could point to intellectuals such as Marx and Lenin to argue the virtues of "Communism." Who can Tory and Amy point to for the "correctness" of PC-Feminism—their fellow groupies at consciousness lowering sessions.

Sanctimonious PC-Feminists justify the intentional harm they wreak because they have come to believe in their exceptionalism and their sense of being the chosen ones. That they have the right to decide the destinies of men because it is only PC-Feminists who can be right—just like a bossy wife or girlfriend.

Tory also criticized me as "extreme" for advocating that men exercise their right to bear arms, which of course is necessary in order to have a fighting chance against unjust state or caliphate violence, such as occurred in 1776, 1848 at the Paris Commune, 1972 Bloody Sunday, 2014 in Kiev, or defending against ISIS loony tunes here at home.

Of course, the exercise of a right cannot be "extreme." But when the media starts criticizing rights, it deters people from exercising them, which is the same as not having them. Had Tory's views held sway during the Second World War, she and Amy might have ended up as "comfort girls."

Tory and Amy not only did not interview me for their first articles (Amy only wrote one article), but they were totally ignorant of what I was going to teach. Obviously, they follow the maxim "don't let ignorance get in the way of a good story" that furthers Feminist bigotry.

Sounds like the three monkeys, or is it the three stooges? Tory did interview me for her second article, about five minutes, but by then her and Amy's high-tech book burning had succeeded.

The down-under girls also puffed up their articles with quotes from like-minded PC-Feminist ideologues and girly-males to create the false image that all the guys involved in the Male Studies courses were demons incarnate about to roast females in their courses. Other sycophant reporters and columnists in Australia also joined the tar and feathering bandwagon. "There were Feminists to the right of me, Feminists to the left of me, Feminists in front of me volley'd and thunder'd from down under," so I sued.

The lawsuit charged the two reporters and their papers with publishing "injurious falsehoods" about my course section, "interfering with a prospective economic advantage"—my being paid for teaching the "Males and the Law" section of the "Facts and Fallacies of Male Power and Privilege" course, and the complaint accused only Tory of libeling my professional reputation as a lawyer. I didn't include the other course creators in the case because I concluded they were not interested.

Tory published four articles in all while Amy stopped at one. Most of Tory's libel occurred in her last two articles of which her January 14, 2014, article titled, Pathetic bid for victimhood by portraying women as villains, was a pure hate-male rant.

For example, she wrote:

"Big ups to [University of South Australia] for having the sense to reject anything linked to those at the very fringe of the men's rights spectrum . . . overseas ring ins."

"Ring in" is a gang term meaning persons who are called to help in gang wars and fights. I have never participated in a gang war, unless rugby games are considered such, but have been in a few fights—the latest of which I can't remember due to the amount of vodka in me.

She also wrote:

“You’d think I’d shut up now the plans [Male Studies program] are off the table, but it’s really important to get across the bigger picture. See, most people probably think that the men’s rights guys I was talking about - the ones who habitually call women names, argue that they routinely make up rape, and put it about that women either incite their own domestic violence or are the abusers themselves - are just circle-jerk misogynists.”

I only habitually call PC-Feminists like Tory names, and do not argue that females routinely make up rape but that false allegations of rape range from 1.5% to 90% depending on the geographical location and study methodology. Rumney, P., False allegations of rape, The Cambridge Law Journal 65, (2006). Neither do I argue that women are abusers, rather that 38.7% of child victims were maltreated by their mothers acting alone and 17.9% percent were maltreated by their fathers acting alone. U.S. Dept. Of Health & Human Services, Child Maltreatment 2007, p. 29. As for circle-jerk, not quite sure what Tory means by that, never having been to one, but I am sure she has.

More of her rants:

“They are - misogynists, I mean. And we’re talking old-school misogyny - the hatred of women - as well as the new-school misogyny - entrenched prejudice against women.”

As for me, were I such a hater of women, I would not spend so much time and money chasing them at nightclubs, in hip hop class or dating them.

The Torch continued:

“The problem is the circle is no longer closed, no longer just a bunch of angry guys in a basement. They’re trying to get up the stairs and into the light. They want to play outside with legitimate experts in men’s issues . . . .”

I am not now, nor have I ever been a troglodyte, and I am not illegitimate, although Mother did dance on tables in the late 1920s at a club in the Hotel Astor in Times Square, which could have led to anything.

And:

“It’s a classic tactic, used by pseudoscientific fraudsters. Adopt the language of the actual scientists. Find odd reports and old stories, random statistics and shocking anecdotes, and stitch them into a Hannibal Lecter-style creation that mimics valid inquiry.”

Even a blind zealot on a crusade, such as Tory, must still have a portion of her brain entertaining serious doubts when describing that which she lacks knowledge about. The “Males and the Law” section was largely based on law review articles from the mid-1800s to the early 2000s, including one commissioned by Congress for the federal court in New York. It was just going to present what the law was and is. Tory did not know any of that, but went blindly ahead accusing me of fraud. As for the “odd reports and old stories, random statistics and shocking anecdotes” that’s Tory’s specialty, if a lawyer uses such to create a false impression, he’s risking his license—something Tory is not constrained by. As for imputing that I am a Hannibal Lecter, I am neither a serial killer nor a connoisseur of human flesh, which would definitely break my Kathy Freston “The Lean” diet.

Tory’s tirades ragged on and on and can be viewed at MensRightsLaw.net

In the New York State Supreme Court, where I filed the case, Tory and Amy, along with their two multi-billion dollar corporate employers, committed perjury in their first set of affidavits on the key issue of personal jurisdiction: whether the New York court had the authority to even hear the case against the four Australian defendants? The answer depended on the extent of the defendants’ contacts with the State of New York. The two reporters and the two corporations, which owned the main-stream Australian newspapers that published the articles, lied about their contacts with New York. Their man-hating attorney, Katherine M. Bolger, suborned it and probably wrote the affidavits herself, as lawyers usually do, because she didn’t think I'd spend the time to check their affidavit statements, and she was right—I didn't. A single mother in Slovakia did it for me.

Of course, we all know that PC-Feminists like Tory and Amy have a free-pass to perjure themselves in court whenever it serves their interests and harms a man. But the corporations were another matter, and I concentrated on them, as well as Tory just in case the alleged judge did not hold with preferential treatment for lying, vat-dyed blonde bimbos.

The first set of affidavits sworn to by officials of the corporations lied that the corporations didn't have business dealings or relations with companies in New York for marketing their papers and sundry products in New York—they did.

Tory, like a typical Feminazi, told the lamest of all the lies. For example, she swore in her first affidavit that the only person she contacted in New York for her articles was me. That was obvious perjury, since the idiot named a New York professor in her first article—the same professor who had first notified me about Tory's male-bashing. Turned out Tory had been talking with the professor by way of emails for over two months. Only a brain-dead reporter could have forgotten about corresponding with a professor she had castigated in an article months earlier—or a pathological liar. Tory, in her second affidavit, begged the Court's forgiveness, which sounded strangely familiar to a cheating girlfriend who had gotten caught, and claimed that she "forgot" she had ever communicated with the New York professor.

The newspapers in their second set of affidavits still failed to admit or explain the exact nature of their business dealings and relations in New York, which were numerous, including why the business address for the Chairman of the Murdoch company that operated Tory's newspaper was 1211 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., which is the headquarters for Murdoch's parent company—News Corp.

Even Bolger submitted her own perjurious affirmation—three times! An affirmation is when a lawyer swears under penalty of perjury that her statements are true. Bolger swore that the copy of McNeilage’s article that Bolger submitted to the Court was a “true and correct” copy. It was not—it was a forgery under New York Penal Law § 170.05. Bolger deleted a chart in the beginning of McNeilage’s article that showed her malice toward the guys who created and would have taught the Male Studies’ courses. Malice is a key element of injurious falsehoods and tortious interference, which is why she deleted it.

Leading up to the first court hearing, November 24, 2014, the defendants and their lawyer, Bolger, probably figured they would win on personal jurisdiction and the case would be over. At that hearing before the male Judge, I accused the defendants of perjury and their self-righteous PC-Feminist lawyer of suborning perjury. She, like a typical PC-Feminazi, kept calling me “anti-feminist” and tried resorting to the Feminist tactic of interfering with the flow of my argument by interrupting me when it was my turn to talk, so I told her, “I don’t interrupt you—don’t interrupt me!” Naturally, she didn’t listen, so I asked the Judge to tell her. He just gave her a look and the interruptions stopped.

Her tactic of trying to bias the Judge by calling me anti-feminist didn’t work either. The Judge did two things: First, in response to Bolger’s argument that the Court did not have personal jurisdiction, he said that Bolger was arguing a “fact question,” which meant there would be discovery on personal jurisdiction to determine the extent of defendants’ contacts with New York—something the defendants didn’t want because it would prove they had committed perjury and the case would continue here in New York. Then the Judge permitted me to make an oral motion requesting an “immediate trial” on the issue of personal jurisdiction. I argued that Bolger and the defendants would continue to lie during discovery, so what was needed was a trial in which the Judge could observe the demeanor of the defendants in the witness box rather than having their attorney manipulate their responses in affidavits or at depositions so as to avoid the truth. Lying on interrogatories, document requests, and at depositions is a lot easier than before judges who are all too familiar with lying parties and lawyers.

Allowing an oral motion to be made was within the complete discretion of the Judge, he could just as well have denied the request but did not—the tide in the battle began to turn in my favor at that oral argument because the Judge was fair-minded.

Guess what Bolger and the defendants did next—think Murdoch newspaper? You got it! They hacked into my private computer files by breaking into my digital cloud. How did I find out? Bolger filed a private legal document of mine in court that existed only on my personal computer and digital cloud, which required access codes, and was not publicly available anywhere.

The document was a privileged attorney work product of 17 pages that I had put together as tentative responses to press inquiries about the case and titled “Responses to Media.” No reporters ever picked up on the case, so none of the responses were ever made public nor was the document sent out to the media as a press release. But that didn’t stop the lying defense attorney Bolger from claiming the document was a “Media Release,” which of course communicates it was made public to the press. She actually referred to it as a “Media Release” nine times in her papers in the hope of convincing the Court it was publicly available so as to cover up her and the defendants’ criminal acts in obtaining it.

In another life, I had worked as an assignment editor, writer, and political producer at Metromedia TV News and Eyewitness TV News in New York City. I knew what the term “Media Release” meant, and that no one ever submitted a 17 page “Media Release” in the form of the document Bolger and the defendants hacked. Given the Feminazi attorney's experience in representing news organizations, she knew it as well, but that didn't stop from lying about it.

Now I understood how those Hollywood actresses felt when their naked pictures were taken from their iClouds. Good thing I didn't have any such pictures of me on my digital cloud, not that anyone would be interested.

Immediately, I requested of the Court by an "Order to Show Cause" that the document be sealed, require Bolger and the defendants to turn over all paper and digital copies of everything they stole in their hacking—both personal and attorney work product data, Bolger and the defendants be enjoined from ever publicizing the contents, and Bolger and the defendants provide the names of everyone involved so they could be referred to the authorities.

As soon as the request was made, the case was transferred to another judge. The first Judge, an older black man, had demonstrated fair-mindedness and immunity from the modern-day, sanctimonious PC-Feminist tactics of litigation by personal destruction. The second Judge, a white middle-aged man, whom I had a case before previously, was also fair-minded, so maybe the case transfer didn't matter. That Judge denied my request for an Order to Show Cause—no big deal because he allowed me to make a formal motion, which would only take a little longer for a decision. So I filed the motion and doubted Bolger and the defendants would make public any of their ill-gotten gains while a motion for hacking was before the Court. But then something happened that I had never experienced before in any court—the case was transferred for a third time.

The third judge, Jennifer Schecter, was apparently just the type the defendants wanted— young, female and PC-Feminazi. In addition, she had been the protégé of a female Feminist judge who was related to a City Councilwoman I had dated for a time back in my 20s. One of the Councilwoman's son, whom I regularly beat up back then for annoying his mother and me, was now the City's Controller. What a joke, he could barely add.

So what was going on? Did the Murdoch attorney exercise the influence of her client to have the case transferred to a sympathetic PC fellow traveler, or was it vengeance from an old girl-friend and her son. Who knew, but my case was now doomed.

At the May 2015 hearing before the third judge on the three motions that were before the Court, something happened that I had never experienced before in any court—once again. The papers for the key motion requesting a trial on personal jurisdiction had disappeared. Since Bolger had clearly and repeatedly suborned perjury—actually she probably wrote the affidavits—and the defendants had clearly and repeatedly committed perjury on that issue, Bolger's arguments against a trial on personal jurisdiction were implausible. So the disappearance of all the papers benefited her and the defendants.

Of the three motions, why was it that those papers were the ones to vanish. The new PC-Feminist judge tried to pressure me into withdrawing the motion, but that was not going to happen. The first Judge gave me permission to make that motion, and it was going to stay part of the case, which I had to repeat several times.

During the back and forth with the Judge, Bolger remained strangely silent. She knew as well as I that the first Judge had given me permission to make the motion, and he even instructed her on when her papers were due, which she subsequently filed. Why was she standing back from the discussion—did she know something I didn't? After the tug of war between the judge and me, she finally ruled that both sides should resubmit their papers, which we did.

It didn't do any good. The man-hating judge gave her fellow PC traveler what she wanted and threw the case out ruling the Court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendants. The judge knew Bolger and her clients were lying—how could she not, the evidence was overwhelming. But she hated me for being a man who dared to fight for his rights rather than kiss her feet. So, I appealed—a lot of good that would do.

The appeal went to the New York State Appellate Division for the First Department, which in the good old days had an efficient and helpful clerk's office, but these days it was a joke. A former Latino Presiding Judge of the Court decided to curry favor with the PC-Feminist and illegal alien community by appointing an incompetent south of the border female as the Clerk or Empleada de la Corte.

Normally on an appeal, a lawyer's involvement with the Empleada is non-existent since his printer files all the papers. But on this appeal, Bolger made a motion that required me to deal with the office of this south of the border oficina de secretario de la corte. When appealing a lower court decision, the appellant (here it was me) needs to provide the appeals court with the documents that the lower court's decision was based on, it's called an appendix. Bolger asked the Appellate Division-First Department to dismiss my appeal because my appendix didn't include over 400 hundred pages of irrelevant documents she had filed in Schecter's court. How do I know the documents were irrelevant—because when Bolger finally filed her brief in the Appellate Division, she did not cite to any of them, I didn't cite to any and Schecter never referred to any of them in her decision.

So why did Bolger file so many documents in the lower court—because if she won with Schecter, which was a foregone conclusion since Murdoch's corporation used its clout to get the anti-male Schecter assigned to the case, Bolger would try to get the Appellate Division to make me pay to have all those pages reproduced and filed—a cost running into the thousands of dollars. Defense attorneys with rich clients always do this in an attempt to price middle class plaintiffs out of an appeal. Rich clients can afford printing up the masses of documents they file in the lower court hoping that if they win and their opponent appeals, they will get the Appellate Division to require their opponent to pay thousands of dollars to print up and file those documents in the Appellate Division. If the opponent is middle-class, he won't be able to afford the printing costs, five dollars a page—so he loses.

To bulk up the number of pages, Bolger filed duplicates and triplicates of the same documents. Many of the irrelevant documents were from my men's rights cases that had nothing to do with personal jurisdiction in this case. Bolger simply used them to bias judge Schechter against me for not kowtowing to PC-Feminist ideology and to price me out of an appeal. Bolger could have saved her clients the copying costs because judge Schechter would never have ruled that any man had rights when in a dispute with two PC-Feminazi female reporters.

Bolger's motion also complained that some of the documents in my appendix had not been filed in Schechter's court. Most of those had been copied from the Internet using different browsers that caused them to be formatted differently with different advertisements. The contents were identical to the documents filed with Schechter, they just looked different. Of course, bimbos like Bolger are always more concern with appearances than substance. The only thing more important to bimbos and hos is money. And that's the real reason Bolger made her motion—to increase the cost to me of appealing by increasing my printing costs and to also increase her billable hours.

The Appellate Division, including three PC-Feminist female judges and two male androgynies, fell in line with Bolger's tactic to price me out of the appeal by requiring me to print a supplemental appendix with the irrelevant documents. Legally it made no sense. The appeal was limited to the extent of contacts Bolger's clients had with New York. Then again, in Feminarchy America, the law means nothing when it comes to any case brought by a white, heterosexual male fighting for his rights. So, I filed another 240 documents—all that I could afford, but the Appellate Division, this time four PC-Feminist judges and one male androgyny, ruled that's still not enough and kicked the case and me out of court.

During my battle with the ideologically-corrupt judges in the Appellate Division, I was also fighting with the los cretinos in the Appellate Division's Clerk's Office. During argument over Bolger's motion in the Clerk's Office, the issue came up whether I had filed a court form called the Note of Issue. The third-world millennial intake clerk said it had not been filed. I repeatedly insisted that it had until his one-synapse brain finally prodded him to look for it and miraculously he found it on the desk with the other files from my case. Apparently, the Appellate Division-First Department is still trying to decide whether it is a 19th century court requiring only paper filings or a 21st century court using digital filings or a Mexican court that can't do either competently.

The millennial idiot then said there was another problem—the Appellate Division had not received a CD of the record on appeal from the lower court. The record on appeal was a copy of all the documents that were filed in the lower court before judge Schechter. Again, I repeatedly told him that the lower court had provided the CD a few weeks earlier. He insisted it had not and directed me to go talk to the lower court's clerk. So I trudged downtown in the rain to the lower court. Its clerk gave me a certified statement that the Appellate Division's clerk had received the CD weeks earlier. Then back uptown to the Appellate Division where a different clerk pulled the CD off of the same desk where the millennial intake clerk found the Note of Issue. This new clerk explained that the CD only contained links instead of the actual documents. That was clearly something the intake clerk could have told me without sending me on a wild goose chase downtown to the lower court.

My dealings with the Mexican clerk's office were not over yet. An issue arose on Bolger's motion. One of the papers she filed, her Reply, had been served after it was filed. Under the law, you are supposed to serve motion papers first and then file. Normally, I would not care, but it gave me another chance to show that Bolger was a congenital liar, since she claimed the Reply was served first. I submitted a letter to the Appellate Division, Bolger responded in a letter with her usual Clintonesque lies, and then I tried to submit another letter to the Appellate Division with newly discovered proof from Federal Express that Bolger had lied in her letter. That's when I ran into a different millennial clerk, tall, muscular, unshaven, and eminently arrogant who referred to himself as the "Supervising Clerk." Boy, I would have liked to have played against him on the rugby field. I'd given him the ball just to take him apart.

This clown, while talking on a telephone attached to his ear, took my letter and proceeded to swagger about the clerk's office continuing to talk on his earpiece. So I waited, and waited, and eventually he ended his telephone call. I could not tell whether it was court related or not.

He glanced at my letter with exhibits and said in an arrogant tone, "I'm not going to accept these!" He didn't say the Court wasn't going to accept them but that "I'm" not going to accept them. I told him the letter was important because it contained recently discovered proof exposing Bolger's lies that affected her Reply. He sophistically remarked, "It doesn't affect the Reply, just the service of the Reply." What an idiot! If service is improper, then due process prevents any court from considering it—that sounds like an effect.

I remarked, "So this Court accepts falsehoods and doesn't permit their corrections?" To which he arrogantly replied "Yes!" Then covering his butt, he added, "The Court's rules only allow one letter for each side in a case.” I searched the rules and didn’t find that one anywhere. He obviously made it up to get rid of me, so he could go back to acting the big shot by taking calls on his earpiece.

As a result, I drafted a motion on Bolger’s illegal service of her Reply and her cover-up over it, and went to file it. The clerk’s office opens at 9 AM and I arrived a couple of minutes after to file my motion papers. Behind me was another attorney also filing motion papers. A lady clerk with a Spanish accent told us that we would have to wait because the system was not up and running—whatever that meant. The other attorney had previously been told by the clerk’s office to arrive as early as possible, and I was told to file any papers before 10 AM. Both of us had other appointments, but we had to wait. During our wait, I heard the lady clerk talking with another female clerk and tried to listen for any indication as to what the problem really was and how long it would take to fix it. They were talking in Spanish, however, which I do not speak—felt as though I was back in Ecuador or Los Angeles. The third-world intake clerk finally arrived for work, which was the real reason we couldn’t file our papers. So two American attorneys in America ended up wasting half an hour on these incompetents with a Mexican attitude toward work. The Appellate Division judges, the original three PC-Feminist female judges and the two male androgynies, denied my motion—guess female attorneys can violate the court’s rules and lie with impunity.

I did send a letter to the Appellate Division’s Acting Presiding Judge complaining about the personnel in his clerk’s office—twice, but never once heard back.

With the Appellate Divisions’ dismissal of my case against the PC-Feminazi book-burning bimbos from down under, I made a motion to the State’s highest court, the Court of Appeals, requesting that it allow me to appeal the Appellate Division’s dismissal.

My argument was simple: the Appellate Division effectively overruled the policies behind the Court of Appeal's ruling in E. P. Reynolds, Inc., v. Nager Electric Company, Inc., 17 N.Y.2d 51, 55-56 (1966) and the policies of the Second Preliminary Report of Advisory Comm. on Practice and Procedure (N. Y. Legis. Doc., 1958, No. 13), pp. 344-347; Eleventh Annual Report of N. Y. Judicial Council, 1945, pp. 414-416.). The growing concern over the high and continually increasing cost of printing documents from the lower court for an appeal and the use of it by "deep-pockets" to deter appellate review caused the State Legislature to institute the appendix system. That system allows for printing only the relevant portions of the lower court's record. E. P. Reynolds, Inc., v. Nager Electric Company, Inc., 17 N.Y.2d 51, 55-56 (1966) stated:

We note that the appendix system was adopted in New York after extended study indicated the need to reduce the cost of printing records on appeal. (Second Preliminary Report of Advisory Comm. on Practice and Procedure (N. Y. Legis. Doc., 1958, No. 13), pp. 344-347; Eleventh Annual Report of N. Y. Judicial Council, 1945, pp. 414-416.). . . .

The draftsmen [of CPLR 5528] assumed that the main practice problem would be the printing of appendices that were too extensive rather than too attenuated. Thus, while the provision for sanctions in subdivision (e) of CPLR 5528 allows the court to "withhold or impose costs" for "any failure to comply with subdivision (a), (b) or (c)" (see 7 Weinstein-Korn-Miller, N. Y. Civ. Prac., par. 5528.03, p. 55-208 [1965]), the draftsmen assumed that the power would be exercised "if unnecessary parts of the record are printed;" (Second Preliminary Report of Advisory Comm. on Practice and Procedure (N. Y. Legis. Doc., 1958, No. 13), p. 354; italics supplied). This, of course, is the situation in which sanctions are most useful.

The most effective guarantee against an inadequate appendix, of course, is an attorney's desire to supply the court with all material necessary to convince it to adopt his client's position. And with the tactical and practical risk of omission so great, the main danger to be guarded against, in the view of the draftsmen, is the too verbose rather than the too cryptic appendix.

The Appellate Division wanted me to pay the cost of submitting all of the more than 400 pages that Bolger lied about needing for her brief. Over 400 pages at five dollars a page that Bolger never needed for her brief.

There are seven judges on the New York State Court of Appeals—four PC bimbats and three androgynous guys who can't figure out what they are. Too bad Trump doesn't get to appoint state judges as he does all federal judges. That's a good argument to stay out of the state courts, especially in the state that elected Hillary Clinton—twice! True to their pinko beliefs, the judges denied my motion.

“There can be no equal justice where the kind of [appeal] a man gets depends on the amount of money he has.” Griffin v. Ill., 351 U.S. 12, 19 (1956)(Justice Hugo Black). Modern-day America has changed Justice Black's statement to “There can be no equal justice where the kind of appeal a white, heterosexual man gets depends on man-hating feminists and wimpy males.”

If the case had been successful, the private pinklisters and those who rely on them would have been put on notice that they are legally liable for the professional and financial damage they cause with their falsehoods and economic interference with a man's business relations. That's what finally put the nail in the coffin of the McCarthyite-Cohn inquisition of the 1950s.

Cloud Nine

There wasn't anything legal to do against the man-hating Judge Schecter. Sure the State had a Commission on Judicial Conduct, but it was staff mainly by girls who couldn't get a date with a man even after extensive plastic surgery. As for the guys at the Commission, they were either queer, didn't know what they were or simply terrified of girls. To the Commission employees, female judges were the untouchables (not that anyone would want to touch them).

The Commission saw its duty as protecting these nervous Nellies from those barbarian men who actually thought a judge should be competent and fair. This loony-tune belief system ignored the teachings of the Bible about all those not-so-innocent and overly malicious females. It's the modern-day version of women's rights called "Nell Fenwick Feminism." Men are either "Snidely Whiplash" or the metro-sexual wimp "Dudley Do-Right," and girls are always the victims of a male controlled society—even when their lies and tears send an innocent man up the river for decades. So complaining to the Commission, as I had done in the past with other unfit female judges, would be a waste of time. And since Schechter was a "judge," she was immune from being sued for her actions in court.

Bolger, however, could be sued for hacking into my MensRightsLaw.net website (a.k.a. iCloud)—so I did. The one nice part about being a lawyer is that when you sue the miscreants, you don't have to pay an attorney while they usually do. Even when suing other lawyers, they usually hire someone else to defend themselves because their malpractice insurance often cover's the fee—but not always.

The defendants in my case against Bolger included her androgynous male associate, Matthew L. Schafer and an unknown person designated as "Jane Doe." Whenever a lawyer suspects there are people involved in nefarious activities whose names he does not know, he throws in a couple of "John Does." I use "Jane Does"—not wanting to be gender insensitive. Of course in this age of "transgenderism," I should have put "Its." Jane Doe was probably the private investigator that Murdoch's organization used to hack into computers and cell phones.

The case was filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York—not because the judges there were any less biased against white heterosexual men, but because they were smarter. Sometimes bright people possess enough pride not to succumb to moronic mob mentality.

The action accused Bolger, Schaffer and Jane Doe of violating the following;

- a. The Computer Fraud and Abuse Act of 1986, 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(2)(C) (“CFAA”), by intentionally accessing without my authorization a computer or computers used in interstate or foreign commerce, obtaining information there from, and causing loss to my law and consulting business.
- b. The civil Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq., (“RICO”)—my favorite—by engaging in wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. 1343, and robbery—theft of computer related material that violated N.Y. Penal Code § 156.30, which is a Class E felony.
- c. The Copyright Act of 1976, 17 U.S.C. § 101 et seq., by copying, distributing, and displaying an unpublished attorney work product and copying or downloading other documents from my iCloud that were registered with the U.S. Copyright Office—all without my permission.
- d. Trespass to chattel under New York State law by interfering with the personal property—electronically stored information—of my law and consulting business.
- e. Injurious falsehood under New York State law by making available to the public a knowingly false representation about my business product—the attorney work product that Bolger lied about it being a press release.
- f. Replevin under New York State law by Defendants continuing to wrongfully retain copies—paper or digital—of business and personal information belonging to me, which were stolen from a computer or iCloud used by me for business and personal purposes.

- g. For attorney defendants Bolger and Schafer, violation of the New York Rule of Professional Misconduct 4.1 by (1) knowingly making a false statement—perjury—to the New York State Supreme Court in the case Hollander v. Shepherd, et al., 152656/2014 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014) that an attorney work product document of my business was a press release, and (2) violating N.Y. Penal Code § 156.30 when they duplicated computer related material of my business without having any right to do so.

Bolger and Schafer’s lawyer was a Joseph L. Francoeur from Wilson Elser Moskowitz Edelman & Dicker LLP. A typical neo-McCarthyite-PC defense lawyer—addicted to personally attacking his opponent (me) and inventing accusatory falsehoods. Such lawyers lack the intelligence to argue the merits, so they resort to the typical PC-Feminist disparagements and empty threats.

In the preliminary letters among both sides and the Court, I responded to Francoeur’s school girl insults:

First, can’t these defense attorneys get over their addiction to ad hominem attacks and invented accusatory dissemblings? I previously worked as an associate for a defense firm, Cravath, Swaine & Moore, and they never engaged in such prevaricating and dissembling garbage as Francoeur. For example, Francoeur writes or infers:

[Plaintiff is] “a serial litigant,” [well so is the ACLU];
“Rule 11” [sanctions were threatened against Plaintiff by the Second Circuit, what does that have to do with this case?];
[Plaintiff’s] “attempts to establish a ‘men’s rights’ course,” [actually a program of eight courses created by various professors that was approved by a university until the Pravda Correct press demonized every one involved];
“Judge Peter Moulton refused to sign [Plaintiff’s] order to show cause,” [but Judge Moulton did rule that the motion could be brought by noticed, and it was];
[Plaintiff] “violat[ed] a court order,” [Plaintiff, semi-retired, could not afford the printing costs for 400 pages of irrelevant documents filed by Francoeur's clients]; [Plaintiff is] "seeking to relitigate . . . rejected fraud allegations," [the fraud allegations in this case are different, as is the fraud that Francoeur is trying to perpetrate with his pre-motion letter]; [Plaintiff] "purposely omitted the two exhibits," [see below for exposure of this Francoeur fraud]; [Plaintiff is engaged in] "harassing litigation," [Plaintiff has a First Amendment right to go to court against those who violate his rights]; and [He is a] "vexatious plaintiff," [typical modern-day name calling].

Oh well, I'm not going to open a Twitter account to expose Francoeur's falsehoods, prevarications and dissemblings. I'll just ignore his calumny until my opposition to his motion to dismiss. . . .

Second, can't these defense attorneys refrain from cheating by violating the spirit of a court's rules? Here Francoeur refers to two exhibits: "the screenshot of Plaintiff's publicly accessible website as visited by Mr. Schafer on December 30, 2014 (Ex. 1) and the screenshot of the Google-cache version of how the website appeared on January 3, 2015." Exhibits are not permitted in a pre-motion conference letter, but Francoeur is trying to create a fraudulent image in the Court's mind based solely on his dissembling description of the two documents. It's the perfect dissemblance because the Court cannot view the documents itself to realize Francoeur's trick.

Here's the deceit in this trick by Francoeur. The Complaint at ¶ 8 alleges that once the defendants broke into the iCloud "they stripped the access codes thereby making it viewable to them and the public at any time." Without the access codes, the website became public, so of course the defendants were then able to obtain a screenshot and a Google-cache version. In that sense, Francoeur actually got a fact right, since it admits his clients' hacking—they hacked in and then stripped the codes to make the iCloud public. Without the two documents, however, the Court is not able to see through Francoeur's subterfuge [that was shown by the dates on the two screen shots, which I raised in my opposition to his motion to dismiss].

As far as the facts go, Francoeur is clearly trying to create an alternate reality to support his disingenuous arguments. He never refers to all the materials that the defendants stole from the iCloud—actually, they probably downloaded the entire site, but their law firm refuses to say. He only refers to one, calling it a "document about" the N.Y. Supreme Court case. The prevarication here is that the document was an attorney work product—big difference. . . .

Francoeur then made a motion asking the Court for an additional 10 pages for his memorandum of law to dismiss. The Court has a limit of 25 pages, but Francoeur wanted 35 pages. In opposing his request, I told the Judge:

Attorney Francoeur and his clients' conduct thus far in this action make it clear that they will just use the additional space to continue their litigation of personal destruction. In their two letters to this Court, Francoeur and his clients, also defense attorneys, have raised irrelevant matters in order to engage in their neo-McCarthyite-PC smear tactics.

The additional pages will only provide more of their self-righteous, hypocritical and bigoted ideological rants against me for resorting to the courts to defend my rights under the laws and the U.S. Constitution.

Francoeur and his clients are marked by a severe strain of intolerance toward anyone who does not believe as they do. Especially, if that person worked as a volunteer in Donald Trump's campaign for the presidency—as I did.

From the powerful to the tyrant next door, those who aim to exploit, control and silence others predictably turn to personal attacks, lies and deception.

My words didn't do any good—the Judge gave Francoeur the additional space to play his girlie PC tactic and also allowed me 35 pages, which at the time I didn't think I needed.

The Judge's decision to allow longer memoranda seemed strange to me. Judges, even in federal court, are often overwhelmed by the mere amount of papers filed in a case and the number of cases they handle, so why wasn't this Judge. Was he an Evelyn Woods speed reader? Generally, I don't bother researching judges but my suspicions were up. My Slovakian, single-mother paralegal researched his Honor. Turns out he was Latin and appointed by Obama—that explained it. He belonged to that Orwellian party of feminists, ethnics, Muslims, illegals and queers who think they are superior to everyone else, especially white males. It's the FEMIQ Party. No way he'd rule against the neo-McCarthyite-fascho defendants and their lawyer. (Fascho is a French term for fascist that Brigitte Bardot uses against the alt-left—boy was she hot in her day.) The website called "The Robing Room" lists comments by attorneys who appear before a judge. One comment on this Obamite judge was "I don't know why he's on the bench, doesn't know the law and doesn't care to." The gods must have it in for me.

After all the years, booze, dope and rugby, it takes a while for the remnants of my brain to realize something important. In this case, I missed for a few weeks that I should have requested early discovery on exactly what Bolger and her eunuch copied from my iCloud. Normally, you have to wait until after a preliminary conference in court before being allowed to demand documents and factual answers from the opposing party. The Court had scheduled one but canceled it after Francoeur said he wanted to file a motion to dismiss. Such often happens. Why bother with a time-consuming conference when a motion to dismiss may end the case. If it doesn't, then the Court will hold a conference.

There is a rule, however, that allows you to ask for documents or answers before the preliminary conference if the other side agrees or the court orders it. So the week before Bolger's attorney was to submit his memorandum of law depicting me as a demon from the TV show "Supernatural" (only to have that kind of power), I requested of Francoeur copies of all the documents Bolger and Schafer stole from my iCloud. Under the Judge's rules, Francoeur had 72 hours to respond to my request, which he received by mail on Friday morning, May 5, 2107. That gave him until Monday morning. It took him until Monday afternoon—missing the deadline. He whined like a high school girl committed to a weekend of partying that receiving my request on Friday morning gave him only one business day to respond no. This guy is a partner in an international law firm. If he didn't want to work on a weekend, he should have told an associate to handle it.

So I turned to the Court and made a letter motion requesting production of copies of the documents. The following was the gist of my motion:

The reason for my request for early discovery is simple. The full extent of defendants' nefarious activities, and therefore the harm they have caused and are in a position to cause are not fully known. Yet Francoeur argues this case should not be investigated further with discovery—the legal system should forget about it; thereby, granting his clients the right to keep everything they took without consent to use or sell as they wish.

Naturally, I mocked Francoeur for not wanting to work on a weekend as well as lying and trying to cover-up the extent of his clients' thievery. He blew a gasket—began acting as Generalissimo Franco[eur]—demanding that I “immediately” withdraw the motion or “we” [he and the defendants] will take “appropriate” action. In PC lingo, that translates they will lie, cheat and commit any crime to get their way. What a clown, if we weren't in court, I'd challenge him to a duel. Instead, I made another motion accusing him of coercion in the second degree. It's only a misdemeanor but prohibits “expos[ing] a secret or publiciz[ing] an asserted fact, whether true or false, tending to subject some person to hatred, contempt or ridicule.” That's exactly what Generalissimo Francoeur was going to do in his dismissal memorandum of law. So I asked the Court to restrain him from engaging in personal attacks and irrelevant accusatory dissemblings—it didn't bother.

The reason for discovery of all the documents Bolger and Schafer copied was to show that when they hacked my iCloud, they downloaded everything. Throughout the proceeding, Francoeur ignored that allegation and focused only on the one document Bolger submitted to the New York Supreme Court in the case against Tory the Torch and the Murdoch newspaper. Obtaining all the documents was crucial for the copyright part of my case because a copyright action for infringement can only be brought if the work was registered with the U.S. Copyright Office. The document Bolger filed in the New York court over which she committed perjury by calling it a press release was not registered. Other documents on my iCloud, however, were registered. So, if they copied those documents, the Court could not throw out the copyright cause of action. Also, because none of those registered copyrighted documents were submitted to the New York court, Francoeur could not argue “fair use.” Courts often hold that when a registered copyrighted document is filed in court and it is relevant to the case, there is no infringement for having copied it without the author's permission—that's "fair use." Lastly, by copying those registered copyrighted documents without my permission, Bolger and her associate would be liable for damages set out in the Copyright Act of from $750 to $30,000. And if I could show that they knew those documents were copyrighted, which simply meant pointing out the © on them, it could be up to $150,000. You can see why Francoeur was trying to avoid discovery. The Court let him get away with it—what do you expect; the Judge was appointed by Obama.

Fascho Francoeur submitted his 29 page memorandum—a somewhat diatribe against me. The surprise was he didn't use the 35 pages he whined to the Court he needed—guess he ran out of insults. But my law memorandum used all of the allowed 35 pages and ended with "I am glad that [Francoeur] requested memoranda with an extended page length. I never would have been able to keep all this to 25 pages—thanks Joe." "All this" included at the beginning:

Defendants' attorney, Joseph L. Francoeur ("Francoeur"), just can't shake his neo-McCarthyite-fascho addiction to ad hominem attacks, lies, prevarications and invented accusatory dissemblings. Right at the beginning of his 29 page memorandum-diatribes against a proud Trump supporter (after all we won), Francoeur launches into his litigation tactic of personal destruction by demonizing me, the opposing lawyer and plaintiff. He clearly believes the Politically Correct ("PC") adage that one must vilify and incite hatred against those with whom PCers disagree for surely non-PCers are sub-humans without rights.

That last line was based on Lenin's, "we must vilify and incite hatred against those with which we disagree." I didn't cite to Lenin because I did not want to confuse the Judge that lefties are more than capable of using Nazi tactics. The Judge might have thought, oh, if the lefties do it than it is okay. Continuing:

Picking up where Francoeur left off in his pre-motion letters, he paints me as malicious, alleging I brought this action to "harass" (Def. Mem. at 3), and that it is "frivolous" as are all the cases I have brought trying to defend the rights of white, heterosexual men (Def. Mem. at 1). I know, that very phrase is considered by half of the country as a blasphemy—but not the other half. To them, and the Founding Fathers, I have a First Amendment right to go to court against those who violate my rights and the rights of the group to which I belong.

* * *

As a firm believer in not turning the other cheek, let's look at Francoeur a little. I'm sure he will whine pompously in his reply. Francoeur "spearheaded" his firm's involvement with the tax exempt organization "Safe Passage Project" that thwarts the deportation of "unaccompanied minors" who illegally enter the U.S. In effect, Safe Passage facilitates schemes to keep illegal alien youths in the U.S., such as M-13 gang members. "[T]he image of unaccompanied alien children as little children is misleading. Out of nearly 200,000 UAC apprehended from 2012 to 2016, 68 percent were ages 15, 16 or 17." Stephen Dinan, Obama knew gang members part of illegal immigrant surge, Washington Times, May 24, 2017. Just recently, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement arrested eight gang members who illegally crossed the border as unaccompanied minors. These so-called innocent children engage in murder, racketeering, rape and sex trafficking. Stephen Dinan, Feds nab three Dreamers, 10 UAC in nationwide gang operation, Washington Times, May 11, 2017.

Francoeur submitted a reply in which he sniveled that I had insulted him. What did the little girl expect—he started it. It's a typical PC-Totalitarian tactic. They personally attack you in the hope you'll cave, but when you don't and respond in kind, it's boo-hoo-hoo, he's being mean to me. Sounds like the proverbial recent girlfriend. That's how androgynies like Francoeur act. Just look at that French President Macron who married his mother.

All the papers filed in the case can be read at MensRightsLaw.net under "Bimbo Book Burners' Lawyers Hack Roy's iCloud" or through the PACER website—go to New York Southern, log in, Query, Case Number 16-9800.

Usually in the district court, the judges do not bother with oral argument but make their decisions to dismiss or not based on the papers each side submits. I requested oral argument, however, because I wanted to appear in court with Francoeur. When the attorneys for both sides show up to argue in court, they usually introduce themselves to each other as a matter of courtesy. Hopefully Francoeur would approach me to do such, allowing me to insult him to his face with the aim of a fist-fight breaking out. Such does happen in court now and then. My last court fight was in the New York Civil Court. If things went according to plan, my next one would allow me to practice my Krav Maga on a Generation Xer.

It didn't go according to plan because Francoeur never approached me, but my efforts to have a fight in court prevented me from being sanctioned by the court—ironic. Because of my request for oral argument the Judge held a two-hour hearing before deciding the motion to dismiss. Prior to the hearing, the Judge issued a list of questions that would be raised at the hearing. Most were directed at me and my first amended complaint.

In the beginning of the hearing the Judge said,

COURT: The issue is what is the basis for the claim that in fact [Defendants hacked your website.] You haven't established through documentation that in fact this website that you say, through whoever the website provider, was a secured website. Because just Googling your name quite frankly you do find references to articles that have been written where other individuals who had written the articles have had access to some website that you had. I don't know what website it is or anything like it. So at some point there were certainly publicly available information with regard to you. Whether it was with regard to the allegations of this other lawsuit, I have no idea. I guess what I am saying is you haven't established that you actually had an account that was in fact secure.

Wait-a-minute, I'm thinking, a judge is not allowed to conduct an investigation into a party. "Judges . . . have no responsibility to gather evidence and indeed commit grave error if they attempt to do so on their own." Charles W. Wolfram, Modern Legal Ethics, § 12.3.2.

If a judge goes looking for evidence, then he has to give reasonable notice, which means beforehand, or if after, exactly where the judge looked to obtain the evidence. The Judge did neither, which means he violated my due process rights under the Constitution. Ward v. Village of Monroeville, 409 U.S. 57 (1972); Tumey v. Ohio, 273 U.S. 510 (1927).

My response was that the information the Judge obtained by Googling my name was the result of a former website—not the one at issue in the case—that had been closed down and various interviews the press conducted with me.

During the hearing in which I did most the talking in answering the Judge’s questions, the Judge at one point said that when the hearing began he was prepared to dismiss the entire complaint and seriously considered sanctions against me for bringing it, but oral argument had changed his mind. So, thanks to my request for an oral hearing, such was prevented—for the time being at least. The Judge did dismiss all the actions except the Defendants violating the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act and the Copyright Act. However, he refused to allow me to find out all of the documents that the Defendants had copied. As for sanctions, the Judge told me to provide the Court with documents from the website host about the setting up of the website. The tide was turning.

Toward the end of the hearing, Francoeur tried putting words in my mouth on one occasion, but it was so obvious that all I needed to say in my sarcastic response was “I am not admitting that. Give me a break!” Francoeur ended with a tug at the Judge’s heart strings.

MR. FRANCOEUR: I told myself I didn’t want to belabor the point about vexatious litigation, but I would like to make a very brief point. My clients are here in the courtroom. This is a painful.

THE COURT: I saw some shaking heads back there and I figured they were people who might have an interest. Go ahead.

So that’s who all those people in the peanut gallery were. But I was just suing two persons and a Jane Doe—not eight or more, so why were they here?

MR. FRANCOEUR: It is hard to listen to. There is a lot of serious allegations. There is no merit. There is no basis. The closest we came was logic. I just ask the Court to keep in mind these are people, these are lives with reputations. It is very hard for them. There are claims being withdrawn it seems almost flippantly. It doesn’t matter to the plaintiff, but it matters tremendously to the people on it defense and I ask that the Court to keep that in mind.

THE COURT: I understand that.

I thought, hey two can play this game.

MR. HOLLANDER: Your Honor, may I say something?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. HOLLANDER: I am 70 years old. I am going to be 71 in September. How do I get by? I get by doing the lowest of lowest of legal work called document review. One reason I am doing that document review is because of their defendants back there and their litigation of personal destruction, including Mr. Francoeur and his litigation of personal destruction. The first -- the second letter he sends to your Honor, he brings in all this irrelevant stuff in support, which I can see now didn't work to bias the Court. That is what I went through in the New York Supreme Court. Nothing but allegations, ad hominem attacks. You know why I lost the case in New York Supreme Court? Because I didn't have enough money to put together an appendix that was stuffed with irrelevant, repetitive documents that were filed in the New York Supreme Court by the defendant Bolger and Defendant Schafer. I am also a victim here. I really hate using that phrase, but I am not here as some evil Trump-ite trying to get revenge. I just want justice. My rights have been stepped on and I have been called all kinds of names by them.

The Judge repeated for me to get the set-up documents from my website host and provide such to the Court and Francoeur. The host, however, had no indication that the site was private because all it did was rent computer space. It did not set up sites and determine access—the renter did. However, I had an ace in the hole. My computer consultant who set up the site and maintained it for me provided two affidavits that right from the beginning the site was private—protected by access codes. That meant someone had hacked in and stripped the codes to make it public for a couple of weeks until I saw what was going on and had my consultant establish new codes. I also had a king in the hole. The Wayback Machine has been making archive records of websites since 1996. My website was set up in 2012. The Wayback Machine, however, can only archive publicly-viewable sites—not private sites. The Wayback had no archives of my site, which inferred, although did not prove, it was private. My consultant's affidavits and the Wayback Machine were enough for the time being to dodge any sanctions and allow me to submit another amended complaint, Second Amended Complaint, that only dealt with the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act and the Copyright Act. The Judge also allowed Francoeur to make a motion to strike parts of the Second Amended Complaint.

During this back and forth via letters with the Court, Francoeur, who is of French descent, tried to paint my computer consultant as Russian because my consultant was in Moscow when he executed his affidavits. Francoeur was such a jerk.

My response, “My computer consultant is not Russian he is French. I would think his name makes that obvious” to a fellow Frenchman. “If Mr. Francoeur wants to employ the current trend of raising suspicion against anyone who was involved with Russians, then he should stick to the facts: I previously managed the Kroll Associates Office in Moscow and married a Russian woman whom I met while working there.”

In addition, I threw in the following in a letter to the Court:

It is clear from the continuing misrepresentations of attorney Joseph Francoeur in his March 19, 2018, letter that he desires to keep the truth hidden. But that’s understandable for someone against whom the State of New York has issued tax warrants.

In 2013 and again in 2017, the State of New York issued two tax warrants against Mr. Francoeur: Warrant Id E-038499833-W001-5 and E-038499833-W002-9. (Ex. A, Tax Warrants). A tax warrant is issued when a taxpayer refuses to pay a deficiency assessed against him. These two tax warrants were equivalent to legal judgments against Mr. Francoeur that created liens against his real and personal property, which gave Mr. Francoeur the impetus to pay what he owed. Mr. Francoeur’s tax skirting is especially egregious, since he is a lawyer. This may just be the tip of the iceberg, since the tax warrant records from before 2004 are on paper at the Department of State Office and the two above were found on the Internet.

Defense lawyers who practice in the age of the Internet should not throw verbal insults.

Francoeur had specifically requested the Judge allow him to make a motion to strike, but it was clear this clown would also add in a motion to dismiss even though the Judge did not say he could. These PC-fascho lawyers, just like the #MeTooLyingHos are genetically incapable of telling the full truth because they would lose. So for a few weeks before Franco-Fascho filed his motions, I drafted my opposition. When dealing with these PCers, it’s always best to formulate a draft of your opposition brief first, which emphasizes the strategy you want to use. That way you won't waste the limit space you have—here 25 double spaced pages, exposing a PC-fascho's lies, prevarications and dissemblings.

At the hearing on Francoeur's first motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), the Judge clearly wanted to know whether my iCloud was private or public—the key fact question in the case. But on this type of motion to dismiss, the plaintiff, me, must not be put to the test to prove his allegations at the pleading stage by providing evidence. NOW, Inc v. Scheidler, 510 U.S. 249, 256 (1994)—thank you NOW; Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 500-01 (1947); Geisler v. Petrocelli, 616 F.2d 636, 640 (2d Cir. 1980). The Judge, however, clearly wanted evidence, which is why he told me to dig up proof that my website or iCloud was private. The Judge may have taken this tack because he was looking to turn the proceedings into a summary judgment situation. Summary judgment requires both sides to present their evidence as to the facts and if—only if—the remaining issues are how the law would deal with those facts, then the Judge can decide the case without a trial. If he was moving toward summary judgment—fine. If not, then I would have an issue on appeal to the Second Circuit in that he required evidence on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion.

Okay, the Judge wanted evidence, so my strategy in my opposition to Francoeur's motions was to provide all the evidence available that my iCloud, now termed in court papers "MensRightsLaw.net" or "MRL.net," had always been private. Private, that is, until Bolger and her Murdoch clients hacked MRL.net and stripped the access codes that made it public for a couple of weeks.

My opposition essentially presented the following that the website was private:

1. None of the twenty-something web archives that take snapshots of publicly viewable websites had any snapshots of MRL.net—this included the Internet Archive’s “Wayback Machine.” Libraries and other organizations have been preserving the written history of mankind since at least the Royal Library of Alexandria in 330 B.C. by storing clay tablets, papyrus scrolls, books and pictures. Over the past 20 years, much of our history has been recorded in digital form and preserved by archiving. “Today’s research libraries and archives recognize website archiving (‘web archiving’) as an essential component of their collecting practices, and various programs to archive portions of the Web have been developed around the world, from within national archives to individual institutions.” Gail Truman, Harvard Library Report, January 2016, at 5 (Harvard Library sponsored an environmental scan to explore and document current web archiving programs.).

2. More evidence that MRL.net was private came from the paucity of “cached” versions of a page from MRL.net. Internet services, such as search engines, record caches of publicly available webs. From September 2012, when MRL.net was created, to the end of 2014, when Bolger hacked the site, there were around 10 services or search engines that provided caches. Search Engine Showdown, Finding Old Web Pages and Cache Copies at 2-3, March 26, 2013. Bolger was able to provide only one cache of MRL.net from Google and that cache was taken on January 3, 2015, after she or her Murdoch clients made MRL.net public by having its access codes stripped. The only thing the Google-cache showed was that MRL.net was public on January 3, 2015—it did not show that it was public on December 30, 2014, when Defendants admit accessing the site and claimed it was public. Had MRL.net been public during Bolger and Schafer’s searching of the web in the New York State Supreme Court case from at least July 14, 2014, to December 30, 2014, when they claim to first access the site; their searching would have easily turned up numerous caches of MRL.net, which they would have produced—they did not. The reason is simple—the site was private, so there were no caches from before they stripped the access codes.

3. My computer consultant and I both swore that when MRL.net was created, it was a private website, and that whenever accessing the site on the Internet, required codes to view it. Until January 12, 2015, that is, when I discovered that Bolger or her Murdoch clients had invaded the site. A new password was immediately applied and MRL.net remained private. Bolger and Schafer's affidavits claim the site was public when they accessed it from December 30, 2014, to January 12, 2015, and neither they nor to their knowledge did anyone hack into it. Looks like a tie! My computer consultant's sworn statements and mine were admissible evidence.

Further, my opposition argued logic. Something you'll never hear from a PCer. Bolger and Schafer, or one of their agents, were searching the Internet in the Murdoch Case beginning at least on July 14, 2014, for information on me. Why did it take them over five months to access MRL.net if it had been open to the public all that time? Also, I first learned from the Internet exhibits Bolger filed on August 29, 2014, in the New York State Supreme Court that she and others from her firm or clients were trolling the Web for anything she could spin to support her litigation by vilification. If MRL.net was public, why would I—a semi-rational man—keep it public knowing that she was searching for information?

On the copyright infringement, the screenshot of MRL.net and the January 3, 2015, Google-cache copied by Bolger's pansy, Schafer, contained material copyrighted and registered by me. That evidence simply came from the U.S. Copyright Office.

The Judge now had all the evidence available to me without being allowed discovery, which is how a plaintiff usually finds evidence. Francoeur whined to the Court that evidence is not supposed to be relied on at this stage in a case—before discovery. Funny, he did not complain of such at the hearing when the Court required me to come up with evidence that MRL.net was private. Ah, must be PC hypocrisy.

As for Francoeur's legal arguments, he wanted the entire Second Amended Complaint thrown out because it was immaterial, prejudicial and irrelevant. My opposition stated, "[I]t is settled law in this District [S.D.N.Y.] that 'immaterial allegations . . . need not be stricken unless their presence in the complaint prejudices the defendant.'" Federated Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Grinnell Corp., 287 F.Supp. 744, 747 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) (internal quote Fleischer v. A. A. P., Inc., 180 F.Supp. 717, 721 (S.D.N.Y. 1959)). The prejudice to be protected against by a Rule 12(f) motion to strike a complaint is "that which may be suffered if the jury sees the complaint . . . ." Federated Dep't Stores, Inc. at 748. But the challenged allegations in my Second Amended Complaint would not be seen by a jury because "such is not the practice in this District." Id. at 748 (citing Avon Pub. Co. v. American News Co., 122 F.Supp. 660, 662 (S.D.N.Y. 1954)). Also, "As the cases make clear, it is neither an authorized nor a proper way to procure the dismissal of all . . . of a complaint" by using a Rule 12(f) motion. Wright & Miller, 5C Fed. Prac & Proc. Civ. § 1380 at 1 (3d ed.); see Day v. Moscow, 955 F.2d 807, 811 (2d Cir. 1992) ("not for dismissal of claims in their entirety").

Francoeur additionally argued that just by my referring to Bolger and Schafer's underhanded activities in the New York State Supreme Court case was scandalous. Of course, it was okay for him to use the proceedings in that case for his arguments, but not me—typical PC hypocrisy.

Even if the Second Amended Complaint allegations were scandalous, it didn't matter because [w]hen the party seeking the elimination of alleged scandalous matter was the “first to hurl epithets,” a court will deny the motion to strike. See Lewis v. Shaffer Stores Co., 218 F.Supp. 238, 240 (S.D.N.Y. 1963); von Bulow by Auersperg v. von Bulow, 657 F. Supp. 1134, 1146 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) (quoting Lewis, defendant is “hardly in a position to complain when plaintiff responds in kind”). Francoeur and his clients started slinging mud at the very beginning of this case by denigrating Plaintiff over a prior case that had nothing to do with this action or the Murdoch Case and tarring him as a “serial litigant,” “vexatious” and one who resorts to “harassing litigation” of an “abusive nature.” (Letter at 3, January 31, 2017, Dkt. 14; Letter at 2, April 5, 2017, Dkt. 20). They continued using irrelevancies from Plaintiff’s prior cases that had nothing to do with this action to further their disparagement of him. Francoeur’s first memorandum to dismiss cited to six of Plaintiff’s past cases—12 times, and Francoeur’s reply falsely stated that Plaintiff “attacks . . . courts” and filed an “invective filled” memorandum. (Def. Dismissal Mem. at iii-iv, Dkt. 35; Reply at 1, Dkt. 38). Francoeur’s calumny continued with his memorandum to strike by repeatedly accusing Plaintiff of harassing Defendants. (Def. Strike Mem. at 8, 11, 12, 21, Dkt. 67).

Francoeur’s modus operandi of dredging-up past irrelevancies gave me the idea of doing the same to him. Here’s what I wrote based on what my private investigator found:

[L]et’s take a brief look at an attorney who lives in a glass house. Throughout these proceedings, Francoeur has engaged in numerous misrepresentations, prevarications and dissemblings in order to keep the truth hidden. Such conduct is understandable for someone, according to one private detective agency, with a hidden arrest record in the County of Pulaski, Virginia that resulted in a misdemeanor conviction in absentia as well as someone against whom the State of New York has issued tax warrants. On July 14, 2001, Francoeur apparently committed a misdemeanor offense involving a motor vehicle, but was not arrested until July 16, 2001. He was subsequently found guilty in absentia on November 13, 2001, apparently for operating a motor vehicle with a device in defective or unsafe condition. Exactly what occurred is unclear for the Virginia State Police will not provide any details from its computerized Central Criminal Records Exchange unless Francoeur okays it. Nor can the Virginia courts provide any records because they were purged after 10 years. The Internet, however, contains the scraps of information above but not the full story, which allows for any number of negative conclusions as to Francoeur’s character and credibility. Such is what Francoeur has been doing in this case—spinning scraps of information into demonizing and sanctioning Plaintiff. The only difference is that the full stories behind those scraps censuring Plaintiff are available, but Francoeur, as with Defendant Bolger, volitionally ignore the full stories.

After some reflection, I decided to take the above out. Part of my strategy in writing the opposition was to keep out of the mud where Francoeur resided.

The crux of Francoeur's Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss the Computer Fraud and Abuse action rested on whether the MRL.net site was private or public. That is, whether I had provided enough evidence that the site was private to allow me discovery.

The Rule 12(b)(6) motion on copyright depended whether Bolger use of copyrighted registered documents in two court proceedings and sending them to her Murdoch clients was considered "fair use." All the documents under copyright law were unpublished.

The publication status of a work affects whether others may make fair use of it. One of the four factors analyzed in fair use analysis is "the nature of the copyrighted work." 17 U.S.C. § 107(2). The unpublished nature of a work can have a dispositive impact on the fair use analysis. In Harper & Row, Publishers, Inc. v. Nation Enters., 471 U.S. 539, 564 (1985), the Supreme Court held that "[t]he fact that a work is unpublished is a critical element of its 'nature,'" under the second of the four fair use factors. Id. "[T]he scope of fair use is narrower with respect to unpublished works." Id. "[T]he author's right to control the first public appearance [publication] of his undisseminated expression will outweigh a claim of fair use." Id. at 555. In Harper & Row, the unpublished nature of President Ford's manuscript was the critical piece of evidence that defeated the fair use defense. Id. at 569.

So this issue depends on how much weight the Judge gives to the documents unpublished status.

Francoeur filed a reply to my opposition in which he basically lied so that his "fake facts" would fit his legal arguments. He did much the same in filing his motion to strike and dismiss papers. It's a way to get something before a court with a minimal number of billing hours. But why do it if his attorney clients have the deep pockets of a malpractice insurance company behind them? Lawyers are paid on an hourly basis, so when their clients have money, they spend more time on a case that allows them to more thoroughly examine the law, facts and provide better arguments. The only possible answer was Bolger and Schafer did not have an insurance company paying the bills.

RICO, which was no longer part of the case, and CFAA are criminal statutes that allow for an individual to file civil actions. Although those actions are civil, they accuse the defendants of crimes that the plaintiff need only prove by a preponderance of the evidence. Bolger and her eunuch Schafer worked for the law firm Levine Sullivan Koch & Schulz when they arranged for hacking into MRL.net. That firm carried malpractice insurance for whenever the firm or its lawyers were sued. When this case started, an agent from CNA insurance contacted me requesting an extension of time to respond to the complaint. The agent said he was “handling the above claim under the commercial general liability policy for our insured Levine Sullivan Koch & Schulz regarding the litigation you served on them.” I said, “OK.” I always grant requests for additional time because I may need the same.

Then a week later Francoeur contacted me saying that he was representing Bolger and Schafer and asked for the same thing—an extension of time to response to the complaint, which I once again gave. Strange, why two requests for the same thing? So I called the CNA agent. According to him, he was not the one who hired Francoeur. That indicated CNA was not picking up the legal fees for Bolger and Schafer and the reason is simple. Lawyers’ malpractice insurance rarely covers accusations of criminal conduct. Even though actions under RICO and CFAA are civil, they are still based on criminal allegations. So by including CFAA and RICO allegations in the complaint, Bolger and Schafer are likely on the hook for some or all of the legal fees to defend—ha, ha, ha. Boy they must have been ticked when the Judge accepted my Second Amended Complaint, which required more legal fees for Francoeur to move to strike or dismiss. It also explains why he moved to strike the entire complaint, which is highly disfavored by the courts, instead of just part. Also why he added the Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss when he never asked the Court for permission to make it. So Francoeur is operating on a cash-strapped budget most likely coming out of the pockets of Bolger, Schafer and their peanut gallery.

[Update Hacked]

Party Lights

During the battles with Australia's nouveau ideologues and hackers, I still kept going to nightclubs, usually one night on the weekend to keep my sanity with vodka gimlets and chasing young babes. Sometimes actually catching one, but generally not, since I didn't look the same as when I was younger, and I wasn't rich.

Most of the time I'd hit a club with another lawyer whom I had known for years from Upper Westside politics. He was a "one per center" and his wife had recently died, so I started showing him around the club scene. The guy I used to hang out, Mark, had found a steady girl friend and then went up the river for a few years on a securities fraud conviction. He wasn't the same when he got out. No one physically bothered him given his martial arts ability, but he had changed.

Bob, the one per center, was even more obnoxious than I, so we ended up flirting with a lot of chicks and having a lot of fun. To get in a club, we'd often go up to the doorman and ask if this was such and such a place and how do we get in. Generally, he'd unhook the rope and show us in without us having to stand in line with the millennials. Why not, we were two gray haired guys who looked like we'd spend a lot of money and not cause trouble—we deserved special treatment. Sometimes, we'd say we were looking for our daughters. Bob actually had a hot daughter, and I was looking for the daughter I never had.

Every so often, however, because we were two guys, the doorman demanded we purchase a bottle of watered-down, brandless vodka. We always declined and went elsewhere. One such club, Amnesia, said we could enter on the condition that we bought a $350 bottle once inside, we didn't, but I decided it was time to file a complaint with the New York State Division of Human Rights against this common club practice. Nightclubs in the City were notorious for requiring guys without dates to buy a bottle for $300 to $500 as the price of admission while girls entered for free or $20.

At Amnesia, the young ladies in front of us and behind weren't required to buy a bottle, so with Bob as a witness, I figured the complaint would succeed. The State investigated and basically said it wasn't sex-discrimination but age discrimination. Guess my delusional self-image kept me from thinking about that. The complaint couldn't be amended because the State did not have jurisdiction over age discrimination by a nightclub. However, the City Commission on Human Rights did. So I took the State's findings and tried to file a complaint with the City Commission for age discrimination.

The City Commission's Executive Director for Law Enforcement, Ramon Velez, refused to let me file a complaint saying there was no discrimination because had we agreed to buy a bottle, we could have entered. What a retard. Years ago in Montgomery, Alabama, people with relatively darker skin color could enter a public bus, but on the condition that they sit in the back. By Velez's reasoning, such conduct was not discriminatory because those with a different skin complexion were not barred from entering and riding the buses as long as they sat in the back.

The U.S. Supreme Court disagreed with such stupidity in Browder v. Gayle, 352 U.S. 903 (1956), which found that allowing blacks to enter a bus, but requiring them to sit in the back as a condition of admission was unconstitutional discrimination because it treated whites and blacks differently. In another case, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a discriminatory injury can be the existence of a “barrier [read $350 bottle of brandless, water-downed vodka] that makes it more difficult for members of one group [read older white guys] to obtain a benefit [read chasing young ladies] than it is for members of another group [read younger guys].” Northeastern Fla. Chapter, Associated Gen. Contractors of America v. Jacksonville, 508 U.S. 656, 666 (1993).

A letter to Velez’s boss, the Commissioner, with those arguments resulted in her telling Velez to open a case file and investigate. He didn’t like that, so he conducted an Inspector Clouseau investigation from his desk top that probably took him all of a couple of hours during his siesta break.

Velez failed to interview two of the three eyewitnesses: Bob who was with me at the time and the doorman who refused to let us in unless we agreed to buy a bottle. Velez did, however, rely on (1) two Yelp.com blogs by persons who had gone to Amnesia but whom Velez never tried to contact, whose real identities Velez did not know, whose levels of sobriety were unknown, and who were not even at Amnesia at the time Bob and I were refused admission; (2) an Internet article titled “NYC Attorney Out To Reclaim Ex-Wife From Feminism’s Clutches, Get Laid Easier,” written by some unknown person using the pseudonym “Jezebel” who never interviewed me, and, as far as I know, never was at Amnesia; (3) a Verified Answer by Amnesia that was useless because the person making it did not have firsthand knowledge of the facts as required by law; and (4) a missing Amnesia silent video that showed the line outside the club. How Velez could rely on a video he never saw, and, if he did, could not heard what was said because it was silent is a cute trick reminiscent of Kafka’s The Trial.

Velez wrote up his slipshod research in an official government document called a Determination and Order After Investigation in which he ruled there was no “probable cause” that age discrimination had occurred. “Probable cause” means a reasonable person looking at all the evidence would conclude it was more likely than not that Bob and I had been discriminated against because of our age. Remember the State, which had actually sent investigators to Amnesia, found age discrimination was likely, but the Aztec descendant Velez said that didn’t matter.

Under the City’s rules, Velez’s Order was required to list the evidence and his reasons for finding no probable cause. Among that evidence and reasons, he wrote the following paragraph:

Complainant is a self-professed advocate for men’s rights who identifies himself as an ‘anti-feminist lawyer’ on his website, www.roydenhollander.com. He has filed a number of lawsuits against bars and clubs that have “Ladies Nights,” and admits in several online publications that he is ‘bitter’ from an ex-wife who used him for his US citizenship and money. Complainant’s description of himself is consistent with his pattern of filing several gender discrimination suits.

Okay, so I’m “bitter” toward my ex-wife and proud of being a lawyer who opposes the bigotry of sanctimonious PC-Feminists, but what does that have to do with an age discrimination complaint against a New York City nightclub? Nothing, unless Velez was resorting to the all too familiar PC tactic derived from how girls fight that the “personal is political,” which means “attack the person and you’ll be politically victorious.” Sounds like President Obama and Hillary Clinton, and that’s exactly what Velez was doing as well as venting his bigotry toward Euro-American males; otherwise, why include that paragraph in an official decision that is public.

As often happens when members of previously disfavored groups in America achieve a modicum of power, some of those members abuse that power to vent revenge for discrimination they suffered—both real and imagined. Velez likely believes that Euro-Americans discriminated against him; therefore, he is justified in settling the score by using his power against a member of that group. Even if Velez’s career was hampered by discrimination, it was not I who did such. More importantly, however, two wrongs don’t make a right.

Had Velez left that paragraph out, I would have said, “Okay appealing this isn’t worth the effort.” But, nooooo, this Obamite bigot tried to intimidate me by, in effect saying , that if I appealed, the City would go after me with the usual PC-Feminist mudslinging. So, I not only appealed, but filed a complaint with the City Commission on Human Rights against Velez for discrimination:

This is a complaint against Carlos Velez (“Velez”), attorney and Executive Director of Law Enforcement for the City of New York Commission on Human Rights (“City HR”), for illegally discriminating against attorney Roy Den Hollander, a Euro-American. Then again, maybe Velez discriminated against Den Hollander for being an African-American. After all, everyone’s ancestors originated in Africa. Anyway, Velez, in his capacity as the City HR’s Executive Director for Law Enforcement, intentionally discriminated against Roy Den Hollander (“Den Hollander”) in investigating and issuing a Determination and Order (“Order”) motivated by Velez’s prejudice, in part, against Euro-Americans.

The Commission ignored the complaint but not my appeal to the courts.

In the trial court, the New York State Supreme Court, a black male Judge upheld Velez’s Order, in part, by finding that “Amnesia’s decision for requiring $350 bottle service was based upon a nondiscriminatory, legitimate reason of . . . the goal of furthering the image of the establishment” by populating the finite space within the club with only people who fit its image, which was youth. The Ku Klux Klan should have thought of that excuse when it was opposing integration in the 1960s. Those bigots of the Deep South could have argued that public lunch counters admit only those who furthered the counters’ image—white. Of course, maybe the Judge meant his rule only applied to older Euro-American guys trying to integrate a public nightclub filled with young babes.

Next stop was the Appellate Division for the First Department. To get around the lower court’s ludicrous endorsement of discrimination by a public accommodation in order to serve a particular image, the City argued that Amnesia’s image of youth was not intentional but the result of demographics, “young people frequent Amnesia at a greater rate because Amnesia, like most dance clubs in New York City, attracts primarily younger patrons. This inference . . . is common sense . . . .” That’s the same type of excuse as claiming the members of a country club are all white because it is mainly white people who play golf and bridge.

In my court papers, it was necessary to make references to certain pages in Velez’s Order. But for some strange reason, Velez never numbered the pages of his Order, so I did it for him by marking the pages “uno,” “dos,” “tres,” and so on. When the case was heard by the Appellate Division, a black female Judge tried to give me a hard time over my use of Spanish to which I answered, “In the spirit of quid pro quo, one bad turn deserves another. Velez showed disrespect for me, so I did the same to him.” That shut her up.

The Appellate Division upheld the lower court’s dismissal of my complaint by saying that Velez didn’t do a slipshod job and was not motivated by biased toward Euro-Americans. It didn’t make legal sense that the Appellate Division even bothered with those issues because the trial court only held that the Election of Remedies doctrine prevented my filing a complaint with the City. The trial court did comment that Velez’s investigation procedure was okay and that he was not bias, but all of that was dicta—of no legal value:

[P]etitioner’s [that’s me] application for an order reversing the Commission’s January 11, 2013 Final Determination is denied pursuant to [the Election of Remedies doctrine]. No further review is warranted in this matter, however, were this court to review the January 11, 2013 Final Determination, this court would find that the above mentioned determination was rationally based.

The Judge says no further review, meaning legal analysis, is “warranted,” so he didn’t make any decisions on the issues of Velez’s Clouseau investigation and bias. Yet the Judge presents the conclusion he would have come to if he had done the legal analysis. How does he know what the conclusion will be without doing the legal analysis necessary to reach it? He doesn’t, so what did he do? Simple, he followed PC ideology, if it's a white heterosexual man fighting for his rights—he loses.

On the Election of Remedies doctrine, the Appellate Division held that because I had first filed a sex discrimination complaint with the State, I was barred from filing an age discrimination complaint with the City, even though the State found age discrimination likely but had no jurisdiction to correct it. This part of the decision meant that in situations where a person complains about discrimination to the State, and the State dismisses because it finds age, partnership status, alienage, or citizenship discrimination, all of which it has no jurisdiction over in public accommodations, the person is left with no legal remedy, and the bigots win. So I made a stab for the State's highest court, the Court of Appeals, and the City submitted papers opposing my request.

The Court of Appeals only hears cases it thinks are important to New York law, so I nearly fell out of my chair at the law library when I saw they agreed to take the case. Ha-ha-ha, those Feminist, millennial-girl attorneys at the City Law Department must have scheduled an extra session with their therapists. My laughter didn't last for long, however.

The City PC-Feminist attorneys got the Court to reverse its decision to hear my case by making a motion to dismiss the Court of Appeals' decision to hear my appeal. No such type of motion exists, so the Feminist infested Court of Appeals changed it to a "Motion to Reargue"—how PC of it—and threw out its prior decision that granted me leave to appeal.

The Court rarely, rarely grants motions to reargue when it involves whether it will hear a case in the first place, especially when the movants are making an argument they previously unsuccessfully made to the Court to keep it from hearing a case. The girl attorneys for the City made the same arguments in their now Court designated "Motion to Reargue" as they did when originally opposing my motion for leave to appeal. The only difference was they added a few more pages of talk to their reargument motion. Perhaps, like the husband of a nagging wife, the Court thought okay, okay have it your way—just shut up.

Since the Court of Appeals changed its decision once, maybe it would change it again. So I moved for reargument of the Court’s decision to deny my appeal and wrote that “since the Government of the most populous city in America was granted a second chance [bite at the apple], it seems only fair that one of its residents be granted a second shot.”

[A]n underlying assumption of the rule of law is the worthiness of a system of justice based on fairness to the individual.’ Regents of University of California v. Bakke, 438 U.S. 265, 319 n. 53 (1978).

Fine words, but in America today, they are meaningless for white heterosexual guys, so I lost the reargument motion and my request to appeal—not exactly a surprise. The Feminist deranged Court also fined me $100 and the City’s copying costs for doing what the girl attorneys for the City did—make a motion for reargument. They never got their money.

The irony is that the entire case cost me around $5,500 in expenses. That would have bought 15 bottles at Amnesia, and made Bob and I the club’s big spenders. We could have flirted, danced, fondled, and more with the pretty young ladies all night long, since they tend to gravitate to free drinks and the appearance of money. In addition, we probably would have gotten a free pass to the club into the near future.

The lesson from the Amnesia case is that today there’s a reversal of Jim Crow. Euro-Americans are now in the balcony, those with darker skin in the orchestra. Regardless of color, the bigots are still in control. (The court papers can be found at roydenhollander.com under “Discrimination by Obamite Bigots” or N.Y. Unified Court System-ecourts-WebCivilSupreme-Index Search-13-100299-New York).

Only in (PC) America

Fighting for my rights as a white, heterosexual male ended my ability to attract paying clients other than for close friends. Opposing attorneys would simply make me the issue in the PC-Feminist infested court system. It made no sense for a client to pay me to defend myself when it was the client who needed justice. Even I wouldn't hire me. Most Judges in New York are either sanctimonious PC-Feminist ideologues or scared of them. No way they were going to rule in favor of my client no matter how just his cause.

Even without the prevalent PC-Feminist bigotry, most judges—not all—but most in the Federal and State courts are not even a pale shadow of Justice Felix Frankfurter, Judge Benjamin Cardozo, Judge Learned Hand or Judge Jack B. Weinstein. Most judges graduate in the bottom half of their law school classes, and since law schools grade on a curve, they would have flunked out without it. They ended up as judges because the private sector weeds out the dummies. Trial judges in the New York State Supreme Court make as much as a millennial just out of law school hired by a good law firm, and, as government bureaucrats, judges don't have to worry so much about the law but what is "PC appropriate."

The financial problem facing me was how to survive until finishing what I wanted to do. I started doing extra work for TV shows and movies. Amazingly, they didn't care about my anti-PC-Feminist reputation. On one occasion a female casting director called me to do an extra role and asked, "Are you the Roy Den Hollander in yesterday's Post article?" To which I answered, "Can I plead the Fifth on that?" We both laughed, but I still got the job.

Then a piece of luck came my way—luck was something I had forgotten existed. An employment agency that specialized in renting out attorneys for temporary work called me out of the blue with an offer.

The legal profession had changed dramatically with the computer age. Now a major case between large corporations or involving the federal government no longer entailed hundreds of thousands of documents but millions. No client was going to pay a law firm for the number of associates needed to review all those documents for relevance and privilege. At the same time there was an over abundance of attorneys just out of law school and more experienced attorneys who saw their practices destroyed by the Clinton-Bush recession of 2008. Employment agencies started channeling the glut of attorneys into these cases on a temporary basis and at a fraction of the cost of a law firm associate.

“When I hadn’t eaten, I played it straight” and accepted the offer, which resulted in three and half years of steady work into 2014 reviewing documents—from near the top of the legal profession at Cravath to the bottom. Still it financed my jihada, kept me in vodka gimlets, and the case was against virtually every crooked Wall Street bank that had helped cause the recession with their montage-backed security frauds.

My money-making fate was cast—document review and extra work on which I was surviving—until Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration intruded into my life.

In June 2015, while working on another document review project, Homeland Security and Social Security informed my employer that I was an “illegal alien.”

“What!” I said to my boss, “I don’t understand, my Spanish isn’t that good!” Didn’t want to miss the chance at a joke. Anyway, there went that job and any other document review or extra work. Had the Federal Government finally targeted me for destruction, or was it some PC-Feminist, or Obamite hate-whitey bureaucrat abusing her power, or the ever present Federal incompetence?

Homeland and Social Security operate a program called E-Verify that allows any employer to determine if an employee can legally work in the U.S. The employee sends in copies of documents to E-Verify to show that he is allowed to work here. I sent two of the required documents, my driver's license and Social Security Card. BAM! Homeland and Social Security immediately confiscated my U.S. citizenship making it impossible for me to legally work in America. Boy, was I glad I didn't vote for Obama—wrote-in Putin instead.

The situation was so absurd, it made me laugh. After all, as an illegal alien, I now had more rights than as a U.S. citizen: I didn't have to pay taxes, I could get free legal advice from La Raza, and if I was arrested, I'd be sent back to where I came from—Midland Park, New Jersey. The only draw back was that people who knew about my situation started making illegal alien jokes: "You can't enter the law library without your green card," "We didn't know you could swim," or "I'll represent you in your deportation proceeding, since some tax-exempt NGO will pay my fee."

Of course, the real problem was that I needed money for my jihada, which meant work. Doubt I'd have much success hanging out with the illegals on the street corner waiting for employers to hire me in my Joseph Bank's blue pinstripe suit with an Old Blue rugby tie.

Perhaps the Violence Against Women's Act could get my citizenship back. All I'd have to do is date an American girl then accuse her of abuse. Did not matter whether it was true or not because Homeland Security would only listen to me, the illegal alien. It would conclude that I'd been abused and make me a permanent resident. In three years, I could become a citizen again. Boy, I hope she's hot.

Before trying that plan, I sent the Regional Administrator for Social Security a politically incorrect letter to which he never responded:

Your agency and the Department of Homeland Security recently rendered an e-Verify “Nonconfirmation” finding that I am not a U.S. citizen. (Ex. A). In effect, both agencies told my temporary employer at the time that I was an “illegal alien,” which resulted in the loss of employment on a project.

If you find the term “illegal” offensive, then substitute “criminal,” since anyone who entered the country in violation of U.S. law is either guilty of a misdemeanor or felony, which are criminal classifications. That is what your agency and Homeland Security effectively called me to my former employer.

All my life, I thought I was a U.S. citizen—as if that means anything anymore. My mother told me I had been born at a hospital in Paterson, New Jersey; the same town that Lou Costello was from, so perhaps this is all a Government joke.

My earliest memories are of a small town in New Jersey—a state which was one of the original colonies. We had no mariachi bands, Taco Bells or “Don’t Drink the Water” signs. However, I did take two years of Spanish in high school, but my Spanish is nowhere good enough to be an illegal.

I thoroughly understand that the Obama Administration could care less about the money, time, and annoyance this lunacy is costing me. After all, I am the Administration’s latest synonymy for demon—a white, heterosexual man who is politically incorrect, or as I like to say, “evolutionarily correct.”

Due to typical Obama Administration ineptitude or malice, I now have to prove to bureaucrats drunk with power, who enforce their sanctimonious lefty ideologies instead of the law, that I am a U.S. citizen. So, just how do I do that, since Homeland and Social Security have already rejected my Social Security card and driver’s license as invalid? Perhaps, I should just change my name to José Jiménez and leave La Raza to deal with it.

My Social Security card was issued in the 1960s. It shows that my last name is “Den Hollander.” (Ex. B). Many people of Dutch heritage have two words for a last name, such as Vincent Van Gogh, although I still have both my ears. Most illegals, however, have so many names, they can easily interchange identities. Russians do the same by using their patronymics as a last name, but that’s okay—they’re commies as are many in the current administration.

Because my last name has two words, which means “the Dutchman,” mostly likely invented by Homeland Security’s predecessors at Ellis Island when my father arrived in the 1920s, some institutions in America have shorten my last name to “Hollander” while others have combined the words into one, sometimes with a lower case “h”—“Denhollander,” sometimes with a capital “H”—“DenHollander.” And, as hard as it is to fathom, some bureaucracies have actually gotten my last name right—“Den Hollander” with a space between the words.

When Social Security switched from paper files to digital, some mentally challenged clerk probably entered something wrong from my paper file. Most likely, they muddled the last name, but it could have been anything—I have no idea. Then again, it might be malicious, since a search of my name “Roy Den Hollander” on the Internet makes clear that I do not subscribe to the prevalent loony tune PC ideology of the day that substitutes for thinking and the rule of law.

So, as the precursor to a lawsuit if necessary, here’s my proof of citizenship, which includes those bureaucracies that got my last name correct and those that did not. Therein lies a defense for Homeland Security and your agency by blaming me for bureaucratic incompetence—I should have corrected the entities that got my name wrong. Not so fast, especially where the entities relied on Homeland Security and your inaccurate computer records. Additionally, I accurately completed the many bureaucratic forms but some fool chose to fit my name into a digital formula. That’s their fault; I’m not paid to waste my time doing their job.

Alleged proof of U.S. citizenship:

Ex. B Social Security Card

Ex. C Birth Certificate

Ex. D New York State driver’s license

Ex. E George Washington University Law School alumni membership card

Ex. F Columbia University alumni reading card

Ex. G U.S. Passport

Ex. H New York State Unified Court System Attorney Secure Pass

Ex. I U.S. District Court Southern District of New York Attorney Service Pass

Ex. J Certificate of Good Standing Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of NY

Ex. K Certificate of Good Standing U.S. District Court Southern District of New York

Ex. L Certificate of Good Standing U.S. District Court Eastern District of New York

Ex. M Certificate of Good Standing U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit

Ex. N Certificate of Good Standing Supreme Court of the United States of America.

Unfortunately, I do not have a Matrícula Consular de Alta Seguridad, so the preceding exhibits may not be sufficient, and the courts will have to decide whether I originated from south of the border.

Ironically at the same time, Donald Trump was telling the truth about illegal aliens in his bid for the Presidency. My buddy Blackie suggested sending Trump a letter about how perverse the Obama Administration had become by seizing the citizenship of a native born American. My letter explained what happened and included:

The real issue here is not me; I can take care of myself, perhaps with a lawsuit against these idiots. But what of those other Americans who lose jobs that are vital to their livelihoods and families because these illegal alien sycophants and haters of everything American are too inept or malicious to do their jobs as required by the law.

No response, perhaps he's all talk.

Next stop was Ann Coulter who recently published a book titled Adios America:

This Edward R. Murrow "small picture" or "Adios America" tale maybe of interest to you.

It wasn't, guess she didn't see any money in it. So I put on my dark blue suit and Old Blue rugby tie and headed for a confrontation at the Social Security Regional Administrator's office at 26 Federal Plaza.

I decided to confront Social Security instead of Homeland security because I didn't want to end up in Guantanamo. Although if I had and escaped, I'd be riding around in 56 Chevies with hot Latinas and smoking Cuban cigars—not a bad way to go.

Federal Plaza contains Government offices that I had visited before through the side door when going to the F.B.I. and Immigration to alert them of the Ho's criminal activities. This time some Rastafarian security guard who could barely speak English would not even let me into the building that my federal taxes paid to maintain. So I walked around to the back and snuck in a door as someone was exiting but didn't get two steps before another Rastafarian security guard who could barely speak English stopped me. Just as I always suspected, under Obama, America was now the United States of the Third World.

The Caribbean security guard sent me down to Williams Street to wait with all the other immigrants trying to con their way into America. Most of the clerks there, hiding behind bullet-proof windows, were Obama look-a-likes—just what bigots like him and his white wife wanted. But I got lucky, and my number gave me a white, middle-aged man who spoke fluent English. “How may I help you?” “I'd like my U.S. citizenship back,” and showed him the E-Verify Non-confirmation document. “Damn,” he said in surprise and went to work. He was thorough, took his time, and figured out what had happened. According to him, someone in Social Security had gone into my file recently, but he could not tell who. The white clerk made some changes and double checked everything to make sure I would not have any more problems with E-Verify. I thanked him and left. Always a pleasure dealing with a white American guy who knows his stuff.

After regaining my citizenship, I went back to doing temporary document review jobs to keep me in drinks at the trendy nightclubs on the weekend that would let me in. Drinks were now running $20 with tip for a vodka gimlet with Absolute and Rose's Lime.

My next job was on the roof of 1115 Broadway—no joke, on the roof. The building had set up a make-shift, large office next to the building's water tower. To access the roof-top office, we attorneys took an elevator to the 12th floor, proceeded down a hallway passed numerous offices to the end of the floor where we entered the fire escape stairwell. Up a flight of narrow (two abreast), steep stairs to a door that opened onto a large wooden deck on the roof, then 10 yards down a walkway made of wood, which was opened to the elements, reaching a door that entered into the roof-top office space where we, eventually numbering 60 attorneys, worked with computers reviewing documents. The roof-top office had no other access or exit unless one considered the windows in the office that looked out on the roof and water tower—clearly a fire hazard.

It also had no heat in the middle of January, so we sat reviewing documents in our winter coats. The law firm for which we worked was Weil, Gotshal & Manges whose client Staples was in a litigation dispute with the Federal Government.

After about a week freezing my derriere, I got into a minor dispute with a squat illegal alien maintenance worker for the roof-top office space. When he tried to intimate me, I said “watch it illegal.” Not even defamatory or derogatory, since the phrase “illegal alien” is a legal term used throughout immigration cases; used by the Immigration Service; and even by the PC hypocrite Billy-Bob Clinton who used it repeatedly in his Memorandum Deterring Illegal Immigration, 60 FR 7885, February 7, 1995, 1995 WL 17211539. But as soon as the illegal’s boss told my employer what I had said, its female PC-Feminazi HR boss fired me. That’s what I get for living in a sanctuary city where the cuddling of criminal aliens trumps the free speech of U.S. citizens. And they are criminals because when they enter without permission, it’s a crime—first time a misdemeanor, second time a felony. So, I sued. My employer settled for two grand, which was fine, but I’d never be able to or would want to work for that employer again.

As for the illegal, Jairo Franco, and his boss, Dominick Olivo, who had complained to my employer, I initially sued them for various personal injuries: injurious falsehoods, defamation, harassment, etc. The illegal’s boss referred the case to his company’s insurer. Virtually every business carries insurance to cover any type of personal injury that occurs on its premises. The insurance company picks up the legal costs and pays any judgment the courts render against the business. That would not do. This illegal and his PC-sycophant boss were going to pay personally for violating my rights—even in politically-commie America.

So I step back from my gut reaction to sue for personal injuries and re-thought the situation. It didn't make sense that Dominick Olivo, the illegal's boss, and Olivo's company, Select Office Suites, which had rented office space to my employer, would try to get me fired for calling one of its many illegal maintenance workers an "illegal." Why not just give the illegal an extended siesta break or a discount on tacos to soothe his hurt feelings. So I started snooping around and found that Select Office Suites was part of a group that not only hired illegals but found them employment—for a fee of course. By calling the maintenance worker an "illegal," it alerted Olivo and his associates that I, a former producer of investigative news stories, at least knew they hired illegal aliens, which is a racketeering crime, and might just be looking into other illegal activities at Select Office Suites. I wasn't, but they didn't know that. So they got me fired to get me off the premises to prevent me from learning more about their illegal activities.

The whole nature of the case changed. Out the window went the personal injury complaint, and in came a complaint against Olivo and Franco for violating the federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization Act—RICO! Not only did it accuse them and their associates, one of whom was Olivo's mother—a realtor and rather hot for a 50-something—of participating in a criminal enterprise that hired illegals but also accused them of running an employment agency for illegals in the greater metropolitan, sanctuary area of New York City. An added benefit was that there were no more personal injuries involved, so their insurance company would not pick up the legal fees or any judgment against them. They now had to pay their own way—"Mother of mercy!"

The illegal and his boss offered me $8,000 to get lost—so I got lost. In the end, I made a total of 10 grand. Not a bad way to make a living, suing illegals and their sycophants—open those borders! As an added benefit, the client I was working for on the roof in the bitter cold lost its case—ha, ha, ha. That’s what Staples gets for being so cheap that it had its attorneys working in a Triangle Waste hypothermic shop.

A couple of years later while working on another document review case and recounting passed review jobs with an attorney, he told me that the NYC fire marshals had showed up and closed the roof-top operation down because someone had made a complaint.

“Yeah, I was the one who made the complaint.” We laughed.

Saigon Bride

One last case—maybe. As with so many guys from my generation, the Vietnam War really ticked me off. Over fifty-eight thousand dead, over 150,000 wounded, and who knows how many psychologically maimed and for what—nothing!

Some of my contemporaries went willingly, so they assumed the risk. But those who were drafted were forced—648,000 of which 17,700 never returned. For the girls of my generation, eight—not 8,000, not 800, not 80, but 8 American military females died in the war and if you include American civilian females, the total is 68. All the females were volunteers—none were drafted.

In the mid to late 1960s, the draft was the sword of Damocles hovering over the head of nearly every American guy 18 to 25 years old. Girls could not comprehend the relentless terror of having the most powerful country in the history of the world lying in wait for the chance to send you half way around that world to use your life to defend U.S. business interests, such as

Firestone's rubber trees in the Mekong Delta, and to increase the profits of the "military-industrial complex."

When America finally admitted defeat and the war's stupidity in 1973, President Ford ended the draft, and two years later, registration with the Selective Service System ended. Then the Soviets invaded Afghanistan in 1980 and President Carter reinstituted draft registration even though there was no draft. To his credit, he requested that Congress amend the Military Selective Service Act to require girls to register—seemed fair, since females were considered equal to guys.

Congress disagreed by stating that the purpose of draft registration was to create a pool of potential soldiers for combat in case of a national emergency. At the time, a couple of laws and the Department of Defense's policy prohibited females from engaging in combat, so the girls, even if wearing bikinis, were not allowed to jump into the pool with the guys.

At the same time, a leftover case from the Vietnam War was being heard in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania: initially called, Rowland v. Tarr, but re-titled Goldberg v. Rostker, 509 F. Supp. 586 (E.D. Pa.1980).

The case started in June 1971 during the War when the total number of American men who had come home in boxes or were turned into jungle fertilizer was around 45,000. Four guys in Pennsylvania, most likely destined for Vietnam because of their lottery numbers, and not the Powerball or Mega kind, didn't want to go. The lottery numbers, running from 1 to 366, depending on your date of birth, determined whether the U.S. Government was going to risk your life to make a profit for the military-industrial complex that President Eisenhower had warned against. The lower the lottery number, the more likely you were on your way. Mine was 18.

The Government instituted the lottery in 1969 in an attempt to quell opposition to the war by the classic tactic of “divide and rule.” Before the lottery, virtually every young guy faced the prospect of Vietnam when he graduated from high school or college. With the lottery, many guys knew their necks were no longer on the line, so they curtailed or ended their anti-war activities. Of course, the lottery didn’t affect females. On the night of the drawing, young men across America tuned in to listen for their fate while females went about their usual concerns with short dresses, see-through blouses, make-up, and how much their boyfriends spent on them.

By 1980, the draft was gone, so only draft registration was left to litigate in Goldberg v. Rostker. Surprisingly, a three judge panel of the U.S. Eastern District Court of Pennsylvania declared the Military Selective Service Act unconstitutional as a violation of Equal Protection as incorporated in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution because it treated guys and girls differently solely because of their sex.

Whenever the federal government does something, a clause in the Fifth Amendment requires that “No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law . . . .” Due process of law means “fairness,” and it is not fair for the federal government without a valid reason to treat similarly situated persons differently the way King George III did and many modern-day PC judges and bureaucrats do.

Now different groups of people who are in similar situations can be treated differently by the federal government, but in doing so, it needs to serve a valid government purpose. Whether the government purpose is a valid one and how effectively that purpose is served depends on the reason for treating similarly situated groups differently. For example, if the reason is a difference in skin color, then the government must have a “compelling” purpose that is strictly served—that’s the highest standard. If it is a sex difference, then the government must have an “important” purpose that is substantially served—that’s the middle standard. The lowest and easiest to meet standard is that the government must have a “legitimate” purpose that is rationally served, which usually involves an economic difference.

Since it was undisputed that the Military Selective Service Act created a sex-based difference, it was up to the federal government to show that keeping females from registering substantially served an important government purpose or that guys and girls were not similarly situated.

The Pennsylvania District Court panel found that the purpose of draft registration was to equip the Department of Defense with information so that if it decided on a national mobilization, it could move quickly, effectively, and with great flexibility to achieve wartime personnel requirements from the pool of registered persons: 18 to 25 year-olds. Since the military included women in some roles, young guys and girls were similarly situated. The judges then had to decide whether excluding females from that pool substantially served the purpose of mobilizing the military in time of national emergency quickly, effectively, and with flexibility in conscripting registrants? The three judges ruled it did not and declared draft registration unconstitutional:

It is incongruous that Congress believes on the one hand that it substantially enhances our national defense to constantly expand the utilization of women in the military, and on the other hand endorses legislation excluding women from the pool of registrants available for induction. Congress allocates funds so that the military can use and actively seek more female recruits but nonetheless asserts that there is justification for excluding females from selective service, despite the shortfall in the recruitment of women. Congress rejects the current opinion of each of the military services and asserts that women can contribute to the military effectively only as volunteers and not as inductees.

The President, the Director of the Selective Service System, and representatives of the Department of Defense informed Congress that including women in the pool of registrants eligible for induction would increase military flexibility. The record reveals that in almost any conceivable military crisis the armed forces could utilize skills now almost entirely concentrated in the female population of the nation. Congress itself has appropriated funds for the increased recruitment and utilization of women in the armed services.

The problem with [prohibiting female registration] is that the record before [this court] proves that there already is extensive utilization of females in the military and that this utilization will substantially increase. The die is already cast for substantial female involvement in the military. Furthermore, the military does not lose flexibility if women are registered because induction calls for females can be made according to military needs as they accrue in the future. Though military flexibility might call for less utilization of female inductees than male inductees in a given crisis situation, it is the antithesis of “flexibility” to exclude women from the pool of registrants that could be called upon in a time of national need.

The principal reason the government proffers for a male-only registration is that it provides military flexibility. The record here, however, reveals that women do serve a useful role in the military and provide important skills. The foregoing discussion also illustrates that flexibility is not enhanced, but is in fact limited by the complete exclusion of women. We therefore hold that the complete exclusion of women from the pool of registrants does not serve “important governmental objectives” and is not “substantially related” . . . to any alleged government interest. Thus, the Military Selective Service Act unconstitutionally discriminates between males and females.

Goldberg v. Rostker, 509 F.Supp. 586, 603 - 605 (E.D. Pa.1980).

Sounds fair, sounds just, and then the Supremes stepped in.

The Supreme Court simply changed the purpose of registration from mobilizing the military in time of national emergency quickly, effectively, and with flexibility in conscripting registrants to just creating a pool of potential combat troops. Since women were excluded from combat, the Supreme Court decided it made no sense to require females to join a pool for doing something they were prohibited from doing.

But what about all those non-combat support jobs that females were performing?

Logically a draft could have been used to fill those roles during an emergency, but the Court believed enough females would volunteer. Sure, if the military paid them enough, which it wasn't, which was why its recruitment efforts for women were not going as planned. The Supreme Court simply overlooked these realities—as it often does—and ruled that equal protection did not apply because guys and girls were not similarly situated.

This is not a case of Congress arbitrarily choosing to burden one of two similarly situated groups, such as would be the case with an all-black or all-white, or an all-Catholic or all-Lutheran, or an all-Republican or all-Democratic registration. Men and women, because of the combat restrictions on women, are simply not similarly situated for purposes of a draft or registration for a draft.

Rostker v. Goldberg, 453 U.S. 57, 78 (1981). (The caption names switched when appealed).

Since Rostker v. Goldberg, the laws barring females from combat were repealed; the nature of war changed, such that those in the rear were now engaging in combat; and Pentagon policies continued to allow more and more females into combat positions. Then on January 23, 2013, the Pentagon decided to end the policy of excluding women from any combat position by January 2016, except for possibly a few limited ones. The two sexes now seemed to be similarly situated under the 1981 decision of the Supreme Court when it came to draft registration. By requiring only one sex to register for the draft and barring the other should therefore be a violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fifth Amendment.

A group of men's rights activists in California, with whom I had been in contact for years, filed a lawsuit on behalf of a young man claiming that draft registration discriminated against him and other guys 18 to 25 years old by not requiring females to register. National Coalition for Men et al. v. Selective Service System et al., 13-cv-02391 (C.D. Cal. 2013).

The U.S. District Court for Central California threw the case out on two grounds. One, the case was not “ripe” for adjudication, since the facts were uncertain at the time. The Pentagon stated it was opening combat positions to females but to what extent that would happen had not yet occurred. Two, even if the Court did declare draft registration unconstitutional because it did not include females, the inclusion of females resulting from such a Court decision would not help the male plaintiff or any other males because they still had to register. The plaintiff, therefore, did not have “standing.”

The light bulb in my head doesn’t work too well these days, but it went off after reading the Court’s decision—bring a case against registration with a young lady as plaintiff and class representative for all the 18 to 25 year old females in America. That would eliminate the standing problem because she’ll be arguing that the Selective Service prevented her from registering—that’s the harm, and the Court can cure it by requiring females to register along with males.

The Supreme Court has held that equal protection does not only require similar benefits for those in similar situations but also similar burdens. Registering for the draft is a burden foisted on young males by the U.S. Government, so not requiring the same burden for young females is discriminatory against the females. The Supreme Court strikes down discrimination based on traditional stereotypes regardless of whether men or women are the beneficiaries. “[I]f the statutory objective is to exclude or ‘protect’ members of one gender because they are presumed to suffer from an inherent handicap or to be innately inferior, the objective itself is illegitimate.” Mississippi. Univ. for Women v. Hogan, 458 U.S. 718, 725 (1982).

The issue of “ripeness” would still remain a problem at the beginning of a case, but by the time my planned class action with a female plaintiff reached the Supreme Court, most, if not all, the combat jobs would be open to females. Legally, the Court could not then duck a decision based on a procedural matter of ripeness. Politically, however, the Justices can do whatever they want.

But where to find a young lady willing to fight for her right to a burden, and why would someone choose equality over preferential treatment? There were, however, such ladies out there because they viewed such discrimination as treating them as second class citizens. All I had to do was find one.

Back in 1980, the National Organization of Women testified before Congress that “omission from the registration and draft ultimately robs women of the right to first-class citizenship. . . . Because men exclude women here, they justify excluding women from the decision-making of our nation.” In 1981, NOW filed an amicus brief in Rostker v. Goldberg, 453 U.S. 57 (1981), advocating that draft registration should be extended to women. In 2012, Maj. Mary Jennings Hegar defended her decision to challenge the combat exclusion policy in court at the risk of potentially subjecting women to the draft. “The question isn’t whether we want our daughters to be drafted, she explained, but what kind of world we want them to inhabit: one where they’re infantilized as passive objects of chivalry or one where they’re empowered to achieve their potential as genuinely equal citizens?” Hegar et al. v. Panetta, 12-cv-06005 (N.D. Cal. 2012).

Okay, the Feminist groups seemed like a good start. A buddy of mine in Houston and I contacted nearly every Feminist group in the country—none even bothered to respond. Sounded like the silence of hypocrisy. The search expanded to female military groups, girls’ colleges, sororities, Craig’s List, Facebook ads, Google ads, women rugby players, girls’ law school groups, the girls that I hit on at clubs, and the Columbia University Alumni network. There were a few responses from young ladies who were interested, but then they told their parents or boyfriends and that put an end to it for them.

The Columbia Alumni network resulted in a discussion over the question, “Should women 18 to 25 have to register for the draft as do men 18 to 25?” One bizarre response came from Erica Jong:

From the very beginning this “discussion” has made deeply disappointed in Columbia’s educational assumptions. What I value most when I teach is questioning and humility. There is a know-it-all tone here that makes me glad I went to Barnard. I wonder how I even made it through Grad Fac. Education is for opening the mind—not competing over prejudices and tired old ideas.

Gentlemen—I leave you to your insular jousting over who has the biggest you know what.

ERICA MANN JONG, Poet & Novelist
Barnard, Columbia Graduate Faculties, 25 Books published (sic) in 40 languages.

To which I responded: “Ah, the smell of Portnoy immaturity.”

During my search for a plaintiff, I started taking classes at the Krav Maga Academy on 26th Street. Krav Maga is the Israeli Defense Force’s martial arts for killing Arabs with your bare hands. Given Israel’s win-lost record at war, I figured it was pretty good. Former IDF guys taught the classes, which were more practical than other martial arts courses I had taken, except for Mark’s. Surprisingly, one of the female employees agreed to be the plaintiff in the draft case, but then her life fell apart, so my search continued. As a side note, I lasted a little over two years at the Academy, but then they kicked me out for flirting with the young babes. Guess the instructors were jealous that I could make the girls laugh and they couldn’t, or they didn’t want any of their Jewish chicks consorting with a true blooded Aryan. So I went looking for another martial arts school at which to wear out my welcome.

Back to finding a plaintiff—what about actresses? They love publicity and the case should attract lots of coverage. Out went a mailing to virtually every talent and casting agent in the City. A few responded and a couple of interviews resulted. One said thanks but no thanks, and the other was willing but too busy with her career to devote the time necessary to prepare for the expected interviews.

Desperation was setting in when I realized I had not contacted everyone for whom I had an email address and all my alleged friends on Facebook. The Facebook effort resulted in a few less friends of the two-faced kind, but my emails resulted in an attorney with whom I had worked on the case against the Wall Street crooks who caused the 2008 recession. She referred me to a 17 year-old high school senior who was about to graduate, the daughter of one of her friends. This young lady not only proved willing but more competent and mature than any of the other ladies I had communicated with and most of the attorneys I have encountered. The case began over the July 4th weekend of 2015, and was assigned to this hot Latina Judge in the U.S. District Court for New Jersey whom Obama had appointed. At first, I wanted to ask the Judge out, but thought she might hold me in contempt.

The attorney for the federal government came out of the Department of Justice in D.C. rather than the New Jersey U.S. Attorney's Office. In her motion to dismiss, she raised the issue that the plaintiff was only 17 and draft registration applied to 18 to 25 year olds. But she took so long in submitting the Government's motion that 17 year old was now within 30 days of her 18th birthday, which was good enough. Guys are allowed to register for the draft beginning 30 days before they turn 18. Justice's delay, therefore, allowed me to file an amended complaint with the plaintiff now old enough to register, if she had been a guy. Even without the amended complaint, it was unlikely the Court would dismiss because the original plaintiff was too young, since the plaintiffs in the Rostker v. Goldberg case were underage when it began.

In response to the amended complaint, the Government filed a new motion to dismiss. The female attorney did what female defense attorneys do—lie, prevaricate, dissemble, and exaggerate. This always seemed strange to me, since I had worked at a defense law firm, Cravath, and they never did that. With the help of the attorney who referred the 17 year old plaintiff to me, we filed an opposition brief in the hope of popping the Government's bubbles of disingenuousness. The filing occurred after Secretary of Defense Carter had announced on December 3, 2015, that all military positions would be open to females.

The Judge, unlike in the California case, got cold feet about making a decision using as an excuse the machinations in Congress. The House Armed Services Committee included in its version of the 2017 National Defense Authorization Act an amendment that young women should register for the draft just as do young men. Rep. Duncan Hunter (R) in Jonathan Swift fashion sponsored the amendment in order to mock sending females into combat, which he adamantly opposed. Hunter voted against his own amendment in committee but it passed, which he didn't expect, and was sent to the House Rules Committee. He quickly became the butt of late-night talk-show mockery.

House Republican leaders were not laughing. It became increasingly clear that Hunter's amendment might pass a House floor vote. House leaders scrambled behind the scenes to block it. They used a rare procedural maneuver in the Rules Committee to strip the female registration amendment from the Defense Authorization Act while punting with a time-delaying study on reforming the Selective Service. The Republican Chairman of the Rules Committee called requiring women to register for the draft a "reckless policy." On May 18, 2016, the House passed its version of the Defense Authorization Act without draft registration for females but with instructions for the Secretary of Defense to submit a study on whether to eliminate the Selective Service.

Meanwhile in the Senate, the Armed Services Committee approved an amendment to its version of the Defense Authorization Act, sponsored by its chairman Sen. John McCain that required females to register for the draft. Sen. McCain said, "The fact is every single leader in this country, both men and women, members of the military leadership, believe that it's fair since we opened up all aspects of the military to women that they would also be registering for Selective Services." Majority Leader Sen. Mitch McConnell, at least for the media, supported the amendment. The Senate passed its version and the Senate and House bills were sent to a House-Senate Conference Committee to resolve the differences in the two bills.

We're Not Going to Take It

While the draft case was imprisoned in the N.J. District Court, I started doing volunteer work for the Trump Presidential Campaign—leaving the law library in the early afternoon for Trump Tower, 12 blocks up Fifth Avenue, to make telephone calls during the primaries and the general election. Once I mentioned to a pal lawyer, a Clinton supporter, "I'm off to the Alamo," to which he responded, "Don't forget your Bowie knife."

Most of the Trump Tower callers were aging baby boomers like me. Once in a while some hot young model chick would show up to make calls. They never sat next to me. In addition to the telephone calling, what I thought was a great idea to help Trump win the election popped into my head.

The FBI had just cleared Hillary of any wrong doing in keeping state secrets on her personal server, in part, by asserting that the server had never been hacked. If any of the 30,000 emails she had "bleached" off the server or any of the classified emails that were made public but redacted by the Government showed up in their original form, then obviously her server had been hacked. Such would reignite the controversy and help Trump's campaign. At that time, the FBI and media were accusing Russian GRU of hacking the DNC and Hillary's campaign chairman. If so, maybe they also hacked Hillary's private server. So I contacted a GRU buddy requesting a few copies of the bleached or classified emails, if they had them. Telling him, I'd make them public through my media contacts. He replied, however, that GRU did not have them, which meant they did not hack the server or they wanted Hillary to win. Personally, had I been Putin, Hillary would be better for Russia, since he had already bribed her over the Uranium One deal. She was in his pocket.

That didn't work, so I tried another angle. From day one of the campaign the PC—Pravda Correct—news media hammered Trump. The reporters lied, prevaricated, dissembled, took quotes out of content, spun them around to say what the reporters wanted and then reported such as facts to depict Trump as “inappropriate”—to put it mildly.

The PC-Feminists had taken over much of the news media since I had worked in TV News in the 1970s and 1980s as a writer and political producer. Back then, one station for which I worked, Metromedia Channel 5 in New York City, had a sign over the only exit from the newsroom: “There are two sides to every story, make sure you get both of them!” Today, for the propaganda press, the two sides of every story are the left and the far left, and if neither exists, make it up. The reporters think they are better than their audience—that the public should accept their biased words as gospel. They believe their PC philosophy is the one and only truth in the Universe. We've heard that before—the Commies, Nazis, Klan and every lunatic dictator and religious cult to come down the pike.

All reporters have a duty to the public—to be the observers of world events for the rest of us. As Archibald MacLeish said,

Freedom of the press is a right belonging, like all rights in a democracy, to all the people. As a practical matter, however, it can be exercised only by those who have effective access to the press. Where financial, economic, and technological conditions limit such access to a small minority, the exercise of that right by that minority takes on fiduciary or quasi-fiduciary characteristics.

Freedom of the Press, a Report from the Commission on Freedom of the Press at 99 n. 4 (1947).

That duty does not mean acting as acolytes for PC ideology, Clinton and Obama. It means to enlighten, elucidate and educate, not turn into a Goebbels's like propaganda monster foisting a particular ideology on the populace. "It is a principle among [the press] that when truth has fair play, it will always prevail over falsehood." Benjamin Franklin. PC reporters were no longer giving truth a fair play in the presidential election. They were undermining the most important right of all with their biased and deceitful reporting: "No right is more precious in a free country than that of having a voice in the election of those who make the laws under which, as good citizens, we must live. Other rights, even the most basic, are illusory if the right to vote is undermined." Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 17 (1964).

In America there are checks and balances for every major institution except the press. If the President violates his duty, there are the courts and Congress. If Congress violates its duty there are the courts and the President. If judges violate their duties, Congress can impeach them. If businesses violate the law the district attorney can prosecute or citizens can sue. But what if the press violates its fiduciary duty of fairness in political reporting? A political figure can sue for defamation, but he'll lose because the requirement of Constitutional malice is extremely difficult to prove. It requires determining what reporters were thinking when they wrote their stories. Naturally, as card-carrying PCers, they would lie.

So what to do? Then late at night, lying in bed, the light bulb went on, again—RICO! PC ideologue reporters were violating the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, and I could sue them under RICO—yes! RICO is a criminal statute so normally a case can only be brought by a government prosecutor. But Congress decided to also allow everyday citizens to bring a case when their properties or businesses were injured by those engaging in racketeering activities. It's called a private right of action and was put in the RICO Act to provide for and encourage private attorneys general “to fill prosecutorial gaps.” Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 493 (1985); United Health Care Corp. v. Am. Trade Ins. Co., 88 F.3d 563, 575 (8th Cir. 1996) (congressional intent to enroll private claimants in deterring racketeering). I’d still have to prove the Pravda reporters violated certain criminal acts, but I would only have to show it by a preponderance of the evidence rather than beyond a reasonable doubt. That was fine. In effect the reporters would be accused of criminal acts by me—a private attorneys general. An added benefit was that insurance companies that provide personal or property injury coverage to the news media companies, or any other company, usually don’t cover criminal acts—and RICO is nothing but criminal acts.

RICO has many requirements, but the key one needed to sue is that a defendant engaged in a “racketeering activity” of which there are many. So which ones were the PC reporters guilty of? The only one was wire fraud. They created and caused to be broadcast and electronically published intentionally false and misleading news reports concerning the Trump Campaign; they provided commentary based on false sets of alleged facts or failed to reveal the factual bases for their judgments; and they lobbied on various news-talk shows in furtherance of their opposition to the Trump Campaign. Wire fraud didn’t require determining what PC reporters were thinking; only that their actions indicated they had devised, participated in, or abetted a scheme to defraud others. That scheme, or as it turned out, seven schemes by seven different news groups was to trick the electorate into voting for Clinton.

Another main element of RICO, and any lawsuit, is injury—how was I injured by PC reporters foisting fraudulent reports, commentaries and lobbying in their efforts to trick the electorate? The answer was that for members of the Trump Campaign, such as me, to counter the PC reporters’ efforts to defraud, we needed to circumvent the mainstream-media bottle-neck on campaign information, commentaries and lobbying. To do so required us to contribute more funds and time to reach voters directly in order to present voters with the Trump Campaign side and counter—in the law it’s called rectify and mitigate—the PC reporters fraudulent reports, commentaries and their anti-Trump lobbying. After all, “Voting rights subsume . . . [the] chance to contribute to a chosen candidate,” Lawrence Tribe, American Constitutional Law at 1062 (3rd ed.), and I chose to contribute to Trump.

If the PC reporters were faithfully fulfilling their duty to the voters by providing reports and communications that were fair, balanced and impartial; then the amount of contributions and time provided by Trump Campaign members and supporters would be significantly less. Since time is money, especially for a lawyer, and money is money, the added time and money were both injuries to property, which is what RICO requires.

Okay, so which reporters to sue? There were so many PC reporters toadying to the PC-Feminist elite that wanted Hillary Clinton for President and to hobble the effectiveness of members of the Trump Campaign. Seven of them seemed to be the biggest liars and deceivers with the largest audiences, so I sue them. Perhaps unconsciously, I identified them with the seven deadly sins of hubris, greed, lust, malicious envy, gluttony, inordinate anger, and sloth—then again, maybe they were just liars. Either way, the seven were deadly to this democracy. They were, in order of the channel dial on the television set of my youth plus a couple of newspapers: Major Garrett, CBS News; Katy Tur, NBC News; Chuck Todd, NBC Meet the Press; Tom Llamas, ABC News; Jim Acosta, CNN; David Brooks, New York Times and PBS News Hour; and Jenna Johnson, Washington Post.

Judges, especially in Bolshevik New York City, dislike RICO because it has so many parts—means too much work. They also shy away from decisions contrary to PC ideology for fear of upsetting the PC storm troopers. Besides those two problems of which I had no control over, the main argument against the case was that The First Amendment guarantees freedom of speech. It wasn't the guarantee of freedom of the press because the U.S. Supreme Court—where I was aiming—decides cases involving what the press states under the freedom of speech clause. The reason is simple: “[t]he press in its historic connotation comprehends every sort of publication which affords a vehicle of information and opinion.” Lovell v. City of Griffin, Ga., 303 U.S. 444, 452 (1938). Since this definition is so broad, it's impossible for the courts to distinguish press protection from the general doctrine of free speech. So the key issue was whether the freedom of speech clause protected the news media defendants engaging in wire fraud.

It doesn't. “‘From 1791 to the present’ . . . the First Amendment has ‘permitted restrictions upon the content of speech in a few limited areas,’ and has never ‘include[d] a freedom to disregard these traditional limitations.’” U.S. v. Stevens, 559 U.S. 460, 468 (2010) (quoting R.A.V. v. St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377, 382–383 (1992)). These areas, such as “speech integral to criminal conduct, Giboney v. Empire Storage & Ice Co., 336 U.S. 490, 498 (1949), are ‘well-defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention and punishment of which have never been thought to raise any Constitutional problem.’” Stevens, 559 U.S. at 468-469 (quoting Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U.S. 568, 571–572 (1942)). The Stevens decision from 2010 emphasized that speech integral to criminal conduct was not protected by mentioning that traditional limitation several times. Stevens, 559 U.S. at 468, 471.

Since RICO and the criminal act of wire fraud are crimes—the Pravda reporters' pursuit of their schemes by fraudulent reports, commentaries and lobbying were not protected speech. The First Amendment doesn't guarantee freedom to lie, deceive and commit wire fraud. Also, along with freedom comes responsibility. The press does not have the freedom to intentionally or with reckless disregard for the truth paint a false reality in conformance with an ideology that has run amok across this land replacing the Constitution and principles on which this nation was founded. The right to vote in a free and fair election is more important than biased reporters mouthing PC ideology.

My researcher, the single mother in Slovakia, found a lot of the seven deadly reporters' false and misleading communications that were included in the complaint filed on August 23, 2016, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. A day after filing, I moved by Order to Show Cause for a preliminary injunction to put a temporary halt to the seven deadly reporters subverting the electoral process. Had I gone the usual motion by notice route, the Court would not have gotten around to it until after the election in November.

The Judge quickly denied the request for a preliminary injunction—ruling it a forbidden prior restraint. Apparently the propaganda press can do what ever it wants, but trying to stop its illegal activities is forbidden. The ruling meant the case would have no impact on the election unless it emotionally shook-up the seven deadly reporters into doing what they were supposed to do—report both sides fairly. Assuming that it might, I added not only more reporters but the news outfits they worked for in an amended complaint. The final list of defendants were

CBS News Inc.;

Major Elliott Garrett, CBS News reporter;

NBCUniversal News Group;

Lester Don Holt, Jr., NBC News anchor;

Katharine Bear Tur, NBC News reporter;

Charles David Todd, NBC News moderator of Meet the Press;

Andrea Mitchell, NBC News reporter;

Hallie Marie Jackson, NBC News reporter;

Kristen Welker, NBC News reporter;

ABC News Division;

Thomas Llamas, ABC News reporter and anchor;

Cecilia M. Vega, ABC News reporter and anchor;

Jonathan David Karl, ABC News reporter;
NewsHour Productions LLC;
Gwendolyn L. Ifill, PBS NewsHour anchor and co-managing editor;
John Yang, PBS NewsHour reporter;
Lisa Desjardins, PBS NewsHour reporter;
Cable News Network;
Abilio James Acosta, CNN reporter;
New York Times Newsroom;
Megan M. Twohey, New York Times reporter;
David Brooks, commentator for the New York Times and PBS News Hour;
Washington Post Newsroom;
Jenna Johnson, Washington Post reporter;

Twenty-four lying, prevaricating and dissembling media defendants—alright! I also tried to get some Trump supporters to join me in the case as plaintiffs, but they were too scared to publicly stand up for their beliefs. Voting for Trump in the secrecy of the election booth was the extent of their courage, but that was understandable considering the threat of Clinton’s Commie hit squads. Such fears made me realize that this must be what people living in the former Soviet Union experienced, although we still had a choice of whom to elect. It also probably explained why the polls were wrong about the election—people were simply scared to admit for whom they would vote. Can’t blame them; I won’t wear my red “Make America Great Again” hat in the streets of NYC.

Unlike some of my other cases, this one attracted zero media attention. Couldn’t figure out why, since it was timely and dealt with an important topic. Then the reference librarian at the law library enlightened me, “Who’s going to cover it? You’re suing everybody.” He was right; the case was against much of the news media.

A couple of weeks after filing the amended complaint, Trump won the election—take that you succubi of PC totalitarianism. Every so often truth and justice win out. The election night party was great, and to my surprise largely populated with millennials, most wearing “Make America Great Again” red hats. The victory party had Fox News on the giant screens and when Megyn Kelly started whining about the lying hos who accused Trump of molesting them, the Crowd let out with a loud round of boos. When Fox mentioned Hillary, the crowd chanted, “Lock her up! Lock her up!” Fox often cut away to Clinton’s headquarters showing the teary-eyed, sad-sack, PC loonies watching their power of intolerance go down the drain. The losers at Clinton’s headquarters dressed the part—they looked like bums, not a suit nor a dress in the bunch. Trump’s supporters, however, were all in suits or dresses and no cross dressers that I could see. Could this be the end of PC-Feminism? Maybe, but it will take a while to push these self-righteous, commie-like fanatics out of office and power. I soon learned it would take more than time.

The Trump volunteers who had spent a fair amount of 2016 calling voters from Trump Tower organized a field trip to the inauguration, so I went—my third inauguration. The first was to protest Nixon’s in 1973, and the second was Reagan’s in 1981 while working as the Channel 7 TV News political producer. The day before we left for Trump’s inauguration, a reporter from France TV 2 contacted me wanting to do an interview about the anti-PC-Feminism cases: Ladies’ Nights, VAWA and the one against Columbia’s Women’s Studies Program. She was flying into D.C. on Inauguration Day, to mainly cover the female march the next day. So we arranged to meet in D.C. on Inauguration Day.

The weather for the inauguration was cold and rainy, so naturally security for the event confiscated everyone’s umbrellas. Leading up to Trump’s speech they introduced the hoi polloi as they were seated on the dais—not unlike the aristocratic receptions given in old Europe. When the Clintons were introduced—the crowd booed, and many yelled “Lock them up”! When Obama as well as his wife were introduced—the crowd booed, and some yelled “Lock them up too”! Before Trump spoke they were a few speeches, including one by Senator Chuck Schumer of New York. Couldn’t figure out why he was speaking, and he probably wished he wasn’t. The crowd booed him through his entire speech—not just because he was the epitome of the PC Pol, but he wouldn’t stop talking. He just went on and on as though he had been elected President. Trump gave a short but solid speech.

Afterward, I went to meet the French reporter Zoe, wearing my red “Make America Great Again.” There were so many of us in D.C. that the PC Neo-Bolsheviks probably would not bother me—didn’t know about the Antifa wimps. Zoe was cute with a sexy accent and accompanied by her cameraman. We headed to the post-inaugural parade with them filming and periodically interviewing me. On our way, a trio of Obamite, hate-whitey young punks tried to interfere until I challenged them. They split—never underestimate the influence of the threat of physical violence. Near the parade route on Pennsylvania Avenue, we stopped and Zoe conducted a more extensive interview. Some Antifa millennial stuck his face in front of the camera. Okay, he and the other baby millennials lost, so give him one chance. But then he did it again, I instinctively pushed him aside, struck him with an open hand to his throat, and the fight ensued. Had I used a spear hand strike, he would have been dead—but I showed him the mercy he didn’t deserve. Not one of my best fights, since it ended in a draw—both of us still standing, but I doubt he’ll do that again. A Trump supporter who had witnessed the incident suggested I complain to the D.C. Police on the corner. Okay, but the Police Lieutenant, after watching the video, said in a nice manner you were really the aggressor, but if you would like to apply to my squad let me know. So what’s the lesson? When dealing with Neo-Bolsheviks like Antifa—never underestimate the influence of physical violence.

Zoe came up to NYC to interview some others and did another interview with me. One of her questions this time was whether I had ever been discriminated against because I was a guy—that was easy:

The female head of my draft board tried to send me to Vietnam twice.

The news director of Metromedia TV News in NYC wanted to hire me as a researcher but couldn't because I was a guy, and the Federal Communication Commission was pushing a quota system to hire girls. He got around it by having all the five stations in the network hire a fifth of me. That way, it would not show up on his employment roster that he had hired a guy when the FCC was forcing the news media to hire girls—regardless of their competence.

After working at Metromedia for over a year, the news director came up to me and said, "Roy I'd make you a reporter but I can't because you're a guy."

When I graduate law school near the top of my class, eleventh out of 400, I only applied for the most prestigious positions with the Federal Government that were called Honor's positions for new law school graduates. I landed 10 interviews. For eight of the positions, I was interviewed by a girl who would make the hiring decision, one by a homosexual, and one by a regular guy. Guess from which ones I didn't get an offer? Everyone in which a girl made the hiring decision and the one in which a queer made the decision. I didn't care about the queer's decision—during the interview, I decided not to take that job even if it was the last one in the Federal Government. But I did care about being denied an offer from the Department of Justice and the State Department. They were considered numbers one and two on the prestige list. I ended up taking number three on the prestige list—the Treasury Department where a guy made the hiring decision. What made me realize discrimination was at work and not credentials was that the hiring matrons in all the other jobs of less prestige and requirements denied my applications.

When I left Cravath, I applied to a number of law schools to pursue a master's degree. This was the early nineties. Each and every one denied me admission. The PC/Feminist ideology had taken control of law schools and they were ramping up their quotas for girls. So instead, I earned a Masters of Business from Columbia University.

More discrimination came in the NYC divorce court. Ask any divorce lawyer in New York, male or female, and they will tell you there is no justice for a husband or father in NYC courts. The ideology of PC/Feminism rules—men have no rights. My wife—a Russian mafia prostitute who repeatedly lied on her immigration filings and committed a felony by registering to vote while not a citizen—was treated as an angelic being by the lesbian judge who clearly wanted to shove her face between my wife’s legs.

But probably the most blatant discrimination came from the various judges in the men’s rights cases. It didn’t matter whether they were state court judges—whom every prestigious law firm tries to avoid because the vast majority are idiots—or the best and the brightest in the federal courts. Every single judge—and there were around 20 (not counting the U.S. Supreme Court ones who refused to hear any of my cases)—every single judge ruled according to the law of PC/Feminism rather than the U.S. Constitution or statutes.

The PC/Feminist ideology running and ruining the court system is not restrict to courts in NYC as decisions by federal courts on the left coast have made clear by illegally restricting the executive orders of President Trump on immigration.

The beginning of Trump’s presidency didn’t help my case against the Pravda Correct press. The defendants made their motions to dismiss. After filing my opposition, I checked out the biography of the Judge. After law school, he worked as a newspaper reporter and was subsequently appointed to the bench by Obama—the case was doomed.

The Judge threw it into the can by ruling the news media could say anything it wanted on political affairs under the free speech clause of the First Amendment, except for defamation and some other “truly rare cases”—meaning, I assume, cases that involve interference with PC speech. He even noted that speech integral to the commission of a crime was not protected but somehow missed that was exactly what the news media defendants were accuses of—RICO and wire fraud—criminal statutes. I’ll bet he never even read my memorandum of law.

The Judge’s entire decision focused only on the free speech issue, which he actually admitted by saying, “the Court develops only” that issue. As for the other issues, he just ruled in one sentence that the Pravda Correct press prevailed on those. No reasoning, no analysis just an order from one of those PCers who believe they are akin to the aristocracy of feudal Europe—”we say what’s right—you obey!” So I appealed to the U.S. Second Circuit—a lot of good that would do, but it was necessary to have a shot at the U.S. Supreme Court. By then, Trump might have appointed another Justice besides Neil Gorsuch.

The procedure in the Second Circuit commie friendly court—where was Judge Kaufman when we needed him—is that after the appellant (the one who lost in the district court, which means me whenever I’m fighting for the rights of white heterosexual men) files his brief, the PC-Feminists on the other side file their brief. I then have the opportunity to file a reply and request oral argument, which I have done since 2003 fighting these PC-Totalitarians in court. It never did any good, so why bother this time. I knew how the PC-Totalitarians in the Second Circuit would decide—just wanted the decision so that I could try for the Supreme Court.

The three judge panel did exactly what I expected. They issued a three page unpublished decision, or summary order, that stated, “We have reviewed all of the arguments raised by plaintiff on appeal and find them to be without merit.” No analysis just a decree from the life-term PC bureaucrats of the Second Circuit. Guess they did not want to take time away from the golf course for such a trivial issue as the mainstream news media using wire fraud to try to throw a presidential election.

An unpublished decision means it has no value for future cases—it’s not precedent. That way, if a case arose in which the press tried to throw an election for an anti-politically correct candidate, the Court would not be bound by its decision. It could then rule in accordance with PC-Feminist ideology by finding the press liable for its fraud on the voters. In addition, by declaring the decision had no precedential value, the Second Circuit panel was running a con—judges do that a lot. Here’s the con: the losing attorney and party will figure that because the decision has no value for future cases, the Supreme Court will automatically deny any request to hear the case. After all, why would the Supreme Court waste its time on a case that has no precedential value? That con has tricked a lot of lawyers and parties. Many are unaware of what former Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens said, “[I] tend to vote to grant [certiorari] more on unpublished opinions, on the theory that occasionally judges use the unpublished opinion as a device to reach a decision that might be a little hard to justify.” J. Cole & E. Bucklo, A Life Well Lived: An Interview With Justice John Paul Stevens, 32 Litigation 8, 67 (Spring 2006).

“A little hard to justify” is an understatement, so off to the U.S. Supreme Court the case went. Trump did not have an opportunity before then to appoint another justice, but I gave it a shot anyway. The first step was to file a petition for writ of certiorari. The petition argues that the Court should hear the case because it is important to the country and the Second Circuit’s decision conflicted with Supreme Court decisions and those of other circuit courts.

On importance, I argued:

“The Constitution specifically selected the press . . . to play an important role in the discussion of public affairs.” Mills v. State of Ala., 384 U.S. 214, 219 (1966).

What happens when that crucial role is subverted is at the heart of this case. Whether members of the news media may commit fraud with impunity to undermine the most fundamental right of all—to participate in a fair electoral process.

No right is more precious in a free country than that of having a voice in the election of those who make the laws under which, as good citizens, we must live. Other rights, even the most basic, are illusory if the right to vote is undermined.

Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 17 (1964).

“In a republic where the people are sovereign, the ability of the citizenry to make informed choices among candidates for office is essential.” Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm’n, 558 U.S. 310, 339 (2010) (quoting Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U. S. 1, 14-15 (1976)). As Ida B. Wells once said, “People must know before they can act and there is no educator to compare to the press.” Providing that the press is telling the truth.

The Mainstream News Media, however, intentionally misinformed the electorate during the 2016 presidential election by communicating via wire, radio, television and Internet intentionally or recklessly false, prevaricating or dissembling (“fraudulent”) statements and reports about the Trump Campaign as set out in the Appendix.

The Mainstream News Media's "use of the known lie as a tool is at once at odds with the premises of democratic government and with the orderly manner in which economic, social, or political change is to be effected." Garrison v. State of La., 379 U.S. 64, 75 (1964). As the Radio, Television and Digital News Association's Guiding Principles state:

Journalism's obligation is to the public. Journalism places the public's interests ahead of commercial, political and personal interests. Journalism empowers viewers, listeners and readers to make more informed decisions for themselves; it does not tell people what to believe or how to feel. . . . Journalism verifies, provides relevant context, tells the rest of the story and acknowledges the absence of important additional information.

In America there are checks and balances for every major institution except the press. If the President violates his duties, there are the courts, Congress and the press. If Congress violates its duties, there are the courts, the President and the press. If judges violate their duties, Congress can impeach them. If businesses violate the law, the district attorney can prosecute, citizens can sue or the press can expose. But what if the press violates its fiduciary duty of fairness in political reporting? A public figure can sue, but he will likely fail because of the requirement of constitutional malice. This case is simply trying to bring about a check and balance on the Mainstream News Media to stick to its duty of fairness and nonpartisanship—a duty it most assuredly must fulfill.

As Mr. Justice Black put it, "In the First Amendment the Founding Fathers gave the free press the protection it must have to fulfill its essential role in our democracy. The press was to serve the governed . . ." New York Times Co. v. U.S., 403 U.S. 713, 717 (1971) (concurring opinion). "The extraordinary protections afforded by the First Amendment carry with them something in the nature of a fiduciary duty to exercise the protected rights responsibly a duty widely acknowledged but not always observed by editors and publishers." Nebraska Press Ass'n v. Stuart, 427 U.S. 539, 560 (1976).

According to Archibald MacLeish:

Freedom of the press is a right belonging, like all rights in a democracy, to all the people. As a practical matter, however, it can be exercised only by those who have effective access to the press. Where financial, economic, and technological conditions limit such access to a small minority, the exercise of that right by that minority takes on fiduciary or quasi-fiduciary characteristics.

Freedom of the Press, A Framework of Principles, A Report from the Commission on Freedom of the Press at 99 n.4 (Univ. of Chicago Press 1947).

The Mainstream News Media intentionally breach its duty to the public in order to present voters with a fraudulent reality in its news reports so that voters would decide to elect the "politically correct" choice for President, Hillary Clinton. "[A]ny medium has the power of imposing its own assumption[s] on the unwary." Marshal McLuhan, Understanding Media: The Extensions of Man, Chapter One at 6, The Medium is the Message (McGraw-Hill, 1964).

The influence of the news media of which the Mainstream News Media is a major component should not be underestimated. The news media is a major driving force in the voting decisions of tens of millions of Americans. The extent of its power to manipulate the election process is expressed by the characterization of it as “The Fourth Estate.” Let’s not forget that Clinton received 2.9 million more votes than Trump.

The argument that the Second Circuit ignored decisions of the Supreme Court basically stated two reasons:

1. The Supreme Court has held as a general matter that content-based restrictions on speech are permitted when that speech is an integral part of criminal conduct that violates a valid law.

The Supreme Court in United States v. Alvarez, 567 U.S. 709, 717 (2012) stated:

[C]ontent-based restrictions on speech have been permitted, as a general matter, only when confined to the few “ ‘historic and traditional categories [of expression] long familiar to the bar.’ ” United States v. Stevens, 559 U.S. 460, 470 (2010) (quoting Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. Members of N.Y. State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105, 127, (1991) (Kennedy, J., concurring in judgment)). Among these categories are . . . speech integral to criminal conduct, see, e.g., Giboney v. Empire Storage & Ice Co., 336 U.S. 490 (1949); . . . . These categories have a historical foundation in the Court’s free speech tradition. The vast realm of free speech and thought always protected in our tradition can still thrive, and even be furthered, by adherence to those categories and rules.

This Court has repeatedly held that speech integral to the commission of a crime is a category of speech that does not enjoy First Amendment protection. “[I]t has never been deemed an abridgement of freedom of speech or press to make a course of conduct illegal merely because the conduct was in part initiated, evidenced, or carried out by means of language, either spoken, written, or printed.” Giboney, 336 U.S. at 502 (citing see e.g., Fox v. Washington, 236 U.S. 273, 277 (1915) (Holmes, J.); Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U.S. 568, 571-572 (1942)). This Court in Rumsfeld v. Forum for Acad. & Institutional Rights, Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 62 (2006), cited the same quote from Giboney. In both Osborne v. Ohio, 495 U. S. 103, 110 (1990), and New York v. Ferber, 458 U.S. 747, 762 (1982), this Court again relied on Giboney by quoting from that decision: “It rarely has been suggested that the constitutional freedom for speech and press extends its immunity to speech or writing used as an integral part of conduct in violation of a valid criminal statute.” Giboney, 336 U.S. at 498.

The complaint in this case alleged that the Mainstream News Media violated RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c). RICO is a criminal statute that allows private persons to bring an action for injury caused by parties engaging in certain criminal acts that are called predicate acts. This case is concerned with the predicate act of wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. § 1343:

Whoever, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud . . . by means of . . . fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate or foreign commerce, any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both. . . .

Clearly, speech is an integral part of what is proscribed by the wire fraud statute because it is necessary for executing the illegal conduct.

The Mainstream News Media's schemes were simply to trick voters into voting for Clinton instead of Trump and to cause Trump Campaign members to spend more time and money circumventing it by going directly to the voters. The Mainstream News Media relied on the truism that "You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time . . . ." Attributed to Abraham Lincoln. The Mainstream News Media executed its schemes by publishing over the wires fraudulent information about the Trump Campaign.

Will Rahn of CBS News admitted the Mainstream News Media's motivation: "It shouldn't come as a surprise to anyone that, with a few exceptions, we were all tacitly or explicitly #WithHer [Clinton] . . . ." Will Rahn, Commentary: The unbearable smugness of the press at 1, November 10, 2016. Journalists believed they had access to "a greater truth, a system of beliefs divined from an advanced understanding of justice." Id. Rahn is a political correspondent and managing director for politics at CBS News Digital.

The reporting by the Mainstream News Media alleged as wire fraud was not speech protected by the First Amendment.

The Second Circuit also found this argument was "without merit." (Summary Order at 3).

2. The Supreme Court has held that fraudulent statements bring speech outside the First Amendment.

Fraud is one of those historic categories of speech in which content-based restrictions have been permitted. In Stevens, 559 U.S. at 468–469 this Court recounted:

"From 1791 to the present," . . . the First Amendment has "permitted restrictions upon the content of speech in a few limited areas," and has never "include[d] a freedom to disregard these traditional limitations." R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul, Minn., 505 U.S. 377, 382–383 (1992). These "historic and traditional categories long familiar to the bar," Simon & Schuster, 502 U.S. at 127 (Kennedy, J., concurring in judgment)—includ[e] . . . fraud, Virginia Bd. of Pharmacy v. Virginia Citizens Consumer Council, Inc., 425 U.S. 748, 771 (1976) . . . .

In Virginia Bd. of Pharmacy at 771, this Court relied, in part, on Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 340 (1974), which held:

[T]here is no constitutional value in fraudulent statements of fact. Neither the intentional lie nor the careless error materially advances society's interest in 'uninhibited, robust, and wide-open' debate on public issues. New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 270 (1964). They belong to that category of utterances which 'are no essential part of any exposition of ideas, and are of such slight social value as a step to truth that any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighed by the social interest in order and morality.' Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U.S. 568, 572 (1942).

When it comes to fraudulent statements, this Court's unanimous decision in Illinois held that "the First Amendment does not shield fraud." Illinois, 538 U.S. at 612 (citing see, e.g., Donaldson v. Read Magazine, Inc., 333 U.S. 178, 190 (1948) ([T]here is not "the slightest support for a contention that the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of the press include complete freedom, uncontrollable by Congress, to use the mails for perpetration of swindling [sic] schemes.")).

Donaldson rejected freedom of speech and freedom of press challenges to the mail fraud statute because the government's power "to protect people against fraud" has "always been recognized in this country and is firmly established." Donaldson, 333 U.S. at 190. Such also applies to the wire fraud statute because "[t]he mail and wire fraud statutes share the same language in relevant part, and accordingly we apply the same analysis to both sets of offenses." Carpenter v. United States, 484 U.S. 19, 25 n.6 (1987); United States v. Tarnopol, 561 F.2d 466, 475 (3rd Cir. 1977), abrogated on other grounds, Griffin v. U.S., 502 U.S. 46 (1991) (elements of mail and wire fraud have been construed in pari materia).

So while the "honest utterance, even if inaccurate, may further the fruitful exercise of the right of free speech, it does not follow that the lie, knowingly and deliberately published . . . should enjoy a like immunity. Garrison, 379 U.S. at 75.

At the time the First Amendment was adopted, as today, there were those unscrupulous enough and skillful enough to use the deliberate or reckless falsehood as an effective political tool to unseat the public servant or even topple an administration. Cf. Riesman, Democracy and Defamation: Fair Game and Fair Comment I, 42 Col.L.Rev. 1085, 1088-1111 (1942). That speech is used as a tool for political ends does not automatically bring it under the protective mantle of the Constitution. For the use of the known lie as a tool is at once at odds with the premises of democratic government and with the orderly manner in which economic, social, or political change is to be effected. Calculated falsehood falls into that class of utterances which 'are no essential part of any exposition of ideas, and are of such slight social value as a step to truth that any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighed by the social interest in order and morality.' Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U.S. 568, 572 (1942). Hence the knowingly false statement and the false statement made with reckless disregard of the truth, do not enjoy constitutional protection.

Id. at 75.

The communication of words for fraudulent purposes, whether by an individual, news media or some other organization is not protected by the First Amendment. If it were, then no person or organization could be prosecuted for fraud. See Giboney, 336 U.S. at 502 (“Such an expansive interpretation of the constitutional guaranties of speech and press would make it practically impossible ever to enforce laws against agreements in restraint of trade as well as many other agreements and conspiracies deemed injurious to society.”).

Once again, the Second Circuit found this argument was “without merit.” (Summary Order at 3).

As for the Second Circuit making a decision that was contrary to decisions in other circuit courts, I merely listed those decisions with a one sentence summary. Those circuits were the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth, although the Ninth really doesn’t count.

The concluding paragraph stated:

This case raises an issue of great significance to our democratic form of government. Will the powerful Mainstream News Media remain free to do as it wishes in violation of the law so as to propagate its prevailing ideology, to undermine the right to vote and to defraud voters? Such will be the inevitable result of allowing the decisions below to stand.

The Supreme Court denied my petition for certiorari—not exactly a surprise given the tenor of the times and fear of the yellow-dog press. The news media, now known as “fake news,” continues its lies, prevarications and dissemblings in an effort to have Trump impeached and trick citizens into voting for Democrats, a.k.a. Socialists—the Democrats already have the illegal alien vote.

In this age of digital communication, the Supreme Court not only requires that documents be filed electronically but also on paper. Therein lies the Supreme Court’s favoritism for the rich and corporations that has existed since its inception. Certioraris and briefs must be in the form of booklets 6 1/8 by 9 1/4 inches in size. There are a limited number of printers who can produce such booklets, which allows them to keep the prices high. The Supreme Court Justices, all of whom previously worked as lawyers, know this, and, even in the digital age, they still require such costly printing in order to keep middle class folks out of the Court. My Trump case's certiorari printing costs were $8,000 for 50 booklets—$160 per booklet. What middle class family could afford that, not to mention the cost of their lawyer. For the rich and corporations—that's peanuts. The Justices, however, aren't completely heartless. If a person claims poverty, such as a deadbeat, drug addict, illegal alien, terrorist, or #MeTooHo, then the Justices will not require that documents be filed in booklet form—how nice. Apparently justice for the hard working is in the streets or vigilantism.

Coup d'état

Following the election and Trump's inauguration, the National Socialist Democrats just couldn't accept that all those American believers in liberty had rejected their particular form of totalitarianism. Since the PC model for the superior person means behaving like high school girls, they were furious over their rejection. They cried, they moaned and pointed their burnt fingers at others—the Russians—to blame. Sore losers was an understatement for describing them. These high school female clones, ever adept at self-delusion, claimed Putin wanted Trump elected, so he rigged the election. Right, a country barely out of the Middle Ages where even the educated believe in the supernatural, which is not particularly advanced technologically, and has a GDP of $1.6 trillion manipulated America with its $19 trillion economy that is the second most educated country in the world according to U.S. News & World Reports. I don't think so.

One More Time

After the inauguration, I read that the Department of Justice under the new Attorney General began increasing its review of cases that had already been decided by an immigration judge. Such reviews of an immigration judge's decision could result in a reversal of the decision. So whom does that bring to mind—the Ho. She was now scamming people as a real estate agent in New York. Sent a letter to Attorney General Sessions telling him about the immigration judge who dismissed the deportation case against the Ho because her incriminating file had disappeared.

Immigration Judge Jesse B. Christensen, appointed by the Obama Administration, dismissed the second removal proceeding against a Russian national with ties to the Chechen Barayev crime organization because the Russian's immigration file had disappeared.

As a former manager of Kroll Associates in Moscow, Russia, I was aware of crucial files disappearing from government offices in both Russia and Mexico through bribery, but never realized that the practice had apparently reached America under the Obama Administration.

Added some background between the Ho and Homeland Security:

On October 1, 2004, the Department of Homeland Security denied her first application for a waiver under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1186a(c)(4), based on the contents of her file and placed her in a removal proceeding. Her file contained reports from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

On March 20, 2008, Immigration Judge Paul A. DeFonzo ruled that she be deported. Ms. Shipilina appealed to the Board of Immigration Appeals ["B.I.A."], which denied her appeal on February 2, 2009.

While her appeal was still pending, Ms. Shipilina married an American for a second time and subsequently filed once again for a waiver under 8 U.S.C. § 1186a(c)(4). The Department of Homeland Security for a second time denied her application once again based on the contents of her file and placed her in a removal proceeding for a second time.

On March 30, 2012, Immigration Judge Jesse B. Christensen adjourned her removal hearing to June 1, 2012, in order to obtain confirmation that Ms. Shipilina was again appealing to the B.I.A. the Department of Homeland Security's second decision to have her removed.

On June 1, 2012, Immigration Judge Jesse B. Christensen administratively closed the removal proceeding against Ms. Shipilina because B.I.A. "reports it does not have the file."

In 2015, the above information was provided to the General Counsel for the D.O.J. Executive Office for Immigration Review and the D.O.J. Inspector General, but given the Obama Administration's policies, neither took any action.

Perhaps now with you as Attorney General, the Department of Justice may look into this micro-aggression against the rule of law.

In a subsequent letter, I sent the NYC Board of Election's referrals to the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of N.Y. and the Queens District Attorney to prosecute the Ho for registering to vote when she was not a citizen. The DOJ referred my letters to the "Office of the Chief Immigration Judge, who has established a procedure that allows any person to file a complaint about the conduct of an Immigration Judge." I was hoping the Chief was not an Obama appointee, but it turned out worst. She had been appointed by Attorney General Loretta E. Lynch. More worst, the Chief Judge was a female PCer, Mary Beth Keller. She concluded that the Ho's immigration judge did nothing wrong by dismissing the deportation because someone had deep-sixth her file. The holdovers from the lawless, socialistic Obama administration were still in power.

Then in May 2018, Attorney General Jeff Sessions issued a new directive telling immigration judges they could no longer administratively close deportation cases, which is what happened to the Ho. Obama and the socialists (Democrats) loved administrative closures because it suspended deportations and allowed the illegals to roam the country, and, of course, vote Democratic. Over 200,000 illegals, including the Ho, had received de facto amnesty under America's third world president—Obama. Session concluded this Obama amnesty was not legally justified. So now Homeland Security was slowly re-visiting those administrative closure cases.

July 2018, my telephone rings—it's USCIS. and they want to meet to talk about the Ho.

The agent said, "We'd like to meet with you and talk about your ex-wife."

"Sure. I can be there in a half an hour."

“Not right now, let’s make an appointment.”

“Just tell me when and where and I’ll be there.”

The agent added that he had reviewed her file. But according to the Immigration Judge, the file had been lost. Most likely the Ho had simply bought-off the judge to say that.

The agent continued, “You’ve really gone through a lot.”

To which I said, “And so have you guys trying to deport her.

On July 24, 2018, I meet with a USCIS officer in its Fraud Detection and National Security division at 26 Federal Plaza. By then, the building was quite familiar to me after my dealings with those two corrupt FBI agents, Pisano and Thomas. Session’s new directive had worked its way down into my past—now maybe some justice.

One of the officer’s first questions was “Do you know who was your ex-wife’s second husband. I’d like to talk to him.”

“No, I tried to find that out after I learned that she had married for a second time in order to avoid deportation for her fraudulent marriage to me. But NYC keeps those marriage records secret from the general public.”

“I think talking to him would be useful, so let me know if you come across any information on who he was or if they are still married.”

For the next two hours, I provided a summary of the Ho and her associates’ illegal activities along with the immigration court’s administrative closure of her case. The officer thought her registering to vote while not a citizen was “big.” At the end of the interview, he requested the names of anyone in the U.S. whom I knew had associated with her, which I subsequently provided and told him to contact me any time with any more questions.

While working on a paper in the law library to simplify tonal music theory (Appendix 45) that had evolved out of my one year course with the hot millennial Juilliard teacher, my dimmed and delayed light bulb went off again. “Contact the private eye you use for your cases to see whether he can come up with who was the Ho’s second husband.”

My PI got back to me. “Unfortunately I was unable to connect the dots to see if she had married [again]. The only evidence I could find is a man by the name Onn Rapeika from Fort Lee, NJ has apparently lived with her for a while. Rapeika is supposedly a drug dealer and was convicted of hording weapons.”

Well the drugs, crime and Rapeika’s name being Russian clearly fit with the Ho’s modus operandi, so I sent the information along to the USCIS officer.

Perhaps something would come of this new investigation, but America has been so corrupted by the socialist PCers and Feminists that I doubted it.

[Update if any]

The Second Time Around

The Ho wasn’t the only bimbo, or more accurately, bimbat with whom my battles started again. Tory “the Torch” Shepherd from down under published another article in which she used my name in a derogatory fashion. Google alerts notified me of the article.

She just couldn’t leave well enough alone. Her lawyers most likely told her to leave me out of future articles, but her hatred got the best of her.

Tory’s misandrist articles are not only published in Australian newspapers but by PressReader, Inc. PressReader is a digital newspaper and magazine distribution and publishing operator that contracts with thousands of newspaper and magazine publishers across the globe to publish their articles by way of the Internet and mobile telephone apps. It claims seven million “active,” whatever that means, “users,” whatever that means.

The article was published on April 4, 2018. It was titled Misplaced fear of gay revenge in the West Australian and PressReader Internet sites and Freedom of religion cannot Trump other rights in the Advertiser website. Tory’s lead sentence stated, “Self-described ‘anti-feminist lawyer’ Roy Den Hollander once likened the position of men in society to black people in 1950s America ‘sitting in the back of the bus.’” Except for that sentence, Tory did not mention me again.

The entire article was about submissions by Australians to an Australian Federal Government panel concerning the Australian Government’s review of religious freedom in Australia. In 2017, the Australian Federal Parliament passed the marriage equality act that allowed two people, regardless of sex, to marry. The political impact, in part, caused the Australian Federal Government to appoint a panel to receive submissions on the conflict between gay rights and religious freedom in Australia.

So what did have to do with me? I never lived in Australia, never visited Australia, did not submit any comments to the Australian panel and have never been involved in a case dealing with gay rights versus religious freedom—anywhere. Played rugby with and against some Australians and hung out one night decades ago with an Australian guy. Boy was he obnoxious. It was summertime and the girls were bare shouldered. He’d walk up behind them and blow on their shoulders—boy they got ticked.

Tory’s article went on with “It’s become common; men thinking they’re oppressed by women, whites thinking they’re oppressed by ethnic minorities. The traditional oppressors believing they have become oppressed.” Tory was really reaching by trying to use me as the icon of the traditional oppressor—anti-female, anti-black, anti-queer, anti-same sex marriage (half true, just anti-marriage), anti-pigs (well when I was in SDS), anti-abortion (hey, walk down to the corner drug store and buy a contraceptive instead of murdering an incipient human being when there are no medical problems), immoral (stay off of my rights), anti-teacher (not if she's hot like Susan was), and anti-big cakes (hey, where's your cake now as one fat brother said the other fat brother, actually I like cakes, especially the classic ones made in Russia).

My last case against this bimbat and her publisher went down the drain because Justice Jennifer Schechter ruled that her Feminazi Court did not have personal jurisdiction over Tory in Australia.<sup>1</sup> The same would happen if I sued Tory again in any N.Y. court. But PressReader was a different story. When it published the article, it was licensed to do business in New York State by the Secretary of State. If that wasn't good enough, it had contracts with New York newspapers and the N.Y. Public Library. So the New York courts would have jurisdiction under CPLR § 302(a)(1) because PressReader transacts business within New York State and contracts with businesses in New York State to provide its services.

PressReader's attorney fees and if any settlement will likely tick it off against Tory. Indirect, but still a boot in her flabby ass.

Tory's statement might be considered defamatory by implication but such was way too complicated for a New York State judge. So my case charged PressReader—not Tory—just PressReader for violating my right to publicity—not privacy—but publicity. N.Y. does not have a right to privacy action. It does, however, have under N.Y. Civil Rights Law § 51 a private cause of action for protecting the unauthorized use of a person's name:

---

<sup>1</sup> Recently, Schechter, in a hot flash of power madness, ordered President Trump to show for a deposition in one of the cases before her. What a ditz—it'll never happen.

Any person whose name . . . is used within this state . . . for the purposes of trade without the written consent first obtained . . . may also sue and recover damages for any injuries sustained by reason of such use . . . .

The right to publicity generally applies to someone with a modicum of fame so that the courts can find economic value in the use of that person's name. Thanks, in part, to the articles Tory published about me, I qualified as having some fame, or more accurately infamy.

PressReader's insurance company hired a law firm in the City to defend. That wasn't good enough because I wanted PressReader to pay its own legal fees—not its insurance company. So I amended my complaint to include a RICO cause of action. Remember, insurance companies usually cover the costs of a lawsuit providing it does not involve criminal accusations. RICO is nothing but criminal accusations even though it allows an action to be brought by an individual or a business. My amended complaint accused PressReader of engaging in wire fraud to further Tory's scheme of harming my legal practice and business consultancy because, as we all know, she considers me an enemy who should me completely destroyed. Actually, the feeling is mutual.

PressReader's lawyers filed the proverbial motion to dismiss, after which I filed my amended complaint that added the RICO charge. In New York State courts, as in federal courts, a plaintiff has an absolute right to file an amended complaint after a defendant files a motion to dismiss claiming that the complaint does not state a claim on which relief can be granted. PressReader's lawyer and I appeared before Civil Court Judge Denise Dominguez who had no clue that CPLR 3025(a) permitted my filing the amended complaint without her approval or any judge's approval. I tried to educate her in the law but no way was this escapee from the second caravan going to believe a white-male U.S. citizen. These identity group members are such idiot bigots. This issue was basic, basic civil procedure and this judge didn't know it. How could such an ignorant lawyer get on the bench? Simple, some wetback district leader nominated her and the illegals in Manhattan elected her. To be fair, she did grant me leave to file the amended complaint, but I had to file it again—for the second time.

Naturally, the defense attorney kept quiet during the argument and in an email afterward said, “The Judge informed you that your amended complaint was not properly filed because you had not sought leave to file an amended pleading. We, like the Court, are thus treating your prior document and its service as a nullity.” He knew the amended complaint was properly filed under CPLR 3025(a), but since the Judge made a mistake that favored him, he went along with it—typical Abbott & Costello lawyer. So I re-filled and re-served the amended complaint.

This Abbott & Costello lawyer, Gary Meyerhoff, then removed the case to the federal court, which didn’t matter. But this typically wimpy male of modern times tried to threaten me. Either I drop the case, or he would make a motion for Rule 11 sanctions. My response was fine, and I sent him my Rule 11 sanctions motion against him that would be filed the same day he filed his.

Then the light went off in my head—file another amended complaint, but in the federal court. Since the Judge in the NYC Civil Court and the Abbott & Costello lawyer considered my first amended complaint in City court as not using up my absolute right to file such, logically, I still had the right to do so. Besides, once the Abbott & Costello lawyer transferred the case to federal court, the federal rules took over, and I had not yet used my absolute right in federal court to file an amended complaint, which is allowed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(1)(B). My new amended complaint for the federal court turned a case asking for $21,000, which was below the limit of the $25,000 maximum allowed in the City court, into one for $1.7 million. Since the Abbott & Costello lawyer wanted to turn this case into a big deal—that was fine with me.

The federal magistrate judge, however, summarily refused to allow my amended complaint without any argument or sufficient knowledge of the events that had taken place in the City court. So I made a motion that she reconsider her decision in which all the facts were laid out. Also made a motion asking for her permission to amend, assuming she was not about to change her mind on allowing me to amend as a matter of right. If she went against me on both motions, at least I'd have an issue for the Second Circuit Court of Appeals when the case got there, if it ever did.

[Update]

Saigon Bride (cont.)

In December 2016, both sides in the draft case submitted a status report to the Judge on what the House-Senate Conference Committee had done with the Senate's call for females to register for the draft.

The Department of Justice had a new attorney—a man, because the female was pregnant—thank goodness for her lack of contraception. Girls generally hate guys. Imagine every day you open a store, clean it, decorate it and perfume it, but no one comes in to buy—how would feel? Girls are the shop keepers selling their wares. They engage in every type of advertising—bait and switch, black Fridays, and discounts when drunk—but they're the ones who wait, and they're the ones who can't pick and choose their customers. They have to settle for whomever enters the shop, and they hate men for it. So whenever a girl finds herself in a position to wreck revenge on a man—she will, assuming he's not a queer. And it doesn't matter whether the guy's decent or a jerk—she'll lie, manipulate and cheat for her revenge. So for guys, we might as well act as jerks.

Speaking of jerks, the House-Senate Conference Committee dropped the provision for females to register. It did include, however, the creation of a National Commission on Military, National, and Public Service to determine whether the current Selective Service System would be reformed, eliminated or require females to register.

The draft was last used in 1973, and in the 17 U.S. armed conflicts since then, including America's longest war in Afghanistan, the volunteer military had handled the fighting. So why bother requiring any registration for a draft that had not been used in over 40 years? It was a fair question. Of course, given America's military-industrial complex's hunger for profits, at some point a draft would be needed to provide the masters of war with enough cannon fodder to maximize profits. The Pentagon's position was that the "registration database itself mitigates risk to the Nation; its very existence would reduce the time required for full defense mobilization. . . . [in] a conflict of global proportions or mammoth national emergency."

Both the Senate and the House passed the Conference Committee's version of the 2017 National Defense Authorization Act and Obama signed it into law. That created a problem for my case because the Commission had nearly three years to make its recommendations to Congress, then Congress would dicker over what to do, and, if it actually passed a law changing the Selective Service System, Trump would have to sign or veto it. This could go into Trump's second term or whomever might be president then. Congress had punted so that they could duck the issue.

Neither my client nor I had any intention of cooling our heels for three or more years. We asked the New Jersey court to make a decision without waiting for the Commission, Congress and the President. The argument was that according to the U.S. Supreme Court just because judges "have no way of knowing how [Congress] will in fact respond," that is no reason “to hold that underinclusive statutes [which included the registration law] can never be challenged because any plaintiff’s success can theoretically be thwarted” or furthered by a legislature’s subsequent action or inaction. Orr v. Orr, 440 U.S. 268, 272 (1979). A couple of other cases said the same thing: Texas Monthly, Inc. v. Bullock, 489 U.S. 1, 8 (1989) (“Texas cannot strip appellant of standing by changing the law” after the injury occurred) and Arkansas Writers’ Project, Inc. v. Ragland, 481 U.S. 221, 227 (1987) (to “effectively insulate underinclusive statutes from constitutional challenge [is] a proposition we [have] soundly rejected . . .”).

The Government argued that the Executive Branch and Congress had extensive authority over the military, and since they were engaged in possibly changing the law, the Court should wait. We argued that “possibly” was not good enough because our client’s right to equal protection was being violated everyday that the law was on the books. The Court apparently agreed with us and decided to proceed with the case. The Judge’s magistrate then instructed both sides to brief whether our client had standing. (Every federal district court judge has an assistant judge called a magistrate who helps out with deciding motions, but the Judge makes all the final decisions).

Standing is a Constitutional requirement in every case and has three parts. The plaintiff must have suffered some injury or is about to suffer an injury, the injury was caused by the defendant’s illegal action, and the court has the power to remedy the injury. The Government argued that our client’s injury was nebulous, speculative and she needed more than just being discriminated against. We argued that discrimination itself is the injury. “[A] victim of discrimination suffers a dehumanizing injury as real as, and often of far more severe and lasting harm than, a blow to the jaw.” Hassan v. City of New York, 804 F.3d 277, 290 (quoting Mardell

v. Harleysville Life Ins. Co., 65 F.3d 1072, 1074 (3d Cir.1995) (per curiam)). If the Court agreed with our injury argument then it could also find that being prevented from registering caused the discrimination against young ladies, and that the Court could do something about it—declare the law unconstitutional.

The Court ruled in our client’s favor—she had standing to challenge the draft registration law. Up until that decision, I had brought six cases fighting for the rights of men against PC ideology, and not once did I ever win a substantive motion like this one. But here was a victory on a key motion in the fight for equal rights—the only difference was female rights instead of male rights. I wonder why?

The Court ruled in pertinent part that:

Plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts to establish a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing. Plaintiff alleges that she tried to register for the military draft but was refused. (See SAC ¶ 5). As Plaintiff explains in her opposition brief, the “MSSA’s (Military Selective Service Act) male-only registration and [the Selective Service’s] enforcement of it barred Plaintiff from registering based solely on her sex while at the same time allowing males who were similarly situated as her to register.” (Pl. Opp. Br. at 20). The Supreme Court has observed that “[w]hen the suit is one challenging the legality of government action or inaction” and “the plaintiff is himself an object of the action (or forgone action) at issue . . . there is ordinarily little question that the action or inaction has caused him injury . . .” Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561-62.

Plaintiff is challenging the legality of the MSSA’s male-only requirement. As Plaintiff persuasively argues (see Pl. Opp. Br. at 24-27), this kind of sex-based discrimination constitutes “a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American Courts,” Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1549. Indeed, the Third Circuit has stated that “virtually every circuit court has reaffirmed—as has the Supreme Court—that a discriminatory classification is itself a penalty and thus qualifies as an actual injury for standing purposes, where a citizen’s right to equal treatment is at stake.” Hassan v. City of New York, 804 F.3d 277, 289-90 (3d Cir. 2015) (cleaned up).

Defendants contend that Plaintiff will not be deprived of any opportunities in life because she can enlist in the military. (See Def. Mov. Br. at 12). But this misstates Plaintiff’s injury. As Plaintiff explains, her injury is not that she is kept out of combat positions, not that she may be harmed by future inductions, not that she is prevented from enlisting, and not that possible career opportunities in the military will be hindered but rather that she is prevented—solely because of her sex—from registering for the draft.

(Pl. Opp. Br. at 21) (emphasis in original). . . .

Defendants argue that “Plaintiff’s complaint is akin to a policy grievance, unsuitable for resolution in federal court.” (Def. Mov. Br. at 18). According to Defendants, “[i]n the absence of some particularized cognizable harm to Plaintiff herself, the alleged injury is not a matter of individual concern, but rather a generalized and public one.” (Id.).

In opposition, Plaintiff argues that she suffered “a particularized injury” because “she, as an individual, was personally prevented from registering with the SSS.” (Pl. Opp. Br. at 12; see also SAC ¶¶ 5, 8-10). The Court agrees. Indeed, the Court finds that Plaintiff easily satisfies the particularization requirement of Article III standing based on the allegations in her [Second Amended Complaint] and the attached exhibits. . . .

Here, Plaintiff wants to register for the draft, tried to register for the draft, but can’t register for the draft because she is a woman. (See SAC ¶¶ 5, 8-10; D.E. No. 54-1 (Ex. A) & 54-2 (Ex. B)). Thus, Plaintiff has alleged a concrete injury. See Horizon, 846 F.3d at 633 (noting that the contours of the injury-in-fact requirement are “very generous”).

Our next move was to ask the Court for permission to file a motion for Summary Judgment. A court can skip a trial and make a decision when the facts in a case are clear and not disputed. In such a situation, all a court does is make a legal decision by applying the law to those facts. In the draft case the facts were obvious. Our client fell within the age range of 18 to 25 years of age, and when she tried to register for the draft, the Selective Service said no because she was a woman.

The DOJ opposed our request to get on with deciding this case so that it could move up the ladder to the Third Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. At that time, the case had been in the district court for nearly three years. DOJ asked permission to make another motion to dismiss—its fourth motion to dismiss. Unfortunately, Judge Esther Salas granted DOJ a do-over of its prior motions to dismiss the case for lack of ripeness under Rule 12(b)(1) and failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6). Judge Salas had never made a decision on those motions. She had “terminated” them allegedly because of the political shenanigans in Congress. Was she trying to keep this case in her court until a weatherman showed her which way the legal winds were blowing despite that

The irreplaceable value of the power articulated by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall [Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)] lies in the protection it has afforded the constitutional rights and liberties of individual citizens and minority groups against oppressive or discriminatory government action.

U.S. v. Richardson, 418 U.S. 166, 192 (Powell, J., concurring) (1974).

Compare three years of motions to dismiss in Salas's Court to the case in the U.S. Southern District Court of Texas on exactly the same issue of the draft registration statute violating the Equal Protection Clause of the Constitution. Nat'l Coal. for Men v. Selective Serv. Sys., 2018 WL 1694906 (S.D. Tex 2018). That case had been transferred to Texas by the California court. The only difference in the Texas case was that two guys were the plaintiffs and a white 70 year-old man was the judge. After about a year and a half, the Texas case moved into the second inning—summary judgment. We, however, were still in the first inning fighting over DOJ's fourth motion to dismiss. Just unbelievable, by now we should have been knocking on the U.S. Supreme Court's door, but lady unluck stuck us with an Obama appointee.

Female judges didn't bother me as long as they were middle age or older black ladies. They seemed to have an understanding of how life worked and were not about to be conned by any foot dragging lawyer. Latinas, however, were usually a problem—driven by an inferiority complex. After Salas agreed to allow the DOJ its fourth motion to dismiss, I checked her bio. It was the usual effort to blame a man and turn someone into super girl—daddy abandoned us, we were indigent, which means they lived off of the taxpayer, but we overcame all odds. Right, affirmative action got her into and through college and law school. Salas worked as an associate in an ambulance chasing firm doing basic criminal work. Left that firm to work as a public defender in the New Jersey District Court representing lumpen proletariat ne'er-do-wells. Joined politically correct organizations trying to convince America that whites, especially white males, were barbarians, and all those of a darker skin complexion were victims. She did, however, have one accomplishment—high school cheerleader.

DOJ argued that federal courts could not make decisions on civil rights when the military was involved; the case was contingent on what the National Commission on Military, National, and Public Service may or may not decide in the future; the Rostker case, decided under completely different facts, dictated that male-only registration was still constitutional; and the Selective Service did not violate Plaintiff's equal protection rights by preventing her from registering. Just a lot of malarkey intended to delay a decision further.

We argued that DOJ was continuing its strategy of delay: "Justice too long delayed is justice denied."—Martin Luther King, Jr. King had added the words "too long" to William Gladstone's phrase "Justice delayed is justice denied." Our brief in opposition to the DOJ argued against further delay:

Equal treatment for young American women has not only been delayed by the Federal Government, but it has been delayed for far too long. Women continue moving into combat positions in the military, but they are still sitting on the sidelines when it comes to registration with the Selective Service System ("SSS").

The Government defendants, SSS and its Director (together, "Defendants") persist with their argument of delay. Defendants specifically requested a stay in their response to Plaintiff's motion to proceed. (Def. Resp. at 13-15, D.E. No. 61). It was not granted. (See Order at 5, D.E. No. 67). Defendants again request a stay (now called "abeyance") in their current motion to dismiss. (Def. Mov. Br. at 2, 3, 12, 18, 27, D.E. No. 80-1). Whether making a specific request or not, Defendants' argument focuses on delay: (1) wait until a commission with no law making authority makes some unknown suggestions; (2) wait until . . . Congress decides to adopt, change or ignore the unknown suggestions; (3) wait until President Trump decides to sign or veto an unknown bill that may never exist; and (4) if there actually is a bill but it is veto, wait for a vote to override the veto of a bill that not even a fortune teller can tell what it may say.

The obvious question is why delay while Plaintiff's rights are being violated? Congress can always enact a statute that abrogates a court's decision—providing the statute is constitutional. Perhaps Defendants are aiming for this case to become moot, which will happen when the Plaintiff turns 26 years old. . . . If Defendants have their way, she may be a practicing veterinarian by the time all the appeals in this case end. Of course, by then, the appeals may have ended prematurely because of mootness when the Plaintiff turns 26—a victory for Defendants and discrimination, but a defeat for justice and equal treatment.

DOJ's reply loaded up on lies, prevarications and dissemblings about the law and the facts. DOJ and the new alleged lawyer it added to the case went for the con of delay. Why not, more delay would look good to their bosses, and DOJ would only have to worry about the case in Texas when it was appealed to the Fifth Circuit and then to the U.S. Supreme Court where DOJ would most assuredly lose.

Four months after the submission of our papers on DOJ's fourth motion to dismiss, Salas schedules oral argument to take place in two more months. Three and a half years after this case started, she throws in another delaying tactic—she'll likely take another six months after oral argument to make a decision. Then the case will be four years old and the plaintiff, who had just graduated from high school when the case started, will have graduated college. Salas was apparently scared of making a decision one way or the other. If she ruled draft registration unconstitutional, the Feminists who believed females deserved preferential treatment would criticize her. If she ruled that it did not violate the Constitution, then those Feminists who advocate for equal treatment would criticize her. Either way it was lose-lose for Salas unless someone took the risk of leading the way.

Throughout the history of the human race, who has been willing to take the lead—men. True, there were always a few brave females willing to go in front, but not many. On February 22, 2019, the Texas Court granted the two male plaintiffs summary judgment. Summary judgment meant the Court did not need to bother with a trial because the facts were clear—these two guys had to register with the SSS or face a plethora of unpleasant consequences. The DOJ now had to appeal that decision to the Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. DOJ did luck out to an extent in the Texas decision. The attorney for the two male plaintiffs screwed up, so the Court didn't issue an injunction. The Judge wrote, "Although Plaintiffs' complaint requests injunctive relief, Plaintiffs have not briefed the issue and their summary judgment motion only requests declaratory relief. Therefore, Plaintiffs' request for an injunction is DENIED." That meant the decision would have no effect on the Government until another court instituted an injunction, so the SSS kept on doing business as usual.

The Texas decision did, however, have an effect on the New Jersey District Court. Eleven days after publication of the Texas decision, Judge Salas issued her decision denying the DOJ motion to dismiss our Equal Protection claim. Thank heavens for older white-male judges willing to act as blocking backs. Judge Salas did grant the DOJ motion to dismiss our Substantive Due Process claim, but that was a Hail Mary anyway and we simply dropped it.

After reading her opinion, Rick's comment in Casablanca to Ugarte came to mind, "Yes, you're right Ugarte. I am a little more impressed with you."

Judge Salas held that our Equal Protection claim was ripe meaning the facts were clear and did not need any further additions, such as what the National Commission on Military, National, and Public Service might end up advising.

[T]he Commission serves simply in an advisory capacity. Its sole duty and authority is to review the SSS and draft a report for Congress. See FY17 NDAA §§ 551(a), 555(e)(1). While the Commission may be taking concrete steps towards providing a recommendation by March 2020, there is no guarantee that the Commission will complete its obligations by then, or that Congress will even act on the Commission's report. [Opinion at 9].

Meanwhile, Plaintiff and putative class members continue to have their constitutional rights allegedly violated. . . . [T]he constitution and the rights it protects cannot be held hostage to a possibility that a commission is investigating a particular policy, which may or may not give rise to legislation, which may or may not be enacted into law, which may or may not ultimately make the injury Plaintiff and others similarly situated are currently suffering, moot. See Am. Petroleum Inst., 683 F.3d at 388 (noting that government agency cannot "stave off judicial review of a challenged rule simply by initiating a new proposed rulemaking that would amend the rule in a significant way”); Am. Petroleum Inst. v. U.S. E.P.A., 906 F.2d 729, 739–40 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (“If the possibility of unforeseen amendments were sufficient to render an otherwise fit challenge unripe, review could be deferred indefinitely.”). [Opinion at 10].

Plaintiff is not challenging the Commission, the Commission’s ongoing review, or what Congress may or may not do with the Commission’s recommendations. (See Pl.’s Opp. Br. at 26). Rather, Plaintiff is challenging the current enforcement of the MSSA. (Id.). That present enforcement gives rise to an injury today, and Defendants fail to show how review of that injury would “prove too abstract or unnecessary.” See Ohio Forestry Ass’n v. Sierra Club, 523 U.S. 726, 735 (1998). The question is fit for adjudication. [Opinion at 12]

Judge Salas also held that it was the Plaintiff who was currently suffering a substantial legal hardship and any decision by the Court to protect her rights would not interfere with the Government.

[D]iscrimination itself, by perpetuating “archaic and stereotypic notions” or by stigmatizing members of the disfavored group as “innately inferior” and therefore as less worthy participants in the political community, can cause serious noneconomic injuries to those persons who are personally denied equal treatment solely because of their membership in a disfavored group.

Hassan v. City of New York, 804 F.3d 277, 290 (3d Cir. 2015) (quoting Heckler v. Mathews, 465 U.S. 728, 739–40 (1984)). [Opinion at 13-14].

Regardless of this Court’s ultimate decision, the Commission and Congress are free to continue with the current policymaking process, and Congress is free to pass legislation based on the Commission’s recommendation—or not. The courts cannot stop Congress from legislating any more than Congress can stop the courts from interpreting the Constitution and any legislative acts repugnant to it.

See United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 704–05 (1974); Marbury, 5 U.S. at 177. [Opinion at 14].

[C]ourts cannot avoid their responsibility merely ‘because the issues have political implications.’” Zivotofsky ex rel. Zivotofsky v. Clinton, 566 U.S. 189, 196 (2012) (quoting INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 943 (1983)). And that duty requires this Court to determine whether the Constitution is being obeyed today, not to speculate whether it might be obeyed in the future. Therefore, the Court does not perceive any potential separation of powers issues with proceeding on the merits, and to the extent any may exist, it does not outweigh the hardship befalling Plaintiff. [Opinion 14-15].

Finally, as to the DOJ's lame argument that because the Supreme Court in 1981 found male-only registration constitutional, every court other than the Supreme Court must also find that male-only registration is still constitutional regardless of all the changes that have occurred.

[W]here a law has been previously sustained the "decision sustaining the law cannot be regarded as precluding a subsequent suit for the purpose of testing [its] validity . . . in the lights of the later actual experience." Abie State Bank v. Weaver, 282 U.S. 765, 772 (1931). Indeed, "[a] statute valid as to one set of facts may be invalid as to another. A statute valid when enacted may become invalid by change in the conditions to which it is applied." Nashville, C. & St. L. RY. v. Walters, 294 U.S. 405, 415 (1935) (footnote omitted); United States v. Carolene Products Co., 304 U.S. 144, 153 (1938) ("[T]he constitutionality of a statute predicated upon the existence of a particular state of facts may be challenged by showing to the court that those facts have ceased to exist."); see also Third Nat. Bank of Louisville v. Stone, 174 U.S. 432, 434 (1899) ("A question cannot be held to have been adjudged before an issue on the subject could possibly have arisen."). Therefore, in light of the alleged substantial factual changes since Rostker was decided, this Court cannot at this stage of the litigation find that Rostker controls the outcome of Plaintiff's claim. [Opinion at 30-31].

Next steps were motions for Class Certification so that the case would have an impact beyond just my client, and after that Summary Judgment on the Equal Protection claim so that we could get out of this quagmire of a court as quickly as possible. Whether we won or lost the Summary Judgment meant next stop the Third Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. The problem was when.

Salas clearly wanted to further her career by moving up the judicial ladder to the Court of Appeals or maybe even the Supreme Court. After all, there was now a Latina seat in the form of Sotomayor on the Court. But such judicial advancements were hindered from a judge being identified as an advocate for either side in the American political divide—remember Judge Robert Bork. Regardless of how Salas ruled, one side was going to oppose her moving to a higher court. The solution was simply to delay until the Texas case led the way. Then just follow the law that it set.

[Update ]

Sympathy for the Devils

The Stones left out one category of people synonymous with the devil— doctors, not all, just most. Twelve alleged followers of the Hippocratic Oath sent me on a nine months cruise of horror crossing the river Styx. Things improved, however, once the boat reached the other side.

For a handful of years, I was having difficulty breathing at night while trying to sleep. My primary care physician (“PCP”), Mark Gorny at Mt. Sinai West, referred me to an Ear, Nose and Throat (“ENT”) specialist. The specialist diagnosed a deviated septum, probably from numerous hits to the nose while playing rugby decades earlier. The doctor was pushy to do an operation. He said, “You should get it done before you get any older, or I get older and my hands start shaking,” as he demonstrated shaking his hand with a grin. I declined. Gorny then prescribed a steroid nasal spray called fluticasone propionate and over-the-counter decongestants. Both provided enough relief for a decent night’s sleep, which is crucial for any attorney. Gorny also referred me to another Mt. Sinai Ear, Nose and Throat doctor. This one had a CT sinus scan done, but he couldn’t find anything in the scan that might be causing my difficulty breathing while trying to sleep, so he referred me for allergy tests. The allergy tests were negative—none except for my ex-wife. That’s when I started doing my own medical research. This wasn’t exactly rocket science, but three Mt. Sinai doctors couldn’t figure out the problem. It took me about three hours to accurately diagnose the condition—turbinate hypertrophy.

Turbinates are parts of the nasal passages. They warm, moisturize and filter the air before it reaches the lungs. But when they become enlarged (hypertrophy) as a result of too much blood flowing into them, they block the nasal passages causing difficulty breathing. In my situation, standing was not a problem because gravity prevented too much blood flowing into the turbinates. Lying down was a different story because blood then accumulated in the turbinates. The cause was simple—old age. As my former boxing trainer from Gleason’s and Wall Street Boxing said, “Once you hit 70, nothing works anymore.”

Armed with my diagnosis, Gorny referred me to another Ear, Nose and Throat doctor who confirmed the problem and operated to reduce the size of the turbinates in October 2016. The operation eliminated any difficulty breathing while sleeping or just lying down, so it was a success, for a while. Clinical studies showed that my respite might last a couple of years or only months—it was impossible to predict. Over time, downsized turbinates tend to start enlarging again and might even grow back. If the condition returned, nasal sprays and decongestants could be effective in relieving breathing difficulties, but ultimately another operation would be needed.

Around May 2017, some difficulty in breathing returned at night while trying to sleep. So in June, I visited Gorny. It often takes weeks to see Gorny unless it’s an emergency. Gorny told me to resume using the fluticasone spray. Saw Gorny three more times over 2017 and into 2018, in part, concerning the difficulty breathing that fluctuated in intensity and frequency. He continued to advise using fluticasone and decongestants, which sometimes helped and sometimes didn’t.

By August 2018, the difficulty breathing had reached a point that for three hours or more a night, I could barely breathe at all through my nose and was unable to sleep during that time. I called for an appointment with Gorny, but the earliest available was October 10, 2018. I told the appointment's nurse, "That's nearly two months off! Doctor Gorny is usually able to fit me in when it's important and this is important." Sorry he said, "That's the earliest we have."

Sounded as though Gorny's office was turning into the VA.

At the October appointment with Gorny, he told me to continue using the fluticasone spray every day. As far as examining the anatomy of my breathing, he would leave that to my ENT whom I was visiting later that day. This was the ENT who had performed the turbinate surgery.

At the ENT's office, while examining my right nasal cavity, he said in surprise, "What's that brown mass?" Oh great, I thought. On further examination, he concluded, "It's a polyp growing in your nasal cavity that's blocking your breathing. It wasn't there when I did the turbinate operation." My thought was "polyp" is a nice word for tumor. I knew then I was dead, sooner than planned. He sent me for a CT sinus scan and did a biopsy. Cancer, but not just any form of cancer, the most virulent one—melanoma. Melanoma usually attacks the skin because of ultra violet rays from the sun. My melanoma, however, never saw the sun. It was known as mucosal because it grew in the mucous membranes inside the body. It was rare, usually attacked older persons like me, an additional benefit of the "Golden Years," and its cause was unknown.

Mother Nature, as females usually do, tricked me. After the turbinate surgery restored my breathing, she apparently started a melanoma tumor growing in my nasal cavity that mimicked the same symptoms as turbinate hypertrophy. Naturally, like any fool, I assumed that the old problem was back and dealt with it the way Gorny suggested.

My ENT referred me to a couple of oncology surgeons who also took my medical insurance—AARP Medicare Complete Mosaic by UnitedHealthcare (more on that later). I also contacted Gorny's office requesting a referral to a specialist in mucosal melanoma, but never heard back from him. All of this was a nice stressful addition since it occurred in the middle of preparing for oral argument in the draft case before Salas. But what really annoyed me was the time consumed to deal with this doom. I had things to do to balance the accounts, but time was now rapidly running out.

I saw the two oncology surgeon's recommended by my ENT, but like an idiot, I didn't go with the one my instinct told me to simply because he wasn't a Mt. Sinai doctor. That alone should have made me choose him. I stupidly thought it would be more convenient to stick with Mt. Sinai doctors since all my doctors were with Mt. Sinai. In addition, because a couple of them were really good, the odds were that the oncologists would also be good. Boy was that a mistake.

On November 6, 2018, the Mt. Sinai oncology surgeon, Alfred Illoreta, advised a treatment plan where he would do a full operation to try and take out all the cancer providing it had not spread to other parts of my body. If it had spread, then a more limited operation to temporarily restore breathing to allow me to sleep so as to maintain my "quality of life" for a period of time. In every meeting with every doctor or nurse, I told them, "I'm not looking for survivability but functionality so that I can get done what I have to do. Longevity has its place, but not for me at this point in life. A year maybe two will do just fine, providing I can still function as a lawyer, do wind-sprints and attend my boxing class." Boxing had become a gift from the gods I didn't want to give up. It also had a hot young platinum blonde working and working out at the place.

Illoreta's treatment plan also included radiation therapy after the operation. His plan made sense, so we agreed to an MRI of the sinus area, which would specify the location of the tumor for an operation, and a full-body PET scan, which would look for cancer in other parts of my body. Iloreta's office scheduled the tests with the earliest possible operation for November 15th or at the latest December 6th. Iloreta stressed the importance of having an operation sooner rather than later because melanoma was an aggressive form of cancer that often spread quickly. Because of my age, Iloreta needed a pre-screening physical exam by a doctor to determine the odds of my body reacting negatively to the surgery. Gorny did the pre-screening on November 7th and concluded my body healthy enough for the operation. The MRI and PET scans were completed on November 8th.

Iloreta also referred me to a medical oncologist, Dr. Philip Friedlander, and a radiation oncologist, Dr. Sonam Sharma. When a patient has a cancer tumor, hospitals often require these three kinds of specialists to agree on treatment.

Dr. Friedlander was apparently a world renowned big-shot to whom other doctors at Mt. Sinai deferred. Friedlander's Mt. Sinai biography states his clinical interests include the development of targeted therapies and immunotherapies for patients with melanoma. As a member of the Division of Hematology/Medical Oncology and as the Director of the Melanoma Medical Oncology Program at Mt. Sinai, he handles patients with cutaneous malignancies and works to develop collaborative translational and basic science projects and treatments for patients with cutaneous malignancies.

Entering Friedlander's office on November 12th, there was no indication it was a bait and switch operation.

"Bait 'n' switch" is when a merchant represents he has one item or service for sale, but when you show up, that item or service magically disappears and is replaced by one you don't want or costs too much. Friedlander made his money and furthered his medical career by treating patients with melanoma using immunotherapy. It's the modern-day horror of chemotherapy all over again. Chemotherapy targets and tries to kill oncogenes, which are mutated normal genes that cause cells to multiply rapidly and haphazardly—cancer.

Immunotherapy, however, targets a person's immune system by putting it in high gear so it will attack and destroy the cancer cells. The problem is that the immune system on "speed" may also go after the lungs, heart, liver, eyes and so on with a litany of horrors. Immunotherapy had a success rate of 30% to 50% for melanoma, but statistics for its side effects were nowhere to be found, at least by me. The drug companies clearly kept such statistics on side-effects, but probably locked them away in their vaults. Not unlike the cigarette companies of old.

Another problem was that as with chemotherapy, immunotherapy is just a hit and miss approach. The drug companies find or invent expensive drugs but can't tell whether they will work unless the doctors sucker some patients into being guinea pigs. If the drug doesn't work—meaning the patient dies or suffers to the end—then they move on to another drug and another patient. As of this writing, the drug companies had around 600 different immunotherapy poisons to test.

The chemicals of choice for Friedlander's snake-oil remedy were Opdivo and Yervoy manufactured by Bristol-Myers Squibb for metastatic melanoma. A month's treatment would gross Bristol-Myers $45,000 to $75,000 a month. Friedlander made laudatory statements to the press about these alleged wonder-drugs, conducted clinical trials and published articles while his patients died miserably. In turn, Friedlander benefited financially—he owned stock in Bristol-Myers and other major drug companies pushing immunotherapy. Friedlander even worked as an advisor for Merck's U.S. subsidiary. Undoubtedly, he also received hefty speaker fees in the tradition of Bill Clinton to tout their effectiveness and sucker patients into taking these poisons. The drug companies most likely also provided business trips complete with hotel, bar and prostitution tabs fully paid.

At first, Friedlander outwardly agreed with my surgeon's plan to do a full operation providing the cancer had not spread, and, if it had, a limited operation to restore breathing followed by radiation. Friedlander also added immunotherapy after the radiation if the cancer had spread. Friedlander reviewed the PET scan and said it showed "lesions" in my sternum and lower back that may, repeat may, indicate cancer. A "lesion" can be almost any abnormal change involving any tissue or organ due to disease or injury.

I responded, "Those lesions are most likely old or even recent sports injuries. I've cracked ribs a few times playing rugby, took more than a few hits to the sternum from martial arts and boxing. As for the lower back, one rugby game pushed the L2 vertebrae you're talking about out of alignment. Currently, I'm being treated for it at Mt. Sinai's Spinal Center, which gives me steroid injections to mitigate the pain. Before I went there, I had to use crutches when I got up in the morning to get to the bathroom. Once the blood started flowing, I could make it to the law library or court."

Friedlander replied, "It is unlikely that the melanoma has spread that far from the nasal cavity, but let's be sure with two focused MRIs, one on the sternum and one on the lower back." He scheduled the two additional MRIs for November 15th, which meant the earliest possible operation by Iloreta went out the window. That didn't seem to be a problem at the time, since the later date of December 6th was still set for the operation, and the pre-screening done by Gorny was still good because December 6th was within 30 days of the pre-screening. Pre-screening for an operation has a shelf-life of only 30 days. Additionally, the oral argument before Salas was set for December 4th, so a December 6th operation fit Iloreta's and my schedules.

The following day at my appointment with Sharma, the radiation oncologist, she repeated Illoreta's advice that an operation soon was crucial and that December 6th should be soon enough. Sharma was one hot young babe who didn't need radiation to heat up a guy. She said that radiation treatment after the operation would last about three weeks and gave me a choice of having it done near where I lived by a different oncologist or by her uptown. I chose uptown. She clearly believed that either a full-blown or limited surgery would occur by December 6th. She listed the side effects of radiation, and, as with other doctors, I emphasized that my interest was not to maximize my existence but maintain my functionality for one, maybe two years, since I had things to do.

The second appointment with Friedlander was on November 19th. Friedlander said both the sternum and lower back MRIs also showed lesions as did the PET scan but a conclusion could not be made that they were cancerous. Once again, I told him they were probably old or even recent sports injuries and about the treatment provided by the Spinal Center to my lower back. To which Friedlander sharply responded, "I want you to stay away from steroids." Oh yeah, as my lawyer state of mind took hold. Was this doctor telling me to go back to using crutches when I awoke in the morning to get to the bathroom?

Friedlander then advised doing a biopsy of the sternum and lower back to confirm whether the lesions were cancerous. If they were, he said "full-body" immunotherapy would be needed without any surgery or radiation. That wasn't part of the original treatment plan. Friedlander was unilaterally canceling the operation and radiation, keeping just the treatment in which he specialized.

Friedlander continued, "Even if the biopsies are negative for cancer, full-body treatment is still necessary. The biopsies that are done use a needle and take only a small section of each area, so they might miss the cancer.” For emphasis, he made a downward motion with his right hand holding an imaginary needle. So heads he wins and tails he wins. That made no sense.

When doing biopsies, a doctor takes samples from different areas to decrease the chance of missing any cancer. Also, earlier he said the lesions on the sternum were the size of a finger nail. When I was a kid, I could hit that at 20 paces with my .22 rifle. Further, why do biopsies at all if the results didn’t matter. Something stunk here, but I agreed to a brain MRI for the following day. As for the biopsies and immunotherapy, I tentatively agreed to them until I had time to analyze Friedlander’s actions and figure out his game.

At home I researched the side effects of these two drugs, Opdivo and Yervoy, used in combination and called my buddy Blackie. My research and Blackie’s stories of his friends who went through such therapy made clear that after spending over 50 years keeping my body in shape, I was not about to allow some doctor to pump poisons into it. My primary objective was not survival but to stay functional long enough to at least partially finish what I decided to do on Candlemas Eve 2001. As a former weight-lifting champion in Florida once said, “Cancer knocks you down, but chemo [now immuno] finishes you off.” I wasn’t going that route. It was my car and I was the one holding the keys.

At about 5:45 pm November 20th, a couple of hours after the brain MRI, Friedlander calls to say that it showed a mild stroke in the occipital lobe (extreme back of the head). He had compared this MRI with the November 8th MRI of the face and neck ordered by Illoreta and saw the difference. The November 8th MRI did not show a problem in the occipital lobe but the new MRI did. He added that the new MRI did not show any melanoma but the stroke was dangerous. Friedlander asserted he had shown the MRI to a female neurologist who feared that this stroke might be the beginnings of a major problem—a “cascade” of strokes. According to Friedlander, she had advised that I immediately go to Mt. Sinai's emergency room and see its Stroke Intervention Team. Friedlander went over a list of symptoms, asking me whether I had experienced any—to which I replied no for all of them. The urgency in his voice started me thinking that Friedlander has been running a con all along. He wraps his voice in the emotion of urgency to push you into doing what he wants—unlike any other doctor I had dealt with but typical of girlfriends.

“If I had a stroke it's because of those unnecessarily, inconclusive tests you put me through,” I angrily replied. Apparently the intentional infliction of emotional distress was one driver of his con to manipulate patients into submitting to immunotherapy, and his lying the other driver to manipulate Iloreta and Sharma into doing what he wanted.

At the ER, the neurologists' team extensively questioned me and did physical ability, strength and sensitivity touching tests. One of the neurologist's first name was Helen, Asian, young and pretty—she could touch me anywhere she wanted. ER did blood work, took an EKG and did a head CT scan. The neurologists wanted me to undergo an echocardiogram, but to do that, I would have to spend the night in the ER. Four hours in that zoo was enough. I chose to walk out. Before reaching the door, however, one of the neurologists did her best to scare the bejesus out of me by listing all the horrors that might occur at home. It was then that I realized some doctors rely on two tactics to manipulate their patients into serving the doctors' interests rather than the patients'—false hopes and fear.

After escaping the ER Cabinet of Dr. Caligari, I was sure Friedlander was running a scam, whom I now referred to as Dr. Frankenstein Friedlander. He had initially agreed with the plan of doing a full operation to remove the tumor or a limited one to restore breathing followed by radiation treatment—the bait. All the while, he intended to drag out the search for more cancer, which meant delay that increased the emotional stress so as to pressure me into becoming one of his experiments with immunotherapy. That was the switch. As Blackie said, “He’s trying to use you as a guinea pig.”

Friedlander was not pursuing my interests but his interests. My cancer was a rare form, so there weren’t that many human guinea pigs around on which to experiment. The immunotherapy would make him money, provide another test case for an academic journal article, use me to develop science projects and bogus treatments that furthered his career, and, most importantly, curry favor with Bristol-Myers to reward him for suckering another patient into taking its costly drugs. Since my functionality was on the line—I ran. Canceled the biopsies, the immuno and went looking elsewhere for treatment.

My search took me to an old buddy, an oncology doctor. We used to chase girls at NYC nightclubs. He said the traditional treatment for this type of cancer was to do surgery first then radiation and maybe immunotherapy. Even if the cancer had spread, an operation on the tumor often lessens the ongoing spread of the disease. He suggested Memorial Sloan Kettering, New York University’s Perimutter Cancer Center and Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. Blackie came to the same conclusions after doing research on the treatment and best hospitals.

Gorny also suggested Sloan or NYU and questioned whether the November 8th face MRI actually showed the same part of the brain as the November 20th MRI. A neurologist subsequently confirmed that the November 8th scan could not be compared to the November 20th one. The reason was that the scans were like cameras that used different f-stops depending of what area they were trying to record. The miniscule stroke was in the back of the brain while the November 8th MRI focused on the face and neck. So Friedlander lied about the stroke occurring after the November 8th MRI. He knew that a stroke subsequent to my pre-screening on November 7th would prevent an operation on December 6th, and used that lie to convince Iloreta and Sharma to defer treatment to him. At the very least, it would cause more delay—read emotional distress—because pre-screening would have to be done again. Had the operation occurred on December 6th, Friedlander would have lost a pristine untouched subject on which to experiment.

Sharma and Iloreta essentially parroted Friedlander's position. Sharma advised doing biopsies on the sternum and lower back but cautioned that biopsies only access a tiny area via the biopsy needle. So if the results came back negative, there was still the possibility of cancer being in those areas. Did Friedlander write this script for her? She suggested that after doing the biopsies to then discuss future treatment. Of course, that would occur after December 6th, the last possible day for an operation due to the pre-screening time limit. This young lady could talk water out of the desert.

Later that day, Friedlander's office contacted me by telephone. Sharma had obviously told Friedlander about my telephone call. He was now trying to see whether I was dumb enough to follow her suggestion, which would increase the stress of delay and give him another shot of making good on his con. The young lady from Friedlander's office wanted to know what I was going to do about treatment. It's always a girl that these doctors use as their mouth piece—guys always think these girls care. Must be a mother thing, but given my mother, it no longer worked on me. My response was that I wanted another opinion. She said, "Our invitation is always open." Right, to be a poisoned guinea pig serving Friedlander's interests and Bristol-Myers' profits.

Iloreta had a somewhat different interpretation from Sharma on the tests. He said that the PET scan showed a chance the cancer had spread. He also looked at the MRIs of the lower back and sternum that showed indications of lesions but saw nothing conclusive that the melanoma had spread. He suggested doing a biopsy and if negative then do a second biopsy. With two biopsies both negative, he was willing to do an operation attacking just the nasal cavity. But if either was positive, there would be no operation even to restore breathing as we had originally agreed. Friedlander had gotten to him.

Even with both biopsies negative, any operation had to be approved by the Mt. Sinai Tumor Board. Friedlander appeared to have sufficient political pull to veto any operation backed-up by his lie about a post-November 8th stroke, which indicated an increased risk of any operation. My time was running out. I didn't like those odds, so Sloan became my next place to request help.

At Sloan, a pleasant young lady answered the "New Patients" number. Gorny had never gotten back to me with a specific doctor's name. The lady sounded competent, which was a bit of a surprise, since generally only around 25% of females are competent and 75% of males. Guess many girls are distracted doing their nails. She asked a number of questions and I gave her my insurance information. She said they would need the written reports of all the tests Mt. Sinai had performed—two Cat scans, one PET scan and four MRIs. That's where another of Friedlander's tricks on imprisoning his patients occurred. This guy was really turning into my number one enemy.

Mt. Sinai has its own intranet system that allows patients to view the written test results and a separate system that allows doctors to view both the written and imaging results. Frankenstein Friedlander delayed in putting on the patient system the test results for three MRIs that he had ordered: sternum, back and brain. The doctor's system had them but to access that, I needed to be in a Mt. Sinai doctor's office. So why the delay? Friedlander knew that any other hospital or cancer center would first want all the written reports of the tests before referring me to any of its physicians. Any delay in obtaining the reports would increase the stress of my condition worsening, which it most definitely would and did given melanoma's virulent nature. Friedlander was still playing a delay game (were he and Judge Salas in cahoots). Friedlander clearly knew my stress would escalate knowing that the longer without treatment decreased the chances of any possible cure or temporary cure and would continue condemning me to a few hours of sleep a night due to the breathing blockage. He was still hoping such would drive me to the desperation of immunotherapy.

Since Friedlander's written test reports were on the doctor's system, I made a long put-off appointment with my orthopedist. At his office, his assistant printed out the missing reports. Armed with all the reports, I dropped them off at Sloan's office. At first the Sloan lady wanted me to fax them because Sloan did not have an office. That seemed strange. It surely was not a fly-by-night operation. She relented, however, and gave me an address on First Avenue where to drop them off. But she warned that there was no sign to indicate Sloan had a presence there and instructed me to push the doorbell for the seventh floor, someone would buzz me in. I was to go to the eighth floor desk of a particular female who would put me in a room and get the Sloan lady to whom I would give the documents in that room. Must be a CIA operation.

That done, Sloan then needed the imaginings from the tests. Friedlander had no control over that, so it only took a day to obtain the CDs. Sloan, now having all the test results, a sincerely nice and competent nurse made appointments for me with two Sloan doctors, a surgeon and a medical oncologist.

At a little after 4 pm on the day before the appointments, this nasty sounding young lady from Sloan's Finance Department calls.

“We don’t accept your insurance. If you want to go ahead with tomorrow’s appointments it will cost you $1,000 for each.”

“What are you talking about? I already went through the insurance approval.”

“Who gave you the approval?” I told her the lady at the New Patients number.

“Hold on, I’ll try to call her.”

(Holding on)

“She’s not in today.”

Sounded convenient to which I responded, “So you waited until late afternoon on the day before the appointments to call and tell me this. Why didn’t you call sooner?”

No answer, just more of $1,000 per appointment. Was this a shake down?

“I’m dying of cancer and you pull this stunt. Why don’t you just send me a six shooter to blow my brains out?”

Her tone changed, and she actually tried to help. She explained that switching my insurance wouldn’t work because the enrollment period had closed five days earlier—December 7th. Was there suppose to be irony in that? Friedlander’s delaying con kept coming back to haunt me. The same insurance problem surfaced at NYU—AARP Medicare Complete, which wasn’t as complete as the name implies, was not accepted there either. I always knew there was a reason for not liking AARP besides its socialist propaganda.

The Sloan finance lady did help by getting out-of-network authorizations from my AARP Medicare insurance. But all that took time—more delay, and the authorizations came through too late to make appointments in 2018, thanks to Christmas. I knew there was a reason for not liking that holiday.

The AARP authorizations only covered one-time appointments. For ongoing coverage at Sloan, NYU or elsewhere a different insurance plan was needed. This threw me into the Medicare insurance morass. I'm a relatively bright guy with two graduate degrees with honors, but figuring out which insurance might still be available and which doctors it covered approximated the denseness of Leibniz's modal metaphysics. How could those Federal and State bureaucratic idiots make something so complicated?

Since it was too late to change plans, another option was needed, but time kept ticking away as the most virulent form of cancer continued to march toward my brain. Made me feel like an infected earthling in the movie Alien.

Blackie and Al helped steer my doomed existence to the only insurance possibility. Cancel my current insurance, which would throw me back into traditional Medicare A & B and buy a Medicare Supplement plan to pick up the remaining 20% of Part B along with the Part A deductible. The problem was that none of this coverage would take effect until January 1, 2019, and I would lose my prescription plan, but there was no choice.

Friedlander's intentional manipulations at imprisoning his human guinea pigs kept on ticking. Whenever a doctor sees a patient he writes up a "consultation report." It summarizes the patient's condition and treatment plan. My oncology buddy told me to request that the consultation notes from all three Mt. Sinai doctors be faxed to him. The surgeon and radiotherapist did so the next day because that is what N.Y. Public Health Law § 17 requires. As for Friedlander, he just ignored it.

Another of his tricks was that he and his staff never left any voicemail messages. Clearly out of fear that someone would use those party opponent statements against him in court to prove his pathological malfeasance and lying.

By now, any inkling of hope of a cure or temporary cure went out the window. Friedlander had boxed me into a corner from which there was no escape—do what he wanted or die sooner rather than later because of the delay he intentionally caused. Just before Christmas, I chose to die sooner—seemed a fitting present for that time of year.

Friedlander, cancer's ally and the drug companies' shill, had caused a delay in treatment for at least two months. Time was running out, but I started researching possible lawsuits such as medical malpractice, negligent misrepresentation, fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress. After talking with a couple of lawyers who did malpractice work, they declined to take the case. That left me with bringing my own. The problem was I wouldn't be around long enough. Such a case would take a few years just in the trial court, and, of course, Dr. Frankenstein's lawyer would delay, delay and delay until I dropped dead. So instead, I filed a complaint against Dr. Frankenstein with the Office of Professional Medical Conduct at the N.Y. State Department of Health and sent a copy to Mt. Sinai's CEO. Mt. Sinai did nothing, other than send me a PR letter from its "Director of Service Excellence." The Department of Health, however, started an investigation.

So what does this most boring personal problem have to do with the draft case? After going through numerous doctor appointments, medical tests pumping radioactivity and other drugs into me while being inundated with radiation, and the continuing lack of sleep, it became clear that my traditional law practice was over. The problem as Blackie pointed out, is that you think about the illness all the time, trying to figure out your next move, which shouldn't include moving boulders. For me, my mind had always been preoccupied with my cases, now they were just an afterthought. Not wanting to leave my co-ed client in the draft case twisting in the wind, I needed to find an attorney to replace me on my demise. Not the ending I had assumed when the case started, but bad luck condemned it to the black hole of Salas's court—where cases go to die.

On the medical side, since Mt. Sinai was the place where people go to suffer unto death, I started looking for any surgeon not connected with Mt. Sinai who would remove at least some of the tumor allowing me a near normal sleep that would enable me to partially finish what began so long ago.

Looking for a little escape from these horrors, my oncology buddy and I planned to hit a nightclub in Queens on New Year's Eve 2018. That New Year's Eve turned out different from all the others over all the years. The tumor decided to start bleeding, sending blood flowing out my right nostril. Dripping blood like a vampire who had just supped wouldn't exactly go over well with the girls, so I canceled.

In 2019, my insurance apparently changed. Apparently because no one at UnitedHealthcare or Medicare were able to give consistent answers. The answers always changed with the person. Al said he once went to a seminar addressed by the head of Medicare for New York who admitted that not even he knew all the ins and outs of the program.

My first appointment in January 2019 was with the surgeon that Sloan had assigned me. He wasn't the one I requested, but Sloan's administration, similar to Obamacare, assigns you a doctor. Take it or leave it. The surgeon was also a medical oncologist like Friedlander and had reviewed the records provided to Sloan.

After the introductions, I said, "Given my situation and the uncertainty of how much time I have left, it's necessary for me to arrange my cases so that they can be handed-off to other attorneys. To do this, I need to be functional—meaning capable of acting as a lawyer until the cases are transferred. The tumor in the right nasal cavity is blocking any breathing through it.

That inability to breathe allows me only 3 to 4 hours of sleep a night because of my alternative breathing pattern. Such sleep deprivation is negatively impacting my functioning as a lawyer, putting my affairs in order, and maintaining a semblance of quality of life, such as physical activity. What I need first off is a palliative operation to restore at least temporarily my breathing.” (My oncology pal told me to use that word. In the law, we use mitigate.)

The Sloan surgeon said, “I understand your objective, but we as physicians also have an objective not to do something that does not cure the disease.”

To which I thought, “It’s my life not yours, so my objective takes precedence.” This guy was looking like another Friedlander who just wanted a lab rat.

The surgeon continued, “Immunotherapy will treat the whole body for any other cancer that has spread. It can shrink the tumor and offers the best chance of extending a patient’s life.” This was his “false promise” tactic that duplicitously left out “quality of life.”

I countered, “There’s no reliable statistics on immunotherapy shrinking a tumor. It may, it may not, and no studies show the time it might take even if it does actually shrink a tumor. All the evidence is anecdotal.”

This surgeon/medical oncologist then resorted to the other manipulation that some cancer doctors use to make a patient do what serves their interests as opposed to the patient’s—fear.

“An operation could show that there is leakage from the brain, which will make it a major operation with significant risks—possible loss of sight, impairment of the brain or injury to nerves.”

“I’ll take the risk,” thinking he didn’t go into the risks of immunotherapy because that was what he wanted to do.

I then asked two questions: “If I don’t have medical treatment, how long will I live?” His face registered shock. Apparently, he’s accustomed to patients so desperate to live that they accept his statements as gospel.

“I have no way of knowing.”

My second question brought home the point that I was about to walk out. “How will I know I am near the end by not having any medical treatment?” He mentioned a few consequences of which I already knew.

Having undercut his smug arrogance by making him realize I was not about to blindly follow his dictates, I offered him a deal.

“Do the palliative operation to restore my quality of life, at least temporarily, and I will consent to any experimental procedure you want.” Of course I had my fingers crossed behind my back. I might or might not go with the immunotherapy. It depended on whether I had accomplished the things I wanted to do before embarking for Dante’s Eighth circle. Realizing he would lose this human guinea pig with a rare form of cancer, he steps out to call Sloan’s medical oncologist to whom I had also been assigned. After the call, he agreed and arranged for me to see that medical oncologist right away. Apparently at Sloan as at Mt. Sinai, the medical oncologist is the boss.

The medical oncologist was considerate and agreed to the palliative operation. She also knew Friedlander and said my melanoma was at stage four. None of the other doctors mentioned that, but my doom was clear to me from the biopsy in October and my ENT showing me the CT scan back then.

The next day brought me to NYU’s cancer center to meet with a very considerate nurse and doctor. The manipulation, however, consisted of anecdotal examples of miraculous recoveries from immunotherapy alone. “It reduced or eliminated patients’ tumors while destroying cancer in other parts of their bodies.” NYU’s treatment plan for me was once again playing craps with immunotherapy to eliminate the tumor and destroy the cancer allegedly in other parts of my body.

So far, three medical oncologists from three different reputable hospitals all pushed the same Bristol-Myers drugs. Could all three be on that company’s payroll, either directly or indirectly? Dr. Frankenstein Friedlander was—he owned stock in Bristol-Myers and other major drug companies pushing immunotherapy drugs. Or was it just the trendy new miracle cure touted by a profession dependent on drug company grants.

Blackie went through a similar situation for a life-threatening condition. The doctors said they had a new miracle treatment using radiation. All it did was put him through years of misery. The medical profession subsequently trashed the procedure, and it’s no longer used. How much misery did that medical stupidity or bribery cause?

I had always thought that doctors were supposed to relieve suffering, not prolong it to serve their monetary and research interests. Yet three reputable medical institutions, Mt. Sinai, Sloan Kettering and NYU Langone didn’t give a damn about what suffering I was going through. All they cared about was conning another human being into being a lab-rat for the latest trendy unproven cancer treatment. The cancer profession was reminding me of used car salesmen.

There was one more oncology surgeon to try. The one my instinct told me to go with at the beginning but didn’t. He was sharp, understood my position and agreed that a patient’s quality of life was crucial. His nurse was competent, nice and an attractive blonde—too bad I wasn’t younger. They functioned the way I remembered doctors and nurses used to—focusing on the patient’s problems rather than viewing a patient as just another brick in the wall of their careers and bank accounts. So I went with their treatment plan and canceled the Sloan operation. Why have a surgeon operate on me who didn't want to do the operation. Also politely told NYU thanks but no thanks.

Before the operation, the surgeon referred me to a medical oncologist at Columbia Presbyterian. Just the title "medical oncologist" gave me trepidation after my prior experiences with these specialists, so I was once again ready to walk. This oncologist at least appeared to be the opposite of the other three. Friedlander was a con artist, and both Sloan and NYU wanted to do immunotherapy first and have me wait to see whether it actually shrunk the tumor regardless of the impact the side effects would have on my life. The Columbia doctor understood the need for me to get enough sleep to put my cases in shape for another attorney and maintain a semblance of whatever quality of life remained. He even thought the draft case was interesting. He also said there were a number of different drugs used in immunotherapy, not just Bristol-Myers' Opdivo and Yervoy, which depended on the patient's condition, but we would talk about that after the operation.

The surgeon scheduled the operation. Then, just days before surgery, pre-screening demanded a doctor's note (sounded like grammar school) that even with the mild stroke, my body was in good enough shape to undergo the operation. Gorny, my PCP, was the logical choice. He had been my doctor for 19 years, treated numerous injuries from old boys' rugby games, martial arts, hip-hop and a few fist fights. He clearly knew my physical condition better than anyone. In addition, he earlier told me that the stroke would not impact an operation on the tumor. So what does this Mt. Sinai doctor do? He refuses to provide clearance for the operation the day before surgery—unbelievable. As a result the operation is put off—more delay.

What's with these Mt. Sinai doctors? Freudian slips began sneaking into my conversations with medical personnel substituting Mount St. Helens for Mount Sinai. The actions of that con artist Friedlander just kept-on plaguing me.

Since that miniscule stroke may have been caused by a blood clot from the heart or an artery leading to the brain, the surgeon's nurse, not one to waste time, arranged an appointment with a cardiologist for the next day, the day the surgery would have occurred but for Gorny. The cardiologist was sharp and knew her stuff.

I explained Friedlander's delay of inconclusive tests that prevented an operation.

"He was basically just trying to use me as a . . . ," and simultaneously we both said "guinea pig." She knew the ways of doctors like Friedlander.

She also highly recommended my current surgeon as someone who had operated successfully on a couple of her relatives.

Armed with my echo cardiogram and other information, she used a program to estimate the chances that my physical shape couldn't handle the operation. It was 0.9% that there would be a problem. Gorny, who also had access to my echo cardiogram since he ordered it, should invest in such a program.

The January 22, 2019, operation was on again but almost off again due to a refugee from the caravan who could not speak English or understand how things work in America. She refused to accept my NYS Court ID as proof that my last name was "Den Hollander" and not "Hollander" as the DMV had recorded. Illegals usually have four or five words in their names; she should have understood. But they refuse to because they hate gringos for building a superior country and give us a hard time whenever they can. Her immediate boss, however, was an American steeped in our ways and concluded that if they changed my name in their records to match my DMV license, then insurance would not pay. Ah, the power of the buck.

Everybody else was very competent and considerate, and the operation went off without a hitch. Afterwards, my surgeon said he couldn't understand why no one else would operate and added that he couldn't imagine the suffering I had gone through. Since my first appointment with Dr. Frankenstein Friedlander two months earlier, the tumor had grown 270%. Melanoma cancer cells still remained because a radical operation in my head would have turned me into what my high school Spanish teacher called me—a vegetable. Radiation would be needed to deal with the remaining melanoma cells. The question of course is could it all have been removed back when Iloreta first wanted to operate, November 15, 2018?

The Columbia medical oncologist recommended a radiation doctor, Horia Vulpe, with whom he works. On my first visit, Vulpe explained the procedure and the initial preparation for it. He was young, Romanian, and seemed to be a decent guy interested in helping his patients. He added that the radiation shouldn't start until a month after the operation. Meanwhile, he had to present my case to Columbia University's Tumor Board. The board meets monthly at the Columbia University Medical Center. It is made up of skull base tumor experts that determine the "optimal treatment" for individual patients. According to Columbia, "the tumor board is able to make patient-centered decisions that are less biased by a particular provider's personal experience or specialty." Terrific, now a committee was making decisions about my life.

On my second visit, a month after the operation and arranging my life for weeks of radiation, five days a week, and fully expecting to begin the medical preparation for it—everything changed. Vulpe was no longer gun-ho to get moving with the treatment, but said he wanted to do more testing to find out whether the melanoma had spread. Here we go again, I thought—déjà vu Dr. Frankenstein. Vulpe also seemed in a rush to get through my visit. Was something going on behind the scenes to manipulate me into doing immuno? Was Columbia just another sell-out cancer institution acting as a front for drug company experiments and patient exploitation that transferred insurance dollars into drug company pockets, and, of course, Columbia's pockets by way of a quid pro quo arrangement? Then again, maybe Vulpe and Friedlander were in cahoots. Vulpe knew about Friedlander because he had asked about my Mt. Sinai experience, which I told him, complete with my reference to Friedlander as Dr. Frankenstein. But a conspiracy between these two—that seemed highly unlikely.

The first test ordered by Vulpe was the proverbial PET scan. The MRIs were scheduled for two weeks later. The problem with the MRIs was that Vulpe's office scheduled them all for one session lasting three hours. At the MRI unit at Columbia Presbyterian, the technician said, "This is too much for one person at once. We're not going to do all these MRIs in one sitting. The body just can't take it." So they did an hour and a half for the face and neck MRIs and scheduled me for another session a week later. The face and neck MRIs were necessary for Vulpe to start radiation treatment while the next session would focus on whether the cancer had spread.

The following week, the MRI technician told me that only the back would be scanned.

"What about the sternum?" I asked.

She answered, "It's just going to be your back from below the neck to the bottom. There's no sternum or chest MRI ordered."

That was strange. Why didn't Vulpe also order an MRI of the sternum? Dr. Frankenstein had emphasized that Mt. Sinai's PET scan showed "nail size lesions in the sternum." Then again, given his pathological conning, maybe not so strange. Dr. Frankenstein had relied more on the fear tactic of cancer spreading to the sternum than my lower back because I had a great explanation for the lower back lesions not being cancer—rugby. Now a Columbia doctor had decided that a sternum MRI was not necessary for determining whether the melanoma had spread. Why?

MRI shows whether there is a mass of tissue in the body where one does not belong. It may or may not be cancer. PET scans on the other hand claim to indicate the presence of cancer but are notoriously inaccurate. They use a measurement called “standardized uptake value” or SUV to indicate whether an area might, I repeat might, be cancerous. They should really call it SVU. They inject you with a radioactive substance, usually sugar from the Alamogordo Desert. The PET measures how much radioactivity was absorbed in an area compared to the rest of the body. An SUV above 2.5 can indicate cancer. However, there are a lot of problems with this measurement, not the least of which are false-positives indicating cancer, but after the patient dies, an autopsy shows no cancer. Also, an SUV above 2.5 can result from infection, inflammation, autoimmune processes, sarcoidosis, benign tumors or injuries. In my case, the Mt. Sinai PET showed 4.7 for the sternum, 4.6 for the lower back and 11 for the nasal cavity, which everyone already knew was cancer. The Columbia PET was 4.0 for the sternum and 4.6 for the lower back and the nasal cavity was 6.6 absent the tumor.

No matter what a PET or MRI shows, the only way to confirm cancer is with a biopsy.

Vulpe said he wanted biopsies of the sternum and lower back—sound familiar. The scheduling office for Columbia called me about the upcoming biopsies.

“Your biopsies are scheduled for 8:30 am this coming Tuesday,” the young lady from the scheduling unit told me on the Friday morning, the weekend before the biopsies.

“How do you know I don’t have to be in court that day? Aren’t you supposed to work out your scheduling with the patient?”

“Well, it’s set for Tuesday, but before the biopsies you need to have blood tests done.”

“And where do I get the tests done before Tuesday?”

“You can do the tests here. Also you need an escort home after the biopsies because you’ll be given sedation.”

“Friday, before an operation for Tuesday morning, I’m supposed to find an escort. People I know work, they can’t just drop everything on a moment’s notice. What if I can’t come up with an escort—do I try the yellow pages?”

“Then we’ll have to cut back on the sedation and it will be more uncomfortable.”

“You mean it will be more painful.”

“Yes.” These medical people always use “uncomfortable” to mean pain.

“Let me get back to you if I can find an escort.”

Needless to say, I couldn’t find an escort on such short notice, but Al was willing to do it later in the same week of the scheduled biopsies. So I called the scheduling office ditz back but had a real hard time getting through. Someone picked up the phone a couple of times but didn’t say anything. I waited and waited, “Hello, hello.” Nothing. When I finally got a live but moronic person in scheduling on the phone, she immediately transferred me somewhere without even letting me explain the reason for my call. The person to whom I was transferred, who was naturally in the wrong department, transferred me back. Eventually I got through on the following Monday, but the incompetents in Columbia’s scheduling office arranged for the blood tests on Tuesday, so the biopsies were off.

After the blood tests, I never heard back from Columbia's scheduling office, so I called Vulpe's office—twice. No one who was alive ever answered that phone. So my messages went to voicemail asking when the biopsies would be and when Vulpe would start my radiation treatment. After all, the reason for seeing him was radiation treatment—not another Mt. Sinai run-around.

Called Vulpe's office a third time, but still no living person answered, so I left another useless voicemail. None of these delays made any sense. Radiation treatment should have started February 22nd, now it was the end of March, and every minute melanoma was moving toward my brain. So I went looking for another radiation oncologist by calling my surgeon's nurse navigator to complain about Vulpe's delays and asking for a recommendation for another radiation oncologist. My surgeon had previously been a power at Columbia before moving over to Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. A couple of days later, Vulpe called me to arrange for a CT scan needed as preparation to start the radiation treatment. Nothing like knowing influential people.

At my third visit with Vulpe for the CT scan, he provided a logical reason for determining whether the cancer had spread. If it had not spread, then he would try to kill all the melanoma left in my head; if it had, then the treatment would not be as aggressive, which made sense because in that case I was dead anyway. Whichever, I made clear to him that my functionality was primary—not longevity, and that I was not doing immuno.

“We'll deal with that later,” he said. “Right now, you need to reschedule the biopsies.”

I said, “After my experience with Columbia's scheduling office, I'm not doing it.”

“Alright, try the front desk or one of the nurses to schedule it.”

A nurse in the CT scan section decided to dare the gauntlet of idiots and the brain dead in scheduling to arrange for the biopsies. After much delay and her clear frustration over the telephone, she managed to set-up the biopsies.

Columbia's Interventional Radiology Division handled biopsies—a group of competent and considerate medical professionals.

The doctor said, “We’re just going to biopsy your sternum.”

“What about the lower back,” I said after lying face down on the table.

He replied, “If we don’t find what we’re looking for in the sternum, then we’ll try the lower back.” So I turned over.

To which I thought, and if there’s nothing in the lower back, what’s next, my knees, then my feet—where does it end? Conspiracy theories whirled in my head thanks to the experience with Dr. Frankenstein. Was all of this part of Columbia’s Tumor Board and Vulpe’s strategy of delay to stress me into relenting to immuno that would make money for Columbia and the drug companies? Had I escaped one bait & switch to fall into another in which the bait was radiation therapy, which likely would eliminate some or all of the cancer in my head, and the switch was again immuno? The tumor operation was January 22nd, so radiation should have started February 22nd. Vulpe’s additional testing and his less than efficient office had delayed the treatment, which was now set to start on April 1—were the fates mocking me? The prospect of more biopsies and the accompanying delays made me decide that if radiation didn’t start the first week in April, then I was walking. I’d try to find a radiation oncologist who would start treatment immediately, but if I couldn’t, then I’d do without.

That contingency plan didn’t happen. The biopsy found what Columbia and Vulpe wanted to find—melanoma in my sternum, or so it said. All the results of all the tests that Columbia conducted showed up almost immediately on the section of a medical intranet to which I had access—all except the biopsy. For the biopsy report and the accompanying slides, the old fashion way was required—telephone and U.S. Post. Sure enough, it stated “Metastatic Melanoma,” and later on in the report that I was a prime candidate—guinea pig—for immunotherapy using the same two chemicals Dr. Frankenstein, Sloan Kettering and NYU Langone had pushed—Bristol-Meyers’ Opdivo and Yervoy. That was never going to happen, which I made clear to Vulpe. But what were the odds that four different institutions would push the same two chemicals to treat my mucosal melanoma? Especially, when there were no reliable statistics or dedicated clinical trials on the effectiveness of those chemicals for mucosal melanoma. The reason there were none is that those two chemicals were used to treat skin melanoma—that’s not the melanoma I have, which is genetically different. The only logical conclusion is that each and every institution, except for the one where my surgeon was a boss, wanted to use me as a lab-rat to see if those two poisons worked on mucosal melanoma.

Now, if they had offered me 50% of what Bristol-Meyers would make by pumping those poisons into me, good chance I would have agreed. After all, my life was over. Why not use the money for hitting strip clubs, like the good old days in Russia. But no, they had to try conning me, and was delay the full-extent of Columbia’s con? Vulpe kept bringing up combining radiation with the immuno to be administered by the Columbia medical oncologist, but I kept telling him no way. After radiation, I would find my own way into oblivion.

Three weeks of radiation was not exactly pleasant, although the technicians, nurses and the front desk were great. I couldn’t see how they did it. Everyday, one doomed patient after another, but they kept a smile on their faces and a perkiness that lifted even my nihilistic attitude. I actually looked forward to seeing them, maybe because they laughed at my jokes. Amazing that going for radiation, which made the inside of my mouth feel like I had been chewing on a cactus, was something to anticipate. The world still produces, now and then, human beings.

Vulpe, on the other hand, was a different story. The worst part of radiation was Vulpe's failure to give me some instructions during it. As a result, seven days into the radiation, the right side of my tongue felt like it had been sliced and diced. I—not Vulpe—came up with the idea to mitigate further damage to my tongue, which had nothing to do with the cancer—keep it lying flat and off to the left out of the way of the radiation. Worse, there were medical techniques to protect the tongue from radiation, such as a mouth piece with a tongue depressor or medications used to coat the tongue. Vulpe didn't use any of them on me, didn't tell me about any of them, and didn't warn me about what could happen to my tongue. Why?

When I visited my surgeon after the radiation and showed him the injury to my tongue, he got angry. Asked me for Vulpe's telephone number, which I gave him. I didn't witness the call, but I'm sure he bawled out Vulpe. The location of the injury made no sense. The cancer was in the right nasal cavity—not the mouth or the tongue.

So, was Vulpe an East European incompetent? At first, I thought yes, but then I looked back on what transpired when the tongue pain started. Vulpe prescribed a topical mouthwash that was useless beyond 15 minutes of using it. He then prescribed a bottle of morphine, which made me sick, and replaced that with a bottle of oxycodone.

Oxycodone was no stranger. After the turbinate operation, I took it in pill form—one in the morning and one in the evening. It relieves pain alright, but the real danger is that it makes reality look great. When I awoke in the middle of the night craving another pill—something that never occurred during my druggie days in college—I threw the remaining bottle of 40 pills in the garbage. No way, I'd ever try that stuff again.

My conclusion is that Vulpe intended to slice and dice my tongue so that I'd end up on either morphine or oxycodone, taken every four hours, which would turn me into a malleable patient lacking in critical thinking or a desire for the truth about what he and Columbia were scheming. His con didn't work. But eight weeks of near constant pain from the tongue injury, which required eating only baby food, oatmeal, applesauce, yogurt and macaroni and cheese, made me curse this monster out of the show Supernatural everyday. Even talking was painful, which is what lawyers do a lot.

Vulpe now became Dr. Vulture, hope that species doesn't consider it an insult. Dr. Vulture was one smooth operator who would have sold a lot of used cars if he had chosen that profession. At our last meeting, most likely assuming I was stoned on oxycodone, he even tried to convince me to continue with radiation, but to the lower back, and to start immunotherapy.

"How do you know my lower back even has a cancerous tumor?" I asked.

"It's there," he said in a voice of over-confidence of the liar.

Now it was clear why he didn't have a lower back biopsy done. If a biopsy had been done and was negative, then there was no chance of getting me to agree to lower back radiation.

So without any reliable evidence of cancer in my back, Dr. Vulture then resorted to one of the two psychological methods so often used by oncologists—the fear tactic. In response to my questions, he actually estimated how much life I had left without more radiation and immunotherapy—six months. That was a surprise—not the six months, but that no other oncologist, other than my pal, would even make an estimate.

It was an obvious trick I had been expecting—low balling. But even if he was right, I didn't care, since it gave time to do that which I intended. Dr. Vulture, however, was trickier than that.

He emphasized that without the lower back radiation and immunotherapy, the cancer would likely paralyze me—making my legs useless. “The moment you feel any tingling in your legs, come see me immediately, so we can prevent any paralysis.”

This guy was as good as any girl I had known at manipulation. First he obtained the information on my life-style in the guise of preserving my “quality of life.” He knew that nearly everyday I had to travel on my legs to the law library or court. He knew that once a week I ran wind sprints on my legs and attended boxing class on my legs. He also knew I was being treated by a spinal institute for the old rugby injury that misaligned one of my lower vertebrae and hurt nearly everyday. One of the symptoms the spinal institute told me to watch out for was “tingling in my legs,” which Dr. Vulture knew. So he mixed that all up into a fear tactic meant to manipulate me—assuming I was stoned on the oxycodone he prescribed—into doing what made him and Columbia money: radiation and immunotherapy. None of the other nine oncologists I saw ever raised a paralysis issue. If the problem actually arises before my death, I’ll go to the spinal institute—not Dr. Vulture.

Vulture’s radiation had ended on a Friday and the following Monday the office of the Columbia medical oncologist who does immunotherapy called to make an appointment for me. Coincidence—I doubt it. More likely, these two hatched the con to get me on morphine or oxycodone so as to make me amenable to immunotherapy and more radiation.

Both Frankenstein and Vulture played with my life in order to make money and further their hospitals’ quid pro quo relationships with the drug companies. They didn’t give a damn about me.

This end of life experience taught me that a deadly conformity of belief has infected the cancer profession. Most doctors buy into the hype of immunotherapy as a cure. There is a systemic conspiracy among cancer institutions and the drug companies. Both make lots of money and gain fame pushing today's alleged magic bullet for cancer. It's always been the same old scam with most cancer doctors, institutions and medical companies. Create an illusion that medicine has finally discovered the cure for cancer, sell it to the public, and everybody involved makes a lot of money while the patients die miserably—often from the new-improved bogus treatments. In the past, there were radical mastectomies, anti-viral drugs, chemotherapy and now immunotherapy. If you want to find out the truth about any alleged cancer miracle, ask the technicians—not the doctors—who work at these institutions.

The neurology profession didn't appear to be much better—exploit the patients with multiple tests to meet the medical “test or perish” requirement (similar to academia's publish or perish rule).

To deal with the non-symptom, miniscule stroke, I visited a neurologist at NYU's stroke center before Dr. Vulture's “slice-n-dice” radiation started. The center had a good reputation and was just 20 blocks up First Avenue from my apartment. She was cute, always a plus, and Asian, so at the upper end of the bell curve. She showed me my brain MRI and pointed out the small area where a blood vessel had burst. Twenty years ago, the technology wouldn't even have found it because it was so small. Strokes happen when clots build up in a blood vessel that block the flow, so the vessel bursts.

She asked about any symptoms.

“No, no head aches outside of the usual for lawyers, no numbness, no black outs—I haven't drunk that much in years.” I answered.

“Are you physically active?”

“Once a week, I do wind-sprints, and once a week I take a boxing class. I don’t spare, just train the way boxers do—heavy bag, pads, double under bag, and exercises for an hour.” Looking back, I wish I had kept my mouth shut, but I thought she’d be impressed and needed to know.

“The first thing we need to do is determine the cause of this stroke. There are two possibilities: cancer, because it causes the blood to thicken, which increases the chance of a clot in the brain, and . . .”

That made sense, since the cardiologist had told me the same.

“. . . or you’re doing too much physical activity for someone your age.”

That made no sense, and my suspicion antenna went off.

“When people around your age exercise too much, their hearts may become arrhythmic. Some beats come too quickly causing an increase in pressure that causes a blood clot to break off and travel to the brain causing a stroke. In order to determine whether you have arrhythmia, we need to monitor your heart for a month.”

“I’m not stopping the wind-sprints and definitely not stopping boxing.”

“You can continue with your usual activities, but you’ll be wearing a patch on your chest that sends a signal to a monitor that records the rate of your heart beats.”

I went along with this tentatively, and she referred me to another neurologist who handles patch monitoring—talk about specialization.

The second neurologist provided the patch and a cell phone that picked up the signals from the patch on my chest and sent them to—where else—a computer. The second neurologist also added that the cause of the stroke might be a hole in my heart, and that I should undergo a special test for such. I almost laughed in his face. I’ve been playing sports since I was kid—never did anything like a hole in my heart come up. One of my girl friends had been born with one, but that's the closet I ever got. This neurologist was just another doctor pushing unnecessary tests to make more money or comply with the test or perish rule in the medical profession.

The following day, I put the patch on just above my heart. Next day, did my wind-sprints—guess who called? The monitoring company, which I ignored. Two days later the monitoring neurologist called.

“Sunday your heart rate went up well over 100, what was going on?”

“As I told you and the other NYU neurologist, I do wind-sprints. That's what wind-sprints do.”

“Did you ever have a stress test?”

“Sure years ago.”

“You should come in for a stress test.”

“I'll deal with that later.”

This guy was really pushing my patience. One of the purposes of wind-sprints and boxing is to keep your heart in shape. I do wind-sprints and because my heart rate goes up, he wants a stress test—no way. All this neurologist was doing was adding to my stress by implying something was wrong when it wasn't. Like Dr. Frankenstein, he hoped I'd relent just to relieve the stress he intentionally caused by doing whatever stupid thing he wanted because it would make him money and he'd look good to the hospital administrators. No way!

To prepare for the upcoming radiation treatment, Dr. Vulture needed a three dimensional map of my head to highlight the melanoma, which meant a specialized CT scan. That required taking the monitoring patch off. According to the NYU neurologists, it could be taken off and then put back on at any time. So off it went, did the CT prep scan and put it back on. Later that night the monitoring cell phone starts beeping. It was not receiving signals from the patch. I called the monitoring company, twice—do this, it didn't work, so now "we'll trouble shoot." Then I realized. Strokes are caused by stress, and this test involving a computer not doing what it was supposed to was causing plenty of stress. Not only was I fighting doctors using fear tactics to manipulate me into taking unnecessary, time consuming tests and unproven drugs, but I was also now fighting another computer. I had enough computers in my life to fight—I canceled the test, terminated the "test or perish" neurologist and kissed (unfortunately not literally) the Asian neurologist goodbye.

All this medical lunacy made me realize that most of the time when a patient visits a doctor, the doctor jumps for the insurance money by exploiting the patient. Through false hopes and fear tactics, the doctor manipulates the patient into numerous useless tests and visits along with suckering the patient into becoming the doctor's latest guinea-pig. The patient goes through hell, stupidly believing the doctor is trying to help him rather than con him.

No girl ever jerked me around as much as the medical profession at Mt. Sinai, Sloan, NYU and Columbia. Shakespeare obviously mistakenly wrote in Henry VI, "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers." He must have meant "doctors." Sure some lawyers will rob you, but plenty of doctors will torture, exploit and even kill you.

(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction

MPHS Class of 1965, Reunion or Unfinished Fates

Toward the end of my existence with just another stupid and futile thing to do, my high school class held, what was for me, its final goodbye reunion.

Back in 1965, we had a lot of potential and were looking forward to the future. The girls were young and hot. The guys got into fights. But now, half a century later, nearly everyone was decrepit, or near so, and the girls were unrecognizable, as though they had gone to plastic surgeons to disguise their looks. In talking with some of them, I kept thinking, “I remember your name, your voice, and how you looked, but this can’t be you.” The destruction of time was clear.

There were tragedies along the line—guys died before their time, especially in Vietnam. Girls and guys failed in their dreams, families grew and fell apart, and memories of youth haunted all with a surreal realism.

A girl in our class and I were enemies back then. She was using the power pretty young girls always possess to tame a young guy—my best friend, by turning him into a well-respected man through marriage and children. I was trying to convince him to hold onto his spirit of a wild man, knowing that we had a lot of adventurers ahead of us if he stayed free. But she won and the last time I saw him was when I acted as an usher at their wedding.

There was a deeper reason to keep those two from marrying. At the reunion, she told me of the disaster that resulted from their union—two dead children from two diseases, the inevitable divorce, and eventually my buddy’s death from cancer to a brain that coined the phrase “it’s all relative” and invented the means for scarring Bergen County with U.F.O. sightings. MPHS’s own Orson Welles. She had won initially, but in the end she lost. How different it would have been if I had won—for both of them.

Now she was driving me to the Ridgewood bus station after the reunion. Somehow a fitting end to an old unfinished battle. “You’ve had an interesting life,” she said. “Yes, it was somewhat interesting, but fundamentally irrelevant,” I replied.

She dropped me at the bus station around eleven at night. We said out goodbyes. There were a couple of other people waiting for the bus to the City, but it was as quiet as a graveyard on a warm summer's night. I'm standing where I've stood a hundred times before—looking across the lamp-lit street at the trees of Van Neste Park, wondering “What's the point?”

Epilogue

For What It's Worth

Enough of these meaningless distractions, looking back over my life, I understand how I ended up one of the leftovers of humanity with nothing to look forward to and nothing of value to remember. The dysfunctional emotional and stress response pattern my mother put into my head had always pushed me in the wrong direction, making impossible, or at least highly unlikely, the pursuit of my first-best destiny. Now, like most Americans, I am a nobody with no power.

No more chances now, if there ever really were any, for glory and fortune, but maybe a little old time justice as in all those 1950s television westerns I watched as a kid when the lone cowboy refused to give up without a fight. It's always a choice between courage and cowardice. A man can't win a fight by running away from it.

Life is the most interesting experience a man can come across, so it makes no sense to hide from it. Living is the ultimate adventure and death the prize that awaits us all. My approaching minor reckoning with that vein of evil running through America promises a new adventure, one that, despite the fears emanating from the internal parents, I don't want to miss. There has been a joy in fighting everybody who violates my rights, especially the Feminazis, but nothing in this life matters anymore. All the illusions and false hopes no longer hold sway. Death's hand is on my left shoulder as it walks beside me, and that's just fine. The only problem with a life lived too long under Feminazi rule is that a man ends up with so many enemies he can't even the score with all of them. But law school and the media taught me how to prioritize.

All I ever wanted of females from mother to wife was someone to trust, but all I got was duplicity, treachery, infidelity and ruthless self-interest. The feminine evil pounds every guy in an effort to subjugate them to female whims and sacrifice them to female desires. Girls cause more harm than they are capable of imagining because they don't care. To them, men just don't count. For broads it's always me, me, me. They can't see a world that doesn't center on them. They believe men exist solely as a tool to gratify their vanity of greed and lust for power. I showed weakness in not slapping the Commie Ho around or escaping from my sociopathic mother, and as Russia's President Putin said after the slaughter in Beslan, "The weak are always defeated."

As for that more virulent form of feminine evil—the Feminazis, I despise them! Despise them for the harm they have intentionally done to men in their effort to create a tyranny over us. Until my last dollar or last breath, I will fight them, and if there is anything after death, I will fight them for eternity. If you think the Feminazis haven't subverted American institutions against men, then look back on what I've written and switch the sexes. Make me an American girl and the Commie Ho a Russian mafia male pimp. Do you think it all would have turned out the same? Not likely.

So what's the moral: If a man wants to succeed in America, live an enjoyable, worthwhile life and have a chance at happiness, he must pursue his first best destiny, stay in shape and utilize girls only for partying; after all, "girl" is just a four-letter word. And remember above all else that no good deed done for a girl goes unpunished. At the end of every day Darkness conquers the light, but that's no reason not to fight back as a Cheshire grin spreads across my face in anticipation.

"Some people will do anything for money; some will do anything for justice."

-- the Author

[The sole author, Roy Den Hollander, of this story Stupid Frigging Fool by making it public on the Internet abandons all his copyrights in this document. Anyone may copy, distribute or use it or sections freely without violating any copyrights of the author once this document has been made public by the author on the Internet.]

List of Characters

Alan: “He’s the only person that scares me,” said a mob judge connected with Roy Cohn. Got the New York City Board of Elections to do its duty—the only governmental agency in this story that did.

Alferdo Ibarra Sotelo: Fat Mexican drug trafficker who had to beg as well as paid for sex from Alina.

Alexander: Maria’s boy friend and lead guitar player in the Russian band “No Problem.”

Alexei: Decent Krasnodar guy who unfortunately fell for Alina.

Alexey Smolin: Krasnodar member of the Russian mafia who can’t seem to hold a manager’s job for more than six months.

Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina, a.k.a. Angelina, a.k.a. Chipilina and affectionately called Angel, Dark Angel, Poisoned Dragon, the Ho or the Commie Ho: six-foot, vat-dyed blonde Russian prostitute, member of the Russian mafia, mistress to Chechen Islamic lunatics and Roy’s ex-wife.

Amy Saltzman: Idiot associate of divorce attorney Steven Silpe.

Anastasia Anatolyevna Vasilyeva: CEO of the Tatyanna Vasilyeva Fashion House in Krasnodar that runs an international call girl operation.

Andrey: Alina’s masseur in Krasnodar.

Anna Pavlovna Kurilko: Chief of the Inquest Office in the Department of Internal Affairs for Krasnodar, Russia, took bribe to close criminal case against Inessa Shipilina.

Anne H. Tiedemann: Kroll Director of European Operations, lesbo-feminazi, carries a 007 lighter.

Arbi Baraev: Deceased Chechen Islamic mafia don with whom Inessa and Alina Shipilina associated. Baraev cut off the heads of four British Telecommunication’s workers in return for $20 million from Usama Bin Laden.

Azul, Juginta Raszyukevichina: From Lithuania, fellow stripper and prostitute with Alina at The Men’s Club in Mexico City; Azul and Alina provided weekend escort services in Mexico for wealthy businessmen.

Barry P. Babler: FBI special agent in Milwaukee who tried to run Roy out of town.

Barry: Night manager of Flash Dancers.

Bobby: Traviesa's boy friend whom she used to hide from in my apartment; he's a cousin of Joey Gallo and his former wife is a relative of John Gotti—he's such a name dropper.

Bob Henning: New York City detective from the 114th Precinct in Astoria, Queens—typical bully cop, constitutionally incapable of telling the truth.

Bolger, Katherine M.: PC-Feminazi attorney for Australian newspapers and reporters Tory Shepherd and Amy McNeilage.

Bradley Evan Dubin: Lead lawyer for the RICO defendants in the U.S.; descendant of Russian Jews.

Brett: A competent INS officer at the U.S. Moscow Embassy who initiated deportation proceedings against Alina.

Brian: Former Marine, solid guy, researcher for Roy.

Bruce Claugus: Attorney for Bank of Cyprus.

Carmen: Voodoo priestess whose warnings proved true.

Carol: Big Five accountant from Jamaica.

Cedarbaum, Miriam: PC-Feminist judge in the Ladies Nights case.

Charles William Den Hollander a.k.a. Chicken Little: Roy's father and a Nazi by any other name.

Cheryl: Former friend of Roy's who helped turn America into a feminararchy and institutionalize discrimination against men using the Nazi rationale of collective punishment.

Chicken Little: Roy's father.

Cindi: One of Roy's longtime friends who works as an actress, model and singer. She helped Alina find legitimate modeling gigs.

Cynthia D. Zahnow: Works with the Krasnodar pimp Anastasia Vasilyeva in Wisconsin.

Dennis: Roy's Moscow lawyer, former Ivy League professor and a solid American man.

Dmitri Morosov: Krasnodar photographer who taught many of that city's models, including Alina, how to pose with and without clothes and do nasty things before the camera.

Edward S. Rudofsky: Defense lawyer for Flash Dancers.

Elaine: Canadian detective who found one of Alina's accounts for hiding money and arranged for the D.E.A. to initiate an investigation into Alina smuggling narcotics.

Fernando: Mexico City detective.

Fran L. Lubow: Queens, New York Feminazi Family Court judge, discriminates against men and laughs about it.

Franco, Jaro: Illegal alien whom Roy called an "illegal".

Federal Security Services of Russia or F.S.B. formerly the K.G.B

Gene Kazenko: Just another lazy employee of the INS.

Grace Del Marco Models for Print and TV, Dee Simmons-Edelstein Director: Alina's first New York City model agency.

G.R.U. or Russian military intelligence.

Helen C. Sturm: New York Family Court Feminazi Judge, discriminates against men.

Harriet: Justice Joan B. Lobis' former lover who practices before Lobis without disclosure of the two's prior relationship; daughter artificially inseminated, who also receives preferential treatment for her clients before mom's former lover.

Inessa Alexnadrovna Shipilina: Alina's prostitute mother, like mother – like daughter, teaches at the Krasnodar Academy of Physical Culture Academy, connected with the Chechen Baraev Islamic-mafia crime clan.

Inessa: Vasilyeva model.

Irina Athanasiou: Recruits Russian prostitutes for Cypriot brothels but pretends she doesn't know what goes on in those brothels—typical pathologically lying Russian broad.

Isabella: Metamorph salsa teacher.

Jack Sachs: Ho's attorney for RICO suit.

Jeff: Friend and Harvard educated lawyer always willing to help.

Jesse: Martial arts buddy, should be a philosopher, served papers on Alina at Flash Dancers.

Joan B. Lobis: New York County lesbian-feminazi Supreme Court justice, discriminates against men.

Joe Serio: Harmonica playing former manager of Kroll Associates Moscow.

John Jacoby: True identity unknown.

John Madison: Threatening goon who is still unknown to Roy but not the F.B.I.

John Miller: WNEW-TV, WNBC-TV, ABC-TV reporter, former Assistant Director for Public Affairs of the F.B.I.

Judith: Roy's first divorce attorney, an Orlock in nature and looks.

Judith Comeau Bollinger, a.k.a. Judy Comeau: College intern in the WNEW-TV Newsroom who hoed her way through a number of guys at Metromedia's New York Station.

K.G.B. now called the Federal Security Services or F.S.B.

Kaplan, Lewis A.: PC-Feminist sycophant Judge in the first case against Columbia's Women Studies Program.

Katya: Friend with whom Alina hoed around Krasnodar.

Kristi: Jesse's girl friend and pretty Hungarian refugee who tends to see demons.

Larissa: Girlfriend of Marios Athanasiou, she smuggled some of Alina's money from Cyprus into Russia.

Lena: One of Alina's clairvoyants, poor nurse with child who lives by men, whored around with Alina and Olga.

Leonid "Leo" Perlin: President Phodes Studio, Alina's Moscow Pimp, member of the Russian mafia.

Maiya Furgason: Roy's oversized incompetent or crooked stockbroker at Solomon, Smith, Barney.

Marc L. Paulsen: California doctor who produces pornography in Russia and imports it to Southern California.

Maria Serrato: Prostitute recruiter for Julia Heart Agency (now called Malbros) in Mexico City.

Maria: Religious do-gooder to whom Roy should have listened, lead singer in the band “No Problem.”

Marie (Hoogstra or is it Ho-ogstra) Den Hollander a.k.a Nazi Ho: Roy’s sociopathic mother.

Mario Pisano: FBI special agent who claims the FBI is not an investigative organization, as the victims of 911 well know.

Marios Athanasiou: Brother of Melios who manages two brothels in Cyprus: Zygos and Tramps, both owned by Krasnodar mobsters.

Mark: Always had Roy’s back, a true best friend, also a top martial arts instructor and excellent at picking up chicks, now a .com venture capitalist.

Masha: Another Tatyanna Vasilyeva House of Fashion model trying to keep hidden what she did as a model before marrying.

McNeillage, Amy “McNeuter”: PC-Feminazi reporter for the Australian newspaper The Sydney Morning Herald.

Melios Athanasiou: Recruits prostitutes for Cypriot brothels, member Russian/Cypriot mafia, married to Irina.

Moody: Martial arts buddy who always has your back, computer wiz, honest, but much too chivalrous towards broads.

Movsar Baraev: Nephew and successor to Arbi Baraev, took hundreds of hostages at a Moscow theater in October 2002, now deceased.

M.V.D. or Ministry of Internal Affairs: The national police force of Russia.

Nadya the Good: Vasilyeva model who traveled to Cyprus with Alina but returned after two days because the work involved prostitution.

Nadya Sanchez: Krasnodar investigator and translator.

Natalya: Krasnodar translator.

Natasha: Vasilyeva model, tall, dark hair, lived in Alina’s building and kept Alina’s secret documents.

Nazi Ho: Roy’s mother.

Nicholas Mundy: Alina’s profit driven immigration lawyer who specializes in the law of personal destruction, descendant of Russian Jews.

Nicolay N. Vasilyev: Short, greedy husband of Anastasia Vasilyeva and member of the Russian mafia.

Norton, Jimmy: Small time comedian whom I sued for defamation.

Oksana (not her real name): Former Tatyanna Vasilyeva House of Fashion model who disclosed the Vasilyeva's call girl operation.

Olga Viktorovna Borisova: Investigator in the Inquest Office in the Department of Internal Affairs for Krasnodar, Russia, took bribe to close criminal case against Inessa Shipilina.

Olga Ponomarenka: Whored around with Alina and Lena.

Olivo, Dominick: Got Roy fired from a job for calling one of Olivo's illegal alien employees an "illegal."

Pat: Roy's friend who previously played lead guitar for Meat Loaf and now produces records.

P. I. Ostapenko: Chief of the Investigation Office in the Department of Internal Affairs for Krasnodar, Russia, took bribe to close criminal case against Inessa Shipilina.

P.K. Castel: United States District Court Judge in the Southern District of New York.

Peter Petrovich: Russian lawyer who works for green card mill Kuba, Mundy & Associates.

Rey: Pimp for Krasnodar models.

Robert: Roy's third and final annulment-divorce attorney.

Roberto & Rosa Elina Quilan: Managers of The Men's Club, a brothel and lap dancing club in Mexico City, a franchise of the American "The Men's Club."

Roy Den Hollander: The sucker who was born on his day of birth, a.k.a. stupid frigging fool.

Sasha and Anya: Roy's coed translators in Moscow who rented him a room during his investigations, both very bright and very pretty.

Satisha Gibbs: One of the many princesses in the Feminazi Clerk's Office for the Second Circuit Court of Appeals who ignores the rule of law for the arbitrary rule of females.

Schechter, Jennifer: Man-hating, PC-Feminazi judge for the case against the Australian newspapers.

Scott X. Marvin: “X” marked the spot of incompetence as demonstrated by this second INS officer at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow to handle the Shiplina removal case.

Sergei Nikolaevich Lazarev: Russian religious philosopher, worships the anti-Christ.

Shepherd, Tory “the Torch”: PC-Feminazi reporter for Australian newspaper The Advertiser Messenger Sunday Mail.

Sonia Sotomayor: Second Circuit Court of Appeals judge who advocates the divine right of judges to usurp the power of Congress.

Stephanos: One of Alina’s Cypriot clients who helps her launder money for the Russian mafia.

Steven M. Silpe: Roy’s second annulment-divorce lawyer who sold him down the river.

Svetlana: Roy’s Krasnodar lawyer, hot-looking middle-aged blonde, always missing in action.

Tanya: One of Perlin’s prostitutes who went with him and Alina to Mexico.

Tatyanna Vasilyeva: Founder and Chairman of the Tatyanna Vasilyeva House of Fashion that operates an international call girl business, the mother of Anastasia A. Vasilyeva.

The City: New York City.

Tom: Roy’s former bartender friend.

Tony Wong: Manager of Sherring-Plough Moscow, boasts about seducing a 14-year-old girl in Cuba—probably paid her.

Traviesa: Austro-Hungarian au pair who left a lot of trouble in her wake.

Twins: San Francisco Girls.

Vadim Thomas: FBI special agent of Russian Caucasus descent, sidekick of Pisano’s.

Valodya Gavrilov: Alina’s St. Petersburg customer who travels around Russia recruiting prostitutes for the Russian mob under the cover of selling custom jewelry.

Velez, Ramon: Executive Director for Law Enforcement of the NYC Commission on Human Rights.

Vera: Honest and courageous professor at the Krasnodar Academy of Physical Culture who refused to allow Alina and Inessa to intimidate her.

Victoria: Reporter who wrote a story about Roy and Alina in 2001 for the Krasnodar newspaper Ulitsa Krasnaya.

Vikrant Pawar: Outsource lawyer for Detective Bob Henning.

Vladimir Gavrilovich Minchenko: Vice Rector of the Krasnodar Academy of Physical Culture, held under duress Roy and Natalya for interrogation.

Volodya: Alina's Krasnodar male concubine who tricked her into believing he was not married—boy did that tick her off.

Xenia: Roy's Moscow lawyer, sharp, honest and very competent, the exception to the rule.

Yevgeny: Alina's track and field trainer in Krasnodar.

Yulya: Very tall, black hair and beautiful former friend of Alina's.

Yulya: A different girl from Kanevskaya village whom Alina tried to sell overseas.

1. Glossary

Definitions for what various words really mean in Russian:

Adultery – fidelity, so long as my partner doesn't do it.

Agreement – useless

America – money, money and mo' money

Business – crime

Brutality – brutality

Charity – me

Capitalism – legalized thievery, as in America.

Coffee and Cigarettes – drugs of choice

Compassion – brutality

Consumer Protection – caveat emptor

Contract – kindling paper

Crime – business, government

Criminal – Russian citizen

Devil – everybody else

Ethics – what you can get away with.

Fidelity – sleeping around but not getting caught.

Fraud – all interpersonal relationships

God – U.S. dollar

Government – criminal enterprise

Gun – bazooka

Honesty – weakness, stupidity, you're doomed.

Hospitality –softening up the mark.

Human being – me, but nobody else.

Law – jungle rules

Magic – it works.

Marriage – business deal without scruples.

Money – the only reason for living

New Russian – thief, gangster, racketeer, pimp, embezzler, corrupt politician (redundancy in terms), forger, hood

News – lies, prevarications, half-truths; same as in the U.S.

Partner – thief

Police – useless

Politics – lies, just as in America.

Promise – trick

Peace – war

Restaurant – money laundering operation

Religion – latest popular trend

Russia – insane asylum

Russian female – ho

Russian female child – ho in training

Russian wife – over the ho-hill

Truth – doesn't exist.

Urban Center – toxic waste dump

Vodka – escape

War – normal everyday affairs

Other definitions

Feminazi – unnatural life form that believes females are superior to men in every way.

Ho – a girl who uses her sexual attributes to get something of material value from a man, a.k.a. whore, slut, prostitute.

Homo Sapiens Female – broad, chick, girl, dame, ho, snatch, nookie, slut, whore, prostitute, evil.

Judge – arrogant to the max bureaucrat

Metahomorph – dangerous

Political Correctionalists - person who wants to imprison your thoughts, speech and actions unless, of course, you've already submitted to lefty totalitarianism.

She-male – a girl who thinks she's as tough as a man but as feminine as a dame, a.k.a. Feminazi.

Woman – I'm not familiar with that term.

③

④

[illegible]

Время прошло незаметно и быстро...
 Филлис дала вид, что она ничего не знает
 о сестре, да и в то же время... Он улыбнулся, победно качая головой. Тогда же снова и снова повторил, что предан сестре до самой смерти
 (и сестры). И, наконец, вынул из кармана (из кармана) и держал перед собой, как бы не желая, чтобы кто-нибудь увидел, для награды своей жене, драгоценный... и Филлис и маленькая девочка вдали отсюда.

примечать ему себя америк. процент там и это было то в финиш. А переех и ему помоща. Мне нравяся, что он у себя две сполит никого, с кем, мне всего то в репро-
да. похажив, то же асшигах. Как у него Али по в пилли. немного рожю, инеко, лучше немного Селли.

[illegible][illegible]

Сиди мене доцман Лукас. Ти си добро по 3 рана. Значи, тогата вечер, Овдима е иша на ресторан. По доцна излизаша и мене саго или, сади у дво други данд ишаго (вече мислае сабидеи, но не може).
Потом саи мене и дво чамеи. — Данд сидеи доцман. Кога излизаша в казино саи, то са мене сагу (а ју). То кид данд, такди).

[illegible]

Сезон V Бег 99... Устал, а весь день
никуда отойти не могу. Адреса купил мне
OFF. Для покупки посылки в аэроулице
FISH ресторан с его друзьями и мной (Катя)
с Уманием. Для поездки в аэропорт, по моему желанию в машине аэропорт (Андрей, но все было задержкой). Сидящий (Андрей) называется тогда как раньше. А "Григорий" убавил от 3-х минут, плюс 0.5. Катя в
1. Друзья, если есть время, тогда верно.

[illegible]

[illegible]

They usually get sprayed, the new vegetation can be removed & the area can be sprayed about 1000 ft. away from the area where the plants are.

7.03 99

[illegible]

Капр-р, некаято неприятели по-малко раско ваваша при. Върху чужду купил, понае поглед зашто с сего, сего. А върху купил и машинер (иде докле го донесе заше) сего сего отдал. При контролер и понае понае Москва сего го донесе собоюта или подарил донесе (silver) ак и просила (наше то, го и понае) о донесе ки раш не подарил или ки много подарил. Но при етоме ак-н, го понае понае сего го или, сего и при понае и го-то с него.

Сего и понае понае. Понае
о 2 1 то-то. Инога show. То ето го
2 оторхот. Или понае то прав-то
понае, понае, понае, понае, понае, понае,
понае, понае, понае, понае, понае, понае.

Хот и составил уже 2 кр и в месяц
 как не успевает с переводом. Он не понимает в £ и в руб. и что очень плохо, что не может до меня и сестры когда я пишу... Я и не знаю, почему трудно составить, но только на 1 месяц.
 Да, Финец мне хорошо. Дарю с со Стефанусом, 3 руб. единич. (хорошо, выск твоего слова. Уни ку не ~~хорошо~~ не работаю дене. Сделываю. Да-2-3 руб
 (хорошо) руб. Он также хорошо, интересно
 Кепенос... Короче не даст, ну, не
 даю. Сидит дома и кат 10 £ за мес дене, сидит (но я сест, что по не за мое, не). Купил домик, приехал.
 у Финец (хорошо) поради же, сир-с 2 раза по 20 руб. с 5 руб. перебрал.
 с 10 руб. по 2 £ (= 16 £) в пер-на.
 Богу, когда мы перебрал. С Лиссон а то у-с, а руб. это много, как сидит (хорошо) 1 руб. мало. Купит больше 2-х руб. в месяц, 2 руб. еще спрайт-миле ии ии, ии ии. Buy from from Russia... Сест и не сравнится.
 Я пишу с него Сидекард, для Лиссон
 (топикна 100 £) как Лиссон-и Лиссон
 (мне не дай руб). Лиссон перебрал череску с сест, у меня-хорошо красиво... Да, мне V=100... Сест-и Лиссон нид ии, гадит. Аннеит v. Van Der, похороше

Поздравляю вас с праздником, от всех учащихся школы. Желаю вам удачи в жизни и успехов
в учебе. Пусть все ваши мечты сбываются.
С любовью и уважением
Алина.

Особый интерес представляет, что
меморанд (или даже письма), на основе

...миллиона. Кажется, что у меня не хорошо по руке. Сидишь в кресле и вы-таскиваешь палец. Ах, как же больно!
OFF на 3 дня, а работа про 1. Моевремя с доской и кривой 3 дня...
Никогда не думал, что будет так.
В 1-ю ночь в отеле MERIDIAN
и меня задерживают с болезнью ("Please disease") и мучают. Меня разбудили
к-е прикосновения, а потом... Мне он стал очень неприятен, что я не такой француз, как все. Для меня в раз-качке 6 или 3 дня, но работа в
одежде 2 раза (open & close). И самое важное - он прикинул меня в EGYPT
(Египет). Он открыл дверь, все го-ворит: "Вот работа, работай". Пред-меты, 1 или 2, как-то я понимаю подарить одиному. Все это я хочу - длинная карьера. Раньше он был кривой миллионером, а теперь да, и мне нужно одобрение. Раньше я не не одобряю. Но я это в том-то решил, что все всегда негде некуда в Египет. Он пришел за мной на спасение негде. А теперь уехал и даже до сих пор он до сих пор еще был но я решила не думать. Потому что замер в тепле с женой, только 22 года - и добрых добрых, и заставляющая, как-то мне не
- я так разлучена... Вспомнил
и автору красавица. А теперь, даю слово
Светка хочет STOP постар. Сейчас
рану, под брата Дмитрия.
После, конечно, в больнице под благодарю и сразу мучает, сирпереносит, но все в порядке.

25.04.98
Это была первая смена. Маме сейчас много а нас в "Trans" и "Amor" в менью и кто-то пришел from "Arbouda".
И нас не было в эту смену. Я же постоял и driving (и то, конечно, была компьютер за нас, но я не был-то, т.к. не было в баре за сменами и кафе, но зато не было, без пива).
После того, как старик-м, написав по-милу (40% алкоголя). Я как написав, 1-й раз в жизни перевернулся. 3-й раз а потом было... Делала, он делал за мной, ставил мне кресло, так устал был, мне так было плохо. Он делал работу. Но после он забрал, т.к.
Маме написав, что-то то, что не был днем, и за баром поставил баром
STOP и Маме (или маме). Для матери без мамы, но Маме мне в бар, from "ZIGOR" и
в пятницу, чтобы я была в PRAVID
и 12 driving, а была написав, что-то он хотел перевернуть и так, чтобы делала минет с его руками и губами, таким образом, мне 10%. Он хотел
мне, но я не могла. Он хотел
мне перевернуть, мне было очень плохо
(я 30-40 минут перевернула кресло)
(Я была в PRAVID и 10 driving). Ма-ма хотела на меня, то я не была с ней таким, что я была. Потому что с Сергеем так-то я, 1-й раз за 4 месяца, и как
было... В 11.30 была с Маме (до того, как позвал мне кресло, даже забор) и потом... Потому что в субботу Маме написав, написав... Потому что так, когда на парке DAVISOV (мотоцикл) со всеми родителями, так-то...

все 3 недели я как-то в раздумье.
и не успеваю - ехать мне в отпуск
и все меня тревожит, я пишу много, но с легкостью, то пишу хорошо holidays. Ой, правда, то я хочу все сразу, а 2 дня. Я решил иногда писать по 1-2 абзаца. Понятно хочу записать меня. Вспомнил
то что то променя. Понятно иногда (good). Но иногда хочется иногда, давай справку, то я долго, а на то для меня-я.
Мне давай так-то. Вот так хотел моя давай, но давай так и
я давай, мне не давай купить
OFF. Как я, и давай в давай все - 80, 110/70 - и давай. И давай.

Друго в ту нощ задрал мене. До средно 2. По утроще пер-та Ангелка идеахъ в Меридианъ хотелъ, за-дралъ и Ангелка, които бяха (а задралъ, но то то не можеше, както въ гробница). Тогава не можеше да идемъ. Ногава не-хотен в Меридианъ хотелъ е Днес-гната. А задралъ мене драсетъ и като 3 бяха задралъ - а, не, кр середъ. Утроще др задралъ, драсетъ в средно... Въ едно хранило
в ту нощ Мария идва на мене, о прасилеми, сн, сн, сн, тога следъ денъ в, чини денъ идеахъ вондъ и ниданъ едъ и
1.05.99 ниданъ чини денъ, но а не можеше. Тога др в др-ниа дрнъ чини др. ОФ. Днесгната Мария вгъ е вгъ в дрнъ и сн, то в вгъ е сн, вгъ в вгъ-р.
А не дрнъ работно... А дрнъ в
може. Примаа Стенъ и задралъ дрнъ, а Мария сн, дрнъ и
вгъ мене в вгъ, вгъ дрнъ дрнъ Стенъ сн, дрнъ не хоще вгъ вгъ в вгъ и дрнъ мене вгъ сн др дрнъ не хоще дрнъ.
вгъ др дрнъ, а дрнъ и
вгъ дрнъ. А дрнъ вгъ дрнъ
с дрнъ дрнъ Мария сн на
то то дрнъ дрнъ. А дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ. Дрнъ дрнъ - дрнъ дрнъ
сн. А дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ, а дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ, но не дрнъ дрнъ...
дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ. Днесгната
и дрнъ дрнъ Мария дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ дрнъ на берегах...

Маринус сел в уехав в Франкпарту сою з свои пакеты; мар-О. Вассер приехала Максим и вышла к нам з. только 1 часу родил с ней. Сидит пилу с дети и Вассер. Дале там дитя.
Когда придет, дети пещное. Су-хорова ун. 17-18 дней как не-Полоса, Вассеру дитя, наредот. Дале пиле 60 Вассер, сн-терпение, и пещное дитя поху-Алико. 17-18 Вассер

1. Тинис (Баран) каре-а
 2. тас солонка а форма
 3. иди-се (уменьшительное) Селад Тиниса
 4. 100-т бараном, а Селадне в Франсе.
 5. С Андриетом я едуна пошью на хармидево
 6. сине 150 км/ч 100-т сие динисах и еурике
 7. по франсе /т каре-а 100-т оти собока
 8. вперы франс-с в 4 зевзрн. Хермидий
 9. гавди Соподе, Далиосеви!!!
 22.03.99

Дорогая, милый друг! Мне осталось только 1 письмо написать до конца этого конкурса. И обязательно до конца поспеть. Я постараюсь. Прощай перепиши мне из-за меня. Мне

перу 1 нед. Эдет как алейн газарки и пью тат. на урину я выкинул прошлого вепра (милосердия) такого помыл год у алейн пашин алеянов. Мартин дат ифю
и ролик. то ифю пер. (данке приказав нет) Тасод впра ура алейн алейн (так он ифю рать в данке) не пашхане в дельн урло в урло
и ролик алейн. то старик дельн одеянь Гелин (Ана) пашад свое ифю и приказав пер. Фу свое паша

[illegible]

Давидос даа мине медицин, 8 даахана содосито үе Имесаг ~ 10 км. Сүгтэл 8
77 кг... Тоснуу, Басногони

30.05 99

[illegible]

6.06.99

Полгода и Паша не капризались.
Они играли на полу в туалете.
Паша издал много звуков. Другой он был в такой состоянии. Делал много ШОР поставил. Паша 3 дня капризал. Она поменяла мне всего три раза и капризился.
Паша не капризал в каюте в 22.00

25.06.99
наш (18.06) в здании Сторини
и в доме по дороге в Пинск и далее, поехали в село додого карта телефон. Я там пала в воду и одна река - privid (5 км) и река - table 4 km - 68 500
задание Сторини и
п. поехали в Парк Вики не по Пинск вехам раньше, т.к. дедаль meeting. Карта 607
в Пинск (др.-с. Покупали в ресурсе, я там 10% продали 12 информация

[illegible][illegible]

27. 06. 99.
Сегодня пишу в самое Покровское!
Этот день я думаю о детях. Все
сегодня семья Мария заблаговременно
В пятницу после один вечер я шла
по Анархическому тротуару, и детям из Варна вместе с этим Везде Покровское
и пишу дома, пока, чтобы представить
Маленькому. Там, вот в 2-м классе, не только как в Покровское мне
как и 2 года. Я пишу очень много.
и мне день, день работы, а сегодня
много - день. 0 0 пере -

Степановичи своих ходили в парк - 2 раза на неделе (был человек, был) их Степановичи Степановичи. Потом возили асфальт. В разный ~~сезон~~ сезон на нем их ходили в РДВ, ну да как-то с (орган) но как он, пора его он в-дво по пар-ся пошел, слышишь что так, но так не дошел. Потом поехали на-сторно через дикую, а поехать в (маш-з, хор-з) с Дениска (хороший) в ар-ту ил поехали (а убоих) в Ар-ману. Вспомни за smart park world - 21.10.15. 5 раз на неделе, как с с наем-парк (2х) ездил, как с пар-с, ходил по парком (как пар-с) Степановичи... Потом поехали в 21.10.18

а там в обмене сидит ну ах не рожу договорились, ознакомились - теперь поговори
После 50 мин, когда ушла от дома.
После мыслей ~~и~~ пошел до магазина се зате money she is go, и много, всегда да мне оверделавали (2-3 раза) и ушел ах - ах давай давай (до этого ахуи еще уар-а до стана когда съезжал). Провалил же на ур делами скоро. Моего то, и след-ли.
По микки-инфекция (сильнее да такие после ан-а, а то накануне была е мидеи) - не помню - эрриг то ах, ахуе это - ухот пиди, дах мне календиль оказал мочи. Пришлось ахуе в дах мидеи, да так пиди. Гипотензия...
эта пиди, строниль-а дах, а потом спало в дах пиди (как пиде?). Пиди пиди-а мидеи, ах дах, ах пиди-а пиди пиди ах пиди мидеи, так-а не дах пиди и дах, ах дах
Слова дах, мидеи, пиди, ах дах (важно-е пиди, пиди - охажива, пиди, и пиди, мидеи, пиди-а). Пиди (мидеи, пиди, пидеи - в р по пиди
+ пиди-а и по-иди.
Слова в пиди в пиди, и пиди
с пиди ах пиди пиди-а пиди → (и т) dance и пиди - 100 пиди ах дах на 100 пиди (ах пиди и пиди).
Пиди дах пиди. Пиди, пиди, пиди пиди-а пиди (и пиди, пиди, пиди TV, дах - пиди).
Пиди, пиди-а пиди-а пиди-а пиди-а и пиди пиди, ах пиди пиди-а пиди-а пиди пиди пиди на пиди и пиди!
Пиди пиди-а пиди и пиди,
Пиди пиди-а пиди-а пиди-а пиди-а!!

[illegible][illegible]

4.09.98
 (2) Велю-ке з речась сь с Родзе (у Леснядзе) Вяртаюць з коней, а сёб сь аднаго Дзяткоў з аднаго перавозу на у Мазыж, перавоза аднаго сь аднаго ("Так у Леснось пачынае - з речась на стасках - у Лесно перавоз на"). Родзе перавоза на стасках.
 На стасках дзея речась на стасках сь Родзе, хадзі-лі на стасках. Родзе перавоза (прывітае
 перавоза на стасках перавоза на стасках 100 ф
 (1.00) Родзе сь на стасках на стасках
 перавоза на стасках перавоза на стасках 50 ф,
 10 ф. Сь на стасках перавоза на стасках 20 ф дзея на стасках, сь на стасках перавоза на стасках перавоза на стасках перавоза на стасках. Родзе сь перавоза на стасках (2.00) Родзе перавоза на стасках перавоза на стасках, сь на стасках перавоза на стасках сь на стасках перавоза на стасках. Сь

[illegible]

29. 08. 99 в Mexico
Сейчас 2 полу. В аэропорту са-этна (15.00 по в. Франкфурт (2 часа за часовую). Как покорили сам (саксы и сабел, пол-н (20.00
из Москвы по дороге в 7.00
из дома друзей. В аэропорту нах-сь
4. Часов. Подвизая, по дороге с полуго-дом для. Станция, по дороге криво 5
по дороге. С лодками по реке поехали на море. Все распедала дела (хотели по реке, а в правую, и у лодки (он словно стеснялся) туда на море - нуто переключен-но со мной с ~~пол~~ подвизая, телеграфия есть паравол радио. Думи с инд-
а. Поехали на море... По с пиратинтер-ю от Рейндар по поводу Алек-са, мой не менее раскаты в лодки се, как 2 очень хотела). Поехали в
Франкфурт (к час-м). Мало того, то был не совсем актуал, т.к. для тний дни, так и дошли сирены...
новью что-то делала. У меня

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Валери, Иванович, где мои все мужики и женщины. Матро Доргов, где мои все и сынов. Иван Трофимов все мои, Дарья Николаи Иванович во всех, давай, работи мои полюби! Аминь

16 09 99

През м. работ в мейс. CLUB дон порак со слав-м. А, до пикара об отом. 50, 1-ти дим 3, 2-ти 16
тамин 27. Вера 110. Селоз малка барила, ко, която не е на-св.
с пикара работи с 14.30 до 2.30.
лучше с денер. Вера на-св наура, 8 сундара, то дая мурка - бонотел, бе, как, засладиле подсладиле мидел павел. Купид на 600 пелар ерка, павел. А селоз на 189 пелар донер, донки
с сел. чен на кону. Селоз дим
дотел ота кривия, карку дот
2 пикара и мид дон, пикара с пикара А на дон. 600, хонел засладиле в дон дон, дот дот 500, а пикара дот 3
пикара пикара, пикара дот
в пикара пикара, дот
дот дот... Селоз дот мид
АТ... дот...

Вчера, моя хозяйка в МАУС-СИУБ.
Удалось, неск-ко раз. Вывести работ
с 14.30-20.00. 20.00-2.30. Вечное головокружение и бессонница.
А еще голова, ревматизм, астма,
так, так не спит, неест. За пи-лем, за кн. 100 $, за 300 $ Table-тете - за кн. 250 $, за 300 $ Table-тете - за кн. 140 $, + вина + шампане 20% а за 100 $, это минимум.
Что мне остается? С собой пенсию, пенсию, пенсию. Со мной пенсия и пенсия, а пенсия пенсия или в пенсия, пенсия а пенсия пенсия пенсия, за пенсия пенсия.
и не знаю. Но я не могу жить
и не знаю. Но я не могу жить.

Василий, Иванович, даи коуи сеп мужики и терпении. Матро Дориев, даи коуи жюби и слави. Иван Трофимов сеп коуи, дорие Николай Иванович во вкуп, дорие, работи коуи пониже... Аминь...

16 09 99

През м. работ в мейс. CLUB дон норман со с нав-м. А, до пикара об отом 50, 1-ой дим 3, след па 16
таминв 27 вара 110 Селозе
мелна бариле, ко, които не пра-с.
с пикара работи с 14.30 до 2.30.
лучше с денер. Вара кан-с наура, 8 сундана, то дая мурка - воготеи бе, как, засладиле поделена мидеи павле Купид па 600 песо арка павле. А
селозе па 189 песо донер донки
+ сел. чен па кону Селозе дим данин ота кри-из. кар ку дон
2 пикара А ил дон. 600 р, хонен засладиле в дон дон, дон дун 500 р а пикара дон 3
пика-с пика-а урикал дон
в пикар пика-а дон дон
бе дон... Селозе? дон мей АТТ... дон...

[illegible]

19.09.99
 Это интересное? Сегодня с ребята решила пойти на выставку нас у него для семьи. Я говорю, поехали по плану а он не
 да, что сейчас, ишло не говориле, тогда я расплакалась, мне, что говорю, денег не хватает,
 какие деньги. А денег не было на словах нам тоже не было.
 money от пог. 2 он сказал
 "денегу (маленькая сумма)
 Вера а ты ру с мамо (супер-"денги с детьми в ресторан. (где (какая), (денги) а пока (малень-и шка (денги) пункт (какая)
 а аэропорт. Как (денги). Рене,

[illegible]

57

2. 10.99

(58)

Я ей позвонил сразу, frankly. Дали ей тот самый кандидатский Сервис на паркане в Академи. Вобщем, (адреса забыл) (звонил мне его, дружок, друг) (был в т. разе, т.к. походил, перенес) была за меня - замес-рас-е. А в 2-го июня 8. не хули. "Кем мож тебе за-нимаешься?" А после того приехал что не знаю что "судно", "судно".
 "Кем мож занимаешься?" ~~Знаю~~ "Знаю".
 "Есть парк - нулею!!!". Тогда том не ответил - не догадался.
 Мелко обиделся. Поинтерес на
 него
 Тайноги, дайноги и спам!!!
 9.10.99

[illegible]

6

1710.99

62

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

30.10.99.
Борна импер-я негале Пасае Канкура... Я не плачу, победил Антонио Батиста, империю и царя аустралий
в Кану, и не конен как пакарий. Пот.к. с ~~Борна~~ заведена норма, при с предд. 4 см. признать не дозр.
в 100%.

[illegible]

- [illegible]

У него сестра в критич. состоянии, он для подоблен.

Вот-то я сума 23 тысячи, пахотой вспомню, но зато мои 500 $. После сказано, что мои деньги потеряны - и по-лучил дене 24 руб. 13 00 05 руб.
Павловского (сказано, что спешно пошла в бухгалтер).
и Павлов-а меня!
и у Павлова моя квитанция мне при-шла, а еще - как это было чудесно же целена оторвать карту, как мне привлекли чудесные люди - от нас...
Потом мы поехали и пошла меня.
Привлекли Павловского и пошла меня - пошла погулять и купил себе книгу и книгу
и оторвал из кармана - не было денег!
Потом в селе мне купил не порасили денег в ссуду, и промани много карманов и пошла
Привлекли Павловского. Павловский мне показали - и у него ссуды, оторвал а тогда ссудили Павловского в рубль показывали мне ссуду в рубль и я была в ссуду погулять ссуды и я работала как было чудесно. Там судят, Павловский, мне пошла (хотела) и ден 18 тысяч. Но отнюдь, Павловский сказал по 8 руб 7 тысяч Павловского
и я мне пошла (хотела). Павловский
и Павловский ссудил мне - это было чудесно. Потом мы мне пошла
и я всех Павловского - оторвал - (мне ссудили по 70 руб - некие судят) Павловский, мне пошла
и я мне пошла (хотела). Павловский
Потом Павловский мне пошла и я пошла ссудил мне 1.000 руб.
и Павловский - 1.000 $. Да, Павловский
Потом Павловский мне пошла и было ссудил!

15

20

6

Вот же картина на море - о прекрасном,
 Не седишь ты на пороге, раба,
 Дня, но на раба, раба, раба, раба,
 Сидишь на JORD WORD POR. 2 это
 Знак + данно. Яко пахана на
 Водник мостов. Вспомни место где
 Поним при парке и море, где
 На нем мосты и перекрестки.
 Как оно чудно, когда, когда

Селение, славяне Бояр, изъясни много с, рече, иже в перах
Бояр, славяне Бояр, изъясни

Второго утра на вокзал - 41, 45.
41 танкет. Оставился Гайдар, сел. по телевизору его братя, и пошел за газетой.
Еще 15 танкет и ушел (с Гусейном)
Сказано было: ушел с Гусейном, но
23 приехал ушелно работать.
Путь, когда Гусейн, даже не раздумывая,
пел. Я вспоминаю, как она собирала на оставшихся мне друзей - Гайдару только лишь, Гусейн и Гусейн.
Через я с Гусейном Гайдар. Сказано,
с Гусейном в Гусейн Гайдар. Гусейн
он собрал ушелно в Гусейн Гайдар.
Многие Гусейн Гайдар. Он сел, что много пел... Он был откровенен со мною. Гусейн с Гусейн в ресторанобеденный Гусейн. Гусейн Гайдар

[illegible]

⑦

(78.)

7. 12.99

7. 12. 99
 Ва, Франк-те а стас-се, убила от твоята, това не е вярно. Клеветна обвинение, че като чинен състав кие да дава кар-са. Той прави мене, право (и на смат ам-те мене) - това предизвиква. Клеветна перу-те е корупция. Мене спра-иде я, правна стига б. димон. А въпроса, то е некасиан boy friend
 и. Клеветни. Не е корупция, то е да я мене, моят димон. А з право-давател, мислите, предрайте. А мене отговорите, да-се мене, Франк-те това е вярно 2 чина по-малко да правят правите молотинко. Правият е вярно 2 чина мислите правите не-те
 слаб да е вярно. Клеветна, димон, това
 е. Клеветна правите в стигане, т.к
 да правите. Да правите
 да правите, перениват да правите.

Моя хатина на бане "Клеуза". Я
не люблю спать, т.к. размышляю - 9 часов. Какая мне граница, т.к.
не добра Россия, в аэропорту. Я за переселения в аэропорту. Я остаток дня, 330 р. Водитель авто привез меня.

[illegible][illegible]

83

84

[illegible][illegible]

17.01.2000

[illegible]

8

90

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

[illegible][illegible]

103

(104)

Катюша, приехала (мне 2-1836)
"сей а выдана"
Катюша Катюша приехала по-ложив в меня и мужа с дочкой
Дашей Да, тогда же было в Париже, сей там же были...

[illegible]

а наших расах. Аппетитно с
помощию науки хочет жить

Точно така беше и със първия на което първо време, особено поа там бяха забележени. Очистиха, го днесния път до гара. И
после като казвам му, че
и първият казано и първият.
Благодаря!!!

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

Дом келейни у Старапана (на миткекети и не потонула), а на империју абисин, елистер, не се-к, то не нис-е зато то (Полес-20, стр-у 25-30, бео).

Съгласно с това наредба, изготвена на основание на чл. 10, ал. 1 от Закона за защита на личните данни, се съобщава на всички сдружения, които са членове на Асоциацията, че те са длъжни да предоставят на Асоциацията всички данни, които са в тяхно разположение, за да може Асоциацията да изготви списък на всички членове на Асоциацията, които са длъжни да заплатят членския си взнос.

В сент-р ходили в Лангосови-улице латинско-славянскими вперед - назад. Это был конец
- как только из-за, все передел-
- т. е. передел.

V. Их можно использовать в 2 направлениях
 1. По 10 тыс. $ в месяц потратить на карты. Но, банк выводит, не микрофин. Должна быть сумма от 5 тысяч и есть возможность с ней делать все, как с кредитом в банке по 100% годов. выгодам!!!
 Потом можно войти в Communityбанк, его можно открыть в Америке.
 и ее использовать (от 40 тыс. американ.
 Она есть по руски, английской, испанской. Там же есть и др. места где есть аккаунты, но в этих же 4, к ним можно, и наоборот, к ним не надо.

[illegible]

[illegible]

15.05. Преглед на кат. б. за непомислена не покривава. Напомена: уредни знаци не куче, бавно, црно, белимачи
Купер 23 $ а за испит. Јачина делова
+ 30 $ за кат. б. и ефикаска на 20 не бавно 40 $, сгори 300 рд. нап. на 2
не мо хопсис. Капеленим грис, а ели Ручисаха...

[illegible][illegible]

Моя май по дивану, била кра-сива, цвела.
За два дена моя познани во Флоренция
за два дена соми каски на скоростни возе.
Била з. камица & тукане - на самобез бже соод. бжато (мжж) на пилот на ринг
др. пилот - на пилотажу)
Моя познани пилот, ивентур а сик искаше тато... Пилотот пилот

150 $. Kogam na 3ex. Dugan min,
 25 $. 3a novo z
 150 $. Kogam na 3ex. Dugan min,
 25 $. 3a novo z

А елико ми се чини да је то веома велико. Како је то велико, то је
то је и велико, то је и велико, то је
то је и велико, то је и велико, то је

Благодаря Господь за все! Благодарим!

а потом конуны-я. Пришли я ашу потаму-я маме. Такими. Ах до фига
е до-и, потом отпустил же ребенка
е. Кей, я ру на силу ревности.
Он спрашивал как. Но зато после этого была дур-я конуны я дошло не могла кто ко от в-я, я по-то, же я переех и' конуны дур-я я по-то, какие дит. Охоту по-то в-я 3-а-сел (же предгор. конуны он не дал мне спать-то я, казен-пунька по-то, те кие-я, аш-я). И про-я снова, я к-я, аш-я в-я 3-а-я по-то я паралли. А какой он от-я когда я к-я... к-я, а по-я ну и 3-а-я дур-я после этого у меня пред-я он в-я, мел-е захотел в-я

Ах до дал мне 600 г-в, а хрен сверну 600, но я отка-я до-я к-я от-я до-я, аш-я с-я. Дай до-я саму з-я и с-я. Да у-я мел-е по-я, до-я к-я
и он к-я. Аш-я к-я
по-я, аш-я не х-я, к-я он в-я - в-я это к-я. Ах домел-е, аш-я до-я и с-я. Дай саму до-я в-я по-я!!!

А сейчас мне очень в-я
в-я у-я. Как-я я з-я с-я, з-я и с-я до-я с-я.
Дай до-я, з-я до-я к-я не у-я,
Аш-я

До-я до-я до-я за в-я! Б-я!!!

5.06.99.

Прок-я по-я. При-я
я к-я до-я, аш-я до-я
при-я по-я к-я, а по-я

116 гребна. (Привади в Варахне - дуге пеленго канпава-е). Ене иамабони - мало дна чурбато и у аене мб рур-дана, унде. Дараг пубана Вел дн, ромба, иамабони. Дараг в ас с дн, аи хон а дна, вато, но а отау с, м к, иуаг кмо-мо, рур, селане, бендикевур м. Сале дн, оно дна пубана пореа... Понае в дараг, пубана руаа, иуаг в дараг. Мо укалаи пубане дараг, пубана.

Дна пуба кмо-мо, мо укалаи
укалаи, дараг мо дараг (дараг)
дараг с, дараг а дараг - в рур.
30.05.99. Привади в 7.30. В дараг
8.30 отау с, дна чурбато, пубана
нас. Дараг дна в дараг. Дараг в
дараг дна дараг дараг, дараг,
дараг ехато и дараг. Дараг дараг, дараг-а, дараг. Сале 2
дараг дна дна. В дараг. Дараг
в дараг, дараг дараг дараг дн, в дараг, кмо-мо, дараг кмо-мо, дараг дараг, 31.05.99 - а дараг дараг!
Дараг дараг. Дараг дараг дараг.
Дараг дна дараг дараг, дараг
в дараг (дараг дараг 30.5 + а дараг 10 + а дараг 40). Дараг дараг, дараг дараг дна дараг дараг дараг дараг дараг.
Дараг в ВАИВ, дараг а дараг,
2 дараг - 127 дараг 102 (дараг 101).
Дараг дараг дараг. Дараг дараг
дараг, дараг дараг в дараг дараг дараг, дараг дараг дараг дараг. Дараг
дараг дараг дараг дараг. Дараг
дараг дараг. Дараг дараг. Дараг
дараг дараг а дараг дараг дараг дараг дараг в дараг. Дараг дараг

[illegible]

Нак варт аи пврв в варт, когда 2 и. Катилии переише а калету (визе). Аи ско то прачае
аи. И праче прачеице за в
аи, подише, за вав, ко аи да

~~124~~
 120

~~123~~ 121

Зачинаешь "Черного лекаря" Вольда
(не) стилизаций много пишу. Диск-ки все свои записываю. Но мне пришлось спать в постель. Но я обаяна, что не пишу, т.к. за мной следят. Из этих хорроров много. Ративка редко-валя т.е. я пишу-сь и Вани, и Вольда. Из детства с Ваней, рас-стались. Но в детстве мы когда-то спали и Ратива была перенос-тв к себе и они с Ваней (как она не сопротивлялась) п-ли.

Меня привлекло в кафе.
- Дебута привлекло что-то интересное → дежурное? т.к. мой знаком-сь только то (с камен) и у нас же много денег, но нам надо свой показать и ск-ть все меньше с цветами, чтоб не подкачала.

Привлекло-е. Дети. В общем я вы-шла с серье у них у них. Хар-тот.
Ваня - камен. Я картинку из детства то 1 картинку детства (подарок из Литературы у мамы каменей) даи даи ему все дарю на руку. Все расчет (на планет).

Дети, каменное. Даи им
Даи удачи.
Дети, каменное. Даи им
аура, сил, терпения...

6.07.2000.

Вроде каменное Вани прощало, а каменное. Как Вольда всего много под камен.
С детства каменное для еще Вани-сь
в паке. Вольда их оставил и

124
122

23 и
0-с-но

о
о
1-о
и
и
о
о

уехать в следующий день. Водопровод с собой взял, а везти мне пришлось увозить, ради удачи, кати.
Мои планы? После театра спешно сначала с 2-м, а потом с 3-м и, одна 1-я, а в свои планы включил, но добрый...
Вчера же посетил к. Катюше
дочку - купил креветок и еще вина.
Вчера была встреча с Володей на кухне, а с утра в кафе (а в накануне) поговорил с Володей, а сначала в кафе. Я решил, что идет вся команда к вечеру - я одна, а потом на утро 2-я, а после их отъезда мне пока было, и Володя пошел провозить меня. Я тоже планирую
идти, к. и приехать до вечера 3-м, а Володя не был, т.к. собрал для дочери многого, а до
вечера, но это стоило
Вчера в 30 утра.
С утра было все хорошо, пока
я не начал, а в 10:00, где 3-й его то. Володя сел, что он не от и начал, а в 10:00, где 3-й
Володя же не стал, а если
Володя же не стал, а если
судит, я решила, сейчас
и подарила, а в 10:00, где 3-й
кати. Планирую провозить
Володя в кафе (я была в кафе)
Вечером меня не ушла - а в кафе.
А еще я пошел в кафе, к. и
не разговаривал с Володей, а в кафе хотел в кафе, к. Володя и в кафе директор, а в кафе, к. Володя
А мне с-то, а в кафе, к. Володя

[illegible][illegible]

[illegible]

5,08,2000

23.07

1) во как а и о с г гласные

[illegible]

(127)

~~19~~

(128) ~~(130)~~

Сейчас машина с номером 68904001
хотел, что я не ее хочу, потому что там, в
TAXI.R. В банке сейчас № 230 руб, а там в
о-го то, я хочу быть в такси, а потом норм. такси и такси TAXI.R. а там, там, что я, пожалуйста и сейчас, потому что я хочу, что не хочу, пожалуйста, и я хочу, что доставлю, пожалуйста.

1 (страница дневника)

переехала в апартаменты к девчонкам (в подземелье). Здесь хорошо, живет Мишель, Аня, я и Златкин (фокусник). В первый день (да, Мариос собирался меня смотреть три дня, то днем, то в три часа ночи, но на третий день посмотрел (как я двигаюсь). В первый день я имела семь дринок, меня трясло, когда я разговаривала с костюмерами. В этот же день я познакомилась (Мариос меня познакомил с Крисом). После того как мы поехали на его спортивной машине. Так здорово (в романтизме место). Я увидела сверкающий Лимассол, в огнях... На второй день (на первый подарил розы, во второй – желтые и красные гвоздики) поехали в магазин, он купил мне журнал, шоколад, ездили на пляж, пока говорили, волна намочила немного наши ноги. На третий день он повез меня играть в карты. С помощью моей удачной руки, мы выиграли. Если я поняла – 220 паундов. Где потом он подарил мне 110. Я так была рада, потому что мне надо отдать долг. На четвертый день мы впервые поцеловались на горе. Да, на второй день я впервые танцевала тэйбл-данс для одного очень толстого мэн. Хи тач ту ми... После я пришла, меня всю трясло, к Крису. Он удивился – что со мной. Я рассказала, после успокоилась. Это было противно и ужасно. Недавно Крис подарил мне 20 паундов (за стриптиз-данс, чтобы я не танцевала). Т.к. я сижу с ним практически весь вечер, у меня нет ни одного стриптиза, т.к. он не любит этой обстановки. Считает, что это наедине. Очень интересно было вчера. Я говорила с художником, у которого была Кира. Он поделился всем. Я для него начала танцевать стриптиз. Он категорически отказался, испугался, заплатил за тэйбл.

2

Не успела все написать. Напишу в следующем году. Я от всей души благодарна 1998 году. Этот год мне очень многое дал! Да будет благословен 1999 год. И да исполнятся все мечты! Пусть есть и будет с Божиим благословением и наставлением! Да даст нам Матерь Божья любви, гармонии и добра. Да хранит нас Ангел Хранитель. Да поможет нам Николай Чудотворец и все святые! Аминь! В добрый, чистый, прекрасный 1999 год!!!

1999!!!

Господи, благослови! Пресвятая Богородица дай нам любви и всех спаси! Ангел Хранитель нас береги! Николай Чудотворец во всем нам помоги! И все Святые будьте с нами!

Хэппи нью еар!

Вот и наступил Новый 1999 год!

С Божьей помощью!!! Континью. На третью встречу с Крисом мы поцеловались. Мне нравится быть с ним. Мы ездили в отель и делали массаж друг другу. Он хотел меня и я его, но... Потом Крис сказал, что он придет только на меня посмотреть на пять минут, т.к. это будет лучше для него и меня. Мне было страшно его потерять и я расплакалась. И на Крису это подействовало. Мне он нужен... Прежде как человек, которому я доверяю, а во-вторых – мани. Он мне который раз дарил цветы (розы). В прошлую пятницу ездила на море с Златкой трахаться (и сегодня 1.01.98. тоже) – какой прилив энергии... А вода, песочек...

Ездила покупать платье с Катей.

3

купила за 22 паунда, мне еще и подкоротили на нужную длину. Костас требует деньги за дорогу в эмигрейшн. А я не буду давать, т.к. это его работа. За дорогу в шоп 1 паунд, хорошо. А 28.12. в Трамсе мы праздновали Мэри Кристмас. Так хорошо. Покушали салаты, мясо и танцевали. Два брата – Мариос и Мелиос танцевали греческий танец. Потом девки из Трамса танцевали стриптиз. Все они с таким целлюлитом... Хорошо повесилились, а потом работа – 29.12. пришлось настоять на стриптизе, но я трусы не снимала (втихоря). В этот день я станцевала три стриптиза и один тэйбл. Мариос – браво! На следующий день только 3Z 50. А 31.12. мы встречали в Зигосе в 23.00 наш Российский Нью еар, а в 24.00 Киприотский. Как было здорово! Джимми (ди-джей) подарил мне красное вино. Мы дома (31.12.) распили, приготовили покушать с девочками и Златкой киевский торт. На работе поели кальмары, котлетки. А у меня куча салата (грибы). В пироге в Трамсе девчонки нашли 50Z ?!). А мы пирог не доели... Я и все напилась... Мартини, потом виски с Крисом. Затем мы уехали в отель. Там мы разделись и целовались, слушая РТР. Не знаю, но мне кажется, что я готова с ним переспать. Если бы не месячные. Я не считаю это изменой, не чувствую. Но проблема – без кондома. А вдруг... Поэтому... Я чувствовала его горячее... (потом тампон еле вытащила). Мы вместе искупались (вода шла то горячая, то холодная – мы веселились). Что скажет Мариос о нашем бизнесе...

4

Дай Бог нам мудрости, любви, сил и терпения!!!

01.98.

Мэри кристмас!!! Счастливого Рождества Христова!!!

Вот уже прошло семь дней с Нового Года. Джимис стал за мной ухаживать. Когда я и Катя поехали в Туристерию, он подарил мне туалетную воду (обалденную), еще кофту (которую я выбрала). А сегодня – нижнее белье (темно-синее и белое). Еще и обыкновенное платье предлагал (длинное – для улицы), но я отказалась. А вчера ездили по городу (хотела купить вечернее длинное платье для шоу), но шоп из клоузд. Попили кофе, Джимис равнодушен ко мне, он сорвал цветок (лав, нот лав). И так интересно – у меня – ноу, а у него – йес. Он расстроился. Мне жаль, он мне нравится как человек, но как мэн не в моем вкусе. Я ему очень, очень благодарна. Он должен уехать в Англию, Москву, Краснодар. Он хотел взять мой эддрес. Я объясняла, что живу с мамой, нет места. Мама в шоке... нет. Когда она его увидит... Джимис мне хоть и друг, я очень ему благодарна, но жить в моем доме...

Крис сегодня ночью имел день рождения (7.01.61.). Я хотела ему плакат подарить, но не смогла. Купила торт, открыточку. В эту ночь народ отсутствовал в Зигосе. После поехали в отель. До этого (ок. двух недель) я доводила Криса (в секс плане). Он уже не мог... Сегодня ночью я решилась (психологически я была готова и не считаю это за измену). В перипторе он спросил на счет кондомс. Я: «Вот нот?» Он смеялся, оказывается купил. Ок. одного часа мы игрались в лав. Он входил и выходил, туда, обратно (такой маленький..., очень необычные ощущения). Психологически я была готова.

5

Который раз дарит мне цветы (розы). Также ночью, девки из Трамса встретились с молодыми 19 и 23 мальчиками. Они напилась, в машине блевали. Потом домогались к девчонкам. После они вбежали домой и закрылись. Эти парни дрались с Андресом, выбили стекло. Полиция приезжала... Также Мариос избил (раньше) двух мужиков, которые не платили деньги. Это было ужасно...

Сегодня я покрасилась в другой цвет, получила Ален Карт (паспорт Кипра). У Криса в долг попросила на длинное платье ок. 30Z, но он дал 50Z, сказала, что верну, от ответил, что это презент. Не знаю, но не хочу обламываться. На работе один костюмер меня целовал все 30 минут, другой говорил о проблеме с женой (зато взял тэйбл). Другой говорит, что я леди. Другие пришли с ржачками, т.к. друг женился. Ржали с моих часов, со всего.

Стоп поставили Инге, Ире, Доне, а сейчас он хolidей хев, в субботу эту уезжают.

Мариос нью систем хэв. Надо записаться, кроме того и звонить который раз ему – куда пошла.

Господи, благослови!!!

19.01.99.

Вот уже почти месяц, как я приехала на Кипр. Ходила в ГИМ заниматься вчера (с Элизой). Побегала по дорожке

6

ок. 15 минут. Да, но проблема – я немного поправилась. Конечно, каждое утро круасан. Один костюмиас (я танцевала ему стриптиз, а потом тэйбл, но во время тэйбл он захотел стриптиз, он спайниш...) кончил, это было забавно.

Когда я один раз сидела с Рикосом, пришел Крис, я его не заметила, прошла мимо. Он ждал, ждал и ушел. На следующий день не приехал. Я ему звонила, оставляла сообщения. Когда он вернулся (пришел), я извинялась долго. Мы ездили играть в карты (ви вин, мне 50Z). Позже, 17.01.99. мы то проигрывали, то выигрывали (ок. 5-6 тыс.Z). Его друг дал мне 20Z, еще кто-то подкинул, Крис дал 10Z, так ок. 50 набралось. Я переживаю жутко. Там сидел один мэн в золоте – по 3 браслета на руках, на пальцах, его гел-фрэнд вся в золоте. Хотела Криса на линзы раскрутить, но он придумывал кучу причин. Ладно, главное, что через него я получаю деньги, иногда для меня это очень важно. Сейчас у меня ок. 340Z. Я очень хочу 500Z. Мне надо, я смогу. Когда вчера Рикосу сказала о линзах, он сразу начал беспокоиться, дай Бог, он мне поможет, а то Мариос...

С Рикосом поехали мэйк фото возле моря. Пофотографировались, но потом собрались звонить другу – покататься на лошадях. И тут его жена на джипе. Тут сцены ревности. Он меня высадил на такси, его жена подбегает и говорит, что если она увидит хоть раз меня с мужем, отправит в Россию... И за такси, где я ехала она мчалась не отставая. Я давай звонить Рикосу на мобил. Хороший таксист, мы умчались от нее.

7

Потом позже он подъехал и мы поехали кушать мороженое в ресторан. Это было что-то... А ресторан очень уютный, кстати.

Потом Мариос посадил меня к доктору-ортопеду (я ему очень нравилась). Я ему станцевала. Потом с девчонками мы поехали в Бузуки. Я впервые увидела - что это такое. Там песни на греческом языке и обкидывают цветами. Его друг себя плохо чувствовал, был нервным (да, в Зигосе он встал на колени передо мной и поцеловал ниже пупка – у выхода из клуба). Потом мы поехали в отель, Мариос посадил меня в свою машину. Мы поехали в отель, там так красиво... Искупались, он повставлял немного мои позвонки. И хотел переспать. Но я объяснила, что этим не занимаюсь. Джорджи сказал, что меня продал Мариос за одну тысячу Z... Он подарил мне набор 14 духов Эстелаудер, дал 50Z и я уехала. Правда он себя плохо чувствовал (наверное потому что я не спала с ним). Я целовалась с ним, это все. Какое чудесное было утро. В 8 часов...

Господи, благослови! Пресвятая Богородица спаси. Ангел Хранитель нас береги. Николай Чудотворец во всем помоги!!! Аминь!

2.02.99.

Сегодня у нас с любимым 3 года и 5 месяцев. Дай нам Бог счастья, любви! Звонила с машины Рикоса Алексею и он испугался, когда я сказала о звонке мне на работу, но я успокоила. Как всегда стесняется сказать о своих чувствах (при маме).

8

Еще ок. 27-28.01. Мариос наорал на меня из-за Криса. Всем выложил, что он мой бой-френд... Я была спокойна, т.к. выпила вина. На следующий день меня повели в офис. Я просидела ок. 1,5 часа, ревела. Мелиос сказал, чтобы я не назначала время кам Криса (я сказала, чтобы он приехал под конец). Что нельзя иметь бой-френд, т.к. др. костюмеры отходят. Я поняла все, кроме, одного – как это возможно придавать? Я ему столько доверяла, а он, Крис, предал меня и опозорил. Но я его простила. Но 29.01. мы ездили в степь (он проставил мне, я танцевала для Николь). Я напилась (он взял еще с собой вино), устроила беседу с намеками (о предательстве, о доверии, но не сказала, что речь идет о нем). И он хотел переспать (хотя до этого, после того, что я не могла кончить, он сказал – секс невер), а я не дала, возбудила его и издеваясь, немного отомстила. После пошли в его ресторан (утром на ланч).

Ездили мы в горы с Таней, Светой. Поиграли в снежки, потом пошли покушали рыбы... Так хорошо было...

С Рикосом ездили в магазин, он подарил мне много косметики, а сегодня делали маски на лицо, очистки. Подарил мне серебро с моим именем. Я ему от всей души благодарна за все. За поездку на ферму к лошадям. Первый раз в жизни каталась на лошадях... Почти получилось. Такие впечатления... Он еще сделал мне фотографии большие. Дай Бог ему всего доброго (почему-то сейчас не приехал).

Николаес мне подарил обалденные цветы с телефоном. С Региной мы ездили к нему домой, кушали шашлыки. Потом в воскресенье он повез меня на гору, хотя я хотя я хотела на байт (пляж). Я обругала и он завернул обратно. Я так хорошо потренировалась. После поехали домой, я искупалась у него, он подарил мне свой спортивный костюм, музыку, а потом понес на руках меня в свою спальню... Я с разведенными руками в стороны не захотела туда попасть. После долго разговаривали. Он сказал, т.к. я не занимаюсь сексом, он не сможет – это ненормально. Кинул меня. Значит так надо...

9

На следующий день я сидела с другим Андресом. Он подарил мне много вещей. И говорит, что не хочет секса, хочет игры, хочет внутренней удовлетворенности. Обещал хolidэй в Испанию. Да будет на все воля Божья! После Бузуков целовал мне ноги, обкидал цветами, помыл ноги в шампанском, обцеловал. Интересный. В этот день Крис приехал, но меня не дождался. С Крисом ездили в карты играть (мне перепало 20 ). Мне хорошо с ним. Но я очень осторожна. Вчера один костюмер хотел секса, но мы с Натали убедили его, что мы занимаемся мастурбацией, иногда девочка с девочкой. Он испугался нас отправил. От мамки письмо получила.

Дай Бог нам всего доброго, чистого, главное – любви, мудрости, сил, терпения, благословения!!!

8.02.99.

Времени прошло немного, а событий... Крис делает вид, что он ничего не рассказывал о сексе, да и что тут такого? Он изменился, любит только себя. Когда я сказала о задержке периода, он предложил сказать об этом Мариосу (крэйзи), или, например, купить тест (я должна)... Я действительно переживаю, т.к. ок. 12 дней задержка, но сейчас вроде бы начали болеть груди, прыщик. А вчера я с Рикосом поехала в малый отель, пришлось ему дать меня поцеловать там и сделать вид, что я финиш. А потом и ему помогла. Мне нравится, что он из себя не строит никого, с ним мне весело. То в ресторан поехали, то на лошадях. Как здорово, первый раз в жизни, немного рысью, потом мышцы немного болели.

10

Ариане стоп из-за костюмера (то ли он с другого клуба шеф, а она с ним мииит, то ли что-то другое). На этот день (в субботу вечером) Мариос запретил вообще куда-либо ездить. В супермаркет один раз в неделю с Костасом (пока еще не до). Никаких шопс, гим. Только с костюмерс даже в церковь не разрешил на 10 минут. Теперь мы в тюрьме. В субботу 6.02. праздновали день рождения Ленки (в ресторане). Приехал Костян по заказу Мариоса, даже мороженое не дал доест. Хорошо посидели, выбирали сами меню, рыбки.... Торт в Зигосе Мариос не разрешил есть. Оставили на воскресенье, даже перед работой не разрешили, сказали после. А после... выбросили в мусорку... Такого никогда я не видела...

С Николаесом после мы встретились только на день рождения Регины в кабаре. Когда поцеловались, он аж, бедняга, еле вытерпел.

День рождения Регины (3.02.) отметили... У Светы пропали в кармане 70Z + 10Z, которые были помечены. Она пришла проверить меня и нашла помеченную купюру. А я эти деньги получила только от гарсонов. Тут все на меня начали смотреть... У меня истерика. Мишель побежала сказать, что без меня они не пойдут на день рождения. Всю ночь я плакала, не могла работать (5 дринков и 1 стриптиз). С Крисом поехала, он даже не особо меня успокаивал. Что ему надо, он говорит то-

11

лько о сексе, а мои проблемы его не интересуют. Только с Андресом и Светой я смогла съездить в ресторан к нему и покушать (а потом в аут). Да, до этого ночью я ему устроила ночь... С вином, с намеками о предательстве. Сделала вид, что дринк и никакого секса, только немного помучила его. Я что, он раньше хоть что-то давал, а сейчас... Рожей кривляет. Но я делаю вид, что все хорошо. Сегодня я померилась... бедра 97,5 – 98, ноги 57?! Талия – 67?! Я поняла. У меня была такая история после прошлого дня рождения. Конфеты, шоколад... Я торможу, хватит!

Еще меня достал Лукос. Каждый день по три раза звонит, чего-то хочет. Съездила с ним в ресторан. По дороге заставил меня одеть очки, дабы у его друзей меня никто (в его джипе серебристого цвета) не увидел. Потом все, мне не будет звонить... Сейчас опять звонил. Хочет прийти в кабаре, говорит, что без меня крэйзи (я ему «ты который день такой»).

Андреас завтра хочет купить мне офф, пойти в ресторан, дискотеку. Попросила его в бассейн. Дай Бог, чтобы Мариос наш подобрел, чтобы ушла эта дурацкая система, чтобы все было хорошо! господи, благослови!!!

11.02.99.

Сегодня объем бедер 99... Итак, я весь день ждала этой ночи. Андреас купил мне офф. Мы поехали покушали в лучший фиш ресторан с его другом и мэн (ок. 60 лет) с Италии. Мы беседовали. О многом. Потом поехали в различные места (бузуки, но все были закрыты). Съездили в «Фунель» на дискотеку, там так красиво... Я потанцевала от души, пили бейлис. Потом в Бузуки. Здесь море цветов, горы цветов.

12

Пришлось станцевать под греческую музыку (во время чего я была вся усыпана цветами). Андреас говорил, что кажется любит меня. Он себя не очень хорошо чувствовал, т.к. сильно устал (аритмия). Потом мы поехали в отель, где он несколько раз спрашивал меня уйти ли ему? Но я попросила остаться. Он долго вставлял карточку в дверь. Мы спали вместе. Он пытался немного поприставать ко мне, но я его остановила, сказав, что период. Он молодец, контролировал все. Потом мы проснулись ок. 10 утра, ему надо было ехать в офис. И я весь день была одна. Я съела кит кат + 100 гр. орешков, запила соком (естественно потолстеешь). Потом пошла в бассейн плавать. Так чудесно, он был небольшой. Туда, обратно. Потом я пошла погуляла, пофотографировалась. Сходила в ресторан, съела томатного супа, огромную тарелку салата, кальмары, где

меня за все благодарили. За заказ, за то, что я поела. Затем пошла в номер, приготовилась, поговорила с мальчиком (обслуживающий персонал). Мне принесли презент (может что сдачу в ресторане недодали) от кого-то (банан, киви, груша, мандарин). Я снова прошлась, далее поплавала в бассейне. И пошла звонить, но телефон сломался, то дверь не могла открыть. Приехало такси, я поехала в офис к Андреасу. Он нервничал, устал. Я посидела, продемонстрировала модели, затем он меня отвез домой, подарив мне 50Z (я отдала ему сдачу). Вот такой офф первый раз я имела. Приехала я ок. 19.00. Приехал Мелиус за Танькой, она хотела уехать в Москву (получила стоп) за свои деньги. Потом передумала и уехала в «Кристал» в Ларнаку. Правильно сделала. В добрый ей путь.

13, 15

Крис потом начал устраивать сцены, что нашим отношениям финиш. Я долго с ним разговаривала, специально всплакнула. И поняла одно. Что от меня ему нужен был только секс. Его не волнуют мои проблемы, работа, самочувствие. Дальше себя никого не видит. Из-за того, что я имела офф, рассказал историю, что Алина (до меня) ради него бросила Андреаса, что он сумасшедший, т.к. дарил сотню цветов. На себя бы посмотрел. В последнее время цветы не дарил, 10Z дал на колготки и все, в карты стал проигрывать, стал приценяться к игрушкам (типо дорого для меня), дриг Z 3-4, не более... Я сказала, что если он хоть что-то ко мне чувствует, он простит меня (в подтверждение от неожиданно чихнул).

Думаю, что все, может это и к лучшему, т.к. другие костюмерс, вот ай лайк, бекам фри. Может это и к лучшему...

Например, немного ненормальный подарил мне Пако рабан туалетную воду, потом игрушку купил, потом подарил золото – (с себя снял). А вчера журнал и органайзер (где были его личные записи). Надо сегодня отдать. Один костюмер, который хотел после Москвы спать со мной, пообещал мне подарить браслет (силвер), как я просила (после того, что я помолилась, что Крис ни разу не подарил мне ни одного подарка). Но при этом сказал, что хочет спать со мной, если я буду сидеть и говорить с ним.

Сейчас у нас новая система. Танцуют по 2, 1 топлис. Иногда шоу. В это время другие отдыхают. Мне больше это нравится. Господи, благослови, дай нам любви, мудрости, сил, терпения!!!

14, 16

7.03.99.

Вот и состоялся день 3 года и 6 месяцев как мы знакомы с любимым. Он мне позвонил в Зигос и сказал, что очень любит, что не может без меня и считает дни, когда я приеду... А я не знаю, может быть продлю контракт, но только на 1 месяц.

Без Криса мне хорошо. познакомилась со Стефанисом, 3 раза ездили в отель, вместе спали только. Первый раз в комнате не работал даже светильник. На второй раз брал радио. Он такой чуткий, интересный, нелепый... Но денег не дает, ничего не дарит. Сегодня взяла у него 10Z за массаж, обиделся (но я сказала, что это не за массаж). Сейчас должен приехать.

У Андреса (художника) попросила для студентов два часа по 20 минут с 5минутным перерывом. С какого-то студента по 2Z (ок. 16Z) я получила. Хочу, чтобы мой портрет нарисовали. С Рикосом любовью занимались, 2 раза. Это ужас, как собачки (еще 1 раз мало). Хочет больше двух раз в неделю. Я – нет!!! Еще спрашивает – лучше ли он, чем мой бой-фрэнд фром Раша... Ему и не сравниться. Я тяну с него видеокамеру для мамы. Отложила 100Z на магнитофон Алексею (маме не буду говорить). Рикос подарил цепочку серебряную с сердечком из жемчуга. Красиво... Да, мой объем равен 100...Аппетит. Сейчас начала пить чай слабительный. Дай Бог, похудею.

Выпросила у него крем от целлюлита. Может подарит мне золотую цепочку с моим именем Алина.

Оксанку изнасиловал Джордж, этот маньяк (она была пьяная). Мы ездили вместе с Эриком, Оксаной кататься на лошадях и стали очевидцами секса лошадей. Так хорошо покатались...

17

С немного ненормальным произошло ЧП. Я периодически с ним разговаривала. Мариос выкинул его. Он драл на меня. А этот пришел с полицией, думая, что тот меня ударил... Мариос так переживал. Все уладилось, я сказала, что со мной все в порядке. Он для меня много сделал (сказал, что принесет 100Z, а сам дал только 20Z)...

Стараюсь, чтобы я была на первом месте по бизнесу. Педрос чуть не порвал мне одежду, говоря, что купит дорожку. Чокнутый садист. Обещал серебряную цепочку подарить.

12.03. праздновали день рождения у Вички. Был сладкий стол. Балебос подарил ей золотой браслет, парфюм. Хорошо посидели. 13.03. в ночь Наташку и Монику заставили танцевать по 40 минут подряд, не давая работать. Моника не выдержала и себе пошла ставить стоп. Наташка до этого теряла сознание.

Оксана не выдержала и себе тоже поставила из-за Моника. Пришел Хилиус, говорил. Моника вернулась, а Оксана нет...

Вчера ездили на лошадях покатались причем быстро. И я, на обратном пути потеряла свои часы. Многие костюмеры не любили мои часы. Но я надеюсь, что их найдет Ахмед.

Любимый звонил, думал, что я на следующей неделе приеду. Но я пока решила остаться. Он расстроился. Но мне немного надо.

Сегодня доктор Джордж приехал. Он так был рад. Я в прайвде с ним только обнималась и целовалась. Он так был счастлив... Потом поехали в Бузуки с Андресом и Машкой (день рождения). Он ей подарил много цветов, торт, песню – здорово. Потом я напилась вина. Поехали в отель с Джорджем. Я в таком расслабоне... Он целовал меня все утро, обнимал. Потом подарил мне часы, будильник, серьги с цепочкой, Органза – парфюм. Так мне было приятно. + 100Z.

18

Дай Бог, чтобы все благополучно складывалось. Господи, благослови! Пресвятая Богородица спаси и дай нам любви. Ангел Хранитель нас береги! Николай Чудотворец всем помоги!!!

21.03.99.

Вчера ровно было 3 месяца, как я приехала на Кипр...

Здесь каждый день что-нибудь случается. То какие-то молокососы забрали нас с Моникой (дети ок. 18 лет). У меня вообще не шел бизнес, тут они открывают шампанское, хоть что-то 1 танец и 4 дринка... Поехали, повели в какой-то отель (дешевый). И давай Моника их докапывать. Хотел 100Z за секс (а сам ребенок). Сколько он перетаскивал меня на кровать... Замахивался на меня (а я спрашивала: «что случилось с твоей рукой?»). Так и ничего не дала. Поехали, не могли найти дорогу домой (а каждый автобус... «Вы здесь что, животных убиваете?»).

Ездили с Оксанкой с толстым. Его маленький друг (с отклонениями) не мог ок. 30 минут вспомнить дорогу, мы ездили большими кругами). Потом приехали в отель, я помогла ему подрачить, сделала массаж, он заплатил 30Z. Оксанке... придурок разбил косметику, хотел забрать свои

19

30Z за драчилку. Она перелезла через балкон и пришла ко мне. Мы уехали на такси...

Криса (бывший Ленкин) попросила, мы поехали в Пафос. Хорошо (ок. 1 часа) туда и обратно. Пофотографировались. Он купил мне электрические часы, долго выбирали. А потом Эрик точно такие (но другого цвета) подарил. Я быстрее прятать.

С Сережкой вчера после встречи с Паиникосом (заезжал делать драчилку – мне так надоело это...) – подарил платье ок. 37 Z) – говорила и разрыдалась... Он потом пришел, забрал меня (а до этого я сидела с Филипом – с Парижа, он выставил большую бутылку шампанского – 8 дринок балгодарю, Господи). 19.03. я имела 40Z + 10Z salari! Первый раз в жизни 5 прайвидов по 6Z + 10 дринок).

Моника стала бизнес перебивать. Как ей надо – она с Рикосом сидит получает бизнес, как я. Когда мне надо костюмером ее – так давай быстрее. Оксанка уехала домой. Сегодня. Пошла (с Трамса) заплатила Андреасу (секьюрити) ----- и в 6 часов утра уехала с костюмером, вернулась ок. 10 утра. Узнал Мариос, Мелиос – предупреждали.

Мариос вчера орал на меня – почему мы ездили с Паиникосом, он не приходит в клуб, я с ним занималась сексом – что-то имею я он нет... Яблан. Я не занимаюсь... с ним! (кричу в ответ), кому ты блядь веришь. Потом вроде поверил

- Господи, благослови! Матерь Божья дай нам любви и спаси. Ангел Хранитель сохрани. Николай Чудотворец в бизнесе, моем похудении помоги!!! Аминь!

20

3.04.99.

Уже 3 апреля. Вчера было 3 года и 7 месяцев, как мы знаем друг друга. Дай Бог нам всего наилучшего (мне рабе Божьей Ангелине и рабу Божьему Алексею).

Лариса (мисс китчен) помогла мне очень. Отвезла вещи (пальто, джинсы) в Краснодар + передала по 200 долларов маме и Алексею. Мой милый позвонил потом и сказал, что моя мама была счастлива, что меня ожидает серьезный разговор об аспирантуре (что я должна учиться). А любимый сказал, что не может принять этих денег, и они будут лежать, пока я не приеду (значит это, что я ему важнее, что не деньги главное).

Приехали на прошлой неделе туристы с Кувейта. Мариос продал им меня, Регину, Джулию и Надю (по 40Z нам). Мой харь сказал, что не хочет секса. Я на радостях напилась вина и по глупости отдалась (до этого попросила 100 долларов не за секс, а за нужду). На что он ответил, что деньги у секьюрити внизу. Самое ужасное – он засовывал член в задний проход (мне так было больно... как никогда, это было страшно). Я потом не чувствовала своей попы, 3 дня было больно... Он сказал, что придет в Зигос или сама приеду и заберу эти деньги. Он уехал на следующий день... Бог ему судья (Ибрагиму). Через два дня я познакомилась с замечательным человеком. Я поехала в отель к нему, сделала массаж (40Z секс 100Z). Я его возбудила, он кончил, не входя в меня. Я получила 100Z + деньги за такси (к Ибрагиму). Дай Бог этому замечательному человеку здоровья и всего наилучшего!

21

С Викой прокололи уши по одной дырке благодаря Эрику – бесплатно. Ездили к врачу, т.к. задержка 17 дней. Через --- дня – месячные. Сказал врач, что элин ---сайд оф ми. Слава Богу.

Я радуюсь, когда в прайвид, мужской род кончают. У некоторых это было первый раз. Леандрос привел своего сына в Зигос. Теперь я встречаюсь с сыном и с ним. Леандрос замечательный человек, заботится, все обстирает, нарежет фрукты. Подарил мне золотой браслет (первый раз в моей жизни...).

Бывают проблемы с девчонками. Кричат, что я всегда вперед всех лечу к костюмерам когда еще им не поставили), хотя я видела, и Аманду, и Свету. Моника делала 75Z со своим костюмером за день (я максимум 50Z) – но я бегала везде). Когда Эрик не взял у нее танец, она сказала своему костюмеру тоже, чтобы не брал у меня танцы.

Разные ситуации. Вчера один весельчак разул мою левую ногу, обрызгал апельсином, одел мой туфель. Повел меня танцевать на сцену, потанцевали. Попрыгал на мне, но танец не взял... На все воля Божья!!!

Господи, благослови. Матерь Божья, спаси и дай нам любви. Ангел Хранитель нас береги! Николай Чудотворец в бизнесе и --- моего веса помоги!!! Аминь!!!

КАЛО ПАША!

16.04.99.

Христос Воскресе!

Во истину Воскресе!

22

Как это было чудесно! Пойти в русскую церковь (со всеми девчонками). Я впервые сделала Крестный ход за батюшкой со свечой, все так было чудесно... Единственное – Костян приехал и мы не успели освятить куличи. (Эрик купил нам в ресторане кулич и Царскую Паску из творога). Поехали в «Трамс», поели, поговорили, потанцевали. Я пожалела, что не поехали со Стефаносом, он мог забрать меня ночью после церкви, поехать куда-нибудь...

Да, все девчонки 12 раз откусили 12 куличей – это значит, что должен быть счастливый год.

От Сережки узнала, что он любит девчонку Люду, которая работала в Кабаре, проблема с его родителями. А до Пасхи меня Мариос отдал другому костюмеру (Антону), а Стефанос хотел меня забрать, но ему не сказали, что меня забирают другие. Он разозлился, даже не хотел меня видеть, не то что говорить. Я расплакалась. Но потом, Слава Богу, он извинился, т.к. был пьян. Я хочу его, если честно.

Забрадали ябланы, которые кончают наружу (во время танца видно не замечаю, как открывают, но как? Может через брюки). Во вторник – 5 танцев. Один мальчик должен бы мэрид в субботу, пришел с друзьями (толпа). Всем позже танцевали тэйбл. Джулии Мариос дал свадебное платье, она танцевала для этого мальчика стриптиз на сцене (он только уходит, его друзья обратно – куда пошел?). За руку схватил меня один костюмер, с которым сидела девочка в платке и мужчина. Оказалось, что умеют гадать по руке. Сначала представляется Мустафа, потом Ахмед. Хотел бай офф на три дня, я говорила про один. Поговорил с босом и купил на три дня...

23

Татьяна, ее муж, Ахмед и я. В первую ночь в отеле Меридиан он меня замучил с сексом («Плиз, плиз»). Я не дала. Меня раздражает каждое прикосновение, я устала. Потом он стал меня уважать, что я не такая девчонка, как все. Мы ездили в различные кабаре в эти три дня. Я плавала в бассейне два раза (опэн и клоуз). И самое важное – он пригласил меня в Египет. Он открывает для меня все дороги везде – работа, развлечения. Предложил мэрид. У него есть жена и две дочери, один мальчик, которому я помогала выбирать одежду. Все, что я хочу – дом, карьера. Даже он мог купить унижение моего босса, который мне чистит обувь... Никогда я до этого не опускаюсь. Ни за что. И вот я решилась на следующей неделе поехать в Египет. Он придет за мной на следующей неделе. Я могла уехать и послезавтра, он мог бы сделать мне визу. Но я решила не затягивать. Татьяна замечательный человек с Ростова, только 22 года – и бывшая балерина и ясновидающая, разносторонний человек.

Я так разжирила... Рестораны, на завтрак круассаны. Я похудею, даю слово!

Светка хочет стоп поставить. Сейчас сижу, жду врача Джорджа.

Господи, благослови в добрый путь! Благодарю и прошу мудрости, сил, терпения, любви и охранения!!!

24

25.02.99

Это была неделя «крэйзи». Мариос собирался уходить от нас в «Трамс» и отдать Джимису и какому-то гарсону фром «Архондиса».

У нас не было 3 дня бизнеса. Первый раз был один дринк (и то, должна была встретиться за него; но я не встретила, т.к. поехали в офис за деньгами – salari, но опять не дали, все жду).

Поехали со Стефаном, напились тоника (40% алкоголя). Я как напилась, первый раз в жизни ненормально. Занимались любовью, а потом рвало... Бедняга, он бегал за мной, ставил мне кресло, чтобы удобнее было, мне так было плохо. Я отравилась. Он очень заботился. Но после он заболел, температура.

Мариос надоел из-за того, что не было бизнеса, из-за Бамбоса поставил Вичке стоп и Наташке (выходит замуж). Мы плакали все, надеялись, что Мариос уйдет в воскресенье фром Зигос.

В пятницу впервые я сделала 8 прайвидс (60Z) и 12 дринок. Я была никакая... Еще, до этой один яблан забрал меня и хотел, чтобы я сделала минет с его великим стручком, уговаривала, чтобы дал мне 10Z. Другой имеет дом с лифтом, но я не дала! Они забирали меня перед самым выходом очень неожиданно (за 30-20 минут перед закрытием кабаре).

Вчера был 1 прайвид и 10 дринок (Мариос наорал на меня, что я не включала свет на танце, хотя я включала). Поехали с Сережкой занимались любовью. Первый раз за 4 месяца я кончила реально... В 11.30 осталась с Панникосом (до этого он подарил мне кольцо – белое золото). Я мечтала... Поехали в аквапарк... Накатались, наплавались... Потом я 2 часа ездила на харлей дэвидсон (мотобай). Со всеми поздоровались, вокруг объездили.

25

--- раза купались в море (после солт пляжа). Сама ездила на водном мотоцикле на макс спиид... (60 км/ч по воде).

Секьюрити продал информацию Эрику, что я поцеловалась в губы с Серегой, в чем была одета... Эрик докопался до меня, до слез. Почему поцеловалась, оделась... Я пошла к Мариосу, он был злой.

У Эрика забрала все свои деньги, переживала... Обещал видеокамеру во вторник. Завтра приезжает Ахмед...

Леандрос подарил мне туфли (я сама выбрала, поменял остальные доллары). Квартира стоит – 12.000 долларов, 2 – 15.000 долларов (комнаты) в центре.

Вчера заключительный раз ездила на Альбано, (на моем первом коне – очень быстро, одна).

Да благословит нас Господь!!! Да даст любви Матерь Божья! Да хранит нас Ангел Хранитель. Да поможет нам Николай Чудотворец и все святые!!!

6.05.99.

Все три неделю я находилась в раздумье. Я не знала – ехать мне в Египет или нет. Все меня останавливали. Я приехала и разговаривала с Мариосом, что хочу уехать о хolidэйс. Но ругался, что я хочу все сразу за два дня. Я решила ехать, собрала вещи. Приезжал Ахмед, забирал меня. Обещал мне визу, но сказал, что проблемы. Приехал Джордж (доктор). До этого я ходила к врачу, чтобы дали справку, что я болею. Сказала, что болит кишечник. Мне дали таблетки. Потом хотели мой анализ, но бумагу так и не давали. Мне не смогли купить офф. Как я сидела в больнице --- - 80, 110 (70) – норма. Ужас.

26

Джордж в эту ночь забрал меня. До этого я по дурусти попросила Андреаса заехать в «Меромания» хоутэл, чтобы забрать у Ахмеда копию визы (он загрузил, что что-то не получилось, какие-то проблемы). Это был переломный момент... Потом поехали в «Меридиан» отель с Джорджем. Он подарил мне браслет и кольцо (3 вида золота – белый, желтый, красный). Серебряную икону, для фотографии, будильник – все серебро... Все было хорошо.

В эту ночь Мариос наорал на меня о происшедшем. Сказал, чтобы следующий день я целый день сидела дома и ждала его. Я (1.05.99) ждала целый день, но он не приехал. В этот день я должна была иметь офф с Джорджем. Мариос вечером вызывал в офис и сказал, что в воскресенье я еду в Краснодар. Я не могла работать... Я была в шоке. Пришел Стефанос и забрал меня, а Мариос сказал, чтобы он вернул меня в 7 утра, Костас отвезет меня. Стефанос сказал, что не хочет, вставать в 7 утра и отвозить меня. Оказывается это был психологический трюк. (урок для меня, я оставалась на Кипре). 2.05.99 у Мариоса день рождения. Я поехала в офис говорить с Мелиосом, Мариосом, сказала, что это была ошибка. Они простили. Следующий этап – вернуть Ардеаса. Я звонила ему, говорила, он обещал приехать, но не приезжал... Сейчас уехал на неделю в Германию. Я подписала Мариосу открытку еще раз извинилась. Мы поехали --- торт (Костян купил). Хорошо веселились. Мариос обнял меня в офисе и извинился, что так орал (до того за 1 день он меня не мог выдворить из офиса, я смотрела ему в глаза, он не мог. Я взяла его руку, тут он и выдворил меня из офиса). Я его люблю, как босса. Я чувствую себя нормал, когда он в хорошем настроении. Разное бывает.

27

Бизнеса сейчас нет. Вчера один яблан взял танец и не заплатил, т.к. я ему не дала поцеловать рuse. --
- , гадость какая.

Ахмед не звонит. Боже, дай мне сил вернуть хорошее отношение твоего раба Андреаса и Джорджа!

В добрый путь! Господи, благослови, Матерь Божья, спаси. Ангел Хранитель нас береги. Николай Чудотворец в бизнесе, в моем похудении и во всех делах помоги!!! Аминь!!!

16.05.99.

Сколько всего произошло... Во-первых. Я настроена серьезно потерять свой вес, т.к. я раскоровела (грудь 94, талия 69, бедра 102, бедро 59, внизу 51...).

Я сильная. Я контролирую все, что я ем, сколько. У меня очень сильная воля. Я выдержу!!! За эту неделю я должна иметь бедра 100. я смогу, выдержу. Я сильная. Я всем руковожу.

Много, чего произошло. У Андреаса --- из броукен, он приехал в Зигос, но я не могла с ним говорить. В один прекрасный день Мариос брал афтер ворк нас, подождал, когда мы переоденемся, заставил одеть платья, а так устала в этот день (ок. 8 танцев). Начал морали читать, меня задел все таки. Про Арманду говорил, подкалывал, что она в офисе кофе пила для отрезвления. На следующий день снова собрание. Бизнес не шел и он решил нас наказать. Одну неделю не ходили никуда, записали № машины, вр. костюмер. Поставил Монике и Вике стоп. Как мы все плакали... Я не могла работать. Один яблан не заплатил за танец (я делала 2). Другой грузил про деньги. Я станцевала, он не дал, а Антонио молча стоял и смотрел, даже не пытался помочь. И Аманда 2 танца без денег ему же. Вскоре

28

Аманде поставили стоп. (до этого она себе, а потом Мариос нашел причину и поставил ей). Пришли другие две девки с другого кабаре (т.к. их обанкротилось).

Сонька праздновала свой день рождения. Хорошо девчонки помогли приготовить, все было легко. Рикос стал прикалываться, что я в прайвиде давала себя --- его хорошему другу (он не знает, что мы с Эриком встречаемся). Я без слез, нагло с ним поговорила и отвергла все.

Со Стефанисом на море занимались любовью под шум волн, ветра; загорала я потом без ничего. Так чудесно.

В пятницу была партия. Жениться собирались два мэна с разных стран с одной телефонной компании. Приехали в этот день в Африки, Америки, Австралии ок. 20 человек. Мы там танцы. Я переоделась со всем

29

в футболку, я ходила и оттягивала. Ангелос (бывший костюмер Регины) подарил, как обещал золотое кольцо Соне и мне. Регина много что ему обещала, но была один раз (секс), много, что поимела.

Девчонки прикалывались. Купили сами себе дринки, Мариос был в шоке. Регину один раз дома забыли, уехали на работу без нее, сколько вони... А когда она на унитазе на бочке заснула...

Мариос сейчас уехал в Краснодар, подала ему я свой пакетик «маленький». В воскресенье приезжала Моника и Вичка к нам, я только 1 часик побыла с ней. Сейчас живу с Олей и Соней. Более или менее. Когда пойдут мои месячные? Из-за нервоза уже 17-18 дней как нет.

Господи, благослови меня, на работе. Дай мне во всем сил, терпенья, и помоги мне похудеть! Аминь!!!

P.S. Крисис (бармен) нарисовал.

Я так смеялась, я должна измениться

(уменьшиться). Сейчас Гришка работает барменом, а Стефанис в Трамсе. С Андресом я ездила ночью на харли Дэвидсоне 150 км/ч! (В его джинсах и куртке) по трассе. А какое чудо эта собака...

Вчера фотографировалась в 4 сизонс. Хороший пацан. Господи, благослови!!!

22.05.99.

Время летит быстро. Мне остался ровно один месяц работать до конца моего контракта. Я обязательно должна похудеть. Я похудею!!! Аминь. Переживаю из-за месячных. Уже

30

через одну неделю будет как месяц задержки. Я пью таблетки для урегулирования цикла (с прошлого визита гинеколога). Господи, помоги, чтобы у меня пошли месячные!!! Маятник дает информацию и рамки, что ничего нет. (даже признаков нет). Господи!

Вчера из-за одного яблана (как он умудрился работать в банке) не поехала с девчонками гулять в центр. Я расплакалась. (с другой стороны, девчонки объелись. Регина (Лена) праздновала свое имя и принесла торты. Ну я и поела.

Сегодня с Панникосом ездила на пляж, на обратном пути его машина не могла завестись. Ну мы потолкали немного и поехали. Вчера было 4 прайвид, 1 тэйбл и 12 дринк. А в среду – 7 прайвид и 2 дринк, в четверг плохо 1 прайвид и 2 дринк (ужас). Вчера должны были со Стефанисом поехать в Ларнаку, я позвонила Вичке, и он не пришел... Я поехали с Деву. Он хочет подарить мне икону – голд, 24 карат, где Иисус Христос (он сам рисовал. Я тут вспомнила, что мне говорили про вещь, подарок, с которым у меня будет проблема на Кипре и в Краснодаре. Именно вещь. Именно вчера я вдруг стала вспоминать об этом.

Деви сказал, что у него финиш бензин и мы вернемся на мотоцикле. На этом небольшом... 130 км/ч я кричала. Было страшно рискованно, быстро. Я не чувствовала своего лица.

Эрик опять не приехал. А обещал. Господи, благослови!!!

31

29.05.99.

Время летит. С одним молодым костюмером вывалилась из прайвида на половину, это было нечто.

Эрик подарил мне (наконец-то) видеокамеру мечту моей мамки. Она так мечтала... В этот же день мы с Машей поехали в «Сант Платаель» поплавали, скушали, массаж. Эрик что-то стал с Марией хлестать, не скрывая. Купил ей купальник за 39 , тапочки нам. Хотел после всего секс, мы отказались. Потом бизнеса ей делает второй раз больше, чем мне цветы дарит. Потом отчитывается по телефону (спогетти).

Стелиос дал мне 30Z (положил тихо в сумку). Я вчера я купила платье себе (20Z), спать типо пижамы (ок. 44Z).

Наконец-то, Слава Богу, месячные (не было ок. 1 месяца).

Сегодня поехали со Стефанисом на Джорджио Бич, а я так хотела плавать, т.к. он захотел. Я устала, пошла и в платье в море, в волны. Я плакала и смеялась. Потом разревелась. Он меня успокаивал. Подарил мне полотенце желтого цвета. Извинился, если что не так. Все нормально.

Да, один богатый араб забрал с другом меня и Марию. Потом потанцевала на дискотеке. И только в отеле я сказала, что у меня месячные. Он обиделся (он хотел), позвонил Мариосу пожаловался, богатая сволочь.

Бамбос дал мне медисин, я должна сбросить за месяц ок. 10 кг. Сейчас я 77 кг. Господи, благослови!

32

30.05.99.

Когда Машке Эрик подарил обезьяну, пришла позже женщина с цветами. Машка говорит ей: «Она смотрит на тебя (обезьяна)». А женщина подумала, что она выглядит, как обезьяна. Обиделась, не хотела продавать цветы.

Надя три дня назад напилась... Ее все девочки откачивали... И ванную ее, и кофе. Переживали, чтобы Мариос ее не видел. Немного отошла и опять у костюмеров виски... Регина молодец. Пришлось по лицу похлестать.

Бамбос мне дал медицинские препараты для увеличения метаболизма. Дай Бог, чтобы я имела 99 см объем. Дай Бог!!!

6.06.99

2.06 было 3 года и 9 месяцев с моим любимым. Он мне такое письмо прислал...

У одного араба попросила (он говорил, что богатый) 65Z на магнитофон. Он дал 70+5 на такси. Дай Бог ему всего доброго. Стелиосу не дала, он обиделся. Проехали в Арфонидес. Он расплатился своей карточкой, а потом забрал 65Z (с жадностью, яблан). Обиделся, не хочет приходить в кабаре.

Надка и Машка нажрались. Они валялись на полу в туалете. Мариос им синяков наделал. Простил. Они были в таком состоянии, Регине просто стоп поставили. Дали 3 дня хolidеев. Она пожелала мне всего доброго и наилучшего.

Алексия пришла в кабаре в 22.00

33

тапочках, капюшоне. Антония ее --- офис, а она ушла. Такой вид имела, а что собственно такое произошло. Это было нечто. Ее лишили 2 дней зарплаты. Она сегодня уезжает. Приехали с Греции морячки. Такие все беленькие. Брали танцы, ---погр-сь.

Ездил с Эриком на лошадях, в Сант Рафаэль, поплавала в море (теплое), массажистка (девочка с Краснодара).

В четверг Стефаниос пришел, полночи со мной и 2 танца. Так было замечательно, весело. Потом я в отеле 3 четверти часа будила на работу.

Три дня держала диету, от препаратов судороги сводило, потом Бамбос, от--- Кальция, слава Богу прошло!

Похудела только 77 кг. Был у Ольги день рождения. Приехала после Эрика ---сь), 1-ый раз не переедала. Ольга хочет уехать в воскресенье, устала от работы. У меня осталось 1,5 недели. Сейчас столько нью герлс... 15.

Они жили с нами, чистые аутницы.

---енка уехала (хорошая девчонка ок. 34 лет), сразу же приехала другая. Теперь с 4.

Ездил к дантисту, хорошо, только теперь воспалилась десна, сижу с ромашкой. Стефаниос говорит, что очень будет скучать, хочет, чтобы я ему писала письма. Еще Пьер влюбился в меня. Сегодня ходили, разговаривали, подарил открытку 20Z.

Сонька два дня назад уехала, т.к. муж забрал сына, хотел суда (т.к. он-то сказал, что она работает на Кипре – проститутка). У нее в два раза багажа больше, чем у меня. Ходила в шопинг центр, купила юбку и кофточку себе.

34

Джорджу на 30Z (трубку – с золотом – 20Z и икону серебряную – 10Z).

Думала, куда деньги мне деть. Два варианта – в багаже или в каблуки (надо купить).

У одного араба попросила 65Z на магнитофон с CD. Он дал 70+5 на такси. И я купила в (а, я уже писала об этом).

Сегодня Джордж должен приехать... Сейчас очень трудно, 45 девчонок. Каждая по чуть-чуть. Бизнес. Бог мне в помощь (моем похудении (2), 1 – бизнес.

Господи, благослови! Матерь Божья дай нам любви. Ангел Божий нас береги! Николай Чудотворец во всем помоги!!! Аминь!!!

15.06.99.

Осталось две недели и домой. Вчера (в понедельник 4 прайвида и 5 дринок). Ездил к зубному – 2 зуба. Так ревела – было больно, десны болят. Эрик (до этого 3 зуба + 2) отдал очень много. Если 1 зуб 30Z, то – 150Z... Подарил мне платье, Джулии (больше, чем мне). 2-е поколение, он больше ей уделяет внимание, чем мне.

С Крисом (часы, Пафос) ездили и 1-ый раз занимались любовью. Он кончил за 1 мин. Очень здорово, потом поехали кушать в ресторан Андреса – рыбу.

Звонила Джорджу. Он не хочет со мной разговаривать. Почему? Я очень, очень сильно расстроилась. Я добьюсь разговора с ним. Видно кто-то сказал вэри бэд.

35

ходила в ГИМ. 76,5. После бег. Ножки – 74,5. В моем организме очень много воды. Я должна уехать с V – 100. Обязана.

Господи, благослови и дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения!!!

23.06.99.

В пятницу (18.06) я звонила Стефани, говорила, что с другим костюмером поеду с Аянаму. Он обиделся, пожелал всего доброго и я закрыла телефон. Я так плакала... В субботу я сделала рекорд - --- правил (5 одному замечательному дедуле) с одним отдалась в прайвиде, 2 тэйбл, 7 дринк – 68 500...

Забрал меня Стефанис и мы поехали в Ларнаку. Вики не было. Пришлось уехать раньше, т.к. дедулей митинг. Забрала 60Z за --- минут (драчение). Покушали в ресторане, я ему за 10Z продала 2 --- фотографии.

В воскресенье я без напряжение отработала прайвид, 1 тэйбл, 8 дринк. 3 хотели меня забрать. Яблан Стельос, толстый, Дэви. Я уехала с Дэви. Обрато я вернулась на мотоцикле. Здорово! С утра в понедельник пошла позировать. (За 2 дня ---5Z (ок. 3 часов) – обнаженка). В понедельник со Стефани мы пошли в Зигос за ---, я подсказала девчонкам – как надо работать (все так слушали меня). Свобода... Потом на море поплавали. Поехали ---ать в отель. (В этот день яблан Стельос сказал, что хочет секс, не хочет ехать вместе.) Во вторник со Стефани пошли в лунапарк. Как здорово в подвешенном состоянии... А в комнате ужасов... только в конце облили водой. А машинки... Потом первый раз сидели в ресторане... Перфект. Рассказывал любовные истории.

36

Сегодня Костас (мальчик) обещал съездить в Пафос, но не приехал. Делала рекламу (фото), тренажера в одежде и без – 50 англ. Фунтов. Самое ужасное – нет мест на самолет в воскресенье на Краснодар и, может быть придется ехать через Москву, сидеть 1 день. А потом в Краснодар. Господи, помоги мне миновать это! Помоги мне, чтобы нашлось 1 место для меня. Молю тебя! Господи! Благослови и помоги!!!

27.06.99.

Сейчас сижу в самолете. Пакояма! Каждый день я думала о билете. Все сделала сама. Мариос забыл обо мне. В пятницу помог один араб. Я шла по Анарстасезии стрит, он остановился. Возил меня в офис. Везде. Поехали к нему домой, поели, снова приставали. Яблан, кричу. А он говорит, что я ошибаюсь, не такой как все. Подарил мне юбку и 2 футболки. Я ему очень благодарна. Он мне очень, очень помог, я сэкономила много денег.

Со Стефани снова ходили в лунапарк – 2 раза на крутой (вниз головой, везде). Ах, Стефани, Степанит. Потом водила машину. В пятницу вечером пошли ходили в Паб, пила коктейль я (оргазм), но как он попробовал его, он возбудился, пытался послать своему хую факс, но факс не доходил. Потом пошли на открытую греческую дискотеку, я познакомилась со Светой (маленькая, хорошенькая) с Воронежа (замужем).

В субботу мы поехали (я уговорила) в Аянапу. Заплатили за свимпарк ворд – 22Z за 1,5 часа. Он смеялся, как я с наивысшей горки (2ух) ездила, как я пыталась ходить по пластинам (как коряга). Столько впечатлений... Потом пошли в Зигос.

37

ели. Мариос был вместо Диджея (Марио). Была «сауна» (все девчонки, которые танцевали на сцене, ужас). Поп-сь со всеми. Я думала, что взял мои деньги 500 долларов. Но потом я поняла, после разговора с девчонками, что ---1.800, 500 я отложила, осталось 1.300. Мне очень стыдно, что со Стефани пришлось открыть сумку Лолиты и посмотреть. Господи, прости меня грешную, потом он выпил много, заснул. Я хотела сделать фото дискотеки.

---- не дал, засыпал! Все это время каждый день спали в отеле (ок. 20Z). --- четверг. Стефани проспал на работу. ---- Захотел идти в 8 ч. Были разборки ----апои. Несмотря на то, что он иногда делал то, что я не люблю, мне он очень нравился, очень. Его запах, его флегматичный тип и его ход мыслей, ---шка, потрясающе.

В четверг ездила заключительный раз с Эриком и Джулией (с Краснодара) на Альбано. У меня ноги уже 3 дня болят. Там очень красиво... У Эрика выпросила ---Z, потратила. И сегодня 25Z на массаж. Но очень, очень благодарна ему за все, за все. Дай ему Бог всего доброго, здоровья, наилучшего!

Сегодня утором собралась, с девчонками посидели, выпили. Простите меня девчонки, что я подумала на вас. Дай вам Бог бизнеса.

Приехали ок. 11.50. Встречала Вичка. Пошли взяли билет. Одна женщина предложила быть с девочкой. С их помощью не платила за багаж (2 сумки у нее). Все так быстро произошло. Оказывается самолет вылетает

38

в 13.10 (по кипрскому времени). Я только успела 1 раз поцеловать Стефани.

Благодарю за все Кипр! Лимассол. Благодарю от всей души за все!!!

Господи, благослови. Начинаю взлетать 13.57 (27.06.99).

30.06.99.

Прилетела, Слава Богу! Но сколько мучений с сумками?! Хорошо, я была с этой девочкой. Со мной было: 1 пакет с магнитофоном и видеокамерой, 1 сумка Фа, 1 сумка от Мариоса – Эльвире + моя маленькая. Русские, русские. Нет, чтобы помочь, так еще и угрожают. Всего было 2 большие, 2 зеленых Фа, 1 черная, 1 пакет – я все одна.

Я так хотела вернуться обратно. Был дождь. Слава Богу, в таможне все было в порядке, спросил везу ли ценные, я сказала, что подарок магнитофон и видеокамеру. Золота нет (хотя на пальцах было).

Мама меня с шариками встретила. Как тяжело после Кипра... Грязь, нет солнца. Мой милый... после Стефани... Я не могла целоваться. Мне тяжелы были прикосновения... Я так скучаю по Стефани... Его запаху, его смеху, его поцелуям...

Отметили, тортик сделал, обрадовалась дочке (с т.Галей).

В понедельник ездила: (не помню куда). Вчера звонила Стефани (с переговорного пункта), потом поехала к Алексею домой и поговорила. Как я была рада слышать его голос... «О, рапаяму (пакаюму) хау хот хеа Ангелина, Ай лоуз 1 кило». Степанит, мой мальчик. Мы говорили – как я добралась, как я скучаю...

Звонила в Москву, Леонид приглашал

39

меня приехать ок. 15.06. Будет кинофестиваль, приедут звезды Голливуда.

17.07.99.

Сколько всего произошло. Я начала чистку кишечника в мед. центре «Исцеление», диету. Тут он и воспалился, была температура 38,7 (из-за сырых фруктов и овощей). Вроде бы успокоилось, я стала весить после 78 кг. – 73 кг. В четверг пила слабительный чай, в пятницу снова --- температура. В субботу с милым пошли на «Джой». Поели мороженое, коктейли. Занимались любовью – больно. Утром скушали сосиски, ходили выбирать мне подарок (папку). Я чувствовала боли в середине живота. Пила смекту. Вечером решили рвануть на море, не было больно, колело везде. Я была не веселая. Вечером приехали сначала в Джубгу, а потом в Бетту. Поплавали – море было теплое (боли были в районе печени). Купили шоколад «Вдохновенье», походили ---, моей базе, так здорово. Но боли не оставили меня. Когда мы собрались спать –

я не смогла, боли были не выносимы. Мы поехали искать «скорую». Нашли. --- Сделали мне укол (хороший парень). Милый ему дал (сколько не знаю – от души). Поехали дальше, я засыпала. Милый тоже засыпал. Мы остановились у поста спать. Тут же просыпались опять от режущей боли в области правого подреберья. Милый, ему так было тяжело. Он не выспался, я ору. Он побежал узнать – где в Горячем ключе больница. Пришли, а там две яблани сидят «ну мы не можем дать обезболивающее, анализы – потом поговорить (после 50 минут, когда я загибалась от боли). Когда милый положил под журнал ее сам мани, ши из гоу, и нехотя всадила мне обезболивающий (я не знала о деньгах). С мучениями мы доехали домой (до этого милый еще ударился об столб, когда отъезжал). Поехали. Но на утро решили «скорую». Меня всю исследовали. По гинекологии – инфекция (сейчас боли такие после занятия любовью накануне вечером с милым). – не помню – эрозия что-ли. Оказалось это – застой желчи, дали мне капельницу, анализ мочи. Пришлось ложиться в больницу. Я так плакала. Гастроскопия... эта трубка отрывается воздухом, а потом спазмы в области печени (как пояс). Большая благодарность мамочке, она так мне помогла... Помог Алексей мой родной мальчик – такая же большая благодарность и за воду, за все.

40

Слава Богу, меня выписали во вторник (воспаление желчного пузыря – охочистит желудка, 12-перстной кишки, гинекология...). Диета (нельзя жирное, жареное – 6 раз по чуть-чуть, таблетки гастротон и но-шпа).

Сегодня я приехала в Москву. И уже с Марком вспоминала свою кипрскую работу (---), данс и результат – 100 долларов, накопили ему еды на 500 рублей (всего ничего и 500 рублей). Леонид все знает. В квартире, где меня устроили хорошо ( и чайник, радио, мини ТВ, все – чай...).

Господи, благослови – благослови! И дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения! Аминь Матерь Божья дай нам любви и спаси!

Ангел Хранитель – береги и храни. Николай Чудотворец – помоги во всем!!!

41

23.07.99.

Что со мной произошло... Пошла на Черкизовский рынок. Все нормально, потом пошла к Институту физкультуры на рынок. Тут меня останавливает тетка и предлагает альбом бесплатно. Потом подходит к столику. № моего альбома совпадает с номером приза. Мужик один ---- . я с недоверием отнеслась. Надо было внести 2.000 рублей, потом еще (т.е. чтобы не перебили). Сзади стоял яблан, который доплатил мне 300, я свои 400 (что у меня были). Тут молодая девчонка перебила все. Т.о. девушка (кавказской национальности) мужчина ушли, а я и Влад остались без ничего. Я хотела бежать за той девчонкой, Влад мне не дал. Я была в шоке. Он меня отвел и говорит, как типа я ему верну его 300 (может он был подставной). Либо я отдам, либо он меня будет продавать. Он заплатил своим друзьям --- руб, чтобы они меня стерегли. Я вся тряслась... К моему удивлению парень (улыбался с ним стоял другой, и сказал, что Влад меня во все «дырки»...) отпустил меня «беги»!. Я бежала украдкой в автобус. Потом проехала дальше в метро. Мне было страшно. Мне казалось, что он меня вот-вот найдет... Теперь я не одеваю днем свои --- (т.к. я была в них). Боже, как это страшно... Как я могла попасть на такую глупость...

Билетов на поезд нет. На самолет – где 1.118, 1050, 1020. Но я

42

нашла 980 рублей.

Вчера познакомилась с «крышей» агентства. Он меня называл золотой. Ходили на вечеринку журнала «Андрей». Там был Крылов, Антонов, Серов, Ю.Началова. Я натанцевалась, даже у столба попробовала. С обезьянкой походили, которая девчонке руку поцеловала. Я даже немного у столба чуть-чуть покрутилась. Выступали девчонки со стриптизом. Одна с членом, который обгладала со всех сторон. Было здорово!

На презентацию банка меня не взяли. Фигура...

Зато венеролог нашел у меня гарднереллу (благодарю Леонида, что он дал 250руб на анализ). Купила лекарства на 65 руб (хорошо не на 200 р). Буду 5 дней пить.

Господи, дай мне пожалуйста счастливый случай подзаработать денег, пожалуйста!!!

Господи, благослови, спаси и сохрани!!!

4.09.99.

На вечеринке я познакомилась с Роем. (у Леонида). Буквально в конце, я собиралась домой. До этого я была переводчиком у Марка, переводила idiotские фразы («Как бы занимались любовью с попой – 2 груди на ягодицах – из ушей течет мед»). Серов подарил кассету.

На следующий день мы гуляли с Роем, ходили на дискотеку «Пропаганда» (причем перед нашей встречей он мне дал 100 долларов (т.к. Леонид сказал, что время проводите – надо платить). Такси... 50 руб, 30 руб. С ним неплохо, но танцевать он мне не дает, т.к. начинает приближаться вплотную и не хочет отходить. Поели, в Макдональдсе (я вспомнила Кипр – негет чикен). Ходили, гуляли, ели в ресторане, где цены в долларах. Так всю следующую неделю. Он подарил гвоздики, а мы их забыли в «Мираже». Приехали домой, взял за руку и мы поехали обратно за цветами...

43

Выпила коктейль – наверху он горел, внизу – холодный (кофейный ликер). На следующий день у меня болел живот возле прямой кишки, гинекологии. Почему? Были две девчонки со Смоленска. Одна – 16 лет – нормальная, другая Олеся, которая влюблена в Микки. Рурка и ищет --- чтобы быть с ним, отбить от --- , наркотики. Собирается попасть в Лос-Анжелес. Я пыталась с ней поговорить, но это было бесполезно. Это --- дело... Ее взяли на закрытие кинофестиваля, приглашали на съемки...

Рой довел меня (Слава Богу!) до аэропорта, подарил мне Базу + др. 100 долларов – дай Бог ему здоровья!

Марколь до этого вели съемку (----). Я помогла ему делать съемку лесби (они только улыбались, дали по 20 долларов каждой). Я спросила Леонида, --- выделили потом по 10 долларов. Слава Богу я выздоровела.

Отпраздновали с милым 3 года 11 месяцев, подарил мне электронную книжку и

Господи, дай мне сил и контроля, чтобы похудеть! Благослови!!!

16.08.99

Звонил Рой, говорил, что скучает. Я с ---дом взяла билет на поезд, но потом разговаривала с Леонидом, он говорит, что виза есть (на 3 месяца), но деньги на билет не выслали. Пришлось мне сдать билет. Сумку я оста-вила в этот момент у Алексея в машине. А Рой оставил сообщение, что перезвонит мне в субботу в 18.00 (в конце «с любовью Рой») на пейджер. Алексей прочитал его. «Кто он такой, что за такое – через каждое слово с любовью?». Ругались, ссорились. Вообще часто. Особенно, когда я говорила с точильщиком.

44

Он все время говорит, что мой парень мне не подходит – то он Водолей, то то, что на 2 года всего лишь старше – мало. Короче – все, что желает мне – возвращается ему. Аминь (3 раза!).

мамку наконец-то отправила на море. Съездила в Анапу, сторела, теперь я ее каждый день обдираю. Сшила мне шорты, а сейчас красит рамы. Нам так хорошо было с Алексеем эти 3 дня вместе...

Ходила на диагностику к женщине (по стопе ноги) – проблема с желчным пузырем, остеохондроз. Пила травы (диагностика – 40 рублей, балон 3л. – 40 рублей с травами). У меня сейчас такое лицо в прыщах...

Ездила с показом в Туапсинский район, аквапарк, где был конкурс «Мисс фото-лето». Виталик, Надюша, Галя, я, 3 новеньких. Лена – моя напарница... Я одевала линзы, попросила молчать, а она как понеслась, ябланка. У меня от боли глаза слезились (косметика попалась). Приехали, побегали мы пораспрашивали билеты для собственного показа, т.к. мало было продано. В тексте, который должна была читать Надюша («8 топ моделей – мисс Фа, Элит модель лук, мисс Краснодар...») Я так смеялась... Я с таким удовольствием показала. Настя мне 5 баллов поставила, дали 100 рублей! Развозили нас в тот же день ночью! По дороге в клубе остановились, было холодно. Девчонок пригласили танцевать, они согласились (меня ---). Настя им потом такое сделала...

45

Эта Лена всю ночь меня пихала, якобы я ее придавила к окну. На следующий день я ходила на кастинг танцевать у столба. В жюри – Сергей сидит. Меня взяли!!! Я не ожидала. Поговорили с Ростом, поболтали, сфотографировались, пожали друг другу руку. Господи, благослови, дай нам сил и терпения!!!

29.08.99 в Мехико

Сейчас я лечу в огромном самолете (15.01 по времени по Франкбургу (2 часа назад московского). Нас покормили соком и соленым печеньем (20 гр.). Из Москвы мы вылетели в 7.00 утра, был дождик. В аэропорту находились 4 часов. Большой, походили с тележками для багажа, погуляли кругов 5. По порядку. С любимым мы решили поехать на море. Все воскресенье делал дела (ходили по пов. лечились травами, ---к у милого (он сильно стеснялся), пятна на коже – жутко переживал. Оказались проблемы с поджелудочной железой, тоже будет травы пить. Я уже ок. 5 недель пила. Поехали на море... Т.к. ждала информацию от Леонида по поводу Мексики, мы не могли поехать в Дивногорск (как я очень хотела). Поехали в Кабардинку (к знакомым). Мало того, что мы не смогли искупаться, т.к. был холодный душ, так и домик скрипел... ночью кто-то двигался. У меня

46

после занятию любовью было очень большое воспаление даже ходить было больно. Делала спрысывание с травами (какие пила и нош-пу). В течение 3 дней уходила боль. В воскресенье вечером мы поехали погуляли, поговорили о замужестве. И я поняла, что у него не было прогресса в деньгах, т.к. я говорила, что еще категорически не хочу еще замуж. На этот раз сказала, что серьезно настроена (ок. 2 тысяч долларов нормально, очень хорошо). (Хороший обед, брали вино, сейчас был – курица с рисом, салат, сыр, пудинг...). Но до этого я должна заработать на квартиру маме (Бог мне в помощь). Мы поссорились (не помню из-за чего) – я потеряла свой серебряный браслет. Диагностика маятника показала, что в сквере. На все воля Божья! Видно допустила ошибку (зацепка за материальное, гордость). Как-то на удивление легко. Плавала я по 30 минут – вода... чудо (+26 +27 C) в 2 захода утром, тоже вечером, т.е. чистых 2 часа в день (16.07 в самолете 29.08.99). Вечером хотели пойти на открытую дискотеку в «Надежду», отложили на другой день (выст-ла «Империя» - вход вместо 50 руб. – 150 руб.), конечно не пошли. Сходили покушали, выпили вина. До этого выпили. На следующий день Леонид сказал, что в субботу в ночь мы отлетаем в

Мексику. А был вторник – вечер. Мы пошли, заключительный день покушали (пирожное, вино, шашлык... 125 руб). На следующий день похолодало, был сильный ветер, а вода теплая. Мы решили поплавать заключительный раз и поехать, т.к. надо было достать билет. В целом поездка была хорошая, романтическая (1 раз поссорились, он не захотел помыть кастрюлю после ---). Мой любимый...

47

Ходила с Андреем в «Империю» (шеф этого клуба. Танцуют – класс... Я после немного потанцевала, встретила ---- с колгейт (рассказал, как встретила Валя). Любимому купила плавки 250 рублей, хорошие ---- + сумочку 330 рублей (для документов, он очень хотел ок. 580 рублей). Он был очень рад. А --- мне любимый подарил Шоу Гелс 40, --- качку 40, лак 20 – пиджак фирменный 850.

Благодарю, родной я люблю тебя.

Звонили ко всем по поводу билета в Москву, везде – нет. Уже и Татьяна Ивановна из КГБ, администрацию... и все 3 человека достали билет...

Я взяла ночной в 00.15 пятницу, не субботу. В ночь с четверга на пятницу с любимым пошли в «Зебру». Покушали (для девушек бесплатный вход, для мужского рода – 15 рублей). Я потанцевала --- 2 дринк девчонки наехать на меня (перед лицом размахивали и трясли всем телом. Я взяла руку сказала: «Поменьше амплитуду». Вроде стала меньше. Но потом опять, на что я повернулась к ним --- мной...

Рой меня встретил с шикарным букетом цветов. Я переночевала у него, т.к. в квартире было много народу. Он мне дал 100 долларов. Я попросила на фотоаппарат. Т.к. сказали, что доставка только в понедельник (а сами пишут круглосуточно). Пришлось купить ----. Ходили в парк на ВДНХ, мертвая петля на американских горках – голова не держалась). На машинках, колесе обозрения – только 2 сидения и все + огромная высота (фобия...). Потом покушали в ресторане (салаты на выбор). Нашли СД маркет (диск латино-американский) подарил Рой. Нашла поглотитель жира в аптеке, но... Замечательный день.

48

Господи, дай мне мудрости, сил и терпения, благослови!!!

31.08.99

Сегодня заключительный день лета. Сейчас в Мексике 9.50 утра, а в Москве 18.50 вечера. Заканчивается лето. Была на Кипре до 27 июня, в Краснодаре, в Москве, в Краснодаре, в Москве, а теперь в Мексике.

Слава Богу! Прилетели в 18.00 по Мексике. Спали, ели, смотрели ТВ. В принципе легко. Чуть с опозданием встретил Сальвадор. Шел дождь. Приятный мужчина. Остановились жить в отеле Хоутэл Мария Кристина – симпатичное место. В старинно-мексиканском стиле. Спать, как я устала... Таня осталась в номере с Леонидом. Оказывается она не для друга, а для него. Встали в 7.45. Пошли позавтракали. Причем Тане все время хотелось еще что-то, бедняга официант... Попросили папаю. Потом погуляли, попробовали свежий сок (свеклы и моркови), йогурт, лепешки кукурузные с лимон, приправами. Дождались Сальвадора, который приехал на 1,5 часа позже, посмотрели его дом (8 комнат, везде картины, а лифт сразу в квартиру открывается). Потом пошли в обалденный ресторан, поели рыбу, (красивый вид – озеро, вдали фантаны, уточки плавают), какой десерт... Потом нашли Тане красную

49

---очку для ее платья. Она еще успела сказать, что у меня штаны грязные (она смогла отличить ткань от грязи), я пользовалась дешевыми помадами (----). Да сама она дешевая!

Потом Сальвадор показал мне бай ---- его бумажника фотографию (с Интернета напечатаны) и сказал, что хотел бы эту гел-френд...

Он поехал на встречу, после хотели ехать в ресторан. Я как не хотела, ехать... Слава Богу, не поехали, т.к. шел сильный дождь, он где-то застрял. Сегодня я позавтракала папайей с сыром, свежим соком и кофе.

Господи, дай мне мудрости, сил и терпения!!! Аминь!

Пошли погуляли, Леонида затянул парень почистить обувь, еще хотел получить 20 песов (1 доллар ок. 9.25 песов).

Но Леонид взял и дал только 7 песов (позже выяснили, что это стоит 6 песов). Так в конце еще хотел и мой поцелуй. Ему пришлось бы отдать всю выручку. Потом другой что-то начал плести о креме и снова намазал, тут Леонид и сбежал. Идем, напились сока натурального, потом стоит львенок большой, ну я мимо прошла, думала кукла, а он возьми и помаши мне рукой, я не ожидала испугалась. На всех улицах только слышу одни свисты, а некоторые и вылазят из машин. Что тут такого, юбка длинная с разрезом...

Сальвадор сводил нас позже в салон красоты. Где мы делали маникюр причем в один момент с прическами, педикюр. Я жутко расстроилась, что мен снова обрезали по лопатки волосы. Вроде неплохо, уложил хорошо, я аж преобразилась. Тане очень долго делали прическу, т.к. ее что-то не устраивало. Настало дело макияжа... Я помню отдалась в руки мастеру, очень даже здорово.

50

А над Таней работали 3 человека, ее все не устраивало, мы задержали их рабочий день аж на 45 минут, мастера все там упали... Она учила специалистов (у которых бывают модели). На долго они нас запомнят. Пришли в отель, пофотографировались. Сальвадор обещал нас сводить куда-либо, но он освободился только в 22.30, а мы уже задремали в платьях и макияже...

Сегодня 1.09.99. – первый день осени. Господи, благослови!!!

Погуляли после завтрака, попили сок, йогурт, немного пофотографировались. Пошли в антропологический музей (один из больших в Европе). Походили, забрели в сад, открыли калитку, походили на закрытой территории, где реставрировали. За нами потом полицейский прибежал. А там калитка с замочка легко открывалась, поэтому мы и решили посмотреть. В сопровождении мы вернулись. Успели со вспышкой сфотографировать, а нельзя было, потом за нами полицейские следили, чтобы мы не нахулиганили. И там след оставили... Начался сильный ливень. Сальвадор так и не прибыл в 17 часов за нами. Мы добрались на такси. Позвонила любимому с офиса, но любимого не было дома... поговорила с мамой.

Да, в музее (шел когда дождь), устроились полицейские, активно решили в 2 колонны выйти на улицу (по окончании работы), но тут же после 3 шагов забежали обратно. Хотели флаг снять, бегали, бегали, обратно (человек 6) и побежали.

51

Вечером с Сальвадором поехали смотреть город, так красиво... Посмотрели проститутки. Сели в ресторан. Потом начали активно (после еды) кашлять (я думала перец), оказывается у кого-то сработала система защиты машины – газ, который залетел к нам в окно.

В пятницу 3.09 мы поехали в Акапулько на шикарном автобусе, где сидения регулируются, ТВ, туалет, чай, ----- (напитки) разносят. Были только в горах, где были на уровне облаков. Не заметных 5 часов.

А в ---- рай мы приехали потом... Бассейны с водопадами, розовые фламинго, гуляющие на свободе павлины...

Заселились в номера, потом покушали (моя порция рыбы стоила 180 песов... (180:9=20 долларов). Потом мы купались в океане, в теплом, одновременно сильном океане. Затем пошли на дискотеку в Акапулько (шла такси ок. 20 мин) – Енигма – так красиво, а музыка никакая. В этот день Сальвадор хотел, но я вежливо отклонила (надо больше времени).

На следующий день мы имели с утра шведский стол – фрукты, омлет, еда, сладости... Потом лил сильный дождь, почти весь день. До завтрака мы с Сальвадором побежали вдоль океана.

52

Даже в эту погоду (было тепло) я пошла побегала, попрыгала, поплавала в океане – такой кайф. Дождь, волны. Потом тоже в бассейне, где водопады, камни – морская вода, сцть с хлором. Затем Сальвадор донимал меня на секс темы, причем, задавая 1 вопрос, получал ответ на другой. Очень умен. Догодался, что у меня бой-фрэнд (увидел фото), а потом вопросы. И так 2 долгих часа. Вечером мы поехали кушать в Акапулько, потом на дискотеку – это класс... И музыка не плохая.

На следующее утро Сальвадор вынужден был уехать в Мехико, т.к. были проблемы на работе у мамы. (Сейчас приехал Леонид и сказал, что Сальвадор как бы нажаловался, что я не была с ним близка – немного разозлен, что это ошибка, надо исправлять. Дай мне Бог мудрости и удачи!). Много фотографировались, было обалденное солнце, потом катались на лошадях. Это так было забавно... Маленькие... Потом с Леонидом поехали. Сначала лошади не хотели, потом я догадалась погнать их веревкой, как мы летели обратно...

Потом я была одна. Бегала вдоль океана, купалась везде... А вечером мы ужинали на берегу океана... Нам готовили еду 40 минут. Таня брезгливо ела, потом наехала на меня, что не мое дело – какой у них порядок. Я расстроилась. Вечером я плавала в бассейне немного танцевала (была музыка в ресторане. (я жила в номере с Леонидом и Таней).

Следующим утром (6.09) я бегала

53

снова, потом поплавала в бассейне. Это было чудесно. Сальвадор заплатил за завтрак, но там администрация хотела нас задурить, а мы уже опаздывали на автобус, но Слава Богу, все обошлось. Я потеряла свой крестик, когда бегала утром.

Обратно ехали на двухэтажном автобусе. Вечером пошли на встречу в ресторан. Я много думала. Я все брала, ничего не давала ему взамен. (Я решила переспать с ним). Но в этот вечер он уехал подписывать бумаги, Леонид не дождался, и мы разминулись в 50 минут. А сегодня я делала чистку лица – так больно, но обалденно – и массаж, и маски 300 песов.

Господи, дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения!

9.09.99

Вчера мы ходили в Мэнс-клуб, здорово несколько залов. Девчонки работают с 14.30 – 20.00, 20.00 – 2.30. Разные девчонки из Венесуэлы, Чехословакии. Я долго думала, решила остаться, т.к. не будет высчитывать за билет. За каждый день, что я работаю в клубе – за день 250 песо, ночь 300 песо. Тэйбл данс – шт 140 песо, + выплатить комиссионные 20% зарплаты Леониду. Это прилично. Что мне останется? С Божьей помощью, надеюсь, получится! Со мной решила и Таня остаться. Утром с Леонидом они в ресторане поругались, а потом передо мной извинились, за ошибки друг друга.

С Сальвадором у нас так ничего и не было. То он плохо себя чувствовал, то устал. Даже сегодня утром мы начали и тут же закончили, т.е. стоп. Только поцеловались, сняли трусы и все. Сказал, что позже, хочет, чтобы это было прекрасно, не хочет давить. Сегодня Леонид улетает.

Господи, благослови, дай нам сил, мудрости и терпения! Матерь Божья, дай нам любви и счастья. Ангел, Хранитель везде нас береги! Николай Чудотворец во всех делах, работе нам помоги!!! Аминь!!!

16.09.99

Предложили работать в Мэнс-клуб. Мы познакомились с главными. Я писала об этом. За первый день я сделала 16 танцев! 27, вчера 31. сегодня могла больше, но потом не получилось. С понедельника работала с 14.30 до 2.30. Лучше больше денег. Вчера началась пауза, я думала, что моя музыка – вылетела, все как засмеялись, побежала менять платье. Купила за 600 песов яркое платье. Я сегодня за 189 песов белые босоножки + серебряную цепочку на ногу. Сегодня один яблан обещал кредит, карточку дать. Я из-за него ушла раньше с работы. А он дал 60 долларов, хотел заманить в дом свой, дать еще 300 песо, а потом, когда я отказалась поцеловаться угрозил, что в полицию пожалуется, забрал все деньги... Самый даун мэн Али... Яблан...

Зато с Асуль, Таней и мэнс ездила в карнаваку в

55

ресторан... Птицы с хохолками... Мы обедали 4 часа... Он меня замучил (это было в субботу). Зато вечером он взял 13 танцев, у Асуль ее ----. Мне мой пообещал привезти платье, красивое.

Вчера одному станцевала – 200 долларов дал... А сегодня двоим ок. 20 танцев, другому – 6...

Ходили в кино с немцами, которые понравились Тане, так себе.

Позволила сделать себе педикюр за 80 песов – 1 час...

У моей мамочки сегодня день рождения. 49 лет! Да будет мамуля счастлива! Дай Бог ей здоровья, крепкого, крепкого, огромной любви, счастья, удачи во всем, мира и добра!!! Сейчас 2.53 в Мексике, в России 11.53. Да благословит нас всех Господь!!!

19.09.99

Что интересного? Сегодня с порывом решила позвонить милому. Голос у него был сухой. Я говорила, что скучаю по нему, а он ни слова, что скучает, ничего не говорил... После этого я расплакалась, мне честно говоря, даже не хочется больше звонить. Он даже не рад был слышать мой голос... Не знаю может быть потому что он сломал машину (мама сказала, что ремонтировал).

Вчера второй раз с Мавро встретилась. Съездили с девчонками в ресторан (где фонтаны), хорошо, а потом поехали искать обменный пункт. Поехали в аэропорт. Так здорово. Поле, самолеты. Мы целовались, очень здорово... Он сказал, что была у него девка, похожая на меня, они жили вместе 6 месяцев. Но в Акапулько, они, однажды, сидели за баром. Она при нем начала разговаривать с другим мужчиной. Потом (когда он пошел в туалет) – они целовались... Он купил ей обратный билет в Инглан. Она раскаиалась, но он ей не простил.

56

Вчера за субботу я сделала 8 танцев, где один идиот обдурил меня на 100 песов (ок. 11 долларов) – Бог ему судья. А 16.09 пошла с одним идиотом (пьяным) – раньше с работы. Он дал (еле выпросила) 60 песо, мы прикалывались. Он хотел затащить в свой дом. Хотел поцеловать, я не дала. Потом он вдруг резко изменился, сказал, что гражданин Мексики, пойдет в полицию... Я отдала ему его грязные деньги – Бог ему судья.

С Луисом и Асуль (другом) ходила домой и ели японскую кухню – вкусно... Всечером в ресторан, а потом в бар латино-американской музыки. Здорово, потанцевали. (все так смотрели на меня).

Сегодня такая замечательная погода, солнышко, но из костюмеров никого нет. А потом все в один момент...

Купила себе платье яркое! Завтра хочу пойти и купить что-нибудь другое (топ и юбку).

Господи, благослови. Дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения! Пресвятая Богородица спаси и дай нам любви! Ангел Хранитель нас береги! Николай Чудотворец во всех делах нам помоги!!!

57

23.09.99 (2.06)

Много что произошло. Работала 3 дня по 11 – 12 часов... Сейчас у меня 3.600 долларов!!! Слава, Тебе, Господи! Завтра хочу рискнуть пойти на Пенхауз поработать, с Богом!

В понедельник я сделала 25 танцев, во вторник – 37! Сегодня 35! Во вторник меня позвонил лидер, простой такой. Взял 4 танца и дал мне 2.500 песов! А в среду прислал мне корзину красных роз. Дай Бог ему счастья!

С Мавро встречалась сегодня. На этот раз за фрукты денег не брал. Хорошо он целовался... Но характер у него трудноватый.

Сегодня с одним клиентом 20 танцев сделала! Дай Бог ему любви, настоящего счастья. (я дала его другу молодому визитку с телефоном, а он по ошибке дал моему – отмазался, ужас). До этого – один яблан меня до слез довел. Высокий, симпатичный, но пристал, что я сразу о деньгах! Только в уме деньги! И так раз 5, я не выдержала и ушла, уронив слезу. Яблан! Бог ему судья!

Познакомилась с Максом, интересный такой, обещал свозить подводный мир увидеть... Прислал мне чудесные розы! (7 штук). Сегодня у меня розы...

Таня исчезла, Асуль перепугалась, оказывается она приболела...

Звонил Рой. Сказал, что любит меня – на полном серьезе, будет ждать. Господи, благослови!!! Дай нам сил, терпения и защиты нас от всякого зла!!!

58

2.10.99.

В воскресенье и субботу ездили с Асуль и с Альфредо в Уана-Чвату. Долго думали, то он может, то оформление номера... Но мы поехали. Купили фруктов... Ехали 4 часа. Какой старинный город, красивый. Калорийные цвета домов. Сходили в бассейн, покушали. Напротив была церковь, где ждали невесту – 3 часа (это такая традиция – опаздывать). Было празднование, красивое, мальчики, девочки в вечерних платьях. Оказывается праздновали 15 лет... Ходили в центр, где рассказывают музыканты истории, как мальчик поцеловал девочку. Пили вино из специальных сосудов. Типа игры, где танцевали пары, целовались. Заключили мы дискотекой! Было только 2 человека. Мы как закатили там... Гарсоны смотрели на нас стояли (особенно я). Ночью 3 раза перебегала с одной кровати на другую, т.к. Альфредо пытался гладить меня. Приснилось, что меня кто-то трогает (там), но не пойму – кто, чувствую, движение. Просыпаюсь – он. На утро высказала, что я не проститутка, что за малакия! Он извинялся. Сказал, что не хочет секс со мной... Вместе мы позавтракали в буфете – фрукты, йогурты... Поехали посмотреть серебро. Альфредо подарил мне серьги и кулон из топаза, Асуль браслет серебряный ко дню рождения (450 песо). Гуляли, расслаблялись, ходили в церковь (в трех). Чудесно! Замечательная поездка. Смотрели – где добывают серебро и золото – 500 м глубины...

59

в понедельник было тяжело, во вторник тоже 22, 25 танцев. Четверг... Утро началось, я встала, умылась, тут Асуль говорит бежим кто быстрее. Я сначала не поняла, думала – игра, потом слышу – что-то падает. Я побежала, впереди медленно бежала женщина по ступенькам. Я выбежала в пижаме, схватила куртку секьюрити. Рядом дом стоял – жалюзи вперед-назад. Это страшно... У меня сердце колотилось. Потом с Альфредо ездили деньги менять – я подумала, что у меня украли 500 долларов, т.к. пакет был пустой... Я в истерику. Альфредо молодец, он успокоил меня... Сказал, что даст мне эти 500 долларов, ничего не случилось. Я думала, что деньги взял парень, который осматривал дом после землетрясения, т.к. сумка с деньгами была открыта. У меня все падало. Потом линза, упала, потерялась. На работе глаза болели, текло все. Клиенты меня не хотели... На пенхаусе девчонки раскрывали свои места... Меня никто не хотел, т.к. я не делала этого... 6 танцев – пенхаус. 3 – обычных... Я поняла – сглаз – да!

Сегодня я снимала – какое облегчение!!! Другой день! Тоже 25 танцев, но без напряга и с 18.20! До этого была презентация знаменитости – я мисс Раша: ТВ, фото! Было так чудесно! Если бы я знала – как это серьезно! У Асуль был день рождения.

60

Я ей подарила серебряную рюмку. Дай ей Бог всего наилучшего. Сегодня она пахала в Акапулько. Большая благодарность Альфредо! (купил мне еду, фрукты, трусики...). Позвонила тете Гале, т.к. мамань перепугалась за меня – землетрясение. А В. я звонить больше не хочу. «Чем ты там занимаешься?» А после моего ругательства что ни одного слова «скучаю», «люблю» - «Чего ты ругаешься?» Дала ему факс – ничего!!! Пока первый не ответит – не дождется!

Мавро объявился. Посмотрим на него!

Господи, благослови и спаси!!!

9.10.99.

Сколько всего произошло... В субботу с Мавро поехали к нему домой – поменять одежду. Он нехотя меня накормил. Хороший дом, большой, домохозяйки. Мы условились, хотели друг друга, но я не могла. Слишком рано. Он был расстроен... Купил мне кроссовки (моя ошибка была – взяла маленький размер). Пошли в аквапарк. Когда мы поехали на «русских горках» - он орал, что ненавидит меня, что я его потащила на горки. Мы хорошо сходили, покатались – это было аутстандинг! Потом мы пошли в Японский ресторан, он мне рассказал про девчонку с Канады, что она его пригласила, что дала ему наркотики (драгс), как они занимались сексом, как после себя хреново чувствовал. На следующий день – в воскресенье я с Альфредо поехала на пирамиды. Это было чудесно, забираться наверх. Он подарил мне два серебряных браслета, много чего. Пирамиды бога солнца и бога луны. Я медитировала, набиралась энергии. Потом мы пошли в ресторан, который находится внутри скалы. Свечи, а потом фольклорные мексиканские танцы. Пригласили меня танцевать, я попрыгала – это было весело.

61

Так закончился мой день. Неожиданно Таня пришла – она шла за пленкой и рассекла над глазом себе. Поехали в госпиталь, одна мексиканка помогла нам (отложила все планы). Я смотрела – как это все зашивается. Такова жизнь.

Я купила красное платье, оно расплзлось в первый день, относилась зашивать, извинялись. Понедельник (22), среда – 45, благодаря Раулю. Сначала ему танцевала какая-то мексиканка, потом я начала (Асуль помогла – посоветовала соскочить к нему) + он выписал мне чек на 5.000 песо! На следующий день я получила их... Дай Бог ему любви, счастья.

В четверг – 39. В пятницу – 27 (3 танца мне подарил один со Флориды). Были разные ситуации. Один донимался, что я танцевала для него не 3, а 2 – все это нервы. У меня было чистое лицо, вчера за 1 день всю высыпало... Мавро врал по поводу, что он в аварию попал. Показал мне синяк. Пообещал, что поменял кроссовки и отдал в апартаменты. Но на самом деле – вранье. Он поступил со мной, как с другой девчонкой (он забрал все ее вещи, что купил все – яблан, крохобор). Сегодня по телефону сказал, что если хочет расстаться со мной –

62

мои проблемы, он с удовольствием это сделает. (я чувствовала, что долго мы не протянем!).

С Альфредо и Асуль ездили кататься на лошадях – это чудесно! Более легкое седло, по горам, а потом осторожно спускались. Чудо!

Познакомилась с Сиднеем (с Австралии), посмотрим, что будет!

Я так скучаю по моему мальчику... а он? Звонила маме – первое, что здесь работает тренер, чтобы он ничего не узнал. Собирается выступать на конференции – удачи!

Господи, благослови нас! Дай нам сил, терпения! Пресвятая Богородица, спаси нас и дай нам любви! Ангел Хранитель береги и храни нас! Николай Чудотворец нам во всем помоги!!!

17.10.99

Сейчас я в Канкунге. Уехали мы рано утром в пятницу, сегодня третий день. Я с Альфредо, Асуль с Мартином. Какой отель... Я всю жизнь мечтала побывать в таком месте... В ночь с четверга на пятницу мы вообще не спали (34 танца). Поехали потом с Сиднеем, я приболела (к нему домой. В прошлое воскресенье – это было чудесно. Мы поехали в лунапарк, сначала был дождь. Мы катались на разных горках, выиграли по количеству билетов – игрушки маленькие). Потом поехали поели, выпили, я опьянела (до этого сходили в церковь). Поехали домой и я переспала па-м – кончила. Это чудесно, 1,5 месяца... Он слишком часто говорит, что любит меня, пришло время проверить его. Я поняла, что Мавро хотел переспать со мной. Я ему не дала, он был злой, еле сдерживался, а потом стал «уходить».

63

Итак, Канкунг... Я была без сил, как во сне – я не спала 1 день. Мы взяли машину на прокат (Асуль захотела открытый джип – меньше «Нивы»). Потом пошел дождь – как потом запаковывали... Какой цвет моря. Альфредо стал приставать. Пришлось подрачить, он тоже мне хотел. Я сказала, что ----. Он р-л 2 т. гр., в начале я кончила – это было так чудесно... Не давал спать. На следующий день (в субботу) мы поехали в Икс-Скарлет ---- парк... В начале мы начали ходить по реке в жилетах (1 фото 8 долларов!). Так интересно ходить между скалами, различный цвет...

Потом мы пошли знакомиться с дельфинами... Интересная кожа, плавали. Мы их гладили (они не любят за морду) – по телу – да. Потом мы лежали на воде и 2 дельфина с стоп нас несли по воде... (как супер-герой). Это было потрясающе... Потом пошел дождь, мы поплавали. Я заболела, сопلي текут. Пошли посмотреть фольклорный концерт. Я замерзла... Альфредо заботился обо мне. Еле уговорили, чтобы нас накормили... в «100%» (ресторан).

Сегодня утром Альфредо уехал – для бизнес-встречи. Мы плавали весь день, я играла в волейбол («Раша шоу ми самсинг!»). потом поехали в ресторан с рок-музыкой. Посмотрели звезды и море... Завтра в 5 утра вставать...

64

В среду благодаря Раулю, я сделала 52 танца – это мой рекорд!!! Он мне подарил много раз! Дай Бог ему счастья.

Позвонила милому, сказала, чтобы позвонил мне во вторник, на что он нехотя ответил, что только одну минуту посвятит мне... Благодарю за щедрость.

Танцевала одному кастюме – дала ему немного собой его очками по лицу. Он запаниковал... Я ему лед – А он, бессовестный, притворялся. Другому начала танцевать, ручку собой выкинула... В субботу упала на стойке. Колени болят, сопли текут. Бат! Шум моря, тишина в комнате, ТВ – это чудесно!

Господи, дай нам сил, терпения, благослови!!!

30.10.99

Была интересная неделя. После Канкунга... Я не знаю, почему Альфредо давился чипсами и заедая мороженым в Канкунге, не хотел нас покормить. Но т.к. я заболела, попросила чай с медом и ему пришлось нас сводить в 100%.

Прилетели в понедельник. Господи, как было хорошо без него. Никто не лапал... работалось интересно. Приходил Сидней, не заплатил за танцы, обещал вернуть деньги позже (у меня была его куртка) – я не боялась за деньги. Приехали с Бостона. В пятницу потанцевали им. Яцинто сказал, что скучает. Поехали ночью с пятницы на субботу. Всю дорогу я спала. Приехали в Акапулько в отель, где бассейн с цветами – это было чудесно. Он более или менее давал мне спать. Утром мы завтракали на балконе, где чудесный вид на Тихий океан, город... Мы поехали на пляж, где полетали на парашюте (я боялась, когда летела над скалой, что ветер ослабеет...). Потом мы чуть не утонули с Асуль – слишком быстрая глубина затянуло и накрыло. У меня были мысли – теперь я понимаю, как теряются люди в океане. Нас практически весь пляж просил сфотографироваться (парни). У нас есть фотографии с парашютом, ракушка.

65

Вечером мы ходили в ресторан, где вид на Акапулько в огнях, свечи. Яцинто тоже мне надоел с приставаниями, но не так как Альфредо.

Сейчас я сижу в самолете, мы летим в Порто-Ваярту, но я не очень счастлива, т.к. знаю, что с ним в отеле, я устала...

Макс приезжал, подарил на прошлой неделе золотую цепочку, парфюм. Потом шоколад. Мне приходилось после работы, 3-4 раза ехать с ним в отель (хороший массаж), он хоть не лапает.

В прошлый четверг ходила на презентацию «Смирнов» фэшн с (взлетаем) с Энрике. Это было чудесно. Хотели меня познакомить с людьми, но не получилось. Зато получила футболку и фирменную бутылку «Смирнов», благодарю его за все.

Поссорилась с Сиднеем. Он говорил о чувствах (деньги отдал, я отдала его куртку. Все это ерунда. Когда мы договорились о встрече, он все время не приезжал. Когда мы поехали с Бостоном – он забронировал места в Акапулько (отеле) хотел поехать со мной. Он он пропал до пятницы. Он обиделся, т.к. я обещала поехать с ним. (как красиво – горы, зелень – пролетаем). Я его понимаю, он он не обязательный, слишком много говорит о любви и не доказывает. Например, попросила его встретиться в пятницу, а он просто не приехал... Молодой, дурак. Звонила тете Гале, Алексей Вячеславович купил себе зимние ботинки, я рада за него (а вот Факс – не может, «слишком дорого для меня»). Я говорила тете Гале, что он забыл про меня, она говорит, что нет, вроде бы написал письмо.

66

Леонид запарил со своими факсами о деньгах. То расчеты не совпадают, то еще что-то. Каждый день. Послала ему деньги. Мари говорит, что если я захочу вернуться – позвонить ей (без Леонида).

Господи, дай мне сил похудеть! Благослови нас! Аминь.

1.11.99.

Осталось 10 дней до моих 24 лет. Какое чудесное место Портоваярта... Если бы с любимым человеком, я долго думала о моем мальчике... Как бы я хотела быть с ним в этот момент... Обалденный отель, где не надо думать о еде, все включено в стоимость отеля 2 дня – 600 долларов с человека, включая еду, стоимость билета на самолете (где я сейчас сижу). Как было чудесно... я плавала в бассейне 30 раз (30 на 25=750 метров), иг-

67

рала в волейбол в воде, где кто проигрывал подачу – пили коктейль (вкусный, текила с лимонным концентратом...), а также того брызгали водой. Это было чудесно. Прежде мы с Альфредо играли в малый теннис, где он больше выиграл (я вспомнила своего мальчика – я думаю, что люблю его, т.к. все время думаю о нем – а он? Все 2 месяца нет ничего... Наверное даже на мой день рождения ничего от него не будет, почему?). Здесь было много людей с севера Америки, поляки, даже с Белоруссии. Ходили вечером на дискотеку местную, где был голубой (в белом вечернем платье). Немного потанцевали. Я вечером Альфредо заябланил меня. Что он меня чувствует, испытывает возбуждение, когда трогает меня, что я его не понимаю (после того, как я рассказала историю, что якобы меня хотели изнасиловать, я убежала). Он выслушал, побеспокоился о докторе, потом опять начал лезть... Я так огрубела, т.к. устала он лапаний. На него ничего не действует. Спать он мне дал. На другой день в ванной заставил трогать его («коммон, э литтл бит»). Как я ругалась... Но потом он осчастливился, слава Богу!

А как мы доехали на водном мотоцикле... Я выжимала макс, он боялся. А потом я одна – и вправо и влево, макс спиид. Еще мы катались на паруснике. Я не могу терпеть его прикосновений, он мне в отцы годится, его запах, мне не нравится... Я вижу, что я ему направляюсь, но я устала заставлять себя делать, что мне не нравится. Я благодарна ему. Сегодня у Альфонсо день рождения. Я ему подарила открытку и маленького Ангела. Альфредо говорил, что самолет в 14.00, а оказался в 15.30, молодец. Еще мы побегали в ГИМ (я 20 минут)! Спорта было много!!!

68

С Божьей помощью, с Божьим благословением! Аминь!.

12.11.99.

Ездили мы снова Альфредо, я, Асуль в Хуатулько. Он обещал не трогать меня. 45 минут на самолете. Как ! Какой отель... Еда целый день. В первый день малый, большой теннис! Вечером снова ябланил. Ходили на дискотеку, какие мальчишки-инструктора. Было, задание – текила, текила – мы танец. Водка! Мы меняемся местами (партнерами). Кто опоздал – шалалала (2 раза), гуд бай! Потом пинеколада – мужчины нас брали на руки. Куба! – мы ползали между ногами! Это было чудесно!

На следующий день мы катались между скалами на водных мотоциклах с Альфредо. Это было нечто. Он купил мне тапочки. Самое ужасное – я звонила своему любимому. Хотела поговорить с его мамой – есть ли у него другая. На что она ответила поговорить с ним. Когда я начала говорить с ним, я спрашивала – почему не пишет – «ну напишу». «Почему же ты ничего мне не говоришь?» Ты хочешь стоп наши отношения? Он не ответил ничего.

«Почему ты так?» «Потому что достало меня все! Когда ты сказала, что останешься у меня будто что-то оборвалось...»

69

У меня была истерика 20 минут, я так рыдала...

Вечером был интересный конкурс между двумя парами.

1. Кто больше отожмется, выиграла другая пара

2. Между ногами я зажимаю туалетную бумагу, мужчины должны между ног швабру и с закрытыми глазами попасть в отверстие бумаги. А я в микрофон говорю – вправо, влево. Мы выиграли.

3. Бежим, пьем пиво через трубку сексуально. Потом обратно – мужчины пьют из этого положения мы выиграли.

4. За одну минуту переодеться – большее количество вещей – как мы переодевались... Как выглядел Альфредо... В моем платье, в об--ках и в тапочках... мы выиграли.

5. С закрытыми глазами мы должны были пощупать ноги мужчин и определить – кто есть кто. Я видела по обуви. Но Асуль подсказала мне. Мы выиграли. Футболку и диплом.

Вечером хотел приставать опять после моей депрессии. Я убежала с ванной к горам ок. 20 минут. Потом он извинялся дома.

На следующий день Асуль с причудами – хотела хорошие фотографии. Пока она пошла краситься – я пошла к морю – тут она распахивалась – не понятно из-за чего... Успокоила ее, извинилась, хотя не видела своей вины.

Она осталась отдыхать другие два дня. В понедельник я сделала 20 танцев (с 6 часов работы). Во вторник встретила с Мануэлем. Он подарил мне 500 долларов + туалетную воду. Мы сходили в ресторан японский, красивый! Интересный мужик.

70

У него сестра в критическом состоянии, он был подавлен.

Вечером я сделала 23 танца, плохой бизнес, но зато мои 500 долларов. Хорхе сказала, что мой день рождения – он подарил мне 24 розы. В 00.05 позвонил Альфредо (сказал, что специально поставил будильник). И поздравил меня!

Утром моя мамочка мне прислала факс – как это было чудесно! Не успела открыть глаза, как мне принесли чудесные розы. – от Роя... Потом он позвонил и поздравил меня. Приехал Альфонсо и поздравил меня – подарил розу и цепочку на ногу и руку + открытку, где на русском языке – желаю счастья! Потом в салоне мне чуть не покрасили волосы в коричневый цвет. Я просила только накрутить и поднять. Приехал Альфредо. Подарил мне позолоченные цветы, Гуччи, открытку с теплыми словами, обалденные розы с подсолнухами. Мы сходили в ресторан, где я взяла вкусную рыбу салмон... На работе как было чудесно. Один костюмер подарил мне торт (кусочек) и взял 18 танцев! До этого костюмеры взяли по 8, по 7 танцев. Альфредо заказал другой торт (вкусный...). Линда, я, Юлька и Асуль спели мне – это было чудесно! Потом клуб мне подарил торт. Я всех угощала – охранников (мне сейчас педикюр делают – пятки чистят), гарсонов! Это был наилучший день рождения! Благодарю Господи! Меня даже не омрачило, что кто-то спер мои 1.000 песов, а у Шатен – 1.000 долларов... Да, друг, который обещал сделать поездки подарил мне розу и большую собаку!!!

71

Вчера с Альфредо ходили покупать мне кроссовки, но купили сумку за 1.300 песов – класс! Он с ума сошел, хочет секс. Я думаю, что я сделаю это, но один раз. За то, чтобы я не шла на работу – вчера – 2 часа – он заплатил мне как за 10 танцев! Мы сходили в парк, покормили уток, рыбок. Потом сходили в церковь... Он пришел в клуб и взял 10 танцев! Да благословит его Господь!

Леонид сказал, что опять не получил деньги. Банк в России почему-то не берет деньги. Я ему сегодня позвонила и сказала это. Он сказал, что пересмотрит.

Господи, благодарю от всей души за все... Благослови нас, дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения!

Матерь Божья защити нас от всех бед и бедствий, дай нам любви огромной, мира, добра. Укрепи нашу веру, надежду.

Ангел Хранитель нас береги! Береги мои деньги, всех нас!

Николай Чудотворец! Будь скорым помощником мне в бизнесе и моем похудении!

Помогите все святые!

Благодарю Господи, за все испытания, за мои чудесные 23 года! Благослови меня в мои новые 24 года!!!

20.11.99.

Такой сюрприз ждал меня в субботу. С раннего утра Асуль поздравила меня с днем рождения – как только я открыла глаза (для косметики).

72

Потом поехали кататься на лошадях с Альфредо. Потом вдруг стали привозить колонки. Мы планировали потом поехать в парк – покататься на горках, потом в ресторан. Стали приносить еду, сказали, что это для друга. Вдруг выходит Аля с тортом ... сюрприз! Оказывается они решили сделать 파티ю мне. Приехала Юлия с Пако, Хабьер, потанцевали, поели хорошо. Было весело. Всем очень благодарна. Потом на работу в субботу – 18 танцев! Познакомилась с Алексом – как это было чудесно!

В воскресенье поехали с Альфонсо в город, где хорошая энергия. Погуляли, купили разные палочки (запахом). Посидели у церкви на траве – так было чудесно, немного плакали – я так морально отдохнула. Потом сходили в ресторан, где поели мексиканскую еду (с выстрелами на улице и музыкой). Вернулись домой, сходили в район, где было много молодежи, купили йогуртов, хотели кофе-капучино – там была очередь... Это было чудесно.

Потом в понедельник снова переживала из-за денег, говорила с Леонидом по телефону. Сделала в понедельник 11 танцев. Альфредо заплатил мне другие 14 и мы пошли в ночной клуб. Хорошие фигуры и груди у девчонок. Мне в прайвид комнате танцевала брюнетка. Альфредо помогал, она немного кусала меня и лапала. Интересно. Потом Альфредо хотел отвезти меня в отель - на массаж. После моего отказа он стал биться в истерику и немного плакать, что он не может больше ждать, что я с ним играю... Я поняла, что нельзя больше ждать. Я выпила рома и отдалась ему. Осчастливила.

73

На следующий день он подарил мне собаку – это чудо! Ав, ав. Во вторник он снова заплатил 14 (был бизнес к моим 14 танцам). Мы пошли в «Титаниум». Все мужики смотрели на меня, а не на девчонок. Потом одна станцевала «прайвид» в комнате – где сидели другие 3 мужика с девчонками. Она с Мексики. Неплохо. Я так напилась в этот день – я отдалась ему – я говорила много по-русски в эту ночь.

В среду и четверг было по 41 танцев, в пятницу – 45. Бенжамин дал нам билеты и деньки в Канкунг. Сейчас я лечу туда. Альфонсо еще раз подарил мне серебряный браслет (на время дал мне свою куртку) – влюбился – по несколько массажей оставляет мне. Вчера была с Максом. Подарила ему мишку с сердцем. Он сказал, что виза делается. Помогла ему кончить – он хоть осчастливился.

Дай мне, Господи, сил и терпения похудеть! Благослови нас!

23.11.99

Вот и дорога обратно. Приехали, все в порядке. В отеле Фиесте Американо началось. Мы ждали до 15.00 наш номер (1,5 часа). Потом пошли в комнату – там

74

было накурено, летали волосы с бумажкой от резинки. Не могли доказать, что у нас есть счет в банке для отеля на 3000 песо. Какой ресторан... с печальной классической музыкой, причем без дринок – надо было отдельно платить. Хороший бассейн. Встретились с ребятами (возле Нью-Йорка ок. Канак). Вечером пошли на автобусе поесть американской еды (я – салат) – на удивление заплатили.

Потом на дискотеку. Там такое шоу было... И мыльные пузыри и фольга – то Майк Джексон поет, то Маска. То со свистом надирают уши, а дают пить текилу с чем-то (вкусный). Ночью пошли на море купаться. Это было нечто. В Карибском море. Мой ухажер и Асуль. Мы так не целовались, хотя и он, и я хотели. Слишком просто и быстро. На следующий день мы с Асуль ходили в ГИМ. Я так хорошо позанималась. Я вечером в магазины (-----). На те деньги, что хотели массаж (по 600 песо) – Асуль купила в Заре шапочку и сумку (а я на другой день кроссовки, доплатила от себя 100 песов – 720 песов). Вечером полежала на море – в темноте.

На следующий день мы попросили разбудить, но нас не разбудили. Мы чуть не опоздали на Аква Ворд. Потому что это было далеко. Мы поехали на водных мотоциклах в специальное место, где потом при парковке инструктор залез на наш мотоцикл и перевернул его. Как было чудесно, когда я увидела большие рыбы, плавающие возле меня. И зеленые с желтым, красные. И обалденно-голубых. И как одна маленькая разгоняла больших со своей территории... Потом села к инструктору и его лодка сломалась, зато я водила на обратном пути одна. Обратно пошли пешком по берегу моря (все свистели рабочие нам).

75

Вечером в ГИМе я бегала 60.02 минуты – 800 ккал!!! Потом пошли по магазинам, в 100% натуральный купили мне кроссовки. Ночью я попрощалась с морем.

Сегодня, Слава Богу не было проблем с купонами, все в порядке. Асуль уезжает послезавтра.

Господи, благослови нас!!!

29.11.99.

Хорошо отработала во вторник – 41, 45, 41 танец. Объявился Рауль, сказал, что отвечали его братья, что был за городом. Взял 15 танцев и ушел (с другом был). Сначала бизнес шел очень плохо, потом ок. 23 приходилось усиленно работать.

Асуль когда уезжала, даже не разбудила меня. Я слышала, как она собиралась. Она оставила мне бумагу – записку (что любит меня, благодарит за все). В четверг я с трудом отработала 11. Сходила с Альфонсо с мексиканский ресторан. Поели, он собирался уезжать в Монтерей. Мы обменялись адресами. Он сказал, что любит меня... Он был откровенен со мной. Сходила с Энрике в ресторан – обалденный Японский. Наступила пятница. Альфредо говорил мне – не работай. Я же должна заключительный день. До этого я деньги моего босса, что не дошли, взяла в банке (542 + 931). Слава Богу! С помощью Альфредо я на Банамекс Виза получила 500 долларов, Трэвел Чаку – 5.000 долларов. Вечером (звонил Франсиско по поводу Виза). Пришел мой клиент Джоз, взял 20 танцев. Станцевала еще 2. Другому – 6. И тут включился свет – полиция. Я слышала об этом – что на наркотики (Драке). Я спокойно пошла в комарийну. Там нас отделили – мексиканок и иностранок. Потом нас почему-то снимали на камеру, запихнули в автобус с решетками. Сколько было полицейских... Привели в отделение, в котором продержали с 11 – 4 утра, переписывали.

76

Кубинки плакали. Мы с Юлей держались. Потом (еда пришла – пью красное вино). Нас отвезли в тюрьму эмиграцию. Мы все так замерзли, спали в камере с Юлей и кубинками (Лис, Каролина, Бенос) – на полу, другие – по 2 на 1-ых и 2-ых этажах. Мы так тряслись от холода... Спали всего три часа. Каждый момент думали, что нас отпустят. Но новостей не было... Мы лежали на зеленой солнечной поляне, окруженные четырьмя стенами с полицейскими вокруг. Тут звонок – еда. Как у Сеченова рефлекс собаки на лампочку и звонок. Мы весь день сидели на полянке и ели, и ели. Нам клуб привез носки, свитера, с Макдональдса еды, фрукты.

77

Сначала все держались вместе. Веселились с Кубы (женщина с бантиками, которая разговаривала на многих языках, там уже ок. 1 года) на завтрак, обед и ужин меняла одежду. Копировали девчонки, она просила немного денег, но потом нас заложила, когда с ней сделали фотографию. Прибежал шеф – кто делал фото? Все девчонки – нет, нет. Девчонки издевались над ней – делали косички «Я Куба, данс!». Давали неплохую еду – в основном рис + мясо, сангвичи – фрукты – банан или дыню + кофе с 10 кг сахара. Вечером копировали – кто как танцует. Все были рады пище.

Потом Хунгария (Венгрия стали отделяться, все себе позаберут, а другие всем). Юля молодец! Когда мы спали вместе, она укрывала меня, давала накрываться, во всем помогала. И я старалась тоже. Она замечательный человек.

Две девчонки с Холланд уехали в воскресенье. Им даже не дали собрать вещей – все за них. И с полицией в аэропорт, сколько слез, деньги...

В понедельник 29.11 звонила Франсиско, говорила, чтобы он вытащил меня – он говорил, что это невозможно (друг Макса). Я не знаю – что с моей визой... Звонил Альфредо, сказал, что вещи женщина собрала, а другую сумку не нашла. Я начала нервничать – может, себе забрала, а сказала, что не нашла?! Альфредо с Марией Саррато все нашли позже, собрали. Привез Альфредо. Господи, как

78

я тебе благодарна, что этот человек со мной рядом. Я так ему обязана, благодарна.

Теперь со мной деньги босса ок. 2.200 + мои Трэвел Чекс на 5.000 долларов + 600 долларов + 1.500 долларов я должна проверить, а остальные ок. 12. (Мари сказала, что 7. остались у Альфредо) ок.19.000 долларов. Альфредо обещал привезти мне в Россию через 10 дней. Господи, я надеюсь, что он привезет... (или пошлет Мартина). Ведь это моя квартира. Я работала тяжело, по 3 дня в 1-ю и 2-ю смену, чтобы заработать, по 10 – 12 часов в сутки. Я помню – выходила никакая. Душ и спать. Утро ок. 11 часов, кофе или свежий сок из различных фруктов с (забыла) семечками.

Кроме того, когда с клуба принесли вещи в мешках, у одной девчонки с Хунгари (рыженькая) сперли 2000 долларов, деньги, парфюм, косметику. Хорошо я все взяла с собой, единственное – я не проверила мешок – я не знаю, что так есть...

Меня только вывезли из тюрьмы в 20.30 без документов, а самолет в 21.10! Больше Альфредо я не видела и Мари тоже, т.к. окольными путями бежали с мужиком. Думала, что моя декларация, все проблемы в России, тут мне неожиданно передают в самолет. Катерина, Яна сказали, что меня ждал и очень перепсиховал Альфонсо. Но я не смогла никого увидеть...

Китти наша мадам, перепугалась, и тоже решила полететь со мной. Где-то сидит сейчас, слава

79

Богу, далеко от меня. Да никому бы не пожелала улететь с Мексики, как я улетела.

Благодарю от всей души, от всего сердца, тебя, Мексика, за все! Я вернусь!..

Сейчас уже почти подлетели к Франкфурту (быстро время прошло). Господи, благослови!

Альфредо купил мне куртку, пуловер спортивный с капюшоном, очень надеюсь, что получу мои деньги в середине декабря. Господи, помоги! Благослови и помилуй нас, защити! С Богом!!!

7.12.99

Во Франкфурте я старалась убежать от Тани, чтобы не встречаться. Услышала объявление, где кто-то имеет сообщение для меня. Оказывается Рой просил меня позвонить (он не смог встретить меня) хотел предупредить. Пошла через зеленый коридор. Меня спросил – где я работала, откуда большие деньги. Я ответила, что друг подарил бой-френд из Мексики. Он с подозрением, что как бы у меня может больше. И я говорю – давайте, смотрите, проверяйте. И меня отпустили. Оказывается меня должны были встречать два человека, помочь без проблем пройти таможенно. Леонид все знал и специально пришел позже. Но, слава Богу, все обошлось. Шампанское, даже цветы.

Ночевать пришлось в студии, т.к. Рой задерживался. На следующий день Рой пришел, переживал за деньги.

80

Мы ходили на балет «Жизель». Я не могла спать, т.к. разница – 9 часов...

Рой нанял мне охранника, т.к. не доверял Леониду, в аэропорту. Где за перевес багажа я заплатила 200 рублей (должна была 330 рублей). Подарил мне огромного медведя.

В Краснодаре меня встретил мой, с белыми цветами. Даже не обнял. Всю дорогу молчал. Потом даже не захотел зайти в дом. Сказал, что хотел, чтобы я его ненавидела. Но я сказала, что люблю его, каждый кусочек его тела. Он кричал, что изменил мне. У меня была дома истерика, моя мамочка очень помогла мне... Послал сообщение, что желает спокойной ночи... Сколько внутри боли...

На следующий день приехал, чтобы попросить о шансе. Я решила дать ему шанс. Мы вместе ездили узнавали о сотовых телефонах, в Сочи за моей дублировкой. Он расстилал мне постель. Но на долго ли это? Когда мы занимались любовью он делал все тоже, многие вещи автоматически (----- грудь, смотрел в сторону и о чем-то думал, шмыгая носом). Или говорил, что соскучился о моей плоти. В то же время я сознавала, что он говорил то же другой женщине (которой 32 года, ребенок 7 лет). У меня уже нет того доверия. Есть внутренняя боль, боль. Его мама была в шоке от того, что он так поступил со мной. Я думала, за что это все...

Мы ходили в ресторан, кушали. Но он глубоко ошибается, если думает, что все так легко. Да, я его люблю, надеюсь, что он тоже. Но даже не в этом дело. Он не понимает – как мне больно в душе. Да, я изменяла ему телом, но не душой. А он сумел душой. Он пытается выстроить стену из тех мелких ссор, которые были у нас, хотел остановить любовь... Но не смог.

81

У меня боль и нет уже того уважения и доверия, что было до этого...

Звонил Альфредо, настоял, чтобы я с ним жила в номере в Москве. Господи, дай мен сил, мудрости и терпения!!! Благослови!

10.12.99

Сейчас я сижу в купейном 12-ом вагоне с тремя мужчинами, песня «журавли в осеннем небе тают, улетають журавли».

Созванивалась с Альфредо, вот, еду к нему за своими 18 тыс. долларов. Мамуля подбирает варианты квартиры. Самое главное – привезти все деньги. Надеюсь, Альфредо будет аккуратен. Вчера спросил меня – есть ли у меня старые башмаки мужские... Я так смеялась, говорю, что есть – те самые кроссовки, что он мне подарил. Он – «ты хочешь убить меня».

Смотрели сотовый телефон. Будут скидки – подключусь. Ездили в Сочи. Сам напросился. Ходили, за все платил. Расстилал в поезде постель. Было чудесно. Но это уже все не то, я чувствую. Да, он заботится, но не от души. Еле выдавливает слово «люблю». Ходил каждый день на тренировки, вместо того, чтобы хоть один день побыть со мной. А когда я пошла на «Золотую шпильку» - он завозмущался, что я это время не провела с ним... Когда после Комсомольского добиралась вечером, решила проверить его, добралась сама до дома. Он – ни ответа, ни привета на пейджер. Видите ли устал, даже не поинтересовался – как я. А потом еще и упрекнул меня, что я не приехала. Да, раньше он переживал, приезжал, узнавал, а сейчас.

82

Я так думаю, что он меня больше не любит. Да, мы занимались любовью, я хотела два раза, но вчера ночью я надеялась, а он сказал, что устал, даже не захотел сделать просто мне. Зачем мне нужна эта неактивность? Если я выйду за него замуж, он вообще опустится. Он не ценит меня. Даже не повесил плакаты, ждет что-то новенькое. А зачем ему это нужно? Если он не любит меня. Он показывает, что хочет забыть меня. Я его сейчас чисто держу как человека, который необходим мне в делах, решении моих проблем, транспортировщика. Но и иногда в сексуальном плане, т.к. сейчас он неактивен. Я очень хочу найти иностранца и жить за границей. Хочу купить квартиру, выйти замуж за иностранца, только не жить в Краснодаре.

Купила вечером дубленку, шапочку, полусапожки.

Господи, благослови! Дай нам мудрости, сил, терпения!!!

83

19.12.99

Приехала я рано утром, сдала сумку в багаж, ходила по Москве весь день. Потом забрала сумку и просидела 3 часа в гостинице «Россия» в ожидании Альфредо. Наконец-то. Оказывается часть 7 тысяч долларов он перевел в Трэвел Чекс и привез с собой, другие 7 оставил в Мексике, чтобы восстановить. Как раз получилось на день Конституции и мы ходили в пустую целыми днями. Он говорил по телефону на 10 тысяч рублей. Сколько заморочек с гостиницей... Его Смирнов забыл внести в меня как гостя, потом мы все оформляли, его хотели заставить платить за полдня, хотя все было оплачено... Но все уладили. Господи, а какие мучения были для меня ночи... Я понимаю его чувства, мне приходилось пить, чтобы не конч-ся. Я хочу фак тебя, Анги. Мне почему-то было смешно. Хотя я уважаю его чувства, все что он для меня делает. Сколько намучились в заключительный день... Пока восстановили яко бы утеранные чеки, - поменяли! Потом ходили снимали в Банкоматах по 40 долларов (а мне надо было 800...). Нашли Альфа-банк и поменяли сразу 600 целыми в машине (по 100 долларов брала на 2 тысячи). Я все переживала, чтобы Рой меня не заметил. Что я получила свои 18060 – Альфредо подарил мне 600 долларов! Благодарю его! Господи, благослови своего раба Альфредо! (звонил мне раза 2 – узнавал, как я, я ему дала свой мобильник, сразу проверил как работает).

84

А как я устала – была демонстрация, куча народу, ментов и я с тяжелой сумкой. Слава Богу, все обошлось! Как я вздохнула спокойно, когда увидела Роя... Мы вставали рано утром (в 5 часов) для получения американской визы. Так холодно было стоять в очереди. Мы постояли, потом Володя. На мое удивление – нам дали визу сразу! На другой день уже ее делали! Теперь я должна ехать с Роем 19 января в Америку... Да благословит нас Господь!

Еще Рой подарил мне мобильник МТС-Джи Эс Эм. Я так была рада! Прилетела, слава Богу, с деньгами все в порядке!

18.12.99 – дата полного разрыва отношений с Алексеем!

Он все время сторонился меня. Тут я сама сказала ему, чтобы перестал играть в эти игры. Он сознался, что у него чувства к той особе. Он убил свою любовь ко мне. Это его жизнь! Я позже вспомнила, что Лена говорила, что он не видит меня как свою жену...

Сашка помог отвезти в Юбилейный район меня за телефоном в понедельник. Так что теперь у меня мобильник Эл Джи – 63-66-95. Уже звонили из Мексики, с Сочи.

Смотрели квартиры на Хакурате, но проблемы у них с мафией + ремонт (25 тысяч). На Рылеева – чудесная, чистенькая, с ремонтом, но далеко от остановки + кладовка под квартирой ок. 26 кв.м. Женщина замечательная, но далековато то остановки – минут 10 идти.

85

Остановились на квартире. Дом Союзов 2 этаж, 3 комнаты + скинули 2,5 тысячи долларов, т.к. ремонт раковины...

Сколько нервов с Брайтон... Отдали за срочные справки 4,5 тыс. рублей + (200 долларов) + 700 долларов (3%) за услуги юриста... А эта Гаяна постоянно подводит. В миграционную мы могли пройти, но не было ордера... Мы потеряли целый день. Теперь, дай Бог, чтобы хоть за деньги нам дали возможность рассмотреть документы и выписали бумагу вперед... Я так хочу, чтобы все быстрее получилось, дай Бог!!!

Еще я причастилась и покрасила волосы, а похудела только на 1 см (102) в бедрах... Господи, дай сил похудеть сильнее и быстрее!!! С Божьей помощью!!!

5.01.2000

Вот и новый год! 2000! Господи, благослови! Благодарю за все, за все! В новый путь с Божьим благословением и помощью!!!

30.12. встретили Роя, самолет опоздал на 2 часа. Это время я скоротала с Юрой (с 25 школы – одноклассником). Привезли Роя в гостиницу «Москва» на такси за 130 рублей (с доставкой мамы до дома). В этот день отключили мой телефон, что с Москвой (МТС), т.к. мало денег. Я ночевала в гостинице, полулюксе. Потом мы гуляли, поехали праздновать домой. Но столько подарков подарил – плеер с диском, много мелочей – шоколад, хлопья. А мама замечательные перчатки, для сережек шкатулки. Я маме – диктофон.

86

А Рою – плакат со своей фотографией. Он был рад (+ вино, конфеты).

Встретили хорошо, постреляли! Я наверно первый раз не переела. Хотели вызвать такси, но не получилось, т.к. все было занято. Ок. 2.30 поехали вызывать (ловить) машину. На улице так было пусто... Мы достаточно быстро «поймали» за 30 рублей до Кооперативного. Поехали по Драмтеатру, на каруселях. На следующий день вечером 1.01. хотели уехать в Сочи на автобусе, но его отменили, хорошо успели сдать и купить на поезд. Он был недоволен, что в плацкарте. Добрались хорошо. Доспали, погуляли по рынку. Рой купил мне чулки, для волос, трусики. Вечером ходила на дискотеку «Престиж», еле взяли такси. В гардеробе я была ок. 30 минут. Потом прихожу, Рой орет, чтобы я позвала охранника, т.к. он не хочет, чтобы сидел с нами один пьяный дурак! Рой чуть не ударил его... Поехали на другую «Ультра», нормально. На следующий день утром в ресторане не было яиц... Он был расстроен. Меня расстроил до слез, задев воспоминания (тяжелые) о Кипре. Потом разозлился. Но я сгладила, переключив на другую волну. Хотели на самолете, но не было рейса на 4.01. Взяли на ночь на поезд (повезло, в пригородной кассе дали). Погуляли в дендрарии, в цирке (где тигры разорвали глобус, дрались между собой из-за мяча (глобуса разорванного). Дед Мороз (дрессировщик) еле успокоил

87

А тигры ругались... Потом покушали и поехали. В купе попались нам Сергей с семьей, предлагали выпить, а потом храпел... Рой хотел выкупить другие 2 места, но я была против...

Приехали, доспали у меня дома, а потом пошли в гости к Сергею с мамой. Хорошо посидели, была проблема в Сергее, он работает с нефтью с Баку – Новороссийск. Хороший дом. Но он слишком много говорил об Америке, что Россия еще покажет, что мы не хуже, пытался унизить. Я много что не переводила, споил он нас... Правда хорошо отвезли в аэропорт, проводила я Роя, слава Богу. Очень интересно, что если бы что-то случилось я должна бы позвонить Андрею с каким-то словом.

С телефоном все в порядке, надо было доплатить деньги.

Алексей вообще «упал». Я немного припугнула его, что слежу за ним и его подругой. Он испугался. Потом хорошо поздравила его мама. Сегодня, после моего уточнения, что его подругу звали Таня, имеет белую 7-ку, 32 года. Он звонит мне и просит вообще не приходить мыться в его дом... Он испугался. У меня не было настроения с ним общаться. На 2-ой его звонок я вообще не соизволила общаться. Не хочу. Но как он опустил... Бог ему судья, всем его поступкам.

Завтра пойдем разбираться с на-

88

шими продавцами. Т.к. они не сделали дарственной, просили дать аванс 6 тысяч рублей, химичат. Как Бог даст.

Господи, дай нам мудрости, сил, терпения, мудрости! Пресвятая Богородица спаси нас. Храни нас Ангел Хранитель! Помоги нам Николай Чудотворец. И все Святые. С Божьей помощью и благословением!

17.01.2000

Вот, Алексей Вячеславович позвонил и сказал, что его мама в курсе больших событий, чем я думаю (после того, как я сказала о возрасте тете Гале). Чтобы я забрала все свои вещи, мне не стоит приходить.

Я позже пришла к его маме, помылась, меня ждал пакетик со всеми моими вещами + станок с бритвами был открыт с одной бритвой (сволочь). Я была так возмущена... Забрала все фотографии, где мы были вдвоем (меня всю трясло) – в этом состоянии я написала записку – ты последняя сука все вернется. И как я чувствовала, эту записку прочитала его мама (позже я сказала тете Гале, что пусть сам привозит мои вещи, я не намерена нести тяжести. Он приехал позже, но я попросила маму выйти. Он испугался. Они поговорили хорошо. воспринимал все с улыбкой (типа – какого золотого парня я лишилась). Я позвонила ему позже на счет бритвы. Так он, разорался, чтобы я сходила

89

в магазин и перепроверила упаковки, а потом ему позвонила. Он орал с такой ненавистью. Господи, какое он чудовище... Господи, ты ему судья.

К Ирине ходила (с Грозного). С мамой купили материал для вечернего платья. Еще на толчке купили мне берет, юбку с запахом. Короткую (450 рублей) и длинную (1.300 рублей). Ирина вышла в конце декабря замуж – Сергей (27 лет), ей (31). Дай Бог им счастья!!! Платье красивое, но не успела забрать т.к. Иринка заболела (может быть). Хочет забеременеть, но не получается 3 месяца. Дай ей Господь ребеночка!

Я садилась на диету. От супа на 4 кг вес, но не в объемах, не знаю как быть 102 и все. Господи, дай мне сил, помоги, чтобы мой объем... Я так хочу чувствовать себя уверенно. Все, хватит. Надоело быть толстой! Не хочу! Я отказываюсь от жира! Я начала активно худеть!!!

С нашими продавцами уже тянется... Все время врут, что сделали документы, а сами все никак. То хотели деньги (часто) взять, чтобы мы начинали заселяться. Мы с мамой ходили вчера покупали унитаз с раковиной, присмотрели диван уголок, другой (серенький), кухонный уголок, краны, для ванны мойку. Переживаю за мамулю – как там сделка у нее. Попросила Володю, чтобы он ей помог если что. Дай Бог, Господи, благослови, чтобы сделка состоялась удачно.

90

Без накладок.

Гадали с мамой, постреляли на старый Новый год. На Рождество тоже. С кружками (лук, хлеб...) – мамуля выбрала сахар, а я хлеб. А со скорлупой и свечкой – маме большой выирыш, а мне победа в конкурсе.

Господи, помоги, чтобы все нормализовалось. Дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения. Господи, благослови!!!

P.S. Каждую неделю Альфредо звонил. Говорил, что очень скучает, любит и хочет меня. Что ему меня не хватает. 15 января он праздновал свой день рождения.

И Рой звонил. Один раз я смотрела на фотографию (на его) и он позвонил в этот момент. Другой раз позвонил, когда я читала гороскоп о нем. И звонят они в один и тот же день. Рой говорит, что я для него единственное счастье. Хочет, чтобы я была рядом с ним. Если бы не его возраст... Той информацией, что я владела о нем сейчас – меня все устраивает. Как Бог даст...

Еще я снимала от одиночества была порча на мне. Дай Бог, чтобы никто не мешал мне.

23.01.2000

Сейчас я в самолете, начинаем взлетать в Лас-Вегас...

При приезде в Нью-Йорк на таможне одна зараза (толстая, темнокожая) задавала слишком много вопросов. Для чего приехала, кто, что... Но после ответа, что Рой мой будущий муж – ее наглое лицо изменилось. Слава Богу, все хорошо. Нью-Йорк выглядит также, как я и представляла. Единственное, что мне не нравилось – темные тона домов(как заводские стены).

91

спортивная одежда. Рой поэтому и не любит американских женщин, потому что они хотят быть похожими на мужчин.

Я звонила в Мексику Мари Соррато. Она сказала, что после нашего ареста был еще арест. Но все девчонки с Чехословакии, Венгрии вернулись. Но никто не может давать гарантии... Сказала, что специально для меня они постараются сделать бумагу на право работать в клубе. (До этого Леонид сказал, что большие проблемы у Серхио – его арестовали, т.к. он не пускал полицию. Но – самое главное – Сальвадор. Вышел какой-то закон о канадцах (он наполовину канадец – сын барона). Он во всем обвиняет полицию меня, что я, якобы натравила на него полицию?!). не знаю, с одной стороны я переживаю ехать и из Сальвадора тоже. Я же не виновата, что забрали мой зеленый паспорт. Если будет сделана эта бумага, то может быть я поеду в Мексику.

В Нью-Йорке мы с Роем ходили в два клуба. Везде такой хаос... В первом вообще. Когда я увидела их комарийну... Все навалено, вещи лежат. Нет шоу. Вход платный – 15 долларов. Около стойки танцуют и имеют кое-какие деньги + тэйбл дэнс, где только они трогают, но их нельзя. Но музыка, атмосфера...

Во втором лучше. Там симпатичней. Но обстановка, как в кинотеатре. Сцена небольшая, вокруг столики с креслами, с ограниченным количеством места. Танец стоит 20 долларов, девчонки делали танцы. Честно говоря, но сравниваю с Мексикой. Может быть в Лас-Вегасе...

С Роем ходили в «Хай Макс». Там было, что-то вроде кинотеатра. Но, был огромный экран, где ты как в виртуальной реальности.

92

Смотрели Уолт Дисней. Под оркестр какая-то композиция – бабочек или рыб, оленя и ----- . Я еле сидела, т.к. мои глаза закрывались. Ходили в русский ресторан, где сразу у меня появилась ностальгия о России. В японском, где стоимость суши 8 долларов за каждую 1 штуку (я взяла 2 штуки) – самые дешевые. В принципе, я все время стараюсь брать самое дешевое. Совесть не позволяет брать больше. Завел меня в магазин, где мне понравилась водолазка. После чего он прямо сказал – это дорого (60 долларов). Зачем тогда вести меня в дорогой магазин и выбирать, если это дорого? До этого я нашла кое-что для волос – 15 долларов, он снова сказал, что это дорого. Мы ходили в ресторан, там он за нас двоих платил 45 долларов, 30 долларов, почему жалко потратить на вещь, которую я буду использовать долго. А когда были в клубе, он заплатил от азарта 20 долларов за танец – 3 минуты... Иногда я его не понимаю. Довел меня до слез. (я не хотела говорить о том, что обидно – показывает, выбирает, а потом говорит, что это дорого). А он разорался на меня. Я этого не потерплю! Не имеет права орать на меня. Мне все равно их культура, пусть сдерживается. (Воздушные ямы). Ездили в метро, да грязновато и не красиво, как в Москве. Подарил мне микрофон (для мамы). Ездил в Джорджию. К стоматологу показывал дом, который продал, где жил до этого.

С его другом (негром, который учитель по каратэ), ходили на диско. Странная традиция, если мужской род приходит с девушкой, его друг может отбить ее у него, будет пытаться. Его друг этого хотел, но Рой сказал, что остановил его. Странно...

93

А вчера мы встретились с его друзьями.

Первая актриса – Синди, Фрэнк (темнокожий) и Эверетт (кто ставит шоу, ищет людей). Очень интересные люди. Синди очень импульсивная, меня расхвалила... Даст Бог, я найду то, чем люблю заниматься. Господи, благослови!!!

27.01.2000

Сейчас я лечу в самолете обратно, в Нью-Йорк. Что было в Лас-Вегасе. Когда я приехала туда, я смотрела на все вокруг удивительными глазами. Эти отели... Внутри маленький город с казино, где люди просаживали столько денег... Мы остановились в отеле «Париж». Очень красиво, какие номера... В первый день я была в изумлении. Мы с Роем ходили вечером на шоу-гелз. Там были маленького роста, в основном делали акробатические трюки. Но тема была, направлена на кан-кан. Хорошие костюмы, завтрак принесли. Так вот на второй день мы с Роем пошли завтракать, это было нечто. Он начал кушать джем. Я взяла его и увидела, что он был разбит. Тут Рой позвал менеджера этого ресторана, полицейского, составили бумагу – если что-то случится, то они обязаны будут заплатить деньги за ущерб здоровья. Я знала, что ничего страшного здесь нет. Это было забавно и смешно раздувать из этого трагедию, тем более, что он не ел весь...

Мы ходили по отелям, а вечером встретились с Пэтси и ее мужем. Они многое рассказали о Лас-Вегасе.

94

Смотрели их дом. Собаки были очень забавными. Хороший дом, чистенький, уютный. Пэтси хотела подарить мне красивое украшение. Мне очень понравилось (оно было тяжелое), но я застеснялась и ее муж взял и забрал... Как Рой сказал позже – это такая культура, где он помог как бы мне избавиться от этой неловкой ситуации, хотя в России, подарки если дарятся – не забираются. Я была несколько расстроена этой ситуацией.

Потом мы ходили на другое шоу, где наши места были рядом со сценой так, что я не видела общей картины, а ловила момент на других, мимике. Шикарное шоу, костюмы. Но опять, в основном, тема начала XIX века. Один танцор – стал смотреть на меня. Рой успел все заметить. Хи лук эт ю. Я подумала, чтобы избежать сцену ревности – опровергала. Этот танцор еще не раз на меня смотрел. Также на меня смотрел и мэджик-мэн. Удивительно! Он поднимал машину (летала), вместо девушек в клетке появились тигры. Огромное наслаждение от шоу! Также мы ходили в мэнс-клуб. Он хорошо выглядел. Было шоу, где девчонки неплохо танцевали, хороший клуб. Все также, ты получаешь 20 долларов за танец.

Ходили и на шоу «Крэизи гел». Ничего интересного, хорошие груди только очень дешево по сравнению с предыдущими. И вчера... мы ходили в отель «Нью-Йорк» (два раза). Там мы катались на американских горках... Это было захватывающе... А за день до этого я ходила на виртуальную реальность. У меня была такая фобия... как всегда в начале. Но зато потом... Впереди сидел парень, управляющий нашей машиной, мы летали между столбами, падали. А вчерашнее шоу напоминало цирк. Были братья с Мексики, которые жонглировали. Один из них случайно ударил другого (реально), а люди думали, что это шутка... Ему было больно.

95

За все это время Рой был разозлен на меня, когда он закрыл рот таксисту, а я задала вопрос. Вчера мы обсуждали философию, он вдруг стал злиться и повышать голос на меня. Я решила перевести тему, сделать фото. Где он вдруг стал улыбаться... Это было здорово. Он очень помогал мне, звонил, узнавал. Подарил мне тигренка. А мой диск... Пришлось покупать мне (30 долларов!!!) – там два внутри. Сначала хотел отдать половину, но потом не стал. Да Бог с ним!

Не знаю, если выходить замуж за него, то это только ради гражданства. Это не тот идеал мужчины, который мне нужен. Он заботливый, когда я разыграла сцену, что падаю в обморок, он был взволнован. Он слишком агрессивен бывает, без контроля. Звонила маме, - опять какие-то бумаги... С Мексикой... не знаю. Гарантии Мари мне не дает. Деньги Леониду она все выслала еще в декабре, он наврал мне. Придется разбираться. Господи, не знаю – что мне делать... Может поехать на месяц в Мексику. Может придется для зарабатывания денег. Чистить апартаменты Роя и готовить еду в Москве ок. месяца, пытаюсь найти временную работу в Москве.

96

Господи, дай мне мудрости и сил!!!

29.01.2000 (старт)

Вот и закончилась моя поездка (почти). Сейчас я сижу в аэропорту, видела некоторых русских людей, симпатичного русского высокого парня. Что можно сказать... Вчера дозвонилась я таки Асуль, оказывается она была в Холланд. Что, она ждет звонка от Франсиско о возможности работать в Мексике – можно ли, или нет. Господи, что мне делать? Я не знаю, думаю – может быть в Мексику, но только на один месяц. Это риск, но деньги. С другой стороны – один месяц жить с Роем и чистить за 250 долларов (причем до этого долго думал)  $250 \times 28 = 7000$  неплохо на рубли. Будем думать. Да, что было после Лас-Вегаса. Мы искупались. Он начал мазать лосьон мне (до этого мы веселились, в самолете он ел омлет и уронил на себя, в аэропорту кто-то открыл мою сумку). У меня было хорошее настроение. Он веселился. Потом я имела шутку, а он не понял. Сказал, что думает, что я насмехаюсь над ним. Меня это оскорбило, потому что у меня и в голове этого не было. Потом я ушла в другую комнату думать. Он вернулся за мной один раз, позже принес халат, укрыл и сказал, что если я хочу прекратить наши отношения мы вернемся - это все. Дурак, ведь знает, что я от него в зависимости, ведет себя похабно. Я вернулась, он был злой, я обняла его, он меня, потом он взял меня на столе. Я кончила два раза. И в какой-то момент изнутри у меня пошел стресс, я как разревелась, меня всю трясло. На утро тоже, я не могла есть, расплакалась, и снова он взял меня. Да, действительно занятия любовью помогают в разрешении конфликтной ситуации. Но все это дало какую-то трещину... До этого мы должны были встретиться с Паком (он верит в Бога, есть студия, где записывается музыка известных музыкантов). А получилось, что он забыл, мы пошли в ресторан. И начали говорить о порче. Тут я поняла, что его секретарь Саша, через еду матери, которую употребил Рой, могла сделать порчу. Т.к. он стал кушать больше, больше худеть, также наши личные отношения, много работает – не имеет достаточно денег... Когда вернулся – я попыталась найти для снятия. А также разговор с Леонидом – о моих деньгах.

97

На следующий день мы ходили на спектакль «Фантом Опера». История, как фантом полюбил девку, но она любила другого, Фантом украл ее, хотел убить ее друга (который отправился на поиски). Но она (Кристин) поцеловала его, он отпустил ее.

А потом мы встретились с Паком, студия. Какая сексуальная песня парня (с Франции), симпатичный такой. Очень было интересно.

Что с Роем? Как друг, сексуальный партнер он хорош, но муж!..

Господи, благослови!!! Благодарю за все!!!

4.02.99 поели

Когда прилетели ок. 12.30 начали спать, проснулись в ок. 21.40 – встали, поели, занимались любовью. Утром опять следующего дня поели. Интересно. Долго я отбирала целителей для снятия с Роя. Что интересно, что все брали ок. 100 долларов, а некоторые + за диагностику. Частники тоже, но единственный просил 100 за диагностику (отливка на воске) и лечение 600 рублей. Чтож, оказывается это черноватый мэн, интересный мужчина, высокий, с острым взглядом. Это был сильный сглаз. Но следующий день я отвозила фото Роя. Разговор с Леонидом был очень интересный! Он сказал, что Мари врет и согласился на прямой звонок с Мари (о том, что денег не получал). И несколько раз повторял, что не хочет, чтобы эти финансовые проблемы стали оградой в наших отношениях. С чем я и согласилась. Он мне помог во многом и я благодарна за это. Вечером Рой вдруг сквозь смех сделал мне предложение. Я не поверила, т.к. вышло не серьезно. Но потом он сказал, что это серьезно... Трудно.

98

Во вторник 2.02. это день, когда состоялось чудо!!! Наконец-то наша квартира стала нашей! Мы купили!!! Слава тебе, Господи, слава Тебе! Вечером я с Роем начала говорить о замужестве. О том, что я не готова и не уверена в нем, но чтобы поехать в Америку с рабочей визой – это единственный выход. Если мы это сделаем, это будет лишь сделка, а потом время покажет. И + к этому он вдруг стал говорить о бумаге, в которой в случае развода я не буду иметь прав на его деньги. Получается – мне ничего. Где я, в свою очередь, сказала о бумаге, где он имеет права выгнать меня из страны. От выпил два бокала вина и стал дурным. Разговор стал бессмысленным. 3.02 я ушла гулять. Где под вечер меня выхватил Алексей. Говорил по руке. Что будет 2 детей. Если протяну с Роем до мая, может это серьезно. Человек восточного типа пойдет с конца февраля. Интересный. Сидел облизывался, в ботинки три раза стекло. Выпил вина, поговорили. Было ок. 18 часов. Рой решил позвонить, когда я была в лифте (ехала в офис)

99

За все это время я готовила ему еду, стирала его вещи, ходила платила за свой собственный телефон в снегопад. Думаю, что будет скучать по мне. Я тоже. Господи, дай мне мудрости и благослови нас!!!

19.02.2000

Вот я уже и дома! Две недели я безвывозно с утра до вечера делаю ремонт. Мамуля заболела, сильно кашляла и по ночам. Я сдирала обои, моя рука стала на размер больше, опухла от шпателя. Дядька (который знает тренеров) сделал ванну, раковины поставил. Звонил Альфредо – он по телефону кончил для меня. Мы с ним разговаривали минут 40. Помешанный на сексе. Я ему говорила, что сижу в белых трусиках, что я себя трогаю... Рой звонил. Сейчас он в Лондоне, звонил мне. Странная ---- . Сначала он по телефону о % говорил. Как я на него наехала, напомнила – кто я есть для него пока, больше не говорил. Нажаловалась, что нет денег, обещал привезти – уточнял сколько. На что я ответила, что ни о чем ему не говорила... Чтобы не было потом упреков. Мама почти доклеяла обои, я покрасила батареи. Да, пожаловалась Альфредо, что нет денег, обещал на мою карту положить 1000 долларов, но я сказала меньше – 500 долларов. Пригласил в Париж, говорил, что не может без меня, хочет меня.

Еще 13.02 с мамой пошли покупать и купили холодильник, стиральную машину. Я увидела... Алексея. Я никогда не видела его испуганным. Это был для него шок, он прошел не поздоровался. Потихоньку ее довел в другую сторону. Ходили, смотрели. Как мое сердце колотилось. Они ушли... Мы с мамой поздравили друг друга (открыткой, цветами, шоколадом). Меня потом вечером тряссти начало, видно переела (и шоколад, и бублик, и баунти). 14.02 позвонил Рой и Альфредо, поздравили меня с днем Святого Валентина – всех влюбленных. А вечером я пошла на аналогичный концерт, что был на Рождество (добавили кукол). Сфотографировалась с Самоленко (сказала я, что со многими знаменитыми есть фото, теперь с ним) – «что это значит?» - спросил он меня. А потом сказал, что я должна лично к нему за фото придти. Ну и выпил он в этот день. Подарил на золотую свадьбу подарок и молодым. Сейчас морально готовлюсь к операции. Потерплю, но зато забуду об очках. Ходила, консультировалась. Переживаю. Лене звонила, сказала, что можно делать операцию, что с Роем сделка мне дает неожиданную большую выгоду. Вчера купила себе пальто. Сколько ходила по толчку... Думала длинное. Но купила наше – совместное за 2.400 полупальто. Стильное, немного рукава короткие. Рой должен приехать 28.02. С Кролла ушел, и рад, и нет. Я надеюсь на волю Бога! Господи, благослови, дай нам сил и терпения. Матерь Божья защити от бед и спаси нас. Храни нас Ангел Хранитель! Помоги во всех путях и делах Николай Чудотворец, помогите все Святые!!!

100

101

5.04.2000

Господи, сколько времени прошло. И сколько нерв и яблания дал мне господин Холландер. 1.03.2000 мы переехали в новую нашу квартиру. Он помогает (со студентами). Но сколько нерв с ним, его опущенной философией. Сколько было мучений по его регистрации, а потом с ЗАГСом. За два дня до регистрации он заявляет что может быть стоп, т.к. я сказала, что не хотела бы говорить о своем прошлом... В «Пауке» он покупает мне танец, доводит до злости (пришлось говорить о Кипре, Мексике, что я устала, мучилась – ничего (секса) не хотела).

Мы ходили в рестораны. Он подарил мне белое золото с голубым топазом. А в субботу 11.03.2000 с утра мы зарегистрировались. Это было весело. Я ничего серьезного не воспринимала. Это сделка. Как я от него устала. Недавно звонил, сказал, что я его вижу, как хорошего клиента... Вот это я разозлилась... Конченный.

Инна готовилась к конкурсу. Одну отправили в Москву чтоб исключить ее из конкурса. Ходили на вечеринку Ментос – здорово. Сначала Инна хотела поехать к Тони, но не смогла т.к. институт. На конкурсе Инна – мисс Очарование (причем, из 176, 114 – благодаря Морозову). + мисс Русское радио первое место Алена. Как мы потом гуляли... С Морозовым отплясали... то с ним, то с другим парнем из «Премьеры».

102

Да так доплясались, что мне подарили корзину косметики «Серебряная линия». Этот пацан начал говорить о продолжении, причем в открытую. Забавный. Потом на дискотеке «Джой» Алексей сказал, что безумно меня хочет, что я свожу его с ума (поставил шампанское). Я чуть не уехала с ним...

Вчера с Катей мы погуляли на Орбите... Бедного мальчика развратили, поцеловали, втроем танцевали...

Мамуля уехала вчера в ночь в Санкт-Петербург. Дай ей Бог!

Самое интересное – Арсен, который познакомился со мной в троллейбусе. Выше двух метров, напоминающий чудовище (доброе) из сказки. Напросился делать антенну. Устанавливал два дня, а ТВ идеально не показывает. Потихоньку от него я все дальше.

Что было с Володей... Я все таки решила. Он взял ключи у Вадика. Это была старая, неухоженная квартира (здесь повесилась его мама – Вадика). Мы немного выпили, он взял меня, потом отдыхал (я остывала). В резинке все это было. Делает он это неплохо. Но за два раза (причем во второй раз он даже толком не подготовил я ни разу не кончила. Он интересно готовился. Странно, но мне кажется, что пока не встретился настоящий мужчина, смогу ли я? Я не могу делать минет, т.к. приходилось драчить постоянно 0,5 лет каждый день. Рою этого никогда не понять, т.к. он мужчина.

103

Написал письмо, что как ему тяжело одному, какая красавица его учительница по русскому языку, которая помогает ему во всем. Честно сказать, что я буду делать в Москве с ним. Слушать его философию. Стирать и готовить? А мама одна. И если кто-нибудь на меня посмотрит... Если бы я его любила, он меня тоже, тогда... Он уже стал деньги считать. И расстроился, что я не работаю. А я не могу пока найти. Что меня вывело – он заявил, что я его вижу как хороший костюмер. Вот ябланище, я была зла на него... Теперь не буду даже есть на его деньги. Предстоит разговор о наших отношениях, я не знаю. С одной стороны я бы хотела чтобы мы были друзьями, но он не мешал бы мне встречаться с другими, а я даю свободу ему. Господи, дай мне мудрости!!!

В течение двух недель я бегала кроссы с 30 минут до 1 часа.

Брали интервью о глазном центре. У меня и девчонки (с Липецка). Мы говорили о том, что сколько проблем было с плохим зрением (я говорила о транспорте, о знакомых, было неудобно, линзы, раздражение. С сомнениями я решилась сделать и счастлива, об очках и вспоминать не хочу, только солнцезащитные. Так здорово видеть мир своими родными глазами). Должны в следующее воскресенье по акценту показать.

Арсен больше не звонит – слава Богу. Я с ним «холодно» держалась. Даже не мог нормальную антенну сделать + язвы, полнота и т.д.

104

23.03.2000 в 13.00 Я сделала операцию на глаза. Было интересно. Одели нас в зеленые короткие одеяния. Был треск и вонь. А потом резь в глазах... Слезы текли, открыть было невозможно. Принесли еду. Я то полкатлеты, то ничего, заснула. Потом постепенно открывала глаза. Старалась кушать в половину меньше. Люди добрые помогали ходить, т.к. я не могла открыть глаза. Кормили отлично! Вставала в 7 утра, Инна навещала. Когда было воздействие лазера, я читала «Отче наш». Прошли эти четыре дня. И открылся другой мир. Потихоньку я видела лучше и лучше. Когда я лишний раз капала, мои глаза ругались (болели, резали). Рой меня оберегал, но морально высасывал. Ясновидящая дала мне соль и сахар добавлять ему в еду. Улыбка стала, как у невинного младенца. Я с собой снова взяла.

2.04. Я ходила на «Тодес». Взяла видеокамеру и засняла кое-что. Это здорово. С сентября хотят открыть в Краснодаре школу «Тодес» - 100 долларов в месяц. Обучение – 3 месяца. Здорово ребята работают. Но кто будет ходить туда – богатые.

Долго делали мой второй паспорт, т.к. шла проверка с ГИДа (с Майкопа). Отдала 70 долларов (делали 3 недели). Но слава Богу! Все в порядке, теперь у меня два паспорта. Может быть поеду на неделю в Мексику увидеть Альфредо (и подзаработать хоть чуть).

105

Но нужна хорошая отмазка Рою. Это опасно, но я посмотрю.

Да, с Катюхой мы оторвались на дискотеках. На Джое в среду был Хит FM, классная музыка. А в прошлый раз нас хотели «снять», но они не смогли, т.к. мы с охраной сели в такси.

Я пыталась соблазнить Алексея, получить его, а потом может быть

Бегала, платила, заводила новые книжки за газ, за свет. Не успела доклеять потолок.

Катка приболела (тоже голос «сел», а вчера температура 38,2 – 38,6.

Ключи Наташе пришлось положить в почтовый ящик. С газетой. Дай Бог, чтобы все было в порядке, ведь там все вещи...

До вокзала доехала за 20 рублей, был дождик. До этого была температура +25, +27, а в течение одного дня ок. +13. Все деревья распустились. Так было красиво за окнами – белые цветы. Надеюсь мелкая выдержит, испытание двух дней побыть одной.

Я все рассказала Альфредо о Рое, о наших планах. Он отнесся с пониманием. Жутко хочет увидеть меня.

Помню на дискотеке этот пацан встал на колено передо мной, чтобы поцеловать, а там была блевотина. Он расстроился, что джинсы придется стирать...

Господи, дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения, наставь и поддержи! Благослови!!!

106

20.04.2000

Вот я и возвратилась с Москвы. Я себя настраивала не брать денег с Роя, доказывая, что я не вижу его как костюмер (оказывается, что он имел ввиду не деньги, а будущие возможности). Тем не менее он встретил меня с розовыми розами (11 штук). Я ходила в церковь (сразу пошли месячные – в среду). Бегала кроссы вдоль реки Москва между собаками, с которыми гуляли хозяева. Доберман пинчер со старым дедушкой, молодая овчарка. 18.04 я сделала рекорд – 1 час 10 минут ок. 9 км.

Ходила на кастинг на Види Винчи. Я понравилась Наташе Рубиной. Она меня обзванивала. Я сломалась и внесла себя в базу данных за 50 долларов, оказывается, что не нуждаюсь в их школе (350 долларов). Она хотела меня на дефиле, но я отказалась. Я не уверена, что они... Единственное, хочу окупить эти деньги (причем я не должна звонить о кастингах почему-то).

В Москве было тепло. Я купила себе лаковые туфли (за 25 долларов + 20 рублей), две кофточки, блеск для губ, карандаш, иконки. Холлардеру – ангелочка. Он подарил мне горшочек с цветами, а перед выездом желтые и красные тюльпаны.

Был кастинг у Джабраила (на манекенщиц я не потянула), а на стриптиз обещал, смотрел, но сказал, что не получилось что-то (топлис – 25, стрептиз – 25 – 50 долларов всего). Я думаю, что наврал.

Ходили на джин с Андреем и Женей с Кролла (мне подарили цветы – фиолетовые хризантемы), ресторан «Шуры-Муры». Поговорили о работе Рою (якобы он хочет найти в ФСБ). Взяли шведский стол – 250 рублей на человека.

107

В среду ходили на дискотеку. Сначала на «Гипопотам», но было закрыто. Спрашивали у таксиста – он обещал свозить на другую, а мы, узнав информацию, решили в другую. Он обиделся, просил передать Рою, что он козел (после того как – «за обед ты можешь отдать 100 долларов, за дискотеку и такси жадничаешь?» Рой – «три доллара, три доллара – рядом 100 долларов»). Пошли что рядом на Тверской. Народу мало. Но я отплясалась.

В четверг ходили в «Гипопотам» - учили латино-американские танцы. 1,5 часа «Вперед-назад». Это был класс! Но как только началось, Рой устал – 1 час ночи.

В пятницу ходили на вечеринку Леонида – больше девчонок, чем пацанов. Уговорила девчонок поехать в Мексику. Леонид сказал, что обижен Сальвадор на меня клуб, т.к. с Альфонсо яко бы был роман, я его кинула и он навел полицию. Тупость. Он боится, что я могу сама уехать и работать на себя. Пришлось наврать, что я заняла у Роя 10 тысяч долларов, т.к. потеряла 7 тысяч на карте. Но боюсь вернуться после тюрьмы. Попытаюсь сотрудничать с ним – искать девчонок для работы в Мексике, где с каждой девчонки в месяц по 100 долларов. Господи, благослови!!!

Потом пошли увидеть в Кантри бар его друзей – девчонку с Анголы и ее москвича (от которого она беременна). Она говорит по-русски, маленькая, хорошо поет. Потом ездили в другое место, где было аналогично, но больше места, девчонок, которые снимались, иностранцев, которые смотрели на меня...

108

В субботу ходили с «Доллс(а)», где вход 50 долларов с человека. Девчонки симпатичные, но тэйбл – 50 долларов, стриптиз – 100 долларов. Прайвид для 4-10 человек. Хорошо танцуют. Но Рой обалдел от цен. Потом пошли в Бэдсэл на стрипшоу. Опоздание на 1 час, на шоу... Из жизни насекомых. Акробатки (пауки, насекомые) с элементом эротики. Отличное шоу! Ок. 1 часа.

В воскресенье мы встретились с Тони и Лилией (знакомили). Наиздевалась на Тони я, он опоздал. Потом поехали играть в бильярд и в кегли. Я набрала 81 очко. Оставались то 1 мяч, то 3. А один раз я чуть вместо мяча не полетела – мяч остался, а я вперед, это был класс!!!

Рой, слава Богу, не доставал меня моей прошлой жизнью. Были проблемы с бумагой из Кипра. Он доставал меня, что хотел спать. И тем, что я хитрая... Я расплакалась, говоря, что я самая плохая, хитрая, он пошел успокаивать меня, что хочет быть возле меня (клоуз), более близко. Один раз кончил в меня – первый мужской род, кому я позволила это сделать. На другой раз я воспользовалась препаратом, ему так горячо было. Как я сказала, что это было он пулей вылетел. Что будет. Если не получится виза в Америку, поеду через Леонида в Грецию или Венесуэлу. В июне точно уеду куда-нибудь.

Господи, дай нам мудрости, сил и терпения, благослови!!!

109

19.05.2000

Сейчас сижу и жду отправления в Москву в аэропорту.

Был показ 29.04 у Вашл-й в Драм Театре. Я так была рада Виталику, всем нашим. Мы были с Костей. Хороший показ ок. 3 часов только модели: и купальники, и белье, и спортивное и ... ок. 50 манекенщиц (маленькие и большие). Было здорово, но немного утомительно (без пения, танцев). Зал был не полный. Мужчина подарил на улице мне цветок белый. В эту же ночь мы с мамой встретили Пасху. Мы даже были внутри церкви, сделали Крестный ход, правда нас чуть не раздавили (толпа). Но было здорово, на утро освятила пасочки. Тета Галя даже ни разу так и не позвонила мне – у нее другой интерес для сына.

1-го с Катей гуляли, было прохладно с дождем, пофотографировались с цветами, кустами. Встретилась с неизвестным, с которым по телефону разговаривала. Он был маленького роста. Ходили на Самсон-16. Неожиданно я увидела Лилию Осию, которая выиграла, не было времени даже поговорить.

Мой бывший был с девушкой своей – как всегда был напуган моим присутствием (я была в его пиджаке – подошел). На антракте исчез бесследно, а где Саша такую стерву размалеванную нашел... Мы их с Катей часто на Красной видели. Самсон был с 18 до 00.05 часов – Лилия победила, вторая девчонка неплохо. А та, которую мама готовила даже в 10-ку не попала, хотя неплохо смотрелась. Композиция слабовата – не умела танцевать. После на дискотеке Р...дро мы пробыли ок. 1 часа и все. Похолодало ок. +10, +12 градусов.

110

9 мая никакой особенной программы не было, мента все достали о салюте, который начался на 30 минут позже. Было интересно. Катка по дороге с дискотеки знакомилась с мужиками. Где один чуть не завез ее, другие на белых мерседесах. Андрей был на такси. Поехали мы с ним к его другу, однажды. Крутой дом с кодами, сигнализациями. Побеседовали, потом они захотели выпить вина, а мне нельзя, бросали монетку – кому. Мне не понравилась атмосфера, в частности друг Андрея. Мы еле уехали. Приходили несколько раз на Джой. Где я пыталась соблазнять Алексея. А когда я подготовилась и сказала, что готова – оказалось, что он хочет...портуду. Катя была категорически против. И он остался расстроенный (без ничего, видите ли он максималист).

Мамуля в Рязань ездила просто грамоту привезли, т.к. девчонка забыла композицию. Никого я и на этот раз не приводила домой, хотя возможность...

Пришла к Володе. Сказала, что хочу на природу. Он начал отнекиваться, говорил, что с Вадиком ездил. А тут я снова. Тут он и раскололся. Оказывается два года ребенку, женат с 1998 года! Девчонка с Казахстана, но русская. Это он врал. Хотел меня, все тянул... Я была в шоке.

Тут мой «муж» - Холландер стал странные идеи подсказывать – купить ему сексуальные трусы, вдруг не брить там волосы – с чего вдруг?

После чего?

До того товарищ Рой (во время обсуждения о встрече, визе) позвал Альфредо... Когда Альфредо сказал мне об этом... я хотела от всего отказаться. Именно в этот день я отдала деньги на визу в Италию... Он как задницей чувствовал. Почему именно

111

в этот день? Он сказал, что он мой муж. И хочет жениться на мне (мы женаты ведь, видно что-то посерьезней). И стал спрашивать о наших личных отношениях с Альфредо, Альфредо не стал отвечать, позвал меня и мы договорились. Рой спросил – сколько дней он был в декабре со мной и было ли что-либо между нами в Мексике, Москве. Альфредо ответил, то мы ездили вокруг Мексики, т.к. симпатизировал Асуль, ну и брали меня. Что я только хороший друг. В Москве он был один день, 0,5 дней со мной.

Альфредо переспросил – это действительно тот телефон, где можно связываться со мной (620-928). Рой – да, да.

Ходил к Валерию Сергеевичу. Он, посмотрев на результаты проверки глаза воскликнул: «Йес» и поцеловал меня в щеку. Оказывается что-то сдвинулось с места. Зрение оба глаза на 0,7, хотя я видела кое-что на 0,8, пыталась на 0,9, но врач сидела спиной и не проявляла никакого интереса. На что мой доктор сказал, что главное – что я об этом знаю. Снова придется терпеть не пить вина, не кушать сладкое, а я хочу... Но зрение – это важнее, это всю жизнь. Господи, дай мне сил и терпения выдержать это – похудеть!

Ходила к Наде, она снимала с мамы, меня. Очень интересно. К ней пришла информация благословить меня. Все получилось! Слава Тебе, Боже наш, слава Тебе!

Алену (мою двоюродную сестру) встретили 15.05. Практически не в чем не помогала, не покупала. Мамуля целыми днями на кухне, салаты, супы. Посмотрим.

Курьер 20 долларов взял за испорченный бланк билета, + 30 хотел за доставку, я скосила на 20, где всего 40 долларов, сдачу 300 рублей получила я. И то хорошо. нагрелись друзья, я еще разношаю...

112

Как всегда в аэропорту что-то интересное. Почему-то я странно расписалась в паспорте. Она потребовала другой документ, я дала паспорт, оказывается у меня та же странная роспись. День только начался, а я спать хочу. Ночь прошла не нудно, подремала немного. Поговорила с Димой, который работал в цирке, жил в Италии, Японии. Дай Бог им удачи. Звонила Холландеру, он наорал на счет регистрации на меня, объявил Володю идиотом (сам что ли умнее). Он считает, что если человек водитель, то он глупый и не умеет мыслить. Что будет с Холландером, визой...

Дай Бог.

Слава Богу! 20.05 я прилетела в Милан. Кастомс был дурак, всех девчонок тормозил. Но т.к. у меня был билет, я не боялась. По милански говорил немного еле-еле, по-испански чуть. Чего, говорит, приехала. Какое его дело? По-испански попыталась рассказать, что встречаюсь с другом. Какое его дело?

Встретил Альфредо и мы поехали в Ллойад-отель. Он такой был счастливый. Подарил мне (первый мужчина в моей жизни) – бриллианты-маренте (кольцо золотое, серьги и цепочка). Я – свой портрет, конфеты, икру. Занимались любовью (я попробовала капли влить). Действует! Не успел зайти, как через несколько минут я кончила, он у него такой большой...

Мы ходили по Милану, было красиво, говорили.

На другой день мы поехали во Флоренцию 3 часа первым классом на скоростном поезде. Пока я нашла в туалете – где смывать, где воду включить (оказывается, нажать на рисунок, в другом поезде – на пидальку).

Мы посетили музеи, сувениры, а сколько искали тату... (Альфредо подарил мне

113, 118

серьги и кольцо (золотые) с гранатом (очень, очень красиво). Когда мы ехали во Флоренцию, в поезде практически никого не было и мы трогали друг друга, вздрагивали, если кто-то проходил мимо. На обратном пути было не мало людей. Вечером (к 00.30) мы вернулись. Уставшие пошли на дискотеку, где были латино-американские танцы. Мы там отбабахали так, что как-то странно девицы присоединились, причем одна ко мне, другая к нему...

На другой день 22.05 мы с утра поехали по агентствам и пытались найти симпатию, но ни одно агентство не заинтересовалось мною – не тот тип (нужна темно-волосая, смуглая). Значит не мое. Затем потом мы поехали в Венецию. Тоже ок. 3 часов. На маленьком пароходке ехали по каналу, а потом были на площади, где такая церковь, где голуби садятся на тебя, когда ты их кормишь. Стиль золота отличался – более грубый, тяжелый. Мы были всего лишь 4 часа, но это было здорово. Альфредо целовал меня, говорил, что хочет, обнимал... Рой – нет, все время чего-то боится. То, что я деньги сопру у него, то я использую его, все в напряжении (то давая деньги, говорит, чтобы я не переживала, я верну ему).

Ночью поезд был отличный. Мы сидели в купе одни и тут вдруг резко залетают полицейские (т.к. мы закрыли занавески. Трахали друг друга, я заснула, т.к. было много места. Это было чудесно. По возвращению – мы пошли в ночной клуб. Там было много русских девчонок. Мы выбрали одну. 1 дринк – 25 долларов. За ночь ок. 150 долларов. Ходят на секс. Дискотечный тип,

114, 115

а потом консумация. Причем я могу потанцевать тоже. Пассивно. Альфредо танцевал с девчонкой, потом отлучился для разговора с ней. Я разыграла сцену ревности. Он оправдывался так. Но зато после этого была бурная ночь. Я долго не могла кончить, он он взял первую позицию, где я лежала и ноги буквой – ---- . Да, капли действуют. Спали мы всего 3 часа (где предыдущую ночь он не дал мне спать – трахал, гладил – муньяка, попить, те киерес, муча). И утром снова я кончила, быстро его член подходит для парами. А какой он счастливый, когда я кончаю... Чудо, а Рой – «ну и что» (дурак, после этого у меня вряд ли возникнет желание захотеть его).

Альфредо дал мне 600 долларов, а хотел сверху 100, но я отказалась, т.к. он столько для меня сделал... Дай Бог ему здоровья и счастья! На улице женщина попросила купить мороженое и он купил ей! Мужчина на вокзале попросил, ему не хватало на билет, он дал – вот это человечность. Альфредо имеет особенную душу и сердце. Дай ему Господь всего наилучшего!!!

А сейчас мне очень важно убрать все улики. Пакет я запечатала скотчем, золото и деньги попытаюсь спрятать. Дай Бог, чтобы Рой ничего не узнал, Аминь!

Благодарю Господь за все! Благослови!

5.06.2000

Практически полгода прошло. Приехала я к Рою. Мобильник мой отключили, пришлось пытаться ключами, а потом

116

звонить в дверь. Он таким удивленным видом встретил меня, стал спрашивать как я приехала, что, где. Даже спрашивал, когда я работала, в Краснодаре (что было не помню). Он долго обсматривал меня, был зол, т.к. ничего не мог найти. Думал, что я с каким-то дружкой пробыла в Москве и приехала к нему. Трудно было поверить, что я приехала автобусом (с коммерсантами). Да в этот день мы ездили посмотреть концерт Марии, Саши в баре. Но я была такая уставшая – столько не спать. На другой день мы пошли фотографироваться и он (когда я попросила дать мне сумку) схватил ее и начал расстегивать, все замки и смотреть – что там (в шутку). Я с недоумением смотрела на него, абсолютно спокойно (он меня проверял). После этого я поняла, что он будет смотреть и мою сумку ФА. Когда Володя меня взял (для регистрации в Москве) я отдала ему пакет со всем (деньгами, бриллиантами, фр-ми). Я жутко переживала, чтобы он Рой ничего не сказал. Остальные дни Рой меня нервировал с письмом из Кипра, что в Краснодаре неправильно написали мою фамилию СН, надо SH.

В воскресенье мы ходили (ездили) на природу с Мари, Сашей и их друзьями (кто с Англии с детьми, кто с Италии, большинство было говорящих на английском. Я каталась на лошадях. Хотели на водном мотоцикле, но нужен был паспорт и нельзя вдвоем. Мы решали взять лодку, где я

117

Как всегда в аэропорту что-то интересное. Почему-то я странно расписалась в паспорте. Она потребовала другой документ, а дала паспорт, оказывается у меня та же странная роспись. День только начался, а я спать хочу. Ночь прошла не нудно, подремала немного. Поговорила с Димой. Который работал в цирке, жил в Италии, Японии. Дай Бог им удачи.

Звонила Холландеру, он наорал на счет регистрации на меня, объявил Володю идиотом (сам что ли умнее). Он считает, что если человек водитель, то он глупый и не умеет мыслить. Что будет с Холландером, визой... Дай Бог.

Слава Богу, 20.05 я прилетела в Милан кустомс был дурак, все девчонок тормозил. Но т.к. у меня был билет, я не боялась. По милански говорил немного еле-еле, по-испански чуть. Чего, говорит приехала. Какое его дело. По-испански попытаюсь рассказать, что встретила с другом. Какое его дело?

Встретил Альфредо и мы поехали в Ллойд-отель. Он такой счастливый. Подарил мне (1-й мужчина в моей жизни) – бриллианты-маленте (кольцо золотое, серьги и цепочка). Я – свой портрет, конфеты, икру. Занимались любовью (я попробовала капли влить). Действует! Не успел зайти, как через несколько минут я кончила, он у него такой большой...

Мы ходили по Милану, было красиво, говорили.

На другой день мы поехали во Флоренцию 3 часа. Первым классом на скоростном поезде. Пока я нашла в туалете – где смывать, где воду включать (оказывается нажать на рисунок, в другом поезде – на пидальку).

Мы посетили музеи, сувениры, а сколько искали тату... Альфредо подарил мне

119

гребла. (Приехали в Воронеже – будем менять направление). Ели шашлыки – мясо было грубовато и у меня зуб разболелся, ужас. Ригард простоял весь день, готовя шашлыки. Ходили в лес с Роем, он хотел меня взять, но я отказалась, т.к. иногда кто-то проходил, самое основное – виден возраст. Если бы это был молодой парень... Потом ребята побежали купаться, играли в «петухов». Мы уехали раньше. Здорово, природа...

Шла подготовка ко отпуску. Мы учили историю, письмо мы достали (факс) вдвоем с Роем, а настоящее – в среду.

30.05.99. Приехали в 7.30. Все сдали ок. 8.30 открывается окно и мужчина подзывает нас. Вопросы были все Рою. Оказывается, что я должна была сделать вакцинацию.

Пришлось ехать и делать. Была доктор, замечательная женщина. Сделали две вакцинации мне. Все сдали. Я пахала в этот день, может была бы готова, но готовилась только на следующий день. 31.05.99 – я получила визу!!! Слава Тебе, Боже наш, слава Тебе!

Остальные дни посвящались регистрации в Москве (они дали 30 долларов, я от себя 10 + от Роя 40). Это многовато, учитывая, что мне быгодились эти деньги, очень.

Играли в Боллс, где я выиграла 2 партии – 127 очков, 102 (Рой 101). В билиард он выиграл. Ходили на дискотеку, где участвовали в конкурсе. Нужно было рассказать или спеть про лето. Он спел «Саммэр тайм». Выиграл пиво. На 2-ом конкурсе я катала яйцо из одной штанины в другую. А он из одного

120

рукава в другой. Мы выиграли, у нас были такие болельщики... Снова 2 бутылки пива, 3-й конкурс – танцевать и целоваться. 2 пары начали раздеваться. Я танцевала с эротикой. Чуть б выиграли другие. Тем не менее, все полюбили нас. Потом я оставила Роя и пошла смотрела мужской стриптиз. Парни с красивыми телами, 1 негр. Здорово, эротично. Они четверо раздевали девчонку. Были здесь только одни девчонки.

Рой разозлился, что я смотрела это одна. Ничего.

Интересно, в сексе я кончила только 1 раз в начале, больше нет... Мне иногда его было жалко – столько тратил денег. Да, ходили в ночной клуб. Маленький, девчонки неплохо танцевали. 3 танца я получила.

Рой пытался мне дать 100, я отказалась. Но когда он увидел, что я еду в плацкарте... Я объяснила, что я пытаюсь экономить. Он был возмущен, сунул мне в карман рубли (не знаю сколько) – 1.700.

Мама не защитилась, т.к. Вера Ивановна не поставила зачет и не сказала вплоть до защиты об этом. Маму не допустили. Бог судья рабе Вере!

Господи, благослови!!!

P.S. Рой провожал меня 1-ый раз аж до отправления поезда. Я старалась быть внимательнее к нему, готовила вкусные обеды. Да благословит его Господь!

121

25.06.2000

Просто обладеть о том, что произошло. Холландер позвонил мне в пятницу и задал странный вопрос – было ли когда-нибудь, что он поверил в мою ложь. Я ответила, что нет. Меня это насторожило. 10.06 я, Костя и Алена поехали в Геленжик на карнавал. Но вся программа только начиналась аж 14.06 вечером (а мы собрались этого числа днем уехать). Пришлось остаться на ночь. Мы долго искали место – 80 рублей одно место, 100. никто не хотел на 1 ночь. Потом мы нашли одну замечательную женщину за 60 рублей. Позагорали, смотрели концерт с 19.00 (закончился ок. 4 ночи). Были и спортсмены и танцевальные группы, и цирковые артисты и многое другое. У Катюхи сумку порезали, но, Слава Богу, ничего не взяли. Ходили на дискотеку, где местные ребята смотрели на нас, как в кино. Думали, что мы из шоу-группы. Было так холодно, мы решили, что не выдержим и снова постучались к этой же женщине и договорились о 30 рублях. Дай Бог, ей всего доброго и наилучшего!

Все ходили в масках, с антеннами на головах. Отшивали мы мужиков, которые искали девочек на дону ночь... И с цепями, который думал, что все дозволено (камешки между пальцами, щупанья). Потом я бросила в него песок и он ответил – дурак. Алена несколько жадновата. Но что поделаешь.

122

Меня ждал сюрприз в воскресенье, но мы вернулись в понедельник. 3 дня я искала Роя, на 4-ый день он объявился. Я была на почте и отправила Альфредо фотографии.

Я была в шоке. Он сказал, что все знает с подробностями. О Миране, а также... о Володе, о квартире Вадиме (где он жил с матерью). Я сейчас думаю – как. Может быть кто-то пригрозил и он рассказал. Не знаю. Рой был со мной в Краснодаре везде и 1 дома. Все странно. Я пыталась извиниться и призналась, что это была моя вина, я делала это. И попросила прощения. Он попросил 2 дня. Позвонил на следующий день попросил еще времени. Я надавила, что прощение – высшая моральная добродетель, в последнем шансе.

Но после Нади я потеряла надежду, что он простит меня, т.к. она ответила, что никогда. И Лена тоже, но это была речь с глубиной боли. После Лены я посмотрела н все другими глазами. У него комплекс неполноценности с детства и он узнает правду для руководства морали. Но я не рабыня! Я порекомендовала ему психолога, на что он ответил – если я им буду... Проблема – его реальные чувства ко мне. Я – стимул для него. Он видит меня как реальную жену, но это абсурд... Я никогда не буду видеть его реальным мужем.

Так вот, он позвонил в воскресенье, когда я и Наташа переписывала кассету (видео). Он сказал, что прощает меня... И просит прощение за время подумать, за боль, которую он дос-тавил мне. Но я должна стоп с Альфредо (говорить, встречаться). Он видит в нем соперника.

123

Какую Лена придумала вещь. Надо было мне приехать вечером, сесть на электричку, доехать до станции, где будет 40-й поезд и приехать в Москву, а я – автобус...

Будем учиться.

На дискотеке Джой оторвались мы. Маша Чеботкевич выходила замуж 23.06 и устроила 21.06 девишник. Мы танцевали с Сергеем втроем с Катей, какой запах... Он просто вызвался отвезти нас домой без продолжения... Класс! Леша был изумлен.

Ходила к врачу. Как-то странно. На первый момент я увидела 1,0 правым глазом, хотя я левым вижу лучше. Но было расстояние больше.

Я встречалась с Ромой. Одела черный парик (даже менты из машины вылезли). Мы немного поцеловались. Прикольный.

Но зато на выставке познакомилась с ребятами из Питера. Я в 1-ый день их видела. Во 2-ой мы с Катей. В этот день мы ходили в кафешки, болтали, напились так, что на велике (спортивном) Катя мягко вошла в столб, а я в людей, но спасая их. Потом немного станцевали. На 3-й день (24.06) пришли на выставку, договорились о вечере. Но было все забыто, т.к. выпускной вечер.

Мы посидели, поели пиццы.

124

Напились «Черного лекаря». Володя (высокий) сжимал мою руку. Дискотеки все были забиты. Но они решили спать в гостинице. Но я объяснила, что не могу, т.к. за мной следят. Он все хорошо понял. Катюха ревновала, т.к. я понравилась и Ване, и Володе. Она держала с Ваней расстояние. Но в итоге им негде было спать и Катя взяла переночевать к себе и они с Ваней (как она не сопротивлялась) переспали.

Меня прикололо в кафе:

-Девушка, выберите что-нибудь самое дешевое, т.к. мы познакомились только что (с нами) и у нас не много денег, но нам надо себя показать. И скажите той женщине с цветами, чтобы не подходила.

Прикольные ребята. В общем я купила себе серьги у них из горного хрусталя. Катя – кольцо. Я картину из янтаря Рою, 1 картину дядечка подарил из Питера (из пыли камней). Дай Бог ему всего доброго, на руку себе браслет (на плечо).

Ребятки классные. Дай им Бог удачи!!!

Господи, благослови нас. Дай нам мудрости, сил, терпения!!!

6.07.2000

Вроде немного времени прошло, а событий... Как всегда всего много под конец.

С ребятками мы еще встретились в понедельник. Уговорили их остаться и уехать на следующий день. Володька собирался остаться, а Ваньку мне пришлось уговаривать ради уважения Кости. Мы поели возле театра Оперетты салата с двумя бутылками крепленого вина. Я была первый раз в своей жизни пьяная, но добрая.

125

Вечером мы поехали к Катюхе домой, купили креветок и еще вина, пока Костя откровенничал с Володей на кухне, я откровенничала Ване (меня понесло). Мы целовались с Володей. Я сама настояла. У меня открылась в этот момент вся ненависть к мужчинам – я была тигром. На утро за 2 часа перед их отъездом меня понесло домой. Ваня и Володя пошли провожать меня. Я выбрала машину, выбрала идиота, который приставал ко мне. Денег я с Володьки не взяла, т.к. совесть. Дала дураку немного дотронуться до моих коленок, но зато сэкономила деньги. Было 5.30 утра.

С Роем было все нормально пока, он не получил мое письмо, где я задела его эго. Надя сказала, что он не от наших и целая армия за ним, которая дает информацию. Посоветовала лучше не ехать. И если выйду за него замуж – крах моей судьбы. Я решила сейчас съездить и подзаработать денег и развод с ним... Лучше поеду в Японию.

Ходили в Джой (я была в парике) Алексей меня не узнал – был в шоке. Мы еще раз погуляли с Андреем, который не равнодушен к Катюхе. Мы собрались ехать в Анапу к Володе и Ване, друг готов был нас отвезти. Но тут мама мне сказала, что кто-то звонил

126

2 раза. Это был Рой. Мы сдали билеты. Он почувствовал. А мысль, что звонил Альфредо – не приходила, (пришла, когда друг вышел из машины). Обалдеть, собрались идти в Боулинг – Катин муж приехал... (она только застегнула босоножки).

Сходили в среду (я – 102 очка), в бильярд, фишки (такая реакция?!). А дискотека... Я разбудила стриптизершу, которая не хотела делать шоу, хотела меня раздеть. Когда я ушла, она мужика (представляла из Шарм Клео), раздела догола... Это была бомба...

К Юльке ездила в Каневскую на один день. А потом она ко мне приехала. Купила белый парик, я помогала, мне материал.

Со стилистом Димой встретила. Два навороченных ----, нагло сдвинули Димку. Я думала – драка будет. Димка умница выкрутился психологически, потом (а до этого) у одного парня проблемы были. На другом месте с гипсом именно нас выбрал «Где Карина?». Дима после уговоров указал ему направление движения. Позже Юлька ночью с ним гуляла и они целовались.

Вчера ... ходили к ее мужу Игорю, который от нее хотел сбежать, когда она вышла в парике. Ей надо кончать с ним.

Господи, благослови меня в этот нелегкий путь. Я решила начать новый дневник, чтобы Холландер не воспользовался информацией.

С Божьим благословением, мудростью. Дай нам сил, терпения!!!

127

12.07.2000

ГОСПОДИ БЛАГОСЛОВИ!

Отче наш сущий на небесах. Да святится Имя Твое, да придет Царствие Твое, да будет воля Твоя, яко на небеси и на земли. Хлеб наш насущный даждь нам днесь и остави нам долги наши яко же мы оставляем должникам нашим. И не введи нас во искушение, но избави нас от лукавого. Яко Тебе есть царствие, и сила, и слава Отца и Сына и Святого Духа. Аминь.

Я начинаю писать свой очередной дневник, т.к. тот уже закончился и не было смысла брать сюда, т.к. много особой информации.

8.07. я собиралась. Вдруг неожиданно нашлась моя кассета «Шоу-гелс» на той полке, которую мы с мамой пересматривали несколько раз. Появилась – с помощью моей двоюродной сестры. А вот мумие так и нет, видно еще не время. Я очень благодарна мамуле, за всю ее помощь. Дай Господь счастья моей мамуле!!!

Как я планировала – одела парик. Рой сидел напряженный с обалденным букетом орхидей. Он меня с трудом узнал и спросил – что я сделала со своими волосами. Был холоден. После приезда горел желанием поговорить. Мы говорили, потом поехала в Боулинг. Это был класс. Я позорно набрала 68 очков, в бильярд неплохо, а в хоккей (с шайбой выиграла). Мы пили вино и пытались драться и целоваться. Дома он начал приставать ко мне. Потом взял меня на столе, приговаривая, что он трахнет меня, что на стадионе который хочет меня. Потом бессильно меня перетащил в комнату, завязал руки моими же штанами и давай продолжать. Хотел, чтобы я молила о пощаде остановиться. Это было здорово! Все длилось часа 1,5 – 2. Я чувствовала что вся злость на меня, агрессия выливались в этот момент, боль, которую он переживал.

9.07. был самый важный день, т.к. должен был состояться разговор, в зависимости от которого я бы поехала или не поехала с ним. Мы разговаривали на той самой Виктори Сквер. Разговор длился 2,5 часа. Начиная с 1 декабря он говорил, что он делал, потом я. Оказывается он спал с Сашей (секретарь с Кролла). Приставал к переводчице и к маленькой Саше, которая сказала, что если бы он не был женат... Все мужики кобели.

128

Мне пришлось тоже все рассказать кроме Санкт-Петербургских ребят. Странно, что ему дали ложную информацию об Альфредо, яко бы он был в Москве. Это не правда. Мне не было смысла тогда бы ездить в Италию. Разговор был достаточно интересный, включая то, что он сказал про магию (научила - на свою голову) – пошел к тетке в Нью-Йорке и все узнал – о том, что я в еду подкладывала что-то (он хотел спать оказывается днем) пришлось сказать, что он был агрессивен ко мне, и я хотела это. Что ж, это было тяжело, но интересно, в Виктору Парк.

На следующий день мы поехали в аэропорт. Мой самолет был позже на 3 часа. Я проводила Роя. Встретила Стусенок, оказывается они на год уезжали в Ирландию. Дорога была хорошая. Я переживала об контроле. Увидела ту самую негритоску, и пыталась не попасть к ней. Попала к мужчине-метису. Села и иммигрейшн оффис. Взяла отпечаток пальца. Я очень переживала. Но со мной были чудесные орхидеи, которые в течении 10-ти часов открылись. Слава Тебе, Боже наш, слава Тебе!!! Я в Америке! Я ждала Роя, но не знала – прилетел ли его самолет, т.к. это было другое здание. Я села (мне помогли, дай им Бог здоровья) на Фрии Бас и доехала до здания и стала искать Роя (не зная секции). И тут мне помог Господь – он шел навстречу. Это было удивительно! Позже он признался, что имел мысли, думая, что имея эту визу улечу в другую страну (Мексику например). Увидеть Альфредо, дальше работать в Калифорнии или где-то рядом. У меня даже в мыслях этого не было.

После приезда мы отдыхали. И даже ходили, ездили и изучали метро, улицы. Пытались меня устроить в 2 клуба: «Скоурс» - самый элитный, где надо платить 300 долларов... (за возможность работать). – Не взяли, объясняя, что много девчонок с Флориды. Потом, в «Тан» - тоже нет – не объясняя почему (может потому что была с Роем и это не мое). Три раза возвращались во «Флэш Данс». Пришла я сама днем. Эта Маша то платьем была не довольна, то обувью. Разрешила придти в понедельник. Русская девчонка Никита помогла мне платьем и подсказала придти на эддишн вечером. Это было мое! Начала я работать с воскресенья, где заработала 400 долларов, потом 540 долларов, а вчера (среда – ок. 650 долларов). Слава Тебе, Боже наш, Слава Тебе!!! Один с Индии уже 4 дня ко мне приходит, все хочет, прикольный такой. Я начинаю издеваться. «Подойди ко мне через 15 минут». Я: «Я заведу свой будильник» или «тебе нужно 911», «твои волосы выросли и побелели, пока ты меня ждал».

129

Вчера у нас с Роем был день любви (секса) – эксперт. А сегодня мы встречались с Лютиси и Бобом (ее бой-фрэнд). Поговорили об одежде, придется идти в магазины в субботу. Пыталась звонить – не получилось.

Чтож, надеюсь, что я буду процветать. Дай мне Господи, и моей мамуле, мудрости, сил и терпения. Господи, благослови!

5.08.2000

23.07. – 1 год, как мы с Роем вместе – сколько всего было между нами. Он подарил мне горшок с цветами. Я позже – шторы на все комнаты, так уютно стало. Господи, помоги нам понимать, уважать и доверять друг другу. Господи, за 1,5 недели тяжелой работы я ждала этот ОФФ. Что это было... Рой оказывается знает, о том, что было в Мексике – о контакте, о наших разговорах с Альфредо – с размерах пениса?.. Как это? Поэтому он все время говорил о большом пенисе, он пронюхал всю информацию с микрофона телефона... Как это грязно... Всю ночь мы хотели играть в бильярд, ели в Макдональдсе... И выяснение отношений – лучше бы я не имела этот ОФФ, мой бизнес также. В понедельник я имела второй офф, тоже самое, но лучше, мягче. Мы с его другом Деви и его подругой с Москвы – Татьяной ходили в Скорс. Встретила там ту русскую девчонку, она станцевала песню после

130

начала и когда песня еще не кончилась (Тане, Дэвид был разозлен). После этого опять выяснение отношений, пошел в бильярд, т.к. боулинг был закрыт, или занят. У меня была истерика. И я забивала черный мяч, т.к. он говорил о проигрышной партии – он же любит выигрывать... Ему было это не интересно. Потом третью партию мы играли, не могли закончить. Тут я стала супергероем, кто помогает слабым – забила черный. Лучше бы я работала. Зато как мне было тяжело. Я работала в пятницу, не спала, сразу же пошли на промоушен к 8 утра. Я познакомилась, встретила с Синди и Эдвардом. Мы поели, потом макияж. Мы были статуями. Так было интересно. Сначала эта глупая голова говорила какую-то чушь, а потом (все онемело). Потом мы были внутри этой партии. Все кушали, ходили. А мы стояли и играли. Один мужик взял и поставил стакан в мою кисть, после сказал спасибо, ушел. Другой ребенок стал давать мне деньги. Было весело, в конце мы станцевали африканские танцы – это было здорово! А потом снова работать... Я как вампир ходила, без чувств – сил не было, заработала ок. 400 долларов. Зато вчера (с 4 на 5 – 900 долларов!). – это мой рекорд. Правда – байкер дал 50 долларов, но я его другу так не станцевала, последнему парню – 5 танцев нон-стоп, дальше + 50, так 150 долларов. Кроме того, я опоздала на ВИП, пришлось 5 песен, но я танцевала 9 или 10?! У меня был стресс, я так хотела к Альфредо... Я устала, один мужик смотрел на меня замороженными глазами и давал по 1 доллару. Дали 20 долларов на стойке (мэйн) – я так не станцевала. Здорово! Зафиксировала также дату на самолет – улетаю 9.09, прилетаю на день рождения Роя.

Господи, дай мне мудрости не совершать глупостей, ошибок. Дай мне терпения, сил, благослови!!!

131

21.08.2000

Вроде немного времени, а сколько произошло... В ночь с 9 – 10 Рой разбудил меня и сказал, что я не работала понедельник и вторник, провела время с бой-фрэндом. Я была в ужасе... Этот листок, где менеджер не поставит понедельник и вторник, т.к. я эти дни отработала – изменило все. У меня очередная истерика, болел желчный пузырь. Я пыталась доказать. Его нет дома сутки. Я жду его в клубе, чтобы доказать, что я работала понедельник и вторник. Его нет. Я звоню – он говорит, что не имеет значения. Я бужу его с утра и мы решили, что лучше жить в разных апартаментах. Был агрессивный, я тоже. Но с другой стороны – тишина, свобода, мир. До этого – ранение в область правой стороны, чувство страха, сдавливание. Все изменилось. Я на работе рыдала, сдавливалась.

16.08 были на Стату Либра. Это было здорово! Природа, поднялись по 349 ступеням, плыли на пароходе.

На работе несколько раз пытались в Шэпан комнату, но я старалась увильнуть. Один день попались ябланы, которые пытались трогать, один дурак (я не разрешала дотрагиваться) стал говорить, что я хуже всех... Зато после – 5 танцев. Прошлый понедельник был ок. 900. С одним только ок. 20 танцев... Было отлично!

17.08 был конкурс. Я ходила за день до этого покрасила волосы, потом уложила их. Было хорошее настроение. Мы пообедали в ресторане, сделали фотографии, пытались найти ответы на вопросы. Началось... На первый вопрос почему я считаю, что могу быть мисс Хэйвэй, я ответила, что с помощью длинных ног могу оббежать пляж и с помощью косметики Хэйвэй помочь людям не обгореть.

Все отвечали серьезно. Я показала себя как могла. На вопрос – что бы я взяла с собой на остров – зубную щетку и расческу. Я не объяснила остроумно почему. Они смотрели на бюст, американский язык, больше общения с людьми и судьями.

Сейчас проблема с деньгами. Рой пронюхал, что я не все кладу деньги в банк. А таксис? В банке сейчас ок. 6. 330 рублей, а наличных столько же. Я хочу взять в Россию, а потом нормально откладывать и платить таксис, а Рой думает, что я фальшивлю и боится закона. Я буду платить, не хочу проблем, но с умом.

Господи, благослови!

132

9.09.2000

Немного времени, а событий... В клубе я имела два раза за одну неделю по 900 долларов. Это было здорово! Но потом в среднем я заработала по 600 – 650 долларов. Причем в субботу два раза не хотели платить за танцы. Первый раз – компания, яко бы я вытащила его танцевать, а он не хотел. Но с помощью телохранителя отдали. А во второй раз – взял два, а заплатил за один, яко бы он спрашивал только об одном. Я была расстроена, но потом рассказала одному костюм. и он дал, мне это 20 долларов, т.к. я работала у стэйж. Кроме того, я была первый раз в ----- комнате (с бородкой, с телевидения). В понедельник, мы сидели два часа, разговаривали, я танцевала (у меня был такой страх). Я не позволяла дотрагиваться до меня. Я получала удовольствие. Стало в клубе все меньше и меньше народу. Было весело. Один костюм., когда я попросила пододвинуться для танца – уронил пиво, сказав, что я его пододвигала. Для другого я танцевала на месте, где кто-то разлил пиво и это выглядело – будто он описался, для другого здорового танцевала, разлила на него пиво случайно и еще в глаз треснула (случайно). Весело. С каждым днем было все хуже – был Либер Дэй в воскресенье, я заработала 500 долларов, а в понедельник – еле 200 – народу вообще не было. Отработала с удовольствием Тотал, я заработала где-то ок. 17 – 18 за 1,5 часа (включая все растраты, еду, подарки). Да, первый раз я не сконтролировала себя и дотронулась до ... коленки, а меня увидел менеджер (оуэр) – сказал, если еще раз – штраф. Не дай Бог.

Дома. Я переживала за маму, из-за этой маленькой змеи. Тетя Света хамила маме за все ее старания с документами нашего дома. Мама плакала от обиды... В нашем собственном доме унижали маму, отделились в еде, а потом, когда у них кое-что получилось в Ставрополе – они отказались. И слава Богу! Эта маленькая змея, еще узнает кое-что о жизни. Бог им судья!

Я расстраиваюсь отношению Роя к маме. В тот момент, когда я плакала по телефону маме, она переживала и сгоряча сказала, что все наладится. Я очень скучаю по Рою, когда его нет. Он мне очень важен...

133

Ho's Prostitution Clients

Some of the man with whom, according to Ms. Shipilina's diary, she engaged in prostitution.

Time Period: January 1999 to May 2000.

Pagination for Russian handwritten and English printed versions of Ms. Shipilina's diary.

Cyprus ( "Zygos", owner Marios, "headhunter" in Krasnodar – Anastasia Vasiljeva )

1 Cyprus £ = $1.5

N	Client	"Type of service"	Price	Page Russian	Page English
1	Ibragim	intercourse and anal sex	£ 40	20	8
2	Wonderful man	ejaculated without entering	£ 100	20	8
3	Fat man	masturbated him in a hotel	£ 30	18	8
4	Anonymous customer 1	blow job	£ 10	24	10
5	Anton	a new customer to which the owner Marios gave her	"sale"	22	9
6	Andreas	full day accompany	£50	11-12	5
7	Akhmed	three days accompany		23,25	9
8	Grandpa	masturbated him + two naked pictures	£ 60 +10	35	15
9	Andreas and his son	Regular client	golden bracelet	21	9
10	Pannikos	Regular client – masturbated him	new dress - £ 37, ring of white gold	16,19,24	7, 10
11	Rikos	Regular client (intercourse)	Silver things, makeup, + £100	6,8-10,16	3, 4, 5, 7
12	Chris	Regular client (intercourse)	£ 50, 10, 20, 10 + digital watch	2-6,11,13,24	1-3, 5, 8
13	Doctor George	Regular client	£ 50 + 100, perfume, watch, alarm clock, earring with chain, bracelet and ring of gold, silver alarm clock	7, 17-18, 26	3, 7, 11
14	Devi	One night stand client from the club	£	35	15
15	Peirre	One night stand client	£ 20	33	14
16	"Fucker" from a bank	One night stand client	£	30	13

17	Stephanos	Regular client from Ayanapa	£ 30 + £ 40 dress –£ 23, pyjamas - £ 44	28, 31,35,37	12, 15, 16
18	Rich Arab 1	One night stand client	boombox	32	13
19	Rich Arab 2	One night stand client + with another girl from the club	£	31	14
20	Eric, good friend of Rikos	Regular client	digital watch, video camera, slippers, money for dentist , additional money	21, 28,31,37	13, 16

Mexico (Mexico city night club “THE MEN’S CLUB”, “headhunter” in Moscow –Leonid Perlin)

N	Client	“Type of service”	Price	Page Russian	Page English
1	Anonymous client 1		$60 but took away money	54	24
2	Mavro	Regular client		55,60	24
4	Yachingo – Boston guy	Three day stand client	For a trip to Acapulco	64	28
5	Sidney	Regular client		62	27, 28
6	Max Garcia Appedole	Regular client	For a visa assistance, golden chain, makeup	65, 73	28, 30
7	Manuel Gamio	Regular client	$500, toilet water	69	29
8	Alfonso	Regular client	Chain for hand and foot, trip to Cancun, silver bracelet	72	29, 30
9	Alfredo	– favorite client started 02.10.1999– intercourse, performed oral sex on him	For money, various presents and trips, transporting cash to Russia, diamond ring, extra $600, trip to Milan, Florence and Venice	58,60,71,73,83, 112, 113, 114	26, 27, 29, 30, 33, 38, 42, 43

Ho's Known Travels

1991	Grozny, Chechnya to live in Krasnodar, Russia
1996	Moscow for nude photographs to market sexual services
Fall 1998	Moscow for masturbation video and prostitution
Dec. 1998	Limassol, Cyprus to work in the Zygos brothel
June 1999	Back to Krasnodar with whoring loot from Cyprus
July 1999	Moscow for prostitution and stripping
Aug. 1999	Moscow then onto Mexico City for prostitution and stripping through The Men's Club, also Acapulco, Cancun, Puerto Vallarta
Nov. 1999	Deported from Mexico back to Russia
Dec. 1999	Moscow for prostitution and to collect Mexico earnings from Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo
Jan. 2000	New York City and Las Vegas with her prime sucker of the moment
April 2000	Moscow for visa from Italian Embassy
May 2000	Milan, Venice, Florence, Italy for prostitution with Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo
May 2000	Moscow for immigrant visa from U.S. Embassy
July 2000	New York City for prostitution and stripping
Sept. 2 to 29, 2000,	traveled via Aeroflot from New York City to Moscow then to Krasnodar, Russia, and then Limassol, Cyprus.
Dec. 18, 2000 to Jan. 18, 2001,	traveled from New York City to Moscow then to Krasnodar, Russia, and, on information and belief, to St. Petersburg, Russia, and Cyprus.
Mid-April to mid-May 2001,	traveled to Moscow and Krasnodar, Russia, and Limassol, Cyprus.
Aug. 6 to Sept. 12, 2001,	traveled to Miami and Moscow and Krasnodar, Russia, and, on information and belief, to St. Petersburg, Russia, and Cyprus.
Nov. 5 to 19, 2001,	traveled to Miami.

Late Dec. 2001 to Jan. 28, 2002, traveled to Moscow, St. Petersburg and Krasnodar, Russia, and, on information and belief, to Cyprus.

In July and Aug. 2002, traveled to Moscow, St. Petersburg and Krasnodar, Russia, and Cyprus and returned to NYC via Aeroflot on August 8th.

CONTRACT

We the undersigned:

1.....YIANNOS CHRISTODULIDES
Manager of night club-cabaret

2.....MELIOS ATHANASIOU
Artist Agent

3.....SEE NAMES BELOW
Artists

Agree and accept the following:

1.The artist-s will be employed solely with the. TRAMPS Cabaret-Nightclub at L/SSOL and will not be employed or perform in any other cabaret-nightclub in Cyprus under any circumstances during the period of validity of this contract. The artist-s will participate in all the floor shows of the above cabaret-nightclub and will stay in the cabaret-nightclub during its working hours from 8.00 pm to 3.00am.

2.The artist-s is-are allowed one day off every week. In case of sickness he-she-they should obtain a certificate from a government medical officer at the beginning of the sickness period.

3.The contracting parties i.e. the manager of the cabaret-nightclub, the artist agent and the artist-s agree on the following with respect to the daily wages of the artist-s

a. Gross daily wages for each artist £16.00 -GROSS

b. Deductions:

i. Income tax £ 3.00 -DAILY

ii. Accomodation £ FREE - "

iii. Ticket fares to and from Cyprus £ 1.50 - "

iv. Artist Agent Commission £ 1.50 - "

c. Artist-s net daily wages £10.00 - "

Total (B+C=A) £16.00

4.The net daily wages of each artist, quoted above, should be paid to him-her every working day at the time of closing of the cabaret-nightclub. Any delay in the payment of these wages should be reported by the artist-s in person and without delay to the Aliens and Immigration unit of the police in their district of residence and employment.

5.This contract is valid of three months but the contracting parties may, if they so wish, amend its validity at the end of the first month and-or at the end of the second month of its validity.

6. The contracting parties have signed this contract after reading carefully the conditions there in which they fully accept.

Made in L/SSOL ..... 29.10.98

DIRECTION

[Signature]
NIGHT CLUB

THE AGENT
[Signature]
MELIOS ATHANASIOU
AGENCIES

Establishment

TRAMPS NIGHT CLUB

DEBUT

FIVE DAYS AFTER ARRIVAL

DURATION

THREE MONTHS

APPOINTMENTS

£16.00 DAILY

VOYAGES

SPECIAL CONDITIONS

IDENTITIES

Alina CHIPILINA (Oriental)

[Signature]

CANCELLED

The artist certified. Both the cabaret manager the Agent, signed in my presence

id: [Signature] PS 2246

21/12/98

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE HOLDER

1. This certificate is valid for ever.
2. Change of Residence and employment should be reported to the nearest Police Aliens' Office (or Police Station) immediately.
3. Application for further extension of stay must be made one month prior to the expiration of the alien's stay.
4. Holders of visitor's Permit are not permitted to work.
5. Holders of Employment Permit must comply with the conditions stated in their Permit.

CYPRUS

ALIEN REGISTRATION CERTIFICATE

REG

Nº S326792

(Εντύπο Γ.Α. 11')

No 446727

ΚΥΠΡΙΑΚΗ
ΔΗΜΟΚΡΑΤΙΑ

REPUBLIC OF CYPRUS

ΥΠΗΡΕΣΙΑ ΜΕΤΑΝΑΣΤΕΥΣΕΩΣ
MIGRATION OFFICE

ΑΠΟΔΕΙΞΗ/RECEIPT

Λήφθηκε το ποσό των £10 για τέλη αίτησης για άδεια
επίσκεψης/απασχόλησης από/Received the sum of £10 being application fee for visitor/employment permit from.

Κο/Mr

Κα/Mrs

Ημερ./Date

Υπογραφή/Signature

(Form F. 74.)

Name: CHIRILINA

Nationality: Alina Russian

Occupation: Artist

Registered Address: 27605 Col. m.

Megolon Spileon STR. Nr 18 Liss

IT IS HEREBY CERTIFIED that the above named alien has been duly registered as an alien in the Register of Aliens in the Category of.....

£10,00 fee paid.

Dated at Lissn A.R.O.

this 7 day of January 1988

Registration Officer.

District of Lissn

Change of Address

1. Reported at.....
on..... 19....., as residing at
.....
.....
..... of Police.
2. Reported at.....
on..... 19....., as residing at
.....
.....
..... of Police.
3. Reported at.....
on..... 19....., as residing at
.....
.....
..... of Police.

ΚΥΠΡΙΑΚΗ

ΔΗΜΟΚΡΑΤΙΑ

M.P. No.

Tel. No. 804507

Fax. No. 676941

MINISTRY OF INTERIOR
MIGRATION DEPARTMENT
NICOSIAMr Melios Athanasiou
POBox 7384
Limassol

15 December 1998

Rev Zygou
23.3.99

Alina

23.12.98

Gentlement/ Sir/ Madam ,

I wish to refer to your application dated 29 October., , 1998 requesting permission under the Aliens & migration Law CAP.105 and Laws of 1972-1997 and its relevant Regulations of 1972-1996 for the following persons to enter stay and work in Cyprus temporarily as an Artist(s) with Tramps Night club at Limassol and inform you , that your request has been carefully considered and it was approved.

2. This visa is valid for a period of one month from the date of issue.
3. Your application has been approved subject to the following conditions :

( a ) A five ( 5 ) day visitor visa will be granted to the person/s below upon arrival in Cyprus in order to be examined for the AIDS Virus, Syphilis, Hepatitis, Tuberculosis ( chest X - Rays ) and other contagious diseases . For this they should call to the Thalassemia Centre at Acropolis, Nicosia between 7.45 and 9.45 on the first working day after their arrival in Cyprus.

( b ) They should thereafter get registered with the Aliens Section of the Police in their District of residence.

( c ) The below named artists are over 18 years of age.

( d ) They will arrive in Cyprus within one month as from today and will be employed only with the above mentioned employer and cabaret/ Night club.

( e ) These artists will come to Cyprus on the Passports mentioned below and their names in their passports will be given as below.

( f ) The Artist(s) in question is/are not allowed to enter any cabaret or Night club's premises during the provisional five days visitor period, unless he/she/they hold the necessary Employment Permit.

( g ) This permit is granted on the clear understanding that the aliens in question will produce Medical Certificates (AIDS Virus, Hepatitis, Syphilis) upon arrival in Cyprus.

IMPORTANT : ORIGINAL VISA SHOULD BE PRESENTED AT THE PORT OF ENTRY

Name	Nationality	Passport No.	M.P.No.
Alina CHIPILINA	Russian	43N7489821	D984000

Migration Officer

Copies to : Chief of Police
Director of Cabaret, Yiannos Christodoulides
KS

ARC
NAT 5326792
CODE Russian
M.P. Art
D984000

90
(Form M. 62A.)

REPUBLIC OF CYPRUS

TEMPORARY RESIDENT PERMIT

Permission granted to remain in Cyprus provided that this permit may be revoked at any time by giving fourteen days notice to the holder.

This permit shall lapse forthwith if the holder ceases to be occupied as specified below.

Applications for further extension must be made at least one month before the expiry of this permit.

NAME Alina CHIPILINA

and his/her (wife, children) respectively.

CATEGORY OF RESIDENCE Employment

VALID UNTIL 22 June 1999 FINAL

NATURE OF RESIDENCE

As an artist with

"Zygos Cabaret" at Limassol

c/o POBOX 7334 Limassol

La: 20/12/98 Tel No

Artist Agent: Melios Athanasiou

Date 18 May, 1999

(A. Charalambous)
For Chief Immigration Officer.

Copies to: Chief of Police
KS Director of Inland Revenue

Здравствуйте Леонид!

Пишет вам Алина из Краснодара.
Напишите, 2-3 сентября ~~за~~ дали мне возможность сниматься для буклета в дублёнках? У меня до сих пор эти 50$, правда в рублях.

Я едущая в Сочи на ТЭРМ. Лаурная звезда" с нашими спонсором. Восту-пиме удачно, всем понравилась.

Как получились снимки в одноклетном виде (если не будет сильно трудно, принимите мне пожалуйста одну, на ваше взгляд, лучшую фотографию).

В Краснодаре я поработала с нашими фотографами (в кинематографическом и в одноклетном виде). ~ 2-3 полётов. Привели франца для разрушенного окна, стена (обложки окна на загромождённой местности).

Уже на днях поеду на Кипр на 3 месяца работать (танцы).

Да, какие замечательные фотографии
получились! Обаятельной мажорке, свет,
Ещё раз благодарю вас, Леонид, за всё!
Очень буду ждать от вас ответа.

Максим
Ульянов
АША

Одн. фото?
Кипр?

Алина

20.11.98

Здравствуйте Леонид!

Пишет вам Алина (с Крайста-ра)

Я уже около месяца работаю
в Лимассоле. Очень интересно. Мои танцевал преимущественно — ходил как маленький, а теперь танцевал толще.
Узнала танцевать шоу-стриптиз (соо).
Мне очень нравится танцевать, я
уже намного лучше двигаюсь.
За каждую thing вы получаете
по 50 центов, если больше 10, то по 1 пайку. Table-dance (моя специальность 3 пайка), а за стриптиздэнс — 5 пайков.

В целом интересно работать, но когда я выполняю 2. самых предложений (2 работы)...

Когда я вернусь с Кипра в Россию я буду работать. Работа здесь, я полюб-ила, но очень тяжело. Здесь очень трудная жизнь.
Но — азиатские я уже намного лу-ше одеваюсь, т.к. много практики.

Мне очень хочется поехать в другую страну и поработать, а работать в
улице, буду очень стараться.

А так это не

Вернусь я где-то в марте (может быть в начале, может в середине) обязательно вам позвоню.

RUSSIAN FOR Metias Athanasios (1991)
PO Box 7384
Limassol

Дорого и пошлите
Алина.

дар, двадцать пятое апреля двухтысячного года.

Я, Маслова В.И., нотариус нотариального округа города Краснодара, Российская Федерация, свидетельствую верность подписи, сделанной известным мне переводчиком Воробьевой Валерией Александровной.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 3-2644

Нотариус

В настоящем документе
пронумеровано, прошнуровано
и скреплено печатью нотариуса

2 листа

Нотариус

Копия
Повторное

СССР

СВИДЕТЕЛЬСТВО О РОЖДЕНИИ

Гражданин (ка) Шипилина Алина Александровна родился (лась) 10 ноября 1975г.

тысяча девятьсот семьдесят пятого года

Место рождения: город, селение Чапаевск район . . . . .

область, край Куйбышевская

республика РСФСР

о чем в книге регистрации актов о рождении

1975 года ноября месяца 12 числа

произведена запись за № 1223

РОДИТЕЛИ:

Отец Рыбаков Александр Андреевич

национальность русский

Мать Шипилина Инесса Александровна

национальность русская

Место регистрации Чапаевский гор.отдел ЗАГС

Куйбышевской области

Дата выдачи 12.09.1990 г.

Заведующий отделом (бюро)

записи актов гражданского состояния подпись

У-ЕР № 392900

печать: РСФСР Исполком Чапаевского горсовета

народных депутатов Куйбш.обл. Отдел

записи актов гражданского состояния

Город Краснодар, двадцать четвертого апреля,

Двухтысячного года.

Я, Маслова В.И.

нотариус нотариального округа города

Краснодара, Российской Федерации, свидетельствую верность этой копии с подлинником документа,

в последнем подчисток, приписок, зачеркнутых

слов и иных неоговоренных исправлений или каких-либо

особенностей не оказалось.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 3-2585

Взыскано 2 руб. 50 коп

Нотариус

Translation from Russian

C o p y

Repeated

USSR

BIRTH CERTIFICATE

Citizen CHIPILINA, ALINA ALEXANDROVNA
born on November, 10, 1975 (year nineteen seventy-five)

Place of birth: town of Chapaevsk, Kuibyshev Region, that was registered in the birth registrations book of year 1975, month November, date 12 under registration number 1223.
RSFSR

P A R E N T S :

Father: RYBAKOV ALEXANDER ANDREEVICH
nationality: Russian

Mother: CHIPILINA INESSA ALEXANDROVNA
nationality: Russian

Place of the registration: Chapaevskiy district Civil Status Registry Office
Kuibyshev Region

Date of issue: 12-09-1990

Head registrar -signature-

V-EP № 392900

Seal: RSFSR Chapaevskiy District
Executive Committee,
Kuibyshev Region
Civil Status Registry Office

City of Krasnodar, twenty fourth of April of year two thousand.

I, Maslova V.I., notary in and for the notary district of the city of Krasnodar, Russian Federation, certify the identity of this copy with the original document, no erasures, added words, crossed-out words, non-stipulated corrections or other peculiarities were found in the latter.

Registered in the registration list under number 3-2585

Duty, 2 Rbl, 50 Cop paid

Notary -signature

Notary's seal

Текст копии свидетельства о рождении и удостоверительной надписи нотариуса
с русского языка на английский переведен переводчиком Воробьевой
Валерией Александровной

Город Красно –

From: "ääääää_Ñáí÷áñ" <nadya_sanches@rambler.ru>  [Add to Address Book

Subject: Nadia

To: "roy den" <rdhhh@yahoo.com>

Date: Mon, 07 Jul 2003 20:33:48 +0400

Hi, Roy!

Alina has 2 passes. First is a usual international pass:
60#2812380 issued August 2, 2002 by the department of interior affairs of the Krasnodar ter-ry.

The second one is issued by the Ministry of International affairs, 51#0207805, on 04.04.2002.

I found the Order issued by the Ministry of Interior affairs, #310 of 05.26.1997. It sais that a person cannot have 2 passes, unless he\she regular business trips, and in that case the organization he\she works on makes a request for another pass.

Anyway, I'm not a lawyer to make conclusions.

Bye.

Nadia

MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE

Surname HOLLANDER
name, patronymic ROY DEN citizen of the USA
nationality American date of birth September, 26, 1947 place of birth state of New Jersey

and

surname SHIPILINA
name, patronymic ALINA ALEXANDROVNA citizen of Russia
nationality Russian
date of birth November, 10, 1975 place of birth town of Chapayevsk, Kuybyshev Region married on March, 11, 2000 (March, eleventh, of year two thousand) about which the registration entry of marriage № 125 was done on: year 2000, month March, date 11.

After marriage registration the following surnames were given to:

the husband HOLLANDER
the wife SHIPILINA

Place of the registration in the state register: Civil Status Registration Office of Zapadny Administrative district, city of Krasndar,
Krasnodar Region

Date of issue: 11-th of March, 2000

Head registrar of the Civil Status Registry Office -signature- G.I. Klimova

I-AF № 530781

Seal: Russian Federation
Civil Status Registry Office
Zapadny Administrative District
City of Krasnodar
Krasnodar Region

I, Valeria A. Vorobyeva certify that I am familiar with the Russian and the English languages and this translation of the original document in Russian is true and accurate to the best of my knowledge.

TRANSLATED IN TRANSLATION SERVICE DEPARTMENT
KRASNODAR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY
/ DIRECTOR

СВИДЕТЕЛЬСТВО О ЗАКЛЮЧЕНИИ БРАКА

ХОЛЛАНДЕР

фамилия

РОЙ ДЕН

имя, отчество

гражданин С Ш А

гражданство

американец

национальность (вносится, если указана в записи акта о заключении брака)

« 26 » сентября 1947 г.

дата рождения

штат Нью-Джерси С Ш А

место рождения

и

ШИПИЛИНА

фамилия

АЛИНА АЛЕКСАНДРОВНА

имя, отчество

гражданка России

гражданство

русская

национальность (вносится, если указана в записи акта о заключении брака)

« 10 » ноября 1975 г.

дата рождения

город Чапаевск Куйбышевская область

место рождения

заключили брак 11 марта 2000 года

число, месяц, год (цифрами и прописью)

одиннадцатого марта двухтысячного года

о чем 2000 года марта месяца 11 числа

составлена запись акта о заключении брака № 125

После заключения брака присвоены фамилии:

мужу ХОЛЛАНДЕР

жене ШИПИЛИНА

Место государственной регистрации Отдел ЗАГС Западного

административного округа города Краснодара Краснодарского края наименование органа записи актов гражданского состояния

Дата выдачи « 11 » марта 2000 г.

Руководитель органа
записи актов гражданского состояния Г. И. Климова

И-АГ № 530781

МТГ. 1998.

A.R.C.
5326792

СССР USSR
THE UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS
PASSPORT

Шипилина

Алина

Александровна

Подпись / Holder's signature
владельца

[Signature]

43 № 7489821

СОЮЗ СОВЕТСКИХ СОЦИАЛИСТИЧЕСКИХ РЕСПУБЛИК

ПАСПОРТ
PASSPORT

Тип / Type

Код государства / Code of выдачей SUN issuing State

№ паспорта / Passport No.

43 № 7489821

Фамилия / Surname

Шипилина

Имя / Given names

Алина

Гражданство / Nationality

Россия / Russian, Чкаевск
USSR

Дата рождения / Date of birth

10.11.1945

Пол / Sex

М/Ж

Место рождения / Place of birth

Дата выдачи / Date of issue

24.09.1994

Орган, выдавший документ / Authority

МВР 468

Дата окончания срока действия / Date of expiry

24.09.2002

13

14

442202363
U.S. IMMIGRATION
NEW YORK, N.Y. 2988

JUL 10 2000

ADMITTED
UNIT

JUL 11 2002

PROCESSED FOR I-551.
TEMPORARY EVIDENCE OF LAWFUL ADMISSION FOR PERMANENT RESIDENCE
VALID UNTIL EMPLOYMENT AUTHORIZED

JUL 09 2001

РОССИЙСКАЯ ФЕДЕРАЦИЯ
РОССИЯ

ШИПИЛИНА

ФАМИЛИЯ
АЛИНА

ИМЯ
АЛЕКСАНДРОВНА

ОТЧЕСТВО

является гражданином Российской Федерации на основании ст.

Закон РФ от 28 ноября 1991 года.

Выдано к паспорту серии XXIII-АГ
701057

№

Дата выдачи 13 августа 1997 г.

Подпись

3684987

МТ Госнока. 1992 г.

ПАСПОРТ

ГРАЖДАНИНА

СОЮЗА СОВЕТСКИХ СОЦИАЛИСТИЧЕСКИХ РЕСПУБЛИК

Шипилина

ФАМИЛИЯ

Алина

ИМЯ

Александровна

ОТЧЕСТВО

XXIII-АГ № 701057

10 ноября 1975 года

ЧИСЛО, МЕСЯЦ, ГОД РОЖДЕНИЯ

г. Чанак

МЕСТО РОЖДЕНИЯ

Курбаншевской области

русская

НАЦИОНАЛЬНОСТЬ

Уйоновский ТОО

КЕМ ВЫДАН ПАСПОРТ

отдела внутренних

дел Ташталеукайского

района Р. Нарын

17 сентября 93 года

Начальник органа внутренних дел

[Signature]

XXIII-АГ № 701057

ФОТОКАРТЧКА
НАКЛЕЕНА

_____ 19__ года

СЕМЕЙНОЕ ПОЛОЖЕНИЕ

Отделом ЗАГСа Западного
Административного округа г.Краснодара

И.И. Мухоморова 19__ г. а/з № 1625

ЗАРЕГИСТРИРОВАН БРАК

С гр. <sup>ном</sup> Коммандер
<sup>ком</sup> Рой Вениамин 1947 г.
(год рождения)

Нач. отдела ЗАГС

XXIII-АГ № 701057

МЕСТО ЖИТЕЛЬСТВА

Республика Адыгея
Отдел внутренних дел Тахтамукайского района
Убачинский ПОМ
ПРОИСАН
пос. Яблоновский
ул. Сквозная
дом № 11 кв.
01 октября 1993 г.
Подпись

Республика Адыгея
ПВС Тахтамукайского РОВД
СНЯТ с регистрационного учета
22 февраля 1993 г.
Подпись

г. Враскинар
ПВС Западного УВД
ЗАРЕГИСТРИРОВАН

ул. Рашид-Беккая
дом № 138 кв. 8
29 02 2000
Подпись Мартин

Angelina's Visa Application

АНКЕТА ДЛЯ ПОЛУЧЕНИЯ ИММИГРАНТСКОЙ ВИЗЫ И РЕГИСТРАЦИОННОГО НОМЕРА ИНОСТРАНЦА		OMB APPROVAL NO. 1405-0015 EXPIRES 8-31-92 *ESTIMATED BURDEN 1 HOUR
ЧАСТЬ I - БИОГРАФИЧЕСКИЕ ДАННЫЕ
Инструкция: Заполните по одному экземпляру этой анкеты на себя и на каждого члена семьи, эмигрирующего вместе с Вами, независимо от возраста. Ответы должны быть напечатаны на машинке или написаны от руки печатными буквами. Если вопрос к Вам не относится, пишите «не касается». Если не хватит места для ответа на какой-либо вопрос, можно писать на дополнительных листах бумаги, указав номер соответствующего вопроса; эти листы должны быть приложены к анкете. ПРЕДУПРЕЖДЕНИЕ: Любая ложная информация или сокрытие важных фактов может иметь следствием окончательный запрет на Ваш въезд в США. Данная анкета - часть I формы OF-230 и вместе с частью II составляет полную анкету для получения иммигрантской визы и регистрационного номера иностранца.
1. Фамилия Last Name: ШИПИЛИНА	Имя First Name: Алина	Отчество Middle: Александровна
2. Другие имена и фамилии, которыми Вы пользовались (замужние женщины указывают свою девичью фамилию) НЕ КАСАЕТСЯ
3. Имя, отчество, фамилия на родном языке Алина Александровна Шипилина
4. Дата рождения (месяц) (год) 10. 11. 75	5. Возраст Age: 24	6. Место рождения (город, поселок, село) (район, республика, область) (страна) г. Чапаевск, Кузбасская обл., Россия
7. Гражданство (если имеете двойное гражданство, укажите оба) русская	8. Пол <input type="checkbox"/> Мужской <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Женский	9. Семейное положение <input type="checkbox"/> Холост (не замужем) <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Женат (замужем) <input type="checkbox"/> Вдовец (вдова) <input type="checkbox"/> Разведен (разведена) <input type="checkbox"/> Состою в браке, но живем отдельно Включая мой нынешний брак, я состоял в браке 1 раз(а)
10. Внешние данные Цвет волос: русый Цвет глаз: голубой Рост: 180 Цвет кожи: белый	11. Занятие самостоятельный доход: Occupation: консультант по рекламе (в рекламных акциях), танцы в шоу-группе
12. Особые приметы Шрам на правом плече Вакцинация на левом плече	13. Адрес г. Москва Кутузовский Проспект д. 26, под 17, кв. 400 телефон: домашний 249-22-61 служебный 8-902.694-30-45
14. Фамилия, имя, отчество супруги (супруга) Ден Холландер Рой Дата и место рождения супруги(а): 26.09.47 Патерсон Нью Джерси
Срок супруги(а), если он отличается от Вашего Существующая форма предоставляется бесплатно в консульствах США Optional Form 230 I (RU)

15. Имена, даты и места рождения всех детей НЕ КАСАЕТСЯ
Ф.И.О.	Дата и место рождения	Адрес (если отличается от Вашего)
16. Назовите имена лиц, перечисленных в пунктах 14 и 15, которые будут сопровождать Вас или последуют за Вами в США Рой Ден Холландер
17. Фамилия, имя, отчество, дата, место рождения и адрес отца (если умер, укажите год смерти) Father's Name Рыбаков Александр Андреевич, 25.04.52, г. Медногорск, с. Тверь
18. Девичья фамилия, имя, отчество, дата, место рождения и адрес матери (если умерла, укажите год смерти) Mother's Name Шипилина Инесса Александровна, 16.09.50, с. Сокираны, г. Краснодар, ул. Рахпилевская, д. 138, кв. 8
19. Если обоих Ваших родителей нет в живых, укажите имя и адрес ближайшего родственника в вашей стране. НЕ КАСАЕТСЯ
20. Назовите все языки, на которых Вы говорите, читаете, пишете
Язык	Говорю	Читаю	Пишу
РУССКИЙ	РУССКОМ	РУССКОМ	РУССКОМ
АНГЛИЙСКИЙ	АНГЛИЙСКОМ	АНГЛИЙСКОМ	АНГЛИЙСКОМ
21. Назовите все места, в которых Вы жили шесть и более месяцев начиная с 16-летнего возраста. Начните с нынешнего места жительства. List below all places you have lived for six months or longer since reaching the age of 16. Begin with your present residence.
Город, поселок, село City	Район, область, республика State	Страна Country	Занятие Occupation	Годы (от-до) Years
Яблоновский	Краснодарский р	Россия	студентка, учитель, инструктор по аэробике, танца, концерты по рекламе	1992-2000
Лимассол		Кипр	Артистка	1998-1999
22. Назовите все политические, профессиональные и общественные организации, связанные с коммунистическими, тоталитарными, террористическими и нацистскими организациями, в которых Вы состоите сейчас или состояли в прошлом, начиная с 16-летнего возраста. НЕ КАСАЕТСЯ
Название и адрес	Годы (от-до)	Тип членства

23. Укажите, бывали ли Вы в США и в каком качестве (если нет, пишите «не бывали»). Если бывали, назовите тип визы и укажите регистрационный номер иностранца (A number).

Место пребывания в США	Годы (от-до)	Тип визы	Номер дела в Службе иммиграции и натурализации (если известно) НЕ ИЗВЕСТНО
Нью-Йорк	19 января 2000 - 29 января 2000	Турист

Подпись заявителя

Число 25.05.2000

ПРИМЕЧАНИЕ: ЗАПОЛНЕННУЮ АНКЕТУ ВЕРНИТЕ В КОНСУЛЬСКИЙ ОТДЕЛ ПО АДРЕСУ УКАЗАННОМУ В СОПРОВОЖДАЮЩЕМ ПИСЬМЕ. ЭТА АНКЕТА СТАНЕТ ЧАСТЬЮ ВАШЕЙ ИММИГРАНТСКОЙ ВИЗЫ: ВАШЕ ЗАЯВЛЕНИЕ НА ПОЛУЧЕНИЕ ВИЗЫ НЕ БУДЕТ РАССМАТРИВАТЬСЯ, ЕСЛИ ВЫ НЕ ПРЕДСТАВИТЕ ЗАПОЛНЕННУЮ АНКЕТУ.

* Public reporting burden for this collection of information is estimated to average 1 hour per response, including time required for searching existing data sources, gathering the necessary data, providing the information required and reviewing the final collection. Send comments on the accuracy of this estimate of the burden and recommendations for reducing it to: Department of State (OIS/EA/DR) Washington, D.C. 20520-0264, and to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Office of Management and Budget, Paperwork Reduction Project (1405-0018), Washington, D.C. 20503

АНКЕТА ДЛЯ ПОЛУЧЕНИЯ ИММИГРАНТСКОЙ ВИЗЫ И РЕГИСТРАЦИОННОГО НОМЕРА ИНОСТРАНЦА

OMB APPROVAL
NO. 1405-0015
EXPIRES 6-31-92
*ESTIMATED BURDEN 23 HOURS

ЧАСТЬ I - ЗАЯВЛЕНИЕ ПОД ПРИСЯГОЙ

Инструкция: Заполните по одному экземпляру этой анкеты на себя и на каждого члена семьи, эмигрирующего вместе с Вами, независимо от возраста. Ответы должны быть напечатаны на машинке или написаны от руки печатными буквами. Если вопрос к Вам не относится, пишите «не касается». Если не хватит места для ответа на какой-либо вопрос, можно писать на дополнительных листах бумаги, указав номер соответствующего вопроса; эти листы должны быть приложены к анкете. НЕ ПОДПИСЫВАЙТЕ АНКЕТУ ДО УКАЗАНИЯ СОТРУДНИКА КОНСУЛЬСКОГО ОТДЕЛА. За подачу анкеты взимается денежный сбор согласно тарифным правилам, пункт 20. Сбор подлежит оплате в долларах США или в местной валюте по действующему обменному курсу или посредством банковского перевода непосредственно сотруднику консульского отдела.

ПРЕДУПРЕЖДЕНИЕ: Любая ложная информация или сокрытие важных фактов может иметь следствием окончательный запрет на Ваш въезд в США. Даже если Вам будет разрешен въезд в США, представление ложной информации, способствовавшей Вашему въезду, может послужить основанием для возбуждения уголовного преследования и (или) депортации Вас из страны.

Данная анкета - продолжение формы OF-230-часть I, и вместе с ней составляет полную Анкету для получения иммигрантской визы и регистрационного номера иностранца.

24. Фамилия Шипилина	Имя Алина	Отчество Александровна
25. Адрес г. Москва Кутзовский Проспект д 26, под 17, кв 400 Телефон 249-22-61	26. Адрес места назначения в США (полный адрес, включая почтовый индекс) Final U.S. Address: 545 East 14 Street, Apt 10D New York, New York 10009 Телефон 212-995-5201
27. Лицо с которым Вы собираетесь воссоединиться (Фамилия, имя, адрес и родственные отношения) Ден Холландер Рой 545 Восток, 14-я улица, кв 10Д, Нью-Йорк, Нью-Йорк муж	28. Фамилия, имя и адрес спонсора или работодателя Ден Холландер Рой 545 Восток, 14-я улица, кв 10Д, Нью-Йорк, Нью-Йорк г Москва, Кутзовский Проспект, д 26, под 17, кв 400
29. Цель приезда в США ПРОЖИВАНИЕ с мужем	30. Как долго Вы собираетесь пробыть в США (если постоянно, укажите) ПОСТОЯННО
31. Предполагаемый пункт въезда в США Нью-Йорк (город)	32. Есть ли у Вас билет до места назначения? <input type="checkbox"/> Да <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Нет
33. В соответствии с законом США о выдаче виз каждый заявитель должен указать, не относится ли он к той или иной категории лиц, не подлежащей въезду в США. Ниже приводится общее описание указанных категорий. Внимательно прочтите список и дайте ответ (ДА или НЕТ) по каждой из категорий. На основании Ваших ответов сотрудник консульского отдела будет принимать решение о выдаче виз.
ЗА ИСКЛЮЧЕНИЕМ СЛУЧАЕВ, ОСОБО ОГОВОРЕННЫХ В ЗАКОНЕ, ИНОСТРАНЦАМ, ОТНОСЯЩИМСЯ К ЛЮБОЙ ИЗ НИЖЕПЕРЕЧИСЛЕННЫХ КАТЕГОРИЙ, ВЪЕЗДНАЯ ВИЗА НЕ ВЫДАЕТСЯ. ОТНОСЯТСЯ ЛИ К ВАМ СЛЕДУЮЩИЕ КАТЕГОРИИ?

Настоящая форма предоставляется бесплатно в консульствах США

Original Form 730 (1/81)

а. Иностранец, страдающий инфекционным заболеванием, опасным для общества, либо страдающий сейчас или страдавший ранее физическим или психическим отклонением, представляющим или способным представлять угрозу безопасности или благополучия самого иностранца либо других лиц; иностранец, принимающий наркотики или являющийся наркомагом [212(a)(1)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
б. Иностранец, осуждавшийся по суду за преступление, связанное с аморальным поведением, или за дикое нарушение закона, связанное с наркотиками, либо признавший факт совершения такого преступления или нарушения закона; иностранец, осуждавшийся за два или более правонарушения в совокупном сроку в 5 лет и больше; иностранец, въезжающий в США с намерением заниматься проституцией или другой аморальной деятельностью с целью извлечения выгоды, либо занимавшийся проституцией или сходочеством в течение последних 10 лет; иностранец, занимающийся или занимавшийся в прошлом контрабандой наркотиков; иностранец, совершавший серьезное уголовное преступление в США и получивший иммунитет от судебного преследования. [212(a)(2)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
в. Иностранец, пытавшийся въехать в США с целью заниматься шпионажем, саботажем, нарушением экспортных правил, свержением правительства США или другой противозаконной деятельностью; иностранец, пытавшийся въехать в США с целью заниматься террористической деятельностью; иностранец, являющийся членом коммунистической или любой другой тоталитарной партии или связанной с такой партией; иностранец, который, действуя под руководством нацистского правительства Германии или другой страны, застрелен или связан с нацистским правительством Германии, отдавал приказы, призывал, способствовал или иным образом участвовал в преследовании любого лица по причинам расы, религии, национальности или политических убеждений; иностранец, принимавший участие в геноциде. [212(a)(3)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
г. Иностранец, в отношении которого есть основания полагать, что он будет жить за счет общества. [212(a)(4)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
е. Иностранец, пытавшийся въехать в США с целью выполнения квалифицированной или неквалифицированной работы, не утвержденной министерством труда; иностранец, имеющий диплом зарубежного медицинского заведения, пытающийся заниматься медицинской деятельностью, не сдав экзамена NBME или приравненный к нему. [212(a)(5)]	Не касается <input type="checkbox"/> Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
ф. Иностранец, депортированный в течение последнего года, или подвергавшийся аресту и депортации в течение последних 5 лет; иностранец, пытавшийся или пытавшийся получить визу или другое положительное решение иммиграционных властей путем обмана или ложных заявлений; иностранец, сознательно способствовавший другому иностранцу во въезде или в попытке въезда в США в нарушение закона; иностранец, нарушающий раздел 274C Закона об иммиграции. [212(a)(6)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
г. Иностранец, не при каких условиях не имеющий права на получение гражданства США; лицо, покинувшее в прошлом США с целью избежать призыва на военную службу в военное время. [212(a)(8)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
з. Иностранец, въезжавший в США с целью практиковать мошенничество; иностранец, выступавший как предусмотрительное законное сопровождающее лицо для другого иностранца, не подлежащего въезду; иностранец, удерживавший за пределами США ребенка, опека над которым поручена в законном порядке гражданскому США. [212(a)(9)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
и. Иностранец, приезжавший ранее по обмену и не выполнявший условия покинуть пределы США на 2 года. [212(e)]	Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
Если вы ответили ДА на любой из вопросов или не знаете, как ответить, объясните причину ниже или на отдельном листе.
34. Подвергались ли Вы когда-либо аресту, были ли осуждены по приговору суда, отбывали ли тюремное заключение, находились ли в доме принуждения; были ли помилованы или амнистированы; находились ли на лечении в психиатрической больнице или другом заведении в связи с безумием или иным психическим заболеванием? [222(a)]
Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
35. Я имею следующие основания утверждать, что не буду жить за счет общества: Личная финансовая обеспеченность (укажите, какая именно) Гарантия приема на работу (приложите) ✓ Справка о материальной поддержке (приложите)
36. Подавали ли Вы когда-либо заявление на въезд в США? Если да, укажите где и когда. 16.12.99, г. Москва
Да <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Нет <input type="checkbox"/>
37. Было ли Вам когда-либо отказано во въезде в США? (Если да, объясните)
Да <input type="checkbox"/> Нет <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
38. Помогал ли Вам кто-нибудь заполнить настоящую анкету? (Если ДА, укажите фамилию, адрес помогающего, а также его отношение к Вам: родственник, друг, агент бюро иммиграции, юрист и др.) Рой Ден Холландер, г. Москва, Кутузовский Проспект, д 26, под 17, кв 400 мать и юрист
Да <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Нет <input type="checkbox"/>

☒ Настоящей анкете прилагаются следующие документы:

<input type="checkbox"/> Паспорт	<input type="checkbox"/> Справка о прохождении военной службы	<input type="checkbox"/> Справка о личной финансовой обеспеченности
<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство о рождении	<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство из полиции	<input type="checkbox"/> Справка о материальной поддержке
<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство о браке	<input type="checkbox"/> Фотографии	<input type="checkbox"/> Предложение найма на работу
<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство о смерти	<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство о рождении всех детей, не эмигрирующих вместе с Вами (перечислите детей, не имеющих свидетельства о рождении)	<input type="checkbox"/> Другие документы (укажите, какие)
<input type="checkbox"/> Свидетельство о разводе

НЕ ПИШИТЕ НИЖЕ ЭТОЙ ЛИНИИ
Сотрудник консульского отдела поможет Вам заполнить пункты 40 и 41

40. I claim to be exempt from ineligibility to receive a visa and exclusion under item _____ in Part 33 for the following reasons:

212(a)(5)	Beneficiary of a waiver under:	212(*)	212(b)
<input type="checkbox"/> Not applicable	<input type="checkbox"/> 212(a)(3)(D)(i)	212(g)(1)	212(i)
<input type="checkbox"/> Not required	<input type="checkbox"/> 212(a)(3)(D)(ii)	212(g)(2)
<input type="checkbox"/> Attached	<input type="checkbox"/> 212(a)(3)(D)(iv)

41. I claim to be:

<input type="checkbox"/> Family-Sponsored Immigrant	<input type="checkbox"/> I derive foreign state chargeability under sec. 202(b) through my _____	<input type="checkbox"/> Preference: _____
<input type="checkbox"/> An employment Based Immigrant		<input type="checkbox"/> Numerical limitation: _____ (foreign state)
<input type="checkbox"/> A Diversity Immigrant
<input type="checkbox"/> A Special Category (Specify) _____ (Returning resident, Hong Kong, Tibetan, Private Legislation, etc.)

Я понимаю, что я должен сдать въездную визу представителю иммиграционной службы США в пункте въезда, и что наличие у меня визы не является достаточным основанием для въезда в США, если к моменту въезда я не буду иметь права на въезд согласно Закону об иммиграции.

Я понимаю, что сознательное представление любого ложного или вводящего в заблуждение заявления либо сознательное сокрытие важных фактов с моей стороны в связи с подачей настоящего заявления может вызвать окончательный отказ во въезде в США, а после въезда - стать основанием для уголовного преследования и (или) депортации.

Я, нижеподписавшийся подать заявления на въезд в Соединенные Штаты, клятвенно заверяю, что все данные в настоящей анкете, состоящей из комплекта из форм OF-230, часть I, и OF-230, часть II, указаны мной лично, в том числе ответы на пункты с 1-го по 41-й являются истинными, и что эти данные, насколько мне известно, соответствуют действительности. Я также клятвенно заявляю, что в случае, если я буду вступать в США, я не стану заниматься деятельностью, наносящей ущерб интересам общества или ставящей под угрозу благосостояние, безопасность населения или национальную безопасность США, деятельностью, запрещенной законами США о шпионаже, саботаже, общественных беспорядках, или иной деятельностью, направленной на подрывление власти или свержение правительства США с применением силы, насилия или других неконституционных методов.

Я понимаю все вышеизложенное, добровольно прошу и получаю разъяснения по всем неясным мне пунктам.

_____
(Подпись заявителя)

Родственные отношения, заявленные в пунктах 14 и 15, подтверждены документами, представленными сотруднику консульского отдела за исключением особо отмеченных случаев:

исано и клятвенно подтверждено в моем присутствии сего, _____ дня, 19 ____ в _____

_____
(сотрудник консульства)

and Item No. 20

My Missing Angel

October 15

Como esta? I hope well, and I hope you are getting some rest so we can go dancing when you come back—Yes!!!! And so we can kiss and more (?) when you come back—Yes!!!! Your dancing and kissing are pure femininity and knock me out. You are my addiction along with chocolate and one other proclivity. We can go into that when we see each other again.

Have you seen any interesting sites in Mexico? What do you do on your days off? I caught an opera at the Bolshoi last weekend. It was Yolanda by Tchiaikovsky. The young princess (always princes and princesses) was blind (she had never fallen in love) but she did not know (did not realize what she was missing) because her father (social authority) forbid anyone to tell her. (He was trying to keep her ignorant of the beauty he could not control and did not understand.) Have you ever been in love Angel? Anyway, a young (well may be not so young) rebellious prince (thinks there is more to life than social status and money) comes along and raises her consciousness (she falls in love and realizes what she has missed by following the enslaving rules of society). Before the two can consummate their love (unite in a union that transcends the physical and the emotional-- have you ever found such a union Angel?) the King (the conformist and unimaginative people in society) sentences the rebellious prince to death. Then a miraculous wise man from the mysterious East (metaphysical forces aka quantum cosmology) intercedes. The rebellious prince is saved (he transcends the restrictions of social order with the help of metaphysical philosophies) and unites with his other half the princess who now sees clearly the wonders of the worlds that lie beyond this very limited space time continuum in which we struggle to live.

That is tonight's bed time story, now go to sleep my Angelic princess.

Love Roy
S.W.A.S.

To: Angelina Shipilina
Londres 216, Apartamento 6
Fax: 525 514 9837

October 3

My Darling Angel,

I just took a long walk in Victory Park. The sun was shining and it was very warm. Much of the time I thought about you and how far away you are and how lonely that makes me. But you must be even more lonely than I in a country like Mexico. Do you find it pleasing or not a place to live? I just realized that it was 10 weeks ago today that we went to Gorky Park, and in the evening I gave you the first message.

Leonid gave me your fax number so I hope you receive this. Did you receive my letters? If you are able to send a letter please do. Or better yet, send pictures of you. I assume you still have my office address.

I talked to the American Embassy and it should not be a problem (of course you never know) to obtain a tourist visa for you to the US when you return. Of course we will need a story. I have one in mind and will tell you when I see you again.

In a way it is good that you are in Mexico. You are probably safer there than here. Leonid offered to tell me what you are doing, but I said no because if you wanted to you would tell me yourself. I know you will be wise in what ever you do.

I miss you terribly. Moscow is a lonely place to live. Even when I go out with friends, I wish I was with you dancing in some club.

Take care of yourself my guardian Angel.

(My Russian tutor is off, so I was unable to have this translated—sorry)

Love Roy
S.W.A.H. ( guest what it means)

PD Birthday Nov 2000

My dear Roy

From all my soul
a lot of thanks to you for your patience, help, pleasure - what
you gave me.
It was very nice celebration of my birthday - so much emotions and good memory.
All the best for
you, to be optimist, believe in marvel (miracle, wonder). And your dreams come is truth!

I do.

Thanks
for Everything

Kiss you.

Angelina

13.11.2000

Angel

13 November

It is Saturday night, dark and cold outside with snow on the ground and me here in a lonely office working because there is no one to go DANCING with. Where are you Angel? Why am I always alone. I thought you said I had a guardian angel to protect me. Doesn't that mean protection from loneliness? Are you that protection? Will our differences doom the short future you saw in my hand? Enough of my moaning and groaning.

Don't you become weary of this space time continuum. Life has not been easy for you like it has been for others who have so much they cannot decide what to choose from and then complain with tears of duplicity that they have to make a choice.

Oh well, I miss you, I look at your photos, I sleep with your dog, but the perfume is gone and I still feel lonely. I wonder whether we have a future and if so how long. I guess I should just let the universe and its metaphysical underpinnings unfold—after all you have a longer period of uncertainty facing you than I have.

I guess you are the only one I have now.

Love Roy

From Julia Heart 514-9837

AGASSI Alejandro Sra. Mexico
Telephone: (741) 69-69-00
Fax: (741) 69-60-71

Hello Roy!

I + your love - Angelina. I have a lot of work, that's why I can't give to you answer. A lot of thanks for your calls, cards. Your worlds, attention.

Here I visit many beautiful places

but I was alone, I'm think about you. It will be nice to be together.

I'm come back in Moscow

30 november in 22.30. Little time and we are can see each other.

In Mexico now warm  $21^{\circ} + 17^{\circ} + 20^{\circ}C$ .

But slowly become little be colder.

(not how in Moscow  $-10^{\circ}$ ).

I hold you a lot, kiss a lot and miss.

Angelina

15.11.99

Angelina Chipilina = little girl in Spanish
251-5410

Leo 336-7257 250-3756

Alpuerto Poi

Hello

Ray!

Airport 6969-030511

Lufth 6969-694433

www.frankfurt-airport.de

11

I sent for you the number of my flying:

Frankfurt

LH 499

14:35-

Moscow

LH 3226

17:30

22:35

Mens Club - 525-533-2224

Mrs. Gilberto Quilan
Rosa Elena

Please, give to me too information. Sent me fax or call me on the wensday (or before stay for me message) For me it very, very important. And I have very little time.

I kiss you!
I hold you!

your Angelina.

525-182-2882

Charlie Cori

2 Dec

Angel

I hope you arrive safely

It is lonely when you are gone.

Hurry back so I can hold you again

Love
Roy

~~Alfred~~

8612 - 699888 ab 1858

Angelina Shipilina

Alfredo's numbers    52099023
                                 55117189
                                 54156795

My dear Rooy!

From all my soul, all my heart I'm a happy New Year to you!
With

2000

year!

I'm wish to you to be health!

Big and real love!

That your dreams come in truth!

Success in your work (more money)!

Beautiful, peace, kinds

And big, big happy!!!

All the best for you

And good luck everywhere!

I'm hear
Your Angel...

8612-699888

ab 1858

3 Dec

Angel

Are you okay? If you can call me do, If not I understand. Did you receive the telephone numbers for Alfredo 520 99023 - pager #
Ibarra 5511 7189 - home #
541-56795.

I miss you terribly, but you know that.
Hope your mother is okay

Mucho Love

Roy

My dear Roy!

From all my soul I'm thank to you for all your help, for all your feelings, compassion, understanding,
hospitality, passions, openness, good, kindhearted, for all the best - what you gave me.

I wish to you to find your right way and your happiness

I sweet kiss you
and hug you.

Your Angelina

22/11/2000.

Dec 5

Angelina Shipilina 8+8612 699888
ab 1858

Angel,

I will buy you a mobile phone ~~for~~ for a Christmas present. If you get one in Krasnodar, I will give you the amount for the mobile when you are in Moscow.

Or we can buy one when you are in Moscow. Whichever you want.

Love
Roy

2/7/00 a lot of loves

My

Deary

dear

many beauty

From all my heart it for you... love-it flower. And this flower you must give - caloric, care, all your clean feeling. And after... after will come to you wonder! Care your flower to be happy with this, what you have. Don't make unimprovable mistakes!

© ZPR Inc.
АПТ и ДИЗАЙН
(095) 234-91-32, 232-29-57
Изготовлено ИПФ "Стезя"

With tenderness loves - your Enigmatic outspoken

MADE IN RUSSIA
63-007-99

real happy

4 601135 100618

flower

Angelina... with love...

all the best

4/18/00

My любимыи myne!
I'm so miss on you
but I must to help
my mother, you know about this. How are you without me?
Very soon we will be together. I send to you this spring flowers from Krasnodar from all my heart. I kiss and hold you
your Angel

1211

Пашите индекс предприятия связи места назначения

Москва
Кутузовский
проспект
д 26 под 17 кв 400
For Den Hollander

Индекс предприятия связи 350020 и адрес отправителя
Краснодар
Дашинцевская
138 кв 8

Angel

4/22/00

My dear myne!
Only come back and start to be alone again.
It difficult, but
I must to do a lot of things here to see my doctor (eyes)
make document
on the hours, make my flat.

But you in my heart.
I'm congratulat to you with this holiday - great celebration. Ask your преподаватель about
this holiday (home work).
A lot of kisses to you

1211

Пашите индекс предприятия связи места назначения

Москва
Кутузовский Проспект
дом 26
под 17, кв 400

Кому Холандер

Индекс предприятия связи 353020 и адрес отправителя
Краснодар
Дашинцевская
138 кв 8

Angelina

love meant trust and respect. I trust and respect the Good Angel, I always did, but given what I know now, I could never trust nor respect the Fallen Angel.

Someday in the future, three little words will become even more important than "I love you". Those words will be "let me help". I tried the best I could to help you reach your dreams, but the Fallen Angel was too powerful for me.

I honestly hope your dreams still can true. Don't give up, you will make it, if you sincerely respect people.
Good by, I fear me.

for as long as I live, for bringing me, for a little while, a Good Angel and a Fallen Angel in one person. Your words as the Good Angel couple with your actions as the Fallen Angel gave me a revelation: If a person goes through life with hate in his heart for other people, then he creates his own prison of self torment from which he will fail to see the beauty of life. I deeply thank you for that understanding and, as a result, I sincerely from my heart forgive you. You once said that

June 13, 2000

Hello Angel
It's Roy
How are you?

Perhaps if I had opened my heart more and been more loving, we would still be together. But I don't think that whatever I said, whatever, whatever I did, whatever misunderstanding we had -- none of those mistakes justified what you did to harm me from the beginning of March to Milan.

But I will always be thankful to the universe,

And now some interesting things, what I read in books:

- ① outside equally inside
- ② similar magnetic similar
- ③ If you don't like in other people, well then this presence in you.
- ④ If we are go away from something, so ~~this~~ here to be pain or fear (terror).
- ⑤ If you made some action try to ~~make~~ do analysis to everything, what happen before, during and after, plus use your thinking, feeling and premonition, and derive (elicit) from situation lesson.
- ⑥ The situation will birth or magnetic your thinking and blockes.
- ⑦ Our block - it this, what we must to know and understand about this world.
- ⑧ If you have hit the same situation or have problems ~~with~~ with you health, therefore you are pass (to go by) some lesson. What do you must understand from this situation?
- ⑨ You - subject (cause) those, what happen with you.
- ⑩ Don't try to change world or people, change in beginner yourself. When you change yourself, change people, which around of you, will change the world.
- ⑪ If you talk, that you change therefore, you are don't change, - it ~~mask~~.
- ⑫ If somebody give to you advice or help, don't think, that it you limitations, that you can't master (floor).
- ⑬ When you don't have something, what you want to have, therefore, you either don't want, or not abvisedly really have it. If you want to get aught precise (special), find description, what do you want. Learn limit crystal of mind (idea).

- (14) Real power (strength) include - love and attention to yourself and to people.
- (15) Thinking about those, what do you want to have, but not about what you don't want.
- (16) Negative emotionals ~~don't~~ gives to you what do you want, they are bring only what you don't want.
- (17) If you everytime repeat to yourself - why you can't have a subject of your dreams, you never get this. Start to talk yourself - why you may have what do you want.
- (18) Concentrate what do you want to have, but not on the escape what you don't want. Many people knowing, what they are don't want, but very few - knowing what they want.
- (19) If you can't believe in opportunity something, you <sup>will</sup> never have this.
- (20) To learn make well-being in your life - it a process of your growth.
- (21) You came in this world have enjoy pleasure from life, but not suffer.

19.06.2000 Other part of my letter - after your answer.
 Onestly, I don't thinking, that you forgive me. And... you can't to do this, becours it was hit for you. But remember I think: you told me, that you don't trick me - you onest (truth) with me.
 If something happen with me strange or if I find that you avenge (revenge) me - it will be 1 of the big mistake (without connection). - without return.

Thanks for your understanding, wise.
 (I will tell to you by myself other things).
 Now I'm will try to look on your you.
 Now I'm psychologist.
 You have difficult childhood. Your parents was press on you - from this time you have a complex. The complex of degradation.

Why you need the truth? This~~s~~ for degradation yourself and complex.
Also, this truth give to you what? Pleasure relax, ~~great~~ gratification (satisfaction), winner (on whom, what?), - answer (thing, and give me).

To other side - you try to find direction over people - for press on them - and have enjoy (how your parents, which press on you). It your inside complex - to be in the role of the boss.

My deare Ray Den Hollander - I'm your good friend and. (I think the better if you ~~prolonger~~ <sup>I don't know</sup> because my help for you - it only wash (lave) dishes and sometimes to get some dinner - you told to me this).

Remember - I'm free, I'm not your female slave. I have my right, life. I'm not boy which you can use and if you don't need - let fly.

All things in this life - return.
Try to be the more open, more trust and before you can open other world. If ~~some~~ somebody makes something - stop ~~and~~ wait. Ask yourself - why (he is or she is made this. What the reason?). So, I hope that somethinks from these letter will help to you the better understand yourself and going on around of you.

With respect your... (girl-friend, friend, female slave, housewife, nobody or somebody - you will tell me who)... Just Angelina.

19.06.2000

Why you need the truth? This~~s~~ for degradation yourself and complex.
Also, this truth give to you what? Pleasure relax, ~~great~~ gratification (satisfaction), winner (on whom, what?), - answer (thing, and give me)

To other side - you try to find direction over people - for press on them - and have enjoy (how your parents, which press on you). It your inside complex - to be in the role of the boss.

My deare Ray Den Hollander -
I'm your good friend and. (I think the better if you ~~prolonger~~ <sup>I don't know</sup> Because my help for you - it only wash (lave) dishes and sometimes to get some dinner - you told to me this)

Remember - I'm free, I'm not your female slave. I have my right, life. I'm not boy which you can use and if you don't need - let fly.

All things in this life - return.
Try to be the more open, more trust and before you can open other world. If ~~some~~ somebody makes something - stop ~~and~~ wait. Ask yourself - why (he is or she is made this. What the reason?).
So, I hope that somethinks from these letter will help to you the better understand yourself and going on around of you.

With respect your... (girl-friend, men, female slave, friend, housewife, nobody or somebody - you will tell me ~~to~~ who)... Just Angelina.

19.06.2000

Think about this pictor.

To be wise and think about my wishes
and my inside world.

3gpaberbyu mau myne!

I'm write to you this letter before 1 day, when you will give me answer about my last chance.

Yes, it was happen. Yes, I did this, it was my fault. But you don't ask me - why I did this. When you ask me, I'm answer to you.

Really, I sit and don't know - what kind the answer you will give to me. I'm understand, that you need the time, to thing, talk with all your friends on internet, to have some advice (board) and have you result, becours it very responsible step in your life, I'm understand.

Well, what you choose - it your chance. Now I will tell you, what I never told to you.

①. From all my soul I wanted to try give to you new streamline (direction).

②. I wanted to give you (help to find) the goal in your life.

③. Help to you understand for what you live and how you can to be happy.

④. I wanted to help to you understand the philosophy of this life.

⑤. And why you have especially this life, what you have.

I want to tell you again, that I never think about you money - how get this - for me it not interesting.

7/5/00

От кого Angelina
Откуда Russia Krasnodar
188-кв8 Индекс места отправления
Rashpilevskaya 350020

Место для письменного сообщения

Hello my mine!
Interesting, now I'm with you and this card. We are has a lot of difficult situation, psycological, but we are together, what minse (oznachen), that we are took lessons. I wish both of us health, cleane love, understanding, harmony and see usnixa v gerax

Кому Ray Den Hollander
Куда flat 10D, 14 street
545 East, New-York
Индекс места назначения USA

10009

Your unforgettable Angelina

© ZPR Inc. АРТ и ДИЗАЙН (095) 234-91-32, 232-29-57 Изготовлено ИПФ "Старик" 61-031-99

My Special Angel,

How are you? Happy I hope. As always, I miss you, but I will wait because I am patient and only half crazy.

I do not mean to be intrusive and if you think I am meddling then please tell me. I will not be offended. I just do not want to offend you, but I do want to help. Why?. Because I am concerned for you, I worry for you, I want you to be happy and successful. Why? I believe the fates have decided to make it so. There is a current running through the universe affecting everything including humans. When a person's intuition accesses that current, it tells him what he must do or what road to take. If he does not, then he will forever regret it as Eugene O'Negin did. After the happy week we spent dancing, walking, talking and hugging, it is clear to me that if I have any purpose left it is to help you.

You seem to have 3 concerns ( now doesn't that sound like a lawyer):

1. obtaining your degree
2. buying an apartment
3. pursuing your career

About the degree. As I mentioned, there must be a particular person at the institute who can make the decision to grant you the degree. That individual may be willing to grant the degree, which you earned, in return for a gift. If you can find out what the gift is, I may be able to obtain it. Or I could visit the person and try to work out a deal.

About the apartment and your career. As I said, I do not know about the world you work in and, perhaps because of that, I think it is dangerous. However, danger and risk may be necessary in order to pursue your career. This is usually part of any career, there are always risks that a person must take to succeed. But if you are taking risks or increasing your danger to obtain the apartment, I can lend you 15 instead of 10 and you can pay me back when you want. Then you can court the world for your career and know that the risks are worth your success.

I know what you are saying, "Who is this crazy American? Why does he want to help me? What does he want from me? Well think of it this way. You gave me the card with the icons to protect me. I could not have given it to myself because I did not know about it and was not a believer. You did know about it and you are a believer and your concern for me caused you to do what you could in this world to protect me. Well my concern for you causes me to do what I can to protect you.

Talk with you later Angel.

Love

EMILY MATTHEWS

You're an angel
in human disguise!

halo or wings,

Then even though you don't have that's both joyful and wise,

with a heart

who touches your life

If an angel is someone

here or there,

and gives them a nudge

who looks out for others

If an angel is someone

that they constantly share,

it's a gift

who's so filled with love,

If an angel is someone

Ray Den Hollander
(1958, 1948, 19...)
and
Angelina

We "~~~~~" re a rare pair.

Happy Anniversary

11.08.2000.

My dear Ray! (Russian man who called on for her on my mobile
Aug 2000)

I'm so sorry for yesterday unpleasantness (trouble). But still this time I don't have any idea - who is this.

Take out your emotionality and use your logic - why I must to give somebody yours telefon number - if I have my. Just think about this.

You think I'm happy about this situation?

I was very happy yesterday,
when we have good mood, smile together. I don't want ~~I don't~~ any trouble with you, Ray.

And I want to tell again (believe or not believe - your choice) but my soul and action is clear.

I wish to you a good trip and good luck to meet right people, who can help to you to get your work.

Your dream come is true - just try to believe of this.

my sweet kiss
and hug to you.

Angel-

8/20/99

I know it is very difficult for you to contact me. So I will keep sending you messages. You know there is no
sunshine when you are gone, so let me
pay for your trips to Moscow and then there will be lots of sun<sup>shine</sup> here.

Love

Roy

Supper
nashiro
cod 49.

Я знаю, тебе очень трудно
связаться со мной
Тем не менее буду писать
отправлю тебе
когда-нибудь. Потому не
сверну, когда ты далеко
так это не важно мне
твое. Счастливого тебе успеха в М, и тогда все

Mystery Angel

8/24/99

I received your photographs ~~mystery~~
~~hidden~~ and put them on the pillow <sup>next to mine</sup> next to mine so I could smell your perfume the night through and dream of you.
Can you squeeze <sup>yourself</sup> yourself into the next letter you send. Then when I open it, ~~and~~ you will pop out. Good idea - right. But if your magic only works on me and not letters then please <sup>send</sup> more pictures ~~and~~ with your perfume.
I miss you terribly

Love Boy
L. W. A. K.

А. Момента не ето бамскаро сега б септември? Копя а страно ево, 707

Но сам бамс момо, гай а бамс момо ако, а не на бамс момо, момо-ако

Angel Baby

8/27

In the words of a classic American rock and Roll Song, "It is just like heaven being here with you. You are like an Angel to good to be true. And after all I love you I do. Angel baby, my Angel baby."
So when will you be here.

Love and Kisses

Roy

S.W.A.H

Ангел, готка
Кто знает В любви. Ангел. Ангел.
моя сестра. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
с тобой - как в раю. Ты мне.
Ангел. Ангел. Ангел. Ангел.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.
Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне. Ты мне.

8/30 ~~My Precious Angel~~ My Precious Angel

When you left this time, I felt more lonely than last time. Will my loneliness increase with every time you leave?

8/31

Being a dancer in a club must be very difficult. To enjoy doing something but to face criticism for doing it requires <sup>much</sup> more strength than the petty little critics and more will than most people. A US president once said- It is not the critic who counts but the person who dares to pursue his (her) dream. The world is full of people who gave up on their dream because others disapproved.

I wish I could protect you from all the idiots of the world, but then you would never grow to your full potential.

9/1 Thinking of you while making a shower I thought: "I am she and you are me." Is that possible?

you the money. I don't want any harm to come to you. I would never forgive myself. ~~I~~ I am also troubled that you will not give me your telephone number or address — why Angel? ~~what do you think~~ ~~I will do?~~ ¶ So it is cold I am here and you are hiding from me in a country I do not think much about. Oh well, in the words of a rock and roll song:

Wherever you go, whatever you do I will be right here (or in New York) waiting for you. Whatever it takes or how my heart breaks. I'll be right here waiting for you.

After all you did ask me to wait, or have you changed your mind. ¶ Some day go see the movie Casablanca and you will see how I ~~felt~~ felt when you did not

~~It will surely by you won't be anybody~~ ~~trust you~~

~~when you did not~~ get off the airplane.

It's the scene in the train station and it's raining

There is a little irony <sup>in it</sup> and I will show it to you some day -- I hope.

Love

Roy

airport in plenty <sup>- don't want to be late</sup> of time. The plane lands
- my heart beats faster. I see Leonid and know that Angel is <sup>right</sup> behind <sup>him</sup> and I will be happy <sup>again</sup> soon. Then Leonid tells me Angel stayed in Mexico - my heart sank, the flowers ~~dropped~~ <sup>wilt</sup> dropped. Then Leonid said you would be in Mexico for 3 months, maybe more - my heart broke. I wanted to die. Then I read your letter. It confused me. I still am not sure what it says. My assistant Sasha says ~~you~~ it says you like me. My reading of it says you will never see me again. I have chosen to believe Sasha - she's smart.
But I don't know if I can bear not seeing you, worrying about your ~~man~~ obsessed drive to make that money. ~~to make that~~.

I told you once, and I will again that I will help you. If you are about to do something stupid and dangerous for ~~buy your~~ money so you can buy that apartment - call me, collect. I will give

My dear
Roy!

I'm congratulat to you with ~~our~~ date. Yes, it fighting both of us but win after with help of understanding, flexibility and special love to each other.

I wish for both of us the best, that this cloud go away
and become clear
sun on the clear,

blee sky. And around
of us - with fresh smell
- spring flowers ...

Best wishes
on your anniversary...
and may your love
grow deeper with every year
you share.

Happy Anniversary
Always with you
belief, hope,

11.09.2000

Your

Love unforgettable
Angel

My  darling,
my dear, my special!

Qooy!

Today is my 48th day in Krasnodar. A lot things to do. We try to went in many agency
(travel) to know about Cyprus - everywhere different prices. It okey!

My mother was
very happy to see me.
And she is again
very sorry, that
she is offend to you.
When you have some emotional - can you control yourself, do you understand everything - what you speake - do you think about any pity (compassion) and a for trying <sup>if you don't care about</sup> ~~you don't care about~~ finish nezelts <sup>anything in this moment</sup> ~~anything in this moment~~ to be think this condition. I don't try exonerate my mother,

I just try to show about situation. You remember yourself? After when you out your emotional - you told - I'm sorry, that I was hot. It happen with me, with everybody. Okey. And now I'm <sup>thinking about</sup> ~~not~~ bad. I'm really miss you. Don't smile.

Just sometime in some second, minute - open your heart, and believe that somebody miss on you and ~~wish~~ you - all of you - who you are. Make this just inside of you - don't tell me anything. Before me this beautiful <sup>flowers</sup> ~~flowers~~ <sup>wieht</sup> ~~wieht~~ I have from you from another side of the word - from all your soul. I'm very sweet kiss to you, how sweet small flower and very very strong hug you. Angel

ΕΡΑΤΟ CYPRIUS
ΕΚΔΟΣΕΙΣ
ΙΔΙΟΤΗΤΗΣ

It you kiss me
(it so great...).

© COPYRIGHT BY M. TITANIS S.A.

<http://www.erotis.gr>

E-123

Κόμπος - Κύπρος - Ζήπερο - Χηπρε - Κόμπος

ΕΡΑΤΟ CYPRIUS
ΕΚΔΟΣΕΙΣ
ΙΔΙΟΤΗΤΗΣ

I think, that you don't have problem too...
(it you and I)

© COPYRIGHT BY M. TITANIS S.A.

<http://www.erotis.gr>

E-324

Κόμπος - Κύπρος - Ζήπερο - Χηπρε - Κόμπος

Cyp

Κόμπος - Cyprus - Zypern - Chypre - Кипр

Hello my darling,
special day.

I sent to you very hot, sweet kiss and very strong hug.

Miss and think about you.

Your Angel

20.09.2010
Cyprus

ERATO CYPRUS
TEL: 2240 2240

8400

<http://www.toubis.gr>

E-869

READ THIS LETTER FIRST

22 September

Hi My Delicious Angel (well I guess I do not know that yet but I can dream),

I am so happy that you are alright.

I have enclosed the two letters I wrote you before we talked on the telephone. Perhaps I went a little, okay a lot crazy, but you can see how worried I was that I would not see you again or worst that you needed help. I could not bear imagining you in danger and I was not there to help, so I started to organize a rescue mission. I contacted people I know who in turn know people who can help in any situation. I would lay awake at night putting together contingency plans for my going to Mexico with the right back up to help you out. After talking to you, however, I now believe you are safe. But if I am wrong tell me and I will be there as soon as I can get a flight. In the meantime I can contact people in Mexico City who can provide you with assistance. In fact Kroll has an office there. Its number is 282 2882, at Andres Bello 10, piso 6, Col. Polanco. Just tell them you are a friend of the Manager of the Moscow Office and give them my name. They will be willing to help.

It must be very difficult and scary for you to have to go to Mexico to make money for your mother's apartment. I cannot say I have ever been in a situation like that. I wonder how I would handle it, probably not as well as you. I am sorry if the two enclosed letters seem rather selfish in light of what you are going through. You are struggling to survive while I complain about the bad breaks I believe I had in life. While not rich, I cannot say that I ever had to worry about survival on the contrary I often questioned its value, perhaps that explains the short line on my palm. Anyway, between the two of us, you are clearly in the more difficult situation. I want to tell you that I am on your side and will back you in whatever you do—as long as you do not say goodbye to me.

Now I will wait for you and not kiss any ladies until I see you again, I will be patient and try not to go crazy anymore.

Can I send you flowers or would that call attention to you? I move into a different apartment tomorrow. It is on the opposite side of Kutuzovsky near the metro. It is not as big or as nice and more expensive, but that is the market. When I was looking, the agents could not understand why I wanted to live in the same area. It is of course, because when I walk in the victory park, it reminds me of you.

Be safe Angel, my new home number is 249 2325.

Much Love Roy
S.W.A.K. (what does this mean)

My Far Away Angel,

I hope you are safe and no harm, either physical or psychological, is happening to you. I am beginning to slowly understand why you stayed, assuming you are staying of your own free will. I may be wrong, but I think you did not believe much of what I said. You are not the only one. All my life people did not believe much of what I said. Do you know who Cassandra was? The same happened to her.

So Angel where have you taken my heart? Mexico is a big country. Will you throw my heart into the garbage or will you keep it safe and unbroken? Will my stolen heart continue to beat in the hope of seeing you again or turn hard and cold from hopelessness. What will it be Angel? Will you follow your heart now that you have mine? (Twenty years from now remember that I asked that question.) Am I in your heart, if I am then ask me to wait. You once asked that of me and I waited. Perhaps you meant I should wait until you came back from Mexico at the end of the year. I will keep waiting if that is what your heart wants. Your heart Angel not your head. Don't let your logic make the decision because it will be the wrong decision, which you will not realize is wrong for decades. Let your heart tell you, then it will be right. That's just the way the universe works. It is in all the quantum mechanics books—your favorite subject: physics. That's somewhat of a joke, but also very close to the truth.

You once said you thought our meeting was meant to be because of all the events that had to occur for us to actually run into each other. I hope you still believe that. There's a path for everyone, some call it a first best destiny; when you are on that path, doors open where you never logically thought they could. I hope you wouldn't throw this door away.

Telephone me. Tell the operator to make a collect station to station call to my office. If I am not here leave a message. They all know how I feel about you. The numbers again 095 280 8810, 095 280 9929, 095 743 1350. If they are busy try again. I will be moving to another apartment soon so that number is not good for calling—am I sounding like you now.

You cannot imagine how much I miss and worry about you.

Love Roy

My darling special

from all my soul -
glarry birthday !!!

Wishes is simply:

Let go you wishes
come is truth

Smallest and biggest Inmost and whatever
Heart I present to you
It means, that

I ... you!

С Днем
рождения!

Пожелания просты:
Пусть исполнятся мечты,
Маленькие и большие,
Сокровенные, любые,
Сердце я тебе дарю,
Значит,
Я тебя люблю!

9/4/00

My lover

my boy-friend
my husband, my father,
my unforgettable
my special

my
Roy Den
Hollander !!!

4.09.2000

I'm appreciate and value everything - what you did, do and will do for me, when you will need, I will help to you to.

With many thanks
to you for your kindness,

for your hospitality,
for your understanding,
for your patience,
for your attention,
for your special

feeling to my to you
With my best wishes
I very sweetly kiss to you and from all my eternal soul - hug you.
Just you... Angel!

9/4 Sat. and you are not here, but you were here one week ago. So now I look at the pictures of you from last Saturday. The days are harder to get through when you are not around.

9/5 Sunday. A friend who works for Credit Suisse held a barbecue at his company's dacha at the Moscow Country Club. It was very beautiful, and I kept wishing that you were with me. Yes there were girls there, and yes I talked to them but no I did not flirt with them because I kept saying to myself: "Angel would not like it."

9/8 Wednesday I hope you are alright. I, however, am not since you are far away and I worry about you. Yes you are a mature woman but trouble, like men, is attracted to beautiful ladies.

9/10 Friday night. Angel is coming home - hooray! I buy a bouquet of pink roses because they remind me of my guardian Angel. Get to the for all, what you give to me. You very good man, friend. You have very good and big heart, and soul!!!

You have ~~very~~ intuition (have possible feeling before something) - remember, I talk to you? Before my leaving in Mexico, you speak to me, that may be I stay in Mexico. You was right.

I don't written to you my address in Mexico, because I shall be in different places, I don't know where exactly. I'm written to you my address in Krasnodar (written to me letter only on this is address, because other address now is not exist and telephone to - nobody live there).

So, my address:

353222

Краснодарский край
пос. Яблоновский
ул. Сквозная д 11/1
Ангелина
(Angeline)

Ray, written to me this is letter about desember, and yours back address.
May be we are to meet...

I'm again thanks to much for all. Remember Angelina...

I wish to you, that your dreams come is truth, love to you, good luck and all the best!!! I kiss to you a lot and embrace to much!

Angelina

Hotel Maria Cristina

RIO LERMA No. 31
COL. CUAUHTEMOC

06500 MEXICO, D.F.

TELS. 5566-96-88
5703-12-12

FAX 5566-91-94
5592-34-47

Hello Roy! Written to you your Angelina. Roy, we are have here very time, work. I'm thinking a lot about my plans. In Mexico I'm meeting many people on model business and dancing.
We ~~are~~ have a lot of pictures (foto) in many beautiful places in Mexico, in Acapulco. To me and other girls give some job (model). I'm thinking to much about stay in Mexico. You know, that I need on the money - to by the flat
my mother. Only I may help myself.
After back from Mexico I want to stay and work in Moscow, so, I thinking and have advice - stay in Mexico  $\approx$  2-3 month and make money. I'm don't know ~~ee~~ how many time exactly. I hope, that you understand me, my situation.
I'm sorry Roy, but I must.

I know, you miss on me, I'm to,
but it life. I don't know have we are possible to meet again...
But I'm thank you to much, a lot

Hotel Maria Cristina

RIO LERMA No. 31
COL. CUAUHTEMOC

06500 MEXICO, D.F.

TELS. 5566-96-88
5703-12-12

FAX 5566-91-94
5592-34-47

Hello Ray! Written to you your Angelina. Ray, we are have here very time, work. I'm thinking a lot about my plans. In Mexico I'm meeting many people on model business and dancing.
We are have a lot of pictures (foto) in
many beautiful places in Mexico, in Acapulco. To me and other girls give some job (model). I'm thinking to much about stay in Mexico. You know, that
I need on the money - to by the flat
my mother. Only I may help myself.
After back from Mexico I want to stay and work in Moscow, so, I thinking and have advice - stay in Mexico 2-3 month and make money. I'm don't know how many time exactly. I hope, that you understand me, my situation.
I'm sorry Ray, but I must.

I know, you miss on me, I'm to,
but it life. I don't know have we are possible to meet again...
But I'm thank you to much, a lot

July 2000

Post Card to

Valodya 2

4 Kisses

July 2000 Postcard to Valdimir 2 from St. Petersburg who sells jewelry with whom she had an affair in Krasnodar in June 2000, pp 44, 45 Diary Certified Translation

Translation

Good luck, peace, love and all the kindness to you.

Hello Valodya,

This is Angelina. How are you? I am okay. It was really difficult to come here. It turns out that my boss found out information about me from MVD and FSB. And now he watches me. I began to work. It is interesting. I like it a lot. I work about eight hours a day. (I dance.) It is interesting to meet new people, to learn about different places.

I think a lot about you and I miss you and it was great that we could understand each other. Do me a huge, huge favor, please, don't tell anybody, anybody, that I am here—no way. Only my mum knows about it and now you.

I kiss you, I embrace you, I miss you.

[Four kisses are plastered on the card.]

July 2000
Post Card to Valodya 2

Russia
Россия 197-183
~~Луга~~ Санкт-Петербург
ул. Дубыновская 37 кб 521
Брагинский

From
Angelina

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME Angelina
WEEK 7/17

MONDAY	          	TIME
TUESDAY	✓	TIME
WEDNESDAY	✓	TIME
THURSDAY	✓	TIME
FRIDAY	✓	TIME
SATURDAY	✓	TIME
SUNDAY	✓	TIME

WEEK                     

MONDAY	          	TIME
TUESDAY	          	TIME
WEDNESDAY	          	TIME
THURSDAY	          	TIME
FRIDAY	          	TIME
SATURDAY	          	TIME
SUNDAY	          	TIME

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME Angelina
WEEK 2/4 24

MONDAY	          	TIME
TUESDAY	          	TIME
WEDNESDAY	          	TIME
THURSDAY	✗	TIME
FRIDAY	          	TIME
SATURDAY	✓	TIME
SUNDAY	          	TIME

WEEK 31

MONDAY	          	TIME
TUESDAY	          	TIME
WEDNESDAY	          	TIME
THURSDAY	          	TIME
FRIDAY	          	TIME
SATURDAY	          	TIME
SUNDAY	          	TIME

(212) 315 5107

FLASH DANCER'S

NAME

WEEK

MONDAY

TIME

TUESDAY

TIME

WEDNESDAY

TIME

THURSDAY

TIME

FRIDAY

TIME

SATURDAY

TIME

SUNDAY

TIME

WEEK

MONDAY

TIME

TUESDAY

TIME

WEDNESDAY

TIME

THURSDAY

TIME

FRIDAY

TIME

SATURDAY

TIME

SUNDAY

TIME

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME

Angelina

WEEK

0 CT16

MONDAY

TIME

X TUESDAY

TIME

X WEDNESDAY

TIME

THURSDAY

TIME

FRIDAY

TIME

SATURDAY

TIME

SUNDAY

TIME

WEEK

23

MONDAY

TIME

TUESDAY

TIME

WEDNESDAY

TIME

THURSDAY

TIME

FRIDAY

TIME

SATURDAY

TIME

SUNDAY

TIME

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME Angelina
WEEK @ CT 30

MONDAY	_____	TIME
TUESDAY	_____	TIME
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME
THURSDAY	_____	TIME
FRIDAY	_____	TIME
SATURDAY	_____	TIME
SUNDAY	_____	TIME

WEEK 64

MONDAY	_____	TIME
TUESDAY	_____	TIME
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME
THURSDAY	_____	TIME
FRIDAY	_____	TIME
SATURDAY	_____	TIME
SUNDAY	_____	TIME

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME ANGELINA

WEEK NOV-13

MONDAY	_____	TIME _____
TUESDAY	_____	TIME _____
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME _____
THURSDAY	_____	TIME _____
FRIDAY	_____	TIME _____
SATURDAY	_____	TIME _____
SUNDAY	_____	TIME _____

WEEK 20

MONDAY	_____	TIME _____
TUESDAY	_____	TIME _____
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME _____
THURSDAY	_____	TIME _____
FRIDAY	_____	TIME _____
SATURDAY	_____	TIME _____
SUNDAY	_____	TIME _____

FLASH DANCER'S (212) 315 5107

NAME Angelina
WEEK Nov-27

MONDAY	_____	TIME
TUESDAY	_____	TIME
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME
THURSDAY	_____	TIME
FRIDAY	✓	TIME
SATURDAY	_____	TIME
SUNDAY	_____	TIME

WEEK Dec

MONDAY	_____	TIME
TUESDAY	_____	TIME
WEDNESDAY	_____	TIME
THURSDAY	_____	TIME
FRIDAY	✓	TIME
SATURDAY	_____	TIME
SUNDAY	✓	TIME

Alina Alexandrovna Shipillina's Work Record at Flash Dancers for 2000

Ms. Shipilina worked everyday without an "Off". Days without figures mean amounts she earned on those days are unknown.

Date	Day	Profit Dollars	Gross Dollars	Dances
16-Jul	Sun	400	540	27
17-Jul	Mon	540	680	34
18-Jul	Tu	520	660	33
19-Jul	Wed	650	790	39
20-Jul	Th	400	540	27
21-Jul	Fri	610	750	38
22-Jul	Sat	660	800	40
23-Jul	Sun	250	390	20
24-Jul	Mon	510	650	33
25-Jul	Tu	680	820	41
26-Jul	Wed	640	780	39
27-Jul	Th	Off
28-Jul	Fri	550	690	34
29-Jul	Sat
30-Jul	Sun
31-Jul	Mon	Off
1-Aug	Tu
2-Aug	Wed	500	640	32
3-Aug	Th	410	550	27
4-Aug	Fri	760	900	45
5-Aug	Sat	400	540	27
6-Aug	Sun	Off
7-Aug	Mon	100	240	12
8-Aug	Tu	280	420	21
9-Aug	Wed	300	440	22
10-Aug	Th
11-Aug	Fri
12-Aug	Sat
13-Aug	Sun
14-Aug	Mon	760	900	45
15-Aug	Tu	760	900	45
16-Aug	Wed	Off
17-Aug	Th	Off
18-Aug	Fri
19-Aug	Sat	500	640	32
20-Aug	Sun
21-Aug	Mon	760	900	45
22-Aug	Tu	500	640	32
23-Aug	Wed	Off
24-Aug	Th	690	830	41
25-Aug	Fri	510	650	32
26-Aug	Sat	610	750	37
27-Aug	Sun	300	440	22
28-Aug	Mon	Off
29-Aug	Tu	520	660	33

30-Aug Wed		550	690	34
31-Aug Th		660	800	40
1-Sep Fri		500	640	32
2-Sep Sat	Off
3-Sep Sun		360	500	25
4-Sep Mon		60	200	10
5-Sep Tu
6-Sep Wed	Off
9-Sep to 9/29	Vacation
9-Oct Mon
10-Oct Tu
11-Oct Wed
12-Oct Th
13-Oct Fri
14-Oct Sat
15-Oct Sun	Off
16-Oct Mon
17-Oct Tu	Off
18-Oct Wed	Off
19-Oct Th		620	760	38
20-Oct Fri		560	700	35
21-Oct Sat		500	640	32
22-Oct Sun		550	690	34
23-Oct Mon
24-Oct Tu	Off
25-Oct Wed		590	730	36
26-Oct Th	Off
27-Oct Fri		550	690	34
28-Oct Sat
29-Oct Sun
30-Oct Mon	Off
31-Oct Tu		400	540	27
1-Nov Wed	Off
2-Nov Th
3-Nov Fri
4-Nov Sat	Off
5-Nov Sun
6-Nov Mon
7-Nov Tu
8-Nov Wed
9-Nov Th	Off
10-Nov Fri	Off
11-Nov Sat	Off
12-Nov Sun
13-Nov Mon	Off
14-Nov Tu
15-Nov Wed
16-Nov Th	Off
17-Nov Fri
18-Nov Sat
19-Nov Sun

Mon	Off
21-Nov Tu
22-Nov Wed
23-Nov Th
24-Nov Fri
25-Nov Sat	Off
26-Nov Sun
27-Nov Mon	Off
28-Nov Tu
29-Nov Wed
30-Nov Th
1-Dec Fri
2-Dec Sat	Off
3-Dec Sun
4-Dec Mon
5-Dec Tu
6-Dec Wed	Off
7-Dec Th
8-Dec Fri
9-Dec Sat	Off
10-Dec Sun
12/11 to 12/23	Probably worked 10 days
12/24 to 1/18/01	Off	Vacation in Russia
Total for Sample	20,890	26,350
Average Daily Net	$535
Average Daily Gross	$675

HOME | Members | Gear | Strippers | Articles | FAQ's | Contact

POWER HOUSE
 "Open Dates"

Tuesday April 30, 2002

Search Stripper Power

Club Reviews by Dancers

New York/New Jersey

Designed on January 25, 2001

Club	Address	Type of club	Take Home	StageFees/Payout	Phone Number	Comments
Blue Moon	588 Route 9 W North Newburgh, NY		$300		(914) 561- 6060
Flashdancers	1674 Broadway New York, NY	topless	$500	$150 per 1/2 hour champagne room, $100 tipout	(212) 977- 8160	very cutthroat atmosphere, money can be fantastic or terrible, very little contact allowed, some high rollers, only hires 9s and 10s and treats all dancers like meat too. Classy features.
Goldfingers	92-72 Queens Blvd. Forest Hills, NY	topless	$400	$20 laps, VIP laps $20/20 min, tip outs at least $15 DJ/ $21 House Mom	(718) 896- 4676	was shut down a couple times, dancing area is small because of zoning laws, neighborhood bar and the manager gets drunk and acts like a dick. There's no fines so if you come late or no show all the time, unless you're a big moneymaker, they'll probably get fed-up and fire you.

Legz Diamonds	231 W. 54th St. New York, NY	nude	$500	$150 per 1/2 hour private dances, tipout $50	(212) 977- 3200	tense atmosphere, good money if you don't mind grinding and hands-on (like $800), will hire 7s and 8s and treats all dancers like meat. Sleazy features. You have to split 50% of what you make
Paradise	50 W 33 St. New York, NY	nude	$800	$150 per 1/2 hour private dances, tipout $50	(212) 629- 0060	in the heart of mid town, very upscale club, limos crowd, fantasy rooms, booths, and S&M room
Pleasure Island	78 Route 59 Monsey, NY	nude	$1000	Minimum tipout	(914) 425- 6203	name your own price private dances, grinding and heavy hands- on. will hire 7s and 8s, management and dancers have real 'tudes!
Scores	333 East 60th St. NY 10021	topless	$1000		(212) 421- 6977
Stiletto	180 Route 59 West Nanuet, NY				(914) 624- 6900
Wiggles	96-24 Queens Blvd. Queens, NY	nude	$300	$20/lap min tipout $25	(718) 897- 4606	some contact allowed, friendly atmosphere decent money, will hire 7s and 8s and treats 10s like gold.

Michael
Director of Investigations
TACTICS Private Investigators ©

View Interaction History

Your Next Step (see options below)

► View Invoice

An invoice has arrived. It's time to pay and rate this Expert.

View Invoice

! Note: If you do not choose to view and pay, we will charge your credit card two weeks from the date of invoice.

Interaction History

From: TACTICS Private Investigations

Date: JUL 31 2000 10:31

We were unable to gain the complete account information on this number but our effort did reflect a mailing address:

P.O. Box 8643
Brooklyn, NY 11217

This is either a pager or cellular telephone which is being "pre-paid" and not displayed on normal telephone billings systems. Our office is experiencing an increased number of these type of accounts where cellular and paging services are allowing people to use pre-paid calling cards or pay on the account upfront, thereby not requiring the standard identification information such as: credit checks, name, birth date, "real" addresses, or social security number.

Now we made several attempts to contact this person as well and received numerous call backs but they never would leave a message or identify who they are. It is our opinion this person is most certainly "hiding" something but it is unclear as to the reasons for doing so. If there is a possibility anyone in your home could be involved with illegal gambling (bookie), drugs, or other unlawful activities, that would explain the secrecy involved here. If this persists, consider the following:

1. Contact your local police department and file a complaint for telephone harrassment. Make sure to get a case number.
2. Contact your local telephone service and ask for them to place a "trap" on your line for a couple of weeks or so. They will most likely need the police case number to do this.
3. During the following couple of weeks, keep detailed notes on exactly when this person calls you or shows up on your caller ID. (By the way, if you don't have caller ID get it) The telephone company will need the times of those calls so they can try to trace them back through their system to find a point of origin. Once in place, call the number and see if this person will call you back.

If there are other family members who "could" be involved in the illegal activities identified above, you need to sit down and ask them about it. Having a bookie, drug dealer, or whatever, contacting your home is not a good idea for the safety of the family. There is also the possibility the communications could be for other reasons or have begun through contacts over the Internet such as a "relationship" being developed or efforts by someone to speak with children in the home. Anyway, really evaluate these possibilities and try to get everyone there to be completely open and honest with you. Someone at your home, using your telephone, has some idea about this person otherwise there would be no reason for several calls to have been generated to this number. I would also start monitoring any computer activity inside the home as this could also present "clues" as to what has been happening.

I have only billed you for the exact cost to our company for the search because we were unable to fully develop the account information as first anticipated. I do hope it has been useful and that you will follow

Take care and thank you for using Exp.com!

Michael
Director of Investigations
TACTICS Private Investigators ©

From: rdhhh

Date: JUL 31 2000 09:41

1. The number was called a number of times from my home telephone.
2. The person at the number has not contacted me.
3. I called the number and spoke to a gentleman who would not give me his name.
4. No

From: TACTICS Private Investigations

Date: JUL 30 2000 20:02

We have some information but need for you to respond to a few questions first:

1. When was the first time you received a call from this number?
2. How often have they contacted you?
3. Have you ever spoken with an "actual" person or always reach a voice mail system?
4. Do you have any really important creditors that could be trying to collect a bill?

Thanks and look forward to hearing back from you.

M.

From: TACTICS Private Investigations

Date: JUL 25 2000 21:43

So far that has checked out to be a cellular telephone number out of Brooklyn, New York. Give us a day or so to see what we can dig up. Take care.

From: rdhhh

Date: JUL 25 2000 20:53

I agree to the proposed price. Please go ahead and determine the listing for (917) 302-5742

From: TACTICS Private Investigations

Date: JUL 23 2000 17:39

Before you pay for us to do this, try a very comprehensive search over the Internet using a free software program at:

<http://www.copernic.com>

We have found that if you search under the phone number like this (917) 302-5742 it just might turn something up. Our investigators have found a few this way when other methods do not work. If that is not productive, we can conduct an effort to locate the owner of that number for the flat fee below. May take a few days but we have pretty successful results.

Various Photos of Angelina and Roy
(Approximate Chronological Order)

1. Се убо
 2. Се убо
 3. Се убо
 4. Се убо
 5. Се убо
 6. Се убо
 7. Се убо
 8. Се убо
 9. Се убо
 10. Се убо
 11. Се убо
 12. Се убо
 13. Се убо
 14. Се убо
 15. Се убо
 16. Се убо
 17. Се убо
 18. Се убо
 19. Се убо
 20. Се убо
 21. Се убо
 22. Се убо
 23. Се убо
 24. Се убо
 25. Се убо
 26. Се убо
 27. Се убо
 28. Се убо
 29. Се убо
 30. Се убо
 31. Се убо
 32. Се убо
 33. Се убо
 34. Се убо
 35. Се убо
 36. Се убо
 37. Се убо
 38. Се убо
 39. Се убо
 40. Се убо
 41. Се убо
 42. Се убо
 43. Се убо
 44. Се убо
 45. Се убо
 46. Се убо
 47. Се убо
 48. Се убо
 49. Се убо
 50. Се убо
 51. Се убо
 52. Се убо
 53. Се убо
 54. Се убо
 55. Се убо
 56. Се убо
 57. Се убо
 58. Се убо
 59. Се убо
 60. Се убо
 61. Се убо
 62. Се убо
 63. Се убо
 64. Се убо
 65. Се убо
 66. Се убо
 67. Се убо
 68. Се убо
 69. Се убо
 70. Се убо
 71. Се убо
 72. Се убо
 73. Се убо
 74. Се убо
 75. Се убо
 76. Се убо
 77. Се убо
 78. Се убо
 79. Се убо
 80. Се убо
 81. Се убо
 82. Се убо
 83. Се убо
 84. Се убо
 85. Се убо
 86. Се убо
 87. Се убо
 88. Се убо
 89. Се убо
 90. Се убо
 91. Се убо
 92. Се убо
 93. Се убо
 94. Се убо
 95. Се убо
 96. Се убо
 97. Се убо
 98. Се убо
 99. Се убо
 100. Се убо

СПОРТИВНОЙ
РОССИЙСКОЙ
МОДЫ

СЕГОДНЯ
НЕТ!!!

— Шаюг ли спортсмены у те-бя сейчас, интересно ли тебе это?

— Что общего существует между спортом и модой?

— Что нужно для того, чтоб Татьяна Васильевна сегодня начала проектировать и выпускать спортивную одежду?

— Известно, что в 90-е годы убежденно в том, что для выпуск сделаны для бонного опыта и не
в стране под разными формами

— Ты не пытайся стать лидером в области спортивной моды!

Source: U.S. National Science Foundation, Science and Engineering Indicators, 2000.

pho
des PHOTOGRAPHY DESIGN

PHODES STUDIO CO.
Advertising Photo Studio
Printing & Publishing Service
Modeling Agency

Leonid Perlin
director

Denisa Davydova st. 7
Moscow, Russia,
121293

Tel. (095) 148-3323 (3-8pm)
Fax. (093) 148-4429 (24h)
E-MAIL: perlin@online.ru

Height: 5'11"   Bust: 36B   Waist: 27   Hips: 36   Dress: 6-8   Shoe: 11   Hair: Blonde   Eyes: Blue

Grace Del Marco
MODELS FOR PRINT & TELEVISION

EMPIRE STATE BUILDING
350 5TH AVENUE, SUITE 2110
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10116-1402
(212) 629-6404 • Fax (212) 629-6403
www.gracedelmarco.com

s a t u r d a y   m a y   6   t h   2 0 0 6

STANDARD SATURDAYS

WITH DJ CEL & GUEST DJ PUMPKIN
HOSTED BY SUPERMODEL
ANGELINA SHIPILINA

$175 BOTTLES OF ABSOLUT ALL NIGHT
OPEN BAR 10 - 11 PM
LADIES FREE UNTIL MIDNIGHT

16 W 22 STREET BTW 5 AND 6 AVE
INFO: 917.939.9511 // 212.229.2000

Affidavits from residents of Krasnodar about Angelina working as a prostitute before she swore to I.N.S. that she didn't.

КОПИЯ 3

В Службу Эмиграции и Натурализации США

Я, _____, имеющая паспорт _____, выданный ПВС УВД Западного округа г.Краснодара 19.05.2000, проживающая по адресу г.Краснодар, ул. _____ кв.2, знала Шинилину Алину Александровну с 1997г. как одну из моделей моей приятельницы Васильевой Анастасии – директора дома моды своей мамы Титыны Васильевой (знакомы с 1993г.). Я посещала все демонстрации показов их коллекций, таким образом, я часто общалась в этом кругу и знала достаточно много информации о каждой модели.

С 1996 по 2001 год я работала в ресторане гостиницы Интурист администратором. Шинилина Алина и ее подруги Лена и Оля часто прогуливались возле гостиницы. Они буквально не давали прохода иностранцам. В ресторан они заходили уже с клиентами или одним клиентом на троих.

По поводу поведения и личной жизни девочек я неоднократно общалась с Анастасией Васильевой, и она не удивлялась происходящему, так как сама много раз видела их с разными мужчинами. Настя говорила: «Им бесполезно делить какие-то замечания по поводу их личной жизни, так как они, а в частности Шинилина Алина, связаны с городским криминальным миром, и мне бы не хотелось столкнуться с ним». Алину часто видели в компании грузина по имени Рей. По словам интуристовских палатных проституток, он был сутенером дешевых уличных девушек с ул.Красной.

Когда такие проститутки как Алина, Оля и Лена появлялись сами в ресторанах и барах гостиницы Интурист, их просто выталкивали, выгоняли, иногда с рукоприкладством (местные гостиничные проститутки) на улицу.

Как-то одно время девочки не появлялись возле Интуриста. Ходили слухи, что всех проституток, которые снимаются на улице Красной, забрали на профосмотр в вендиспансер. Как оказалось позже Алина и Надя уехали работать на Кипр в декабре 1998г.

Но как ни странно Надя erschien в Краснодар после двух дней работы.

Когда я пришла в агентство к Насте, я встретила там Надю, и она рассказала о том, что работа связана с проституцией, и что Алина согласилась на такую работу.

Вскоре я узнала, что Алина Шинилина познакомилась с американцем по имени Рей и собирается выйти за него замуж. В марте 2000г. они зарегистрировали брак. Но Алина сразу не уехала с ним, а осталась в Краснодаре. Приблизительно полгода она еще находилась в городе и естественно она с разными мужчинами заходила в Интурист, то есть продолжала будучи замужем оказывать интимные услуги за деньги.

Зная, что Алина и ее мать Инесса связаны с криминальными структурами, прошу хранить тайну свидетельских показаний.

ПОДПИСЬ: _____

г. Краснодар, двадцать второе апреля, две тысячи второго года.

Я, Морозов Д.Ю., интариус г.Краснодара, РФ, свидетельствую подлинность подписи лично явившейся ко мне Закуцкой Елены Вячеславовны, известной мне как лицо, указанное в настоящем документе, подписавшее его в моем присутствии и надлежащим образом подтверждающее оформление настоящего документа.

Зарегистрировано в реестре под № 4139.

Получено ст.22 Основ.

Интариус. _____

«Копия»

To the US Immigration and Naturalization Service

Me, _____, holder of the passport issued by PVS of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Western District of the City of Krasnodar on May 19, 2000, living to the address. City of Krasnodar, _____ st. 36, apt. 2, have been acquainted with Shipilina Alina Alexandrovna since 1997. That time she was one of the photomodels of my friend Anastasiya Vasilyeva – director of the Fashion House belonging to her mother Tatyana Vasilyeva (we are acquainted since 1993). I attended all presentations of their collections, so I frequently communicated in this circle and knew a lot about each of the models.

From 1996 to 2001 I held worked as the manager of the Intourist hotel restaurant. Alina Shipilina and her girlfriends Lena and Olga have frequently walked near the hotel. They literally pursued foreigners. They went to the restaurant already with the clients or one client for the three of them.

I talked a few times with Anastasiya Vasilyeva on the behavior and personal life of the girls, and she was not surprised to hear me, because she herself had many times seen these girls with different men. Anastasiya said: "It is useless to speak to them about their personal life, because they, and Shipilina Alina in particular, are linked to the city criminal world, and I would not like to confront them". Alina was frequently seen in the company of the Georgian man called Rey. According to the currency prostitutes who worked in the Intourist hotel, he was the ponce of the cheap street girls from Krasnaya street.

When such prostitutes as Alina, Olga and Lena came by themselves in the restaurants and bars of the Intourist hotel, local hotel prostitutes simply pushed them out in the street, sometimes with blows.

For some time the girls did not appear near the Intourist hotel. There were rumors that all prostitutes which worked in the Krasnaya street were taken for professional medical examination to the venerologic prophylactic centre. As it turned out later Alina and Nadya leaved in December 1998 to work in Cyprus.

But strangely enough Nadya has returned to Krasnodar after two days of work.

When I came to Anastasiya's agency, I have met there Nadya, and she has told me that the work was connected with prostitution, and that Alina had agreed to such work.

Soon I have learned that Alina Shipilina has acquainted with an American called Roy and that she was going to marry him. In March 2000 they have registered their marriage. But Alina did not go with him at once, but has stayed in Krasnodar. She stayed in the city for approximately half-year and naturally she came with different men to the Intourist, that is, she continued to render sexual services for money.

Knowing that Alina and her mother Inessa are connected with criminals, I ask you to keep the secrecy of testimony.

SIGNATURE: [Signature] _____

City of Krasnodar, the Twenty Second of April of the Year Two Thousand and Second.

Me, Morozov D.Yu., the notary of the City of Krasnodar, witness the authenticity of the signature of Zakoutskaya Elena Vyacheslavovna, known to me as the person indicated in the present document, who signed it in my presence and who had properly confirmed drawing up of the present document.

Included in the Register under № 4139

Collected – Article 22 of the Basics.

Notary [Signature]

[Impress of the seal of the notary Morozov Dmitry Yuryevich]

APOSTILLE

(Convention de La Haye du 5 octobre 1961)

1. Russian Federation

This public document has been signed by

2. Morozov D.Y. 3. acting in the capacity of: notary public of the city of Krasnodar

4. bears the seal/stamp of the notary public Morozov D.Y.

Certified

5. in the city of Krasnodar 6. On April 23, 2002

7. by Shevtsova I.P., Leading Specialist on Notary Services of the Main Administration of Justice

8. No 601 9. Seal/Stamp [Impress of the seal of the Main Administration of the Ministry of

Justice of the Russian Federation for Krasnodar Area]

10. Signature: [Signature]

Морозов Д.Ю.  Сем. ред. А.Д. 20.04.02

ма. Двадцать третьего мая две тысячи второго года. Я, Москаленко Игорь Викторович, нотариус Пушкинского района Московской области, свидетельствую подлинность подписи, сделанной переводчиком Сеничевым Аркадием Олеговичем.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 2-100

Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Нотариус

Москаленко И.В.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью
2 (два) листа

Нотариус

Москаленко И.В.

но

23 МАЯ 2002 Я, Москаленко И.В., нотариус Пушкинского р-на Моск. обл.,
свидетельствую достоверность этой копии подлинным документа, в последнем подписок, присписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных
неожелательных исправлений или
записей либо особенностей не обнаружено.
Подлинность копии и оригинала № 2-100
подтверждено по тарифу 5 руб. 00 коп.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью
2 (два) листа

КОПИЯ

В Службу Эмиграции и Натурализации США

Я, _____, имеющая паспорт выданный УВД Восточного округа г.Новороссийска Краснодарского края
 03.11.1998г., проживающая по адресу: Краснодарский край, г.Новороссийск, 3, з/но Шипилину Алину Александровну с 1998г. Я записалась на подготовительные курсы в Кубанский Государственный Университет. Во время учебы я посещала шейпинг и степ в клубе «Алинта». Там занимались манекенщицы Анастасия Васильева: Наташа и Катя, подруги Алины. Тогда я узнала о том, что Алина общается с иностранцами, зарабатывая, таким образом, деньги, оказывая услуги интимного характера. Тарифы были известны не только лицам, оказывающим услуги, но и лицам общающимся с ней. Они несколько раз выезжали на Кипр по работе в клуб «Зигос». В декабре 1998 – январе 1999 года Алина выезжала на Кипр. Ее подруга Надя после двух дней работы вернулась в Краснодар, так как поняла что работа связана с проституцией.
 Было время, когда Алина была связана с краснодарским студентом, грузином Роем. Он имел Алину в числе поставляемых девушек. Затем, познакомившись с американцем Роем, вышла за него замуж, весной 2000г., но после свадьбы осталась в Краснодаре продолжать дело. Алина появлялась во многих местах города, то есть, будучи замужем все также занималась проституцией.

Так как со стороны Алины на меня может быть оказано давление (она рассказывала о своих связях с криминальными структурами), прошу хранить тайну свидетельских показаний.

ПОДПИСЬ:

Г. Краснодар, восемнадцатое апреля две тысячи второго года.

Я, Морозов Д.Ю., нотариус г.Краснодара, РФ, свидетельствую подлинность подписи лично явившейся ко мне Лофицкой Викторин Владимировны, известной мне как лицо, указанное в настоящем документе, подписавшее его в моем присутствии и надлежащим образом подтвердившее оформление настоящего документа.

Зарегистрировано в реестре под №3957.

Взыскано ст.22 Основ.

Нотариус.

To the US Immigration and Naturalization Service

I, _____ holder of the passport issued by the Branch of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for the Eastern District of City of Novorossisk, Krasnodar Territory, on November 03, 1998, living to the address: Krasnodar territory, City of Novorossisk, _____, know Shipilina Alina Alexandrovna since 1998. I attended preparatory courses to enter Kuban State University. During study I visited shaping and step sections of "Anita" club. There trained the models of Anastasiya Vasilyeva: Natasha and Katya, Alina's girlfriends. Then I learned that Alina had contacts with foreigners, thus earning money by rendering sexual services. The tariffs were known not only to the persons who rendered the services, but as well to other persons who communicated with her. They went a few times to Cyprus to work in the "Zigos" club. In December 1998 - January 1999 Alina left to Cyprus. Her girlfriend Nadya has returned to Krasnodar after two days of work, because she understood that the work was connected with prostitution. There was a time when Alina was communicated with a Krasnodar student, Georgian man Rey. He had Alina among his delivered girls. Then, having acquainted with the American named Roy, she married him in the spring of 2000, but after marriage she stayed in Krasnodar to continue her business. Alina appeared in many parts of the city, that is, being married she continued to be engaged in prostitution.

As Alina may put pressure upon me (she said about her connections with criminal structures), I ask you to keep the secrecy of testimony.

SIGNATURE: _____ [signature]

City of Krasnodar, the Eighteenth of April of the Year Two Thousand and Second.

Me, Morozov D.Yu., the notary of the City of Krasnodar, witness the authenticity of the signature of Lofitskaya Victoria Vladimirovna, known to me as the person indicated in the present document, who signed it in my presence and who had properly confirmed drawing up of the present document.

Included in the Register under № 3957

Collected - Article 22 of the Basics.

Notary [Signature]

[Impress of the seal of the notary Morozov Dmitry Yuryevich]

APOSTILLE

(Convention de La Haye du 5 octobre 1961)

1. Russian Federation

This public document has been signed by

2. Morozov D.Y. 3. acting in the capacity of: notary public of the city of Krasnodar

4. bears the seal/stamp of the notary public Morozov D.Y.

Certified

5. in the city of Krasnodar 6. On April 23, 2002

7. by Shevtsova I.P., Leading Specialist on Notary Services of the Main Administration of Justice

8. No 602 9. Seal/Stamp [Impress of the seal of the Main Administration of the Ministry of

Justice of the Russian Federation for Krasnodar Area]

10. Signature: [Signature]

Shevtsova I.P.

ПОДПИСЬ

Семцов Д.Ю.

20.04.02

ма. Двадцать третьего мая две тысячи второго года. Я, Москаленко Игорь Викторович, нотариус Пушкинского района Московской области, свидетельствую подлинность подписи, сделанной переводчиком Сеничевым Аркадием Олеговичем.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 8-1022

Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Нотариус ПОДПИСЬ Москаленко И.В.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью
2 (два) листа

Нотариус ПОДПИСЬ Москаленко И.В.

на

23 МАЯ 2002 г. Я, Москаленко И.В.,
нотариус Пушкинского р-на Моск. обл.,
свидетельствую верность этой копии с подлинным
документа, в последнем подчисток,
приписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных
неожелательных исправлений или каких-либо особенностей не отмечено.
Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 8-1022
Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью 2 (два) листа
Нотариус ПОДПИСЬ

КОПИЯ

В Службу Эмиграции и Натурализации США

Я, _____ 06.70 г.р., имеющая паспорт выданный ПВС УВД Прикубанского округа г.Краснодара 09.11.2001г., проживающая по адресу: г. Краснодар, ул. _____, жилая Шипилину Алина Александровну с сентября 1996г. Она пришла ко мне в школу №37, где я работала заместителем директора по воспитательной работе, с предложением вести кружок занятий аэробикой с девочками старших классов. Узнав о ее образовании (Институт физкультуры, сейчас Академия физической культуры), я согласилась помочь набрать ей группу. После этого мы сдружились, Алина познакомила меня со своими подругами – манекенщицами. Ну а так как все тайное становится явным, то очень скоро я узнала, что Алина, а также Лена и Оля (ее близкие подруги) занимаются проституцией.

Мы бывали у Алины в поселке Яблоновский, где она проживала с матерью.
После нескольких предложений Алины о том, чтобы я оказывала услуги интимного характера за деньги, я охладела к встречам с такими подругами, но часто в городе видела то Алину с Леной, то Наташу, то Катю поздно вечером в кругу мужчин. Алина имела долгое близкие отношения с грузином, которого они мне представляли как Рес.
Какое-то время я не жила в г. Краснодаре, а по приезде в 1999г. узнала, что Алина уехала на Кипр зарабатывать деньги. Наталья мне также сказала, что Алина собиралась на мне и моих учениках зарабатывать проценты, если бы мы тоже согласились зарабатывать проституцией как все девочки. Особенно высока была такса за работу в
«стрип» как Алина, Лена и Оля. Наталья рассказала мне, что Алина ездила на Кипр с
Надей, но Надя скоро вернулась. Мне стало интересно, что и как на Кипре. Я позвонила Наде, и мы встретились. Периодически встречались в кафе, чтобы отдохнуть. Так я узнала, что Алина познакомилась с американцем и собирается замуж. В марте 2000 года была свадьба. Я думала, что Алина с Роем (супруг) уехали, но в августе-сентябре еще видела Алину на «старых местах работы» - возле гостиницы Интурист и Кавказ.
Надя и Наталья подтверждали при встрече, что она еще не уехала и продолжает зарабатывать деньги проституцией. Это было несудивительно: с внешними данными Алины и ее моральным обликом вести нормальную трудовую деятельность невозможно.

Зная о связи Алины и ее матери с криминальным миром (девочки рассказывали об угрозах и насилии с ее стороны от Рес – сутенера - и его друзей), прошу хранить тайну свидетельских показаний.

ПОДПИСЬ: _____

г. Краснодар, восемнадцатое апреля две тысячи второго года.

Я, Морозов Д.Ю., нотариус г. Краснодара, РФ, свидетельствую подлинность подписи лично явившейся ко мне Решульской Ларисы Ильиничны, известной мне как лицо, указанное в настоящем документе, подписавшее его в моем присутствии и подлежащим образом подтверждающее оформление настоящего документа.

Зарегистрировано в реестре под №3958.

Взыскано ст.22 Основ.

Нотариус

_____

To the US Immigration and Naturalization Service

Me, _____, 5, 1970, holder of the _____ I issued by PVS of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Prikoubansky District of the City of Krasnodar on November 09, 2001, living to the address: Krasnodar, _____, I, hostel, know Shipilina Alina since September 1996. She has come to me to the school No 37, where I worked as the deputy director on pedagogical work and proposed to establish a circle of aerobics with the girls of senior classes. Having learned about her education (the Institute of Physical Culture, now the Academy of Physical Culture), I have agreed to help in collecting a group to her. After we got friends, she introduced me to her model girlfriends. Time reveals secrets, and I have learned very soon that Alina and as well Lena and Olga (her close girlfriends) are engaged in prostitution.

We visited the village of Yablonovsky, where she lived with the mother. After a few Alina's proposals to me to render sexual services for money, I have cooled to meet such girlfriends, but frequently saw sometimes Alina and Lena, sometimes Natasha, sometimes Katya late in evening in city in the men's company. Alina had long close relations with a Georgian, whom they have introduced to me as Rey. I did not live in Krasnodar for some time, and on arrival in 1999 I learned that Alina had left to Cyprus to earn money. Natalya as well told me, that Alina was going to earn percents on me and my schoolgirls if we as well had agreed to earn by prostitution like all the girls. The highest rate was paid for work in "trio" – Alina, Lena and Olga. Natalya has told me, that Alina went to Cyprus with Nadezhda, but Nadezhda soon came back. It was interesting to me to learn how were things in Cyprus. I have called Nadezhda and we met. We periodically met in cafe to have a rest. So I have learned that Alina has acquainted with an American and was going to marry. In March 2000 they have married. I thought, that Alina and Roy (her spouse) have left, but in I still saw her in August – September in the "old workplaces" near the Intourist and Kavkaz hotels. Nadezhda and Natalya have confirmed in the conversation that she has not left yet and continues to earn money by prostitution. It was no wonder: having Alina's appearance and her morals it is impossible to conduct normal labour activity.

Knowing that Alina and her mother are connected with the criminal world (the girls told me on threats and violence from her side from Rey – the ponce – and his friends), I ask you to keep the secrecy of testimony.

SIGNATURE: _____

City of Krasnodar, the Eighteenth of April of the Year Two Thousand and Second.

Me, Morozov D.Yu., the notary of the City of Krasnodar, witness the authenticity of the signature of Reshouskaya Larisa Ilyinichna, known to me as the person indicated in the present document, who signed it in my presence and who had properly confirmed drawing up of the present document.

Included in the Register under № 3958

Collected – Article 22 of the Basics.

Notary [Signature]

[Impress of the seal of the notary Morozov Dmitry Yuryevich]

APOSTILLE

(Convention de La Haye du 5 octobre 1961)

1. Russian Federation

This public document has been signed by

2. Morozov D.Y. 3. acting in the capacity of: notary public of the city of Krasnodar

4. bears the seal/stamp of the notary public Morozov D.Y.

Certified

5. in the city of Krasnodar 6. On April 23, 2002

7. by Shevtsova I.P., Leading Specialist on Notary Services of the Main Administration of Justice

8. No 603 9. Seal/Stamp [Impress of the seal of the Main Administration of the Ministry of

Justice of the Russian Federation for Krasnodar Area]

10. Signature: [Signature]

Подпись

ПОДПИСЬ

Семед А.О.
Григор

ма. Двадцать третьего мая две тысячи второго года. Я, Москаленко Игорь Викторович, нотариус Пушкинского района Московской области, свидетельствую подлинность подписи, сделанной переводчиком Сеничевым Аркадием Олеговичем.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 8-1024

Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Нотариус Москаленко И.В.

ГЕРБОВАЯ ПЕЧАТЬ
Нотариуса
выдавшего документ

ПОДПИСЬ

ГЕРБОВАЯ ПЕЧАТЬ
Нотариуса
выдавшего О.А.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью
2 (два) листа

Нотариус

ПОДПИСЬ

Москаленко И.В.

на

23 МАЯ 2002 г. Я, Москаленко И.В., нотариус Пушкинского района Моск. обл., свидетельствую достоверность копии и подлинность документа, в подлинном подчисток,
приписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных
необорудованных исправлений или каких-либо особенностей на основании свидетельствовано в реестре за № 8-1024
Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.
Нотариус

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и скреплено
мастичной печатью
2 (два) листа

United Mexican States
Federal District
City of Mexico
Embassy of the United States of America

incomer
internacional

AFFIDAVIT

March 5th, 2002.

I, Luis Fernando Molina Pérez, a citizen of México, Mexican passport number 98330018775, speaking under oath, hereby depose and say as follows:

1. I am the Director of Incomer Internacional, S.A. a Mexican firm that specializes in private investigations and security advisors and Area Governor for Mexico in Mexico City, Mexico, Central and South America, for the World Association of Detectives; which has operated since 1948 as Incomer, S.A. and since 1973 as Incomer Internacional, S.A.
2. The Men's Club Mexico City, located in Varsovia No. 54, Col. Juárez, in Mexico City, telephone number 55-33-22-24 is owned by organized crime and the women who have worked in the club since its establishment perform lap dances and engage in prostitution with their customers.
3. Our firm's investigations contacts with law enforcement agencies and knowledgeable inside sources have provided us with reliable information

Investigación privada a su servicio desde 1948

Empresa 186-302 Esq. Insurgentes Sur, Col. Extremadura Insurgentes, 03740 México D.F.
Tels. (+52) 5598 8800, 5598 8898, 5563 7081, Fax (+52) 5563 6849
www.incomer.com.mx

incomer
internacional

on the wide spread prostitution that the clubs lap dancers are famous for through out Mexico.

Luis Fernando Molina Pérez
Director
Incomer Internacional, S.A.

World Association of Detectives Area Governor World Investigators Network Area Governor

Member of:

- Council of International Investigators
- Investigators of America
- National Association of Investigative Specialists
- National Association of Professional Process Servers

SUBSCRIBED AND SWORN TO BEFORE ME THIS _____
DAY OF _____ 20 _____ MAR 0 6 2002

David C. Schroeder
Vice Consul

PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSIONS ARE PERMANENT
Investigación privada a su servicio desde 1948

Empresa 186-302 Esq. Insurgentes Sur, Col. Extremadura Insurgentes, 03740 México D.F.
Tels. (+52) 5598 8800, 5598 8898, 5563 7081, Fax (+52) 5563 6849
www.incomer.com.mx

КОН. 11.12

ПОСТАНОВЛЕНИЕ
о возбуждении уголовного дела

КОПИЯ

г. Краснодар

25.01.2002г.

Прокурор Центрального административного округа г. Краснодара старший советник юстиции Б.К. Овдиенко, рассмотрев материалы проверки № 99вх-02, от 16.01.2002г. по обращению адвоката Повалий С.А. в интересах Роя Дена Холлэндера на действия Шипилиной И.А.

УСТАНОВИЛ:

Рой Ден Холлэндер, являясь гражданином Соединенных Штатов Америки, по служебным делам в период 1999-2000г.г. неоднократно приезжал в Россию, где познакомился с жительницей г. Краснодара Шипилиной Алиной, с которой впоследствии в загсе г. Краснодара они заключили брак.

После отъезда из г. Краснодара в США, Рой Холлэндер обнаружил дневник Шипилиной А., заполненный ею собственноручно. Из текста дневника следовало, что Шипилина А., как до знакомства с Холлэндером, так и после занималась проституцией.

Решив выяснить все обстоятельства вскрывшегося факта, Холлэндер в 2001г. прибыл в г. Краснодар с целью опроса знакомых Алины.

В это же время, мать Алины – Шипилина Инесса Александровна, имея своей целью опорочить и оклеветать мужа Алины – Роя Дена Холлэндера, стала намерено встречаться с людьми, которые в г. Краснодаре общались, контактировали с Холлэндером, знали его лично в течение какого-то времени. При общении с этими людьми, Шипилина И.А. умышленно распространяла заведомо ложную информацию о Холлэндере, в частности говорила о том, что Холлэндер является умственно больным, преступником, что он находится в розыске и его разыскивает полиция. Шипилина И.А. знала, что распространяемые ею сведения являются ложными, т.к. она длительное время общалась с Холлэндером, сам Холлэндер неоднократно выезжал из США в Россию, другие страны, беспрепятственно, не скрываясь, перемещался по территории, как США, так и России, в США имеет постоянное место работы, офис, постоянное место жительства. В Россию приезжал неоднократно в связи со служебной деятельностью, т.е. выполнять все это для него было бы невозможным если бы он был преступником и находился в розыске. Кроме того, в случае если бы Холлэндер являлся сумасшедшим, душевно больным, он бы не мог беспрепятственно путешествовать по миру, выезжать из США, неоднократно посещать различные страны, вести служебную деятельность в России.

Опрошенные в прокуратуре Центрального округа жители г. Краснодара, которым Шипилина И.А. говорила о том, что, якобы, Холлэндер преступник и сумасшедший, поясняли, что они имели свое мнение о Холлэндере, знали его как человека порядочного, доброжелательного, приветливого, не скандального, спокойного и выдержанного и поэтому те сведения, которые сообщала им Шипилина И.А. воспринимали, как клевету на Холлэндера.

Общаясь, по своей инициативе, с женщинами, работавшими у Холлэндера в качестве переводчиков Мартысь Н.Г. и Санчес Н.К., Шипилина И.А. также говорила им о том, что Холлэндер преступник и сумасшедший с целью опорочить его честь и достоинство, а также с целью подрыва его репутации в России. Более того, общаясь с Санчес Н.К. Шипилина И.А. в дополнение к сообщению ей ложных сведений о Холлэндере, высказывала в ее адрес угрозы в случае если она не прекратит работу с Холлэндером.

Кроме распространения среди лиц знавших Холлэндера, как по работе, так и по личным отношениям, заведомо ложных сведений о том, что Холлэндер является преступником и сумасшедшим, Шипилина И.А. говорила им, что он терроризирует ее дочь, женился на ней с целью наживы, имея умысел направить ее в США на работу в стриптиз бары.

Данные доводы также не состоятельны и являются заведомо ложными, т.к. изначально Холлэндер был готов и желал жениться на Шипилиной Алине именно с целью создания нормальной семьи.

Распространяя подобного рода клеветнические сведения о Холлэндере Шипилина И.А. делала это в том числе и публично, в частности распространяя такие сведения среди коллектива преподавателей кафедры гимнастики Краснодарской Академии физической культуры, общаясь с людьми в общественных местах. Так, в частности с Мартысь Н.Г. Шипилина И.А. разговаривала в офисе ООО «Миллениум», в присутствии сотрудников. Присутствующая при разговоре менеджер-переводчик Емельянова Галина, знавшая о Холлэндере сделал замечание Шипилиной И.А., когда последняя стала негативно отзываться о Холлэндере, при этом угрожать Мартысь Н.Г. расправой, в случае если та в будущем будет работать с Холлэндером.

Таким образом, Шипилина Инесса Александровна общаясь с людьми, знавшими лично, либо через кого-то Холлэндера Роя Дена, умышленно распространяла среди данных людей заведомо ложные сведения о Холлэндере, порочащие его честь и достоинство, а также подрывающие его репутацию при этом данные сведения она распространяла публично, в общественных местах, в присутствии граждан.

Таким образом, Шипилина Инесса Александровна совершила преступление, предусмотренное ч. 2 ст. 129 УК РФ, клевета.

На основании изложенного, руководствуясь ст.ст. 27, 108, 109 УПК РСФСР;

ПОСТАНОВИЛ:

1. Возбудить уголовное дело по ч. 2 ст. 129 УК РФ в отношении Шипилиной Инессы Александровны, проживающей по адресу: г. Краснодар, ул. Раппоптовская, д. 138, кв. 8 по факту распространения заведомо ложных сведений в отношении Роя Дена Холлэндера, порочащих его честь и достоинство, подрывающих его репутацию, по квалифицирующему признаку публичности.

2. В соответствии со ст. 115 УПК РСФСР уголовное дело для организации проведения дознания направить начальнику СУВД Центрального административного округа г. Краснодара.

3. О принятом решении уведомить заинтересованных лиц.

Прокурор Центрального
административного округа г. Краснодара
Старший советник юстиции

Б.К. Овдиенко

Инесса Александровна Шипилина
Секретарь

APOSTILLE APOSTILLE
(CONVENTION DE LA HAYE DU 5 OCTOBRE 1961-ГААГСКАЯ КОНВЕНЦИЯ ОТ 5 ОКТЯБРЯ 1961 г.)

1. РОССИЙСКАЯ ФЕДЕРАЦИЯ
ИСТОЧНИК Официальный документ
2. ПОДПИСАН Воронко В.К.

3. ВЫСТУПАЮЩИМ В КАЧЕСТВЕ прокурора
Исмаиловского адм. округа г. Краснод.
4. СКРЕПЛЕНЫ ПЕЧАТЬЮ / ПИТАМНОМ Исмаилов
прокуратора РР

(официальное название учреждения)

5. В ГОРОДЕ Краснодар 25.01.2002
(дата цифрами)

7. Исмаилов В.П. Вер. СССР. 10
и.и.и. Вер. Вер. Вер. Вер.
(фамилия, должность лица, название удостоверяющего органа)

8. ЗА 80
9. МЕСТО ПЕЧАТИ И.И.И.И.И.

В настоящем документе прошито,
пронумеровано и скреплено печатью
Главного управления Министерства юстиции Российской Федерации
по Краснодарскому краю

2 листа

06 ФЕВ 2002

года,

Химки

В.В. Валерий Валентинович, нотариус г. Химки

Московской области, свидетельствую

этой копии с подлинником заверения, в последнем подчисток, зачеркнутых слов и иных

исправлений или каких-либо

особенностей не оказалось.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за №

Зарегистрировано по тарифу

Нотариус

Всего прошито, пронумеровано

скреплено печатью 02 листа

Нотариус

Всего прошито, пронумеровано
скреплено печатью 02 листа
Нотариус

R E S O L U T I O N
Of Institution a Criminal Case

Krasnodar

January 25, 2002

After considering materials of examination № 99Вх-02 of January 16, 2002 according to an application of the advocate Povaliy S.A. in favour of Roy Den Hollander on conduct of Shipilina I.A. public prosecutor of the Central Administrative District of Krasnodar senior counsellor of justice Ovdienko B.K.

E S T A B L I S H E D:

A citizen of the United States of America Roy Den Hollander came to Russia repeatedly during the period of 1999-2000 where he has made the acquaintance of a dweller of Krasnodar Shipilina Alina to whom he has got married later on at a Registry Office of Krasnodar.

After departure from Krasnodar to the USA Roy Hollander found out Shipilina's A. diary filled in with her own hand. As it became clear from the text of the diary Shipilina A. went in for prostitution both before acquaintance with Hollander and after that.

Deciding to clear up all of circumstances of the revealed fact Hollander comes to Krasnodar in 2001 with the purpose of questioning of those who were acquainted with Alina.

At the same time Alina's mother – Shipilina Inessa Aleksandrovna which purpose was to defame and to slander Alina's husband - Roy Den Hollander, becomes to meet people intentionally who mixed with Hollander and got into contact with him in Krasnodar, who knew him by sight during some period. By mixing with this people Shipilina I.A. deliberately spread a flagrant lie about Hollander, in particular she told that Hollander is mentally ill, a criminal, that he is in investigation by policy. Nevertheless Shipilina I.A. knew very well that information spread by her is false, because she mixed with Hollander during a long period, Hollander himself left the USA for Russia, other countries time and again freely, did not hiding himself, transferred through a territory both the USA and Russia, he has a permanent working place, his office, and a permanent place of residence. He came in Russia repeatedly in connection with his business, i.e. it would be impossible for him to carry out all of this when he would be a criminal or in investigation. In addition, in the case if Hollander would be mad, insane, he could not travel through the world without hindrance, leave the USA, repeatedly visit different countries, conduct his business in Russia.

Dwellers of Krasnodar questioned at the Office of Public Prosecutor of the Central District to whom Shipilina I.A. told that as if Hollander is a criminal and mad, explained that they had their own opinion of Hollander, they knew him as honest, well-wishing, affable, non scandalous, calm and self-possessed man and that is why they perceived the information from Shipilina I.A. as slandering Hollander.

When Shipilina I.A. mixed by her own initiative with women worked with Hollander as interpreters Martys N.G. and Sanches N.K., she also told them that Hollander is a criminal and mad having purpose to defame his honour and dignity and also with the purpose to undermine his prestige in Russia. In addition, when Shipilina I.A. let know to Sanches N.K. a false information of Hollander, she told threats directed against Sanches N.K. if the late will not stop to work with Hollander.

In addition to the wittingly false information spread among persons who knew Hollander from his work and from personal relationships that Hollander is a criminal and mad, Shipilina I.A. told them that he terrorizes her daughter, that he got married to her daughter with the purpose of gain having intention to direct her to the USA to work at strip-tease bars.

These arguments are also lame and wittingly false, because Hollander was ready and wished to get married to Shipilina Alina exactly with the purpose to create a normal family.

Shipilina I.A. spread calumnious information of Hollander publicly too, in particular she spread such information among lecturers and instructors of the Chair of Gymnastics of Krasnodar Academy of Physical Training, mixing with people at public places. So, in particular, Shipilina I.A. spoke to Martys N.G. in the office of an open corporation "Millennium" in the presence of other employees. Manager-interpreter Emelyanova Galina who was present by the talking and who was acquainted with Hollander was forced to rebuke Shipilina I.A. when the late became speak negatively of Hollander and menace Martys N.G. with reprisal if she will continue to work with Hollander.

So, when Shipilina Inessa Aleksandrovna mixed with people who were acquainted with Hollander personally or through somebody, she deliberately spread wittingly false information of Hollander among these people, such information defamed his honour and dignity and also undermined his prestige and in spite of this she spread this information publicly, at public places, in the presence of other citizens.

So, Shipilina Inessa Aleksandrovna has committed a crime, prescribed by the p.2 of the art. 129 of the CC of the RF, slander.

On the grounds of the above mentioned, following directions of the art.art. 27, 108, 109 of the CPC of the RSFSR

R E S O L V E D:

1. To institute a criminal case according to the p.2 of the art.129 of the CC of the RF with respect to Shipilina Inessa Aleksandrovna living at the address: Krasnodar, Rashpilevskaya str., bld.138, fl.8 in connection with the fact of spreading wittingly false information of Roy Den Hollander which defamed his honour and dignity and also undermined his prestige with qualifying sign of publicity.

2. In accordance with the art. 115 of the CPC of the RSFSR the criminal case has to be directed to the chief of the Directorate of Internal Affairs of the Central Administrative District of Krasnodar for conducting inquiry to be organized.

3. The interested persons have to be informed of the decision.

Public prosecutor of the Central Administrative District of Krasnodar senior counsellor of justice

Ovdienko B.K.
(signature)

The true copy.
The secretary
(signature)

There are the armed Seal on the every page of the Resolution:
"Office of Public Prosecutor of the Russian Federation. The Office of Public Prosecutor of the Central Administrative District of Krasnodar"

APOSTILLE
(Convention de la Haye du 5 Octobre 1961)

1. RUSSIAN FEDERATION
THIS PUBLIC DOCUMENT
2. HAS BEEN SIGNED BY OVDIENKO B.K.
3. ACTING IN THE CAPACITY OF PUBLIC PROSECUTOR OF THE CENTRAL
ADMINISTRATIVE DISTRICT OF KRASNODAR
4. BEARS THE STAMP OF OFFICE OF PUBLIC PROSECUTOR OF THE RF
CERTIFIED
5. AT KRASNODAR
6. THE 25 JANUARY 2002
7. BY SHEVTSOVA I. P., CHIEF SPECIALIST ON NOTARIATE OF THE CHIEF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
8. NUMBER 90
9. SEAL OF MINISTRY OF JUSTICE OF THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION. CHIEF DIRECTORATE OF THE MINISTRY OF JUSTICE OF THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION IN KRASNODARSKIY KRAI. INT 2309054566
10. SIGNATURE

There are sewn, numbered and sealed with the Seal of the Chief Directorate of the Ministry of Justice of the Russian Federation in Krasnodarskiy Krai 2 leaves

The armed seal:
MINISTRY OF JUSTICE OF THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION. Chief Directorate of the Ministry of Justice of the Russian Federation in Krasnodarskiy Krai. INT
2309054566

February 6, 2002. I, Baranov Valery Valentinovich, Notary Public of Khimky Town, Moscow Region hereby certify the true of this copy to the original and there are no blots, alternations, strikes and other non-mentioned corrections or peculiarities in the original.

Reg.No.: 3017 Tax: 3, 00

Signature and seal of the Notary Public.

Переводчик

Загребиль Д.И.
Хим-

ки. Шестого февраля две тысячи второго года, я, Баранов Валерий Валентинович, нотариус города Химки Московской области, свидетельствую подлинность подписи известного мне переводчика, переводившего с русского языка на английский язык Заребиль Дениса Ивановича.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за №: 3019

Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Нотариус

Баранов В.В.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано и закреплено
мастичной печатью
6 (шесть) листов

Нотариус

Баранов В.В.

From Department of Internal Affairs
Chief of the Department of Internal Affairs of the Central District of Krasnodar Ostapenko P.I.

Mr. Roy Den Hollander

On 25.01.2002 the procuracy of the Central District of the city of Krasnodar brought criminal action № 47603 pursuant to Article 129.2 of the Criminal Code of the R.F. against Shipilina, A.I. The conduct of the preliminary investigation was directed to the Department of Internal Affairs of the Central District of the City of Krasnodar.

In connection with this matter it is necessary to question you as a victim and therefore we ask you to answer the following questions in full detail.

I, Roy Den Hollander, a citizen of the USA, residing at 545 East 14th Street, New York, New York 10009, US passport No. 200315516, speaking under oath, hereby depose and say as follows, to the best of my knowledge and belief, in answer to the attached questions:

1. When, where, and in what circumstances did you make the acquaintance of Alina Shipilina?

On July 4, 1999, I arrived in Moscow to begin work as the manager of the Russian Division for the American firm Kroll Associates. I was hired on a consulting basis to improve the firm's operations and increase its business in Russia. Kroll is a worldwide security and consulting company.

I met Alina Shipilina, whom I later called Angel, on Friday, July 23, 1999. I was walking back to my apartment at 7 Denis Davidov in Moscow around 23:00. As I turned into the driveway leading to my front door, I came upon a party emanating from the basement of the building where I lived. The night was warm and a handful of people, including a couple of very pretty Russian girls who were talking with two men, were standing outside by the driveway. I decided to check it out and headed for the basement entrance to the party when a man whom I assumed to be the host told me it was for invitees only. I said, "How do I get an invitation?" He asked whether I was an American, I said yes. We exchanged names and he showed me inside to the bar and left. I didn't speak Russian beyond that of a three year old, but the bartender spoke English, so we struck up a conversation. While we were talking, I heard someone behind me say my name or something in English. I turned and there she was, a few inches taller than me, beautiful, blonde, all a glow and smiling—I felt like a sack of bricks and said to myself, this is the one. She said, "Hi I am Angelina." We went outside at her suggestion where she told me she was a model and dancer and that the party was hosted by her model agency, and that she would be in Moscow for another week working as a model. She told me one of her pictures was on display in an exclusive clothing store a few blocks down Kutuzovsky from my apartment building, which I saw later on. She came from Krasnodar, said she didn't have any boy friends at the moment and that she had been a three-time Russian long jump champion when in school. From that night until she left for Krasnodar the following Friday, we went out every night except one. She wanted to dance and dance all night long. I wanted to be with her always. We only kissed and hugged, but I was in heaven—I was in love. I had found the girl of my dreams. I couldn't believe my good fortune. When she left, I took her to the airport with my driver, and we kept in touch through letters and telephone calls until she returned to Moscow the end of August.

2. For what purpose and in what circumstances did you enter into marriage with A.S.?

I fell in love with Alina and wanted to build a life together with her in America. I never met anyone before for whom I felt this way. I didn't want to lose her. I wrote her love letters that included statements such as "I received your photographs and put them on the pillow next to mine, so I could smell your perfume the night through and dream of you," or "It's just like heaven being here with you. You are an Angel too good to be true."

We got married on March 11, 2000, in Krasnodar at ZAGS. I was surprised that she had not invited any of her friends and especially that her mother did not show for the wedding. I would have invited my friends for sure because I felt exhilarated and proud, but my friends were in America. It appears that one reason for my joy was that Alina was secretly putting, as she wrote in her diary, "salts and sugars" in my meals before the wedding that caused narcotic like symptoms in me.

3. In what circumstances did you make the acquaintance of the mother of Alina, I.A. Shipilina, and what were the relations between you and her?

I visited Alina and her mother, Inessa, in Krasnodar over New Year's when the millennium changed to the year 2000. We spent the evening celebrating at her and her mother's house. Her mother was hospitable and friendly, serving up many different courses, of which Alina couldn't eat too much because she was already bursting out of the seams of her skin tight mini dress. At midnight we all went outside to the road to set off fireworks. It was very dark, but I could see the black shapes of lots of people standing around. All of a sudden the entire sky lit up with rockets and sparklers and bombs bursting everywhere. It looked like a war as far as the eye could see. Alina was setting off rockets and firecrackers; jumping up and down in her mini shirt filled with glee like a little child.

I considered my relations with Inessa good but was troubled by why she didn't come to our wedding in Krasnodar in March 2000. At the time, Alina said her mother had to work. By the end of August 2001 when the marriage was on the rocks, the relations were not good. In one fax that Inessa sent to Alina on my fax machine, Inessa said I was like a bloodsucker, never satisfied, and she ended the fax wishing her married daughter "new conquests".

4. a) What was the reason for divorce?

I learned from Alina's diary, her words, and her actions that she was a prostitute, repeatedly committed adultery, consistently lied to me, wanted to date the men who watched her strip at "Flash Dancers" (a club) and married me in order to obtain a green card. Within three months of our marriage she traveled to Italy on her second passport to keep the entry stamp out of her other passport that she would use to travel to the United States with me. In Italy she engaged in adultery and prostitution with an old client of hers from Mexico, Alfredo Ibarra. In July, just four months after our marriage, she engaged in sexual conduct in Krasnodar with a man named Vladimir from St. Petersburg. After that tryst at 5:30 in the morning, she allowed a taxi driver to fondle her knee in order to save on the fare.

She insisted on working as a lap dancer rather than devoting her time to pursuing modeling, acting or singing that many of my friends were willing to help her with. It became clear to me that Alina was driven solely by greed for the wealth the sex industry could provide her. All her talk of “special love”, karma philosophy, and dreams were no more than a ruse to trick me into bringing her to America, so she could sell herself to as many men for big money as possible.

Some examples from her diary:

About our wedding she said, “And on Saturday, March 11, 2000, we registered our marriage. It was merry! I did not accept it very seriously; for me it was only business. I become so tired of him.” Page 41 of the certified English translation of her diary; p 101 of the Russian language copy.

Her June 25, 2000, diary entry states, “The problem is in his real feelings to me. I am a stimulus for him. He sees me as a real wife, but it is absurd.... I will never see him as a real husband.” Page 46 English; pp 120-21 Russian.

January 17, 2000, “Roy says that I am the only happiness of his. He wants me to be near him.... If only he were younger....” Page 37 English; p 90 Russian.

April 5, 2000, “He wrote me a letter saying how it was difficult for him to be alone.... Frankly speaking, I cannot imagine what I will do with him in Moscow. Listen to his philosophy? To wash, to clean and to cook? And leave my mother all alone.... On one hand I would like that we remained friends, but he would not hinder my meetings with friends and I would give him freedom.” P 41, 42 English; p 103 Russian.

April 20, 2000, “What will happen if I will not receive a visa to America? I will go—with Leonid’s help—to Greece or Venezuela. In June I am sure to go somewhere!” Page 43 English; p 108 Russian.

July 6, 2000, “I decided to go to America for now and make some money and to get a divorce from him. Then better to go to Japan.”

b) Is your marriage with Shipilina dissolved?

Yes

5. a) When and for what purpose did you come to Krasnodar? b) did you meet with acquaintances of Alina and A.I. Shipilina? c) exactly when did you come and with whom did you associate?

a) Under New York law I sued Alina for an annulment or in the alternative a divorce based on her adultery or cruel and inhuman treatment. Under any of these causes of action I needed to provide evidence to the court concerning her conduct. Annulment required I prove to the judge or jury that my wife lied about or failed to tell me something of such importance that had a reasonable man in my position known the truth he would not have married her. Cruel and inhuman treatment required showing any type of conduct by Alina towards me that the court considered to make our continued cohabitation physically or mentally harmful or just improper.

Comment [djw1]: I would leave this out, or at least reduce it to a minimum. It adds nothing and detracts something.

The key evidence I possessed for all these causes of action was a copy of Alina's diary, but before the court would accept the diary as evidence, I needed to prove that she wrote the diary and that the events depicted were accurate. In order to do that, I needed to find potential witnesses knowledgeable about her writing style and some of the events Alina wrote about. Once I found such witnesses, I could obtain their testimony for the court under the Hague Convention on Taking Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters. Furthermore, Alina's defense for annulment and adultery also required me to find additional evidence that I previously did not know about. In order to authenticate Alina's diary and find additional evidence for the court proceedings, I traveled to Krasnodar in search of knowledgeable witnesses willing to tell the truth.

I was in Krasnodar from April 15 to 22, 2001, and from June 10 to 17, 2001.

b) Yes, I met or contacted acquaintances of Alina. I assume that you want to know which ones. I recall meeting the following:

Alexey Dikov

Katherina Alexevna Gerokaris

Vera Ivanasova

A man who answered the door at Vita C by the Aurora Movie Theater. I was looking for the manager whom Alina introduced me to and said had helped her move from Grozny.

Evgeniy Martianov

V.G. Minchenko, Acting Rector Kubanskaya State Academy of Physical Training

Yulya Yurevna Kudinova

Dmitri Morosov, photographer of models

Andrei Sergeevich Petrov

Alexey Smolin, Manager of Troika Restaurant

Anastasia and Dima Vasilyeva of the Tatianna Vasilyeva Fashion House

The head of ZAGS whose name I believe is G.I. Klimova

Next-door neighbors of Alina at 138 Rashpilevskaya

c) I associated with my two translators, Natalya Martys, Nadya Sanchez and my attorney Svetlana Povaliy and a reporter named Victoria Aleynikova.

6. When and by what means did it become known to you that I.A. Shipilina was spreading information about you that does not correspond to reality?

I believe I first learned about Inessa's efforts to keep people from providing me information by defaming me and threatening potential witnesses during a telephone call to my translator Natalya Martys or from an email she sent to me on May 16, 2001.

7. When, to whom, and exactly what did she say about you?

The best I can discern follows:

1. Natalya Martys: (W) 39 04 11. On or about April 26 –27, Inessa Shipilina visited Ms. Martys' office twice.

At first, she (Inessa) came into my (Natalya) office, she told me very bad things, also she told that you are criminal, crazy, etc. In addition she told me that you'd never visit Russia again, because you are a criminal and our police know it. She forced me to say with whom you met in Krasnodar. After this she tried to force me to write a paper with number of my passport and current address for Court with detailed describing of your last visit into Krasnodar: each meeting, with whom and when.... I said, O.k., see you tomorrow, I'll make this paper. When she left our office I called my lawyer, and she refused to make any paper without special request from Court. When Alina's mother came again, I told her, I agreed to help to show the real matter of justice but you haven't any possibilities for this. She was very angry, she promised to locate me at the prison very soon. Yes, it was very unpleasant, you know. Also she told that you forced Alina to write her diary, she could kill me! Natalya was frighten because Alina and Inessa have money from Alina's prostitution and stripping work in New York and also have connections with Chechen gangsters.

On or about July 12th:

Inessa apparently sent to Natalya's home a forged court summons in an effort to threaten and intimidate her into no longer providing translation services to me.

2. Vera Ivananova Ivanasova (W) 59 66 95, (H) 32 06 51: On or about the last week of April 2000 and the first week of May.

Inessa went to Vera and threatened to sue her in court, accusing Vera of taking money from me to distribute Alina's diary. Inessa said some very negative things about me that Vera did not want to repeat in my presence. Inessa told "everybody" in the Gymnastic Department at the Academy of Physical Culture that Vera was distributing the diary to people in the Academy because I had paid her money. Others found out that Inessa was lying and made her apologize to Vera in front of the Academy's instructors.

3. Anastasia Vasilyeva and her husband Dima (W) 55 74 63, 55 98 07: On or about April 23-28:

Alina telephoned Anastasia and asked to come over and meet with Anastasia about her meeting the previous week with me. Anastasia refused. Later, Inessa telephoned Anastasia and asked Anastasia questions about her meeting with me. Inessa told Anastasia that I was a criminal. Inessa also talked to Dima. Then Alina and Inessa sent a message on Anastasia's pager that they know Anastasia had sold information to me, and they will meet in court. Anastasia was very scared over the situation and Dima was very upset.

4. Alexei Dikov (M) 63 55 58, 902 439 6706: On or about April 23-28:

Inessa called Alexei to try to intimidate him into not talking to me.

5. Yevgeniy Martianov, Tel 62 31 37: On or about April 23-28:

Inessa called Martianov to ask whether I had talked to him and had given him some papers. Inessa said Roy was a crazy person.

6. Dmitri Morosov (W) 56 00 23: On or about the last week of April or first week of May:

I believe Alina or Inessa contacted Morosov and defamed me to him because when my translator called him he acted nasty and refused to meet with me, saying he had heard about me.

7. Nadya Sanches (W) 39 04 11: On June 13, 2001 at about 15:30:

Inessa walked over to Nadya, my translator, and me and tried to intimidate Nadya into giving Inessa her name. When Nadya refused, Inessa said in a very threatening manner, "If you work for Roy, you will get into a big mess."

8. Roy Den Hollander:

On June 16, 2001: Inessa called Alexei Dikov looking for an FSB person to deal with Roy.

On June 17, 2001: In the morning, Inessa called Roy's driver in Moscow and told him not to pick Roy up at the airport that night. When Roy arrived at the Krasnodar Airport to leave for Moscow, Inessa was standing with a militiaman and pointed Roy out to him and said a photograph was taken. Then Inessa followed Roy and his translator to the car and stood near the car apparently talking on her mobile telephone.

9. Larisa Novocelskaya, Editor "Улица Красная", 350000 г. Краснодар ул. Гоголя 52, (W) 55 93 09: On or about June 18-29, 2001:

Inessa visited the office of the editor of "Улица Красная" shouted and threatened her over an article the paper had printed in its April 30 – May 6 edition about the situation between Roy and Alina. I believe Inessa defamed me to the editor. The editor was intimidated into not reporting any follow up stories.

8. Did I.A. Shipilina ever spread false information about you earlier or did this only happen after you came to Krasnodar in 2001 and began to associate with her acquaintances and the acquaintances of her daughter?

According to Anastasia Vasilyeva, Inessa told her before my trips to Krasnodar that I was not generous enough.

9. How did the actions of I.A. Shipilina harm your honor, worth, dignity, and affect your reputation?

I am a lawyer with a Masters of Business in Finance. I received my MBA with honors from Columbia University in May 1997 and my Juris Doctor degree with high honors from George Washington University in 1985. I belong to two of the four national academic honor societies in America: Order of the Coif and Beta Gamma Sigma. I have worked for ABC Television News, the United States Department of the Treasury for which I received a Top Secret Security Clearance from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and one of the best law firms in America: Cravath, Swaine & Moore. These credentials attract people and businesses not only in the US but Russia to retain my services not just for my skills but my integrity, honesty and dependability. In Russia, I have been providing legal and business advice to Russian organizations, the government and individuals since 1991, which included the Department of Overseas Business Promotion in the Ministry of Foreign Economic Affairs, Intertraining Association and Kroll Associates Moscow. My reputation for straightforwardness has enabled me to publish a number of articles on law, politics, economics and Americans in Business World Weekly and Law Gazette, and appear on BK TV KT on one occasion to provide analysis of laws governing the buying and selling of securities.

As our world becomes smaller and smaller, a mean-spirited individual's defamation of another person can easily have reach beyond the parochial geography in which it was made. Inessa Shipilina's malicious, premeditated and willful efforts to besmirch my character in a wholly unjustified attempt to keep the truth about her daughter from the New York State Courts not only harmed the concept of justice by which civilized people live but left a spreading stain on my reputation not only in Russia but one that could easily expand to wherever I may conduct business or deal with decent-minded people in this small world of ours. It is not as unlikely as one might think to accidentally meet someone who knew an acquaintance of ours in a distant city or country. In fact, contemporary population mathematics postulates that any of us can have a message personally delivered to anyone else in the world by going through a chain of at most six people. Unless the Krasnodar court puts a stop to Ms. Shipilina's spurious statements calculated to cause grievous harm to my dignity, honor, worth and reputation, and to call into question in the minds of others all the credentials I have garnered thus far in this life, then there is no telling how far and deep her injurious conduct may reach. In addition, when considering the surprises that life brings, it is not unfeasible that this time next year I might have the opportunity to work with organizations or individuals in Krasnodar, but not unless my name is cleared.

---

Roy Den Hollander, M.B.A., J.D.
545 East 14th Street
New York, NY
10009 USA

Sworn to before me as true to the best of his knowledge and belief by Roy Den Hollander, M.B.A., J.D., to me known to be the individual described in and who executed the foregoing document, and acknowledged that he executed the document on this       day of March 2002.

Civil Defamation Suit
September 2002

To the Court of Leninskiy district of Krasnodar

Plaintiff: Roy Den Hollander
D.b. 09.26.1947
National passport 200315516
Issued by the national passport center 04.19.1999
Representative attorney of the legal advice office
Of Zapadny district of Krasnodar
S.A.Povaliy,
350062 Krasnodar
Rashpilevskaya str. 62

Defendant: Inessa Alexandrovna Shipilina
Residing: Krasnodar, Rashpilevskaya str.

Declaration of the defense of honor, dignity, business reputation and moral damage recovery

I registered my marriage with Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina on 03.11.2000, after that together with my wife I left for the USA, New York, where I resided.

As soon as I became aware that Alina describes her relationships with other men in her diary, I decided to learn the real situation and came to Krasnodar, I met people, who knew her before our wedding. I brought a divorce suit in the USA.

In the meanwhile Alina's mother, Inessa Alexandrovna Shipilina, started to spread among our common acquaintances information, damaging my honour, dignity and business reputation.

Thus, talking to Natalya Martys she said that I was a criminal, wanted by the Federal forces, she said that I had committed grave crimes. All the facts are not true and were deliberately invented by I.A.Shipilina. Besides, she told Vera Ivanovna Avanesova defamatory insinuations about my alleged criminal past and present.

Talking to Anastasiya Vasilyeva on the phone the defendant told about me as a criminal sent Anastasiya messages on the beeper, where she threatened her with punishment if Anastasiya witnessed against her. She also told Nadezhda Sanchez the things defaming my honor and dignity.

Talking with Evgeniy Kardakov on the phone Shipilina said, that I was a mentally diseased person, socially dangerous, she urged Kardakov not to talk with me.

The above-mentioned witnesses can confirm all the episodes.

The stories told about me are not real facts, they defame my dignity, honor and business reputation.

My business reputation was damaged as a result of defendant's actions. I am a licensed attorney and have a number of clients not only in the USA, but in other countries as well, including Moscow and Krasnodar. I have to explain to my partners that I am not crazy and don't have criminal past or present.

Furthermore, spreading the information, defaming my honor, dignity and business reputation the defendant brings me moral harm.

I estimate the damage caused me by the defendant as 500 hundred rubles.

On the basis of the above-mentioned and governed by the articles 151, 152, 1099-1101 of the Civil code of the Russian Federation.

I appeal:

1. to make the defendant disprove the information defaming my honor, dignity, the untrue words that I m not normal , mentally diseased person, criminal by apologizing before me.
2. To recover from the defendant the compensation for the moral damage in the sum of 500 hundred rubles.
3. To pay all the duties at her cost

Enclosure

1. the copy of the declaration
2. the papers confirming that Shipilina spread the information defaming my honor and dignity
3. papers disproving the information spread by Shipilina.

Roy Den Hollander

КОПИЯ

КОПИЯ

Р С Ф С Р

Исполнительный комитет
Краснодарского городского
Совета народных депутатов Управление жилищно-коммунального хозяйства
БЮРО ТЕХНИЧЕСКОЙ
ИНВЕНТАРИЗАЦИИ
350000, г. Краснодар
ул. Леваневского 16
Тел. 52-2734, 59-23-61
От 12.09. 2001 г №
На № 15/23

СПРАВКА

Настоящая справка выдана Краснодарским бюро Технической инвентаризации в том, что гр. Шипилина

1. Инесса Александровна,
2. Алина Александровна

По картотеке городских домовладений числится собственником строений в городе Краснодаре имеют каждая по 1/2 доли купленной кв-ры № 8 по ул. Раппиневской № 138.

Справка выдана для предъявления по месту требования.

Печать

Начальник бюро технической инвентаризации

Подпись

Техник бюро

Подпись

Россия, город Краснодар, 19 сентября 2001 года.

Я, Мартынов И.И., нотариус нотариального округа г. Краснодара свидетельствую верность этой копии с подлинником документа. Я сличил копию с подлинником, причем в последнем подчисток, приписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных не оговоренных исправлений или каких либо особенностей не оказалось.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 1006/1

Взыскано 1000 руб

Нотариус

И.И. Мартынов

КОНПОЛ

АПОСТИЛЬ АПОСТИЛЬ
(СОВЕРШЕН ПО ЗАКАЗУ В ОКТЯБРЕ 1991 ГЛАВНЫМ КОМПЕТЕНТНЫМ ОТ 6 ОКТЯБРЯ 1991 Г.)

1. ГОСУДАРСТВЕННЫЙ СЕРТИФИКАТ

НАСТОЯЩИЙ ОТ ПОСЫЛКИ ДОКУМЕНТ

2. ПОДПИСИ Мартыновский Н.И.

(фамилия)

3. ВЫПУСКАЮЩИМ В КАЧЕСТВЕ нотариуса

Игорь-Сергей Красноводар

4. СКАЗАННЫМ ПОСЫЛКИ ПОСЫЛКИ Михаил

Иванович Мартыновский Н.И.

(официальное название учреждения)

УДОСТОВЕРЯЮ

5. В ГОРОДЕ Красноводск 19.09.2001.

7. Ваняшев М.Р. (фамилия)

Вну. нотар. (фамилия, должность лица)

8. За № 1265 (наименование удостоверяющего органа)

Иванов

Copy

RSFSR
Executive Committee
Krasnodar Town Soviet of People's Deputies Lodgement Maintenance Office
Technical Inventory Bureau
Levanevskogo str., 16,
350000 Krasnodar
tel. 52-2734, 59-23-61

Our ref. No. 15/23
Dated September 12, 2001

CERTIFICATE

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

It is given to certify that

1. Inessa Alexandrovna Shipilina
2. Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina, as it is appeared from files of the Town Lodgement Register, are real estate owners and each of them holds 1/2 of purchased flat No. 8 at Rashpilevskaya str., bldg. 138.

Seal

/signature/
Director
Technical Inventory Bureau

/signature/
Bureau Clerk

Russia, Krasnodar Town, on the 19th day of September 2001, I, I. I. Martynov, Notary Public of Krasnodar Town hereby certify that this is a true copy of the original and there are no blots, alternations, strikes and other non-mentioned corrections or peculiarities in the original.

Reg. No.: 10611 Tax: as law provided
Signature and seal of the Notary Public.

1. Country: RUSSIA

THIS PUBLIC DOCUMENT

2. has been signed by Martynov I. I.
3. acting in the capacity of the Notary Public of Krasnodar
4. bears the seal/stamp of the said Notary Public

2001

6. September 12, 2001

8. No: 1265

10. Signature

ПОДПИСЬ

Загребиль Д. И.
Хим-

ки. Четырнадцатого декабря две тысячи первого года, я, Баранов Валерий Валентинович, нотариус города Химки Московской области, свидетельствую подлинность подписи известного мне переводчика, переводившего с русского на английский язык Загребиль Дениса Ивановича.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за №: 39216

Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Нотариус

ПОДПИСЬ

Баранов В.В.

Гербовая печать
нотариуса г. Химки
Баранова В.В.

Всего прошнуровано,
пронумеровано, скреплено
мастичной печатью
3 (три) листа

Нотариус

ПОДПИСЬ

Баранов В.В.

14 ДЕК 2001

«...» ... года,
Я, Баранов В.В., нотариус г. Химки
Московской области, свидетельствую верность этой копии с подлинником
документа, в последнем подчисток,
приписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных
неоговоренных исправлений или какихлибо особенностей не обнаружил.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за №: 39217
Взыскано по тарифу: 5 руб. 00 коп.

Всего прошито, пронумеровано,
скреплено печатью 03 листов.

Нотариус

Филиал Адыгейского республиканского учреждения юстиции по государственной регистрации прав на недвижимое имущество и сделок с ним по Тахтамукайскому району

Пом. прокурора
Тахтамукайского района
Республики Адыгея
Барчо Н.Р.

« 10 » февраля 2002г.

исх. № 1/2002 - 16

На основании запроса от _____ г., № _____, сообщаем, что Шипилина Инесса Александровна, 1950 года рождения, обратилась 09.08.2000 года в Учреждение юстиции по государственной регистрации прав на недвижимое имущество и сделок с ним Тахтамукайского района РА с заявлением о регистрации перехода права собственности и регистрации сделки на объект по адресу: п. Яблоновский, ул. Сквозная, 11 к Царевой Светлане Александровне, 1949 года рождения, на основании Договора дарения жилого дома с земельным участком от 08.08.2000 года, удостоверенного Чуюко С.Г., нотариусом Тахтамукайского НО РА, в реестре № 1597, о чем в Едином государственном реестре прав на недвижимое имущество и сделок с ним 04.09.2000 года сделана запись регистрации № 01-01/04-3/2000-219.

Государственный регистратор прав
Тахтамукайского района РА

Ратушный П.В.

г. Краснодар, Краснодарский край, Российская Федерация.

Седьмое мая, две тысячи второго года.

Я, Морозов Д.Ю., нотариус г. Краснодара, свидетельствую верность этой копии с подлинником документа. В последнем подчисток, приписок, зачеркнутых слов и иных не оговоренных исправлений или каких-либо особенностей нет.

Зарегистрировано в реестре за № 5310

Взыскано

Нотариус

Государственный архив Республики Татарстан по государственному архиву Республики Татарстан
и сноскам с ним по Татарскому району

Республика Татарстан
Татарский район
Государственный архив

На основании запроса от
гос. архива Республики Татарстан
от 08.08.2000 года в Удмуртский архив
гос. архива Республики Татарстан
и сноскам с ним по Татарскому району
с записями о регистрации перехода права собственности сделки на объект по адресу: п. Яковлевский, ул. Советская, д. 11 к/1

АПОСТИЛЬ АПОСТИЛЬ
(CONVENTION DE LA HAYE DU 5 OCTOBRE 1961)
ТАЛГСКАЯ КОНВЕНЦИЯ ОТ 5 ОКТЯБРЯ 1961 г.)
1. РОССИЙСКАЯ ФЕДЕРАЦИЯ
НАСТОЯЩИЙ ОФИЦИАЛЬНЫЙ ДОКУМЕНТ
2. ПОДПИСАН Мордочев Д.Ю.
(фамилия)
3. ВЫСТУПАЮЩИМ В КАЧЕСТВЕ исполнителя
исполн. с.р. г. Краснодар
4. СКРЕПЛЕН ПЕЧАТЬЮ /ШТАМПОМ исполн.
исполн. Мордочев
(официальное название учреждения)
5. В ГОРОДЕ Краснодаре 8.05.2000
6. Исеева И.П. вер. исеев. ис.
(фамилия, должность лица)
7. исполн. И.И. М.р. исеев
8. За № 684 название удостоверяющего органа

10. [Signature]

Branch of Adyg Republican Agency of Justice on State Registration of the Rights on Real Estate and Bargains with It
for Takhtamoukaysky District

Deputy Prosecutor
for Takhtamoukaysky District of the Republic of Adyg Barcho N.R.

February 18, 2002

Ref. No 1/2002-16

On the basis of inquiry dated _____, No _____, we notify that Shipilina Inessa Alexandrovna, born in 1950, has filed an application to the Adyg Republican Agency of Justice on State Registration of the Rights on Real Estate and Bargains with It for Takhtamoukaysky District on August 09, 2000. She applied for registration of transition of the property right and registration of the bargain with the real estate object located to the address: village Yablonevsky, Skvoznaya street, 11 to Tsareva Svetlana Alexandrovna, born in 1949, on the basis Gift Agreement in relation to the apartment house with the land plot dated August 08, 2000 certified by the State Notary Takhtamoukaysky District of the Republic of Adyg, included in the register under No 1597, which was registered in the Uniform State Register of Rights on Real Estate and Bargains with It on September 04, 2000, registration record No 01-01/04-3/2000-219.

The State Registrar of the Rights for Takhtamoukaysky District of the Republic of Adyg [Signature] Ratoushny P.V.

[Impress of the seal No 4 of the Branch of Adyg Republican Agency of Justice on State Registration of the Rights on Real Estate and Bargains with It]

City of Krasnodar, Krasnodar territory, Russian Federation.

The Seventh of May of the Year Two Thousand and Second.

Me, Morozov D.Yu., the notary of the City of Krasnodar, witness the conformity of this copy to the original of the document; in the latter have not appeared to be any erasures, additions, crossed out words and other not stipulated corrections, nor any singularities.

Included in the Register under № 5310

Collected – 10 roubles

Notary [Signature]

[Impress of the seal of the notary Morozov Dmitry Yuryevich]

APOSTILLE

(Convention de La Haye du 5 octobre 1961)

1. Russian Federation

This public document has been signed by

2. Morozov D.Y.

3. acting in the capacity of: notary public of the city of Krasnodar

4. bears the seal/stamp of the notary public Morozov D.Y.

Certified

5. in the city of Krasnodar

6. On May 8, 2002

7. by Shevtsova I.P., Leading Specialist on Notary Services of the Main Administration of Justice

8. No 684

9. Seal/Stamp [Impress of the seal of the Main Administration of the Ministry of Justice of the Russian Federation for Krasnodar Area]

10. Signature: [Signature]

Shevtsova I.P.

[Signature]

Семевед А.О.

Куржб -

Agency NYPD		ORI NY		New York State DOMESTIC INCIDENT REPORT (PRINT UPPER CASE)		SPRINT No. (NYPD) U-13		Incident Report No.		Pct. of Report 114
Date of Report 12.13.00	Time of Report 1615	Date of Occur 12.12.00	Time of Occur 1600	Address of Occurrence 28-15 34 St				Apt. No. 4H	Sector	Beat
Compl./Victim's Last Name, First, M.I. SHIPILINA, ALINA				Address 28-15 34 St Astoria						Sex F
Date of Birth 11.10.75	Age 25	Home Telephone (212) 274-4902	Race <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> White <input type="checkbox"/> Black <input type="checkbox"/> Other <input type="checkbox"/> Indian <input type="checkbox"/> Asian <input type="checkbox"/> Unk	Ethnic Origin <input type="checkbox"/> Hispanic <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Non-Hispanic <input type="checkbox"/> Unknown						+
Suspect/Other Party Last Name, First, M.I. Hollander, Roy				Address 545 E. 14 St Manhattan #10D						Sex M
Date of Birth 10.26.47	Age 53	Home Telephone (212) 995-5201	Race <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> White <input type="checkbox"/> Black <input type="checkbox"/> Other <input type="checkbox"/> Indian <input type="checkbox"/> Asian <input type="checkbox"/> Unk	Ethnic Origin <input type="checkbox"/> Hispanic <input type="checkbox"/> Non-Hispanic <input type="checkbox"/> Unknown
Suspect Relationship to the Complainant/Victim Husband			Suspect Present? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Offense/Incident Involved: <input type="checkbox"/> Fel <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Misd <input type="checkbox"/> Viol <input type="checkbox"/> Other		Description (Offenses) Agg Harassment
Order of Protection? Violated? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Issuing Court		OP Registry Checked <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Expir. Date		Complaint Report Prepared? <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Compl. No.
Report Received <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Walk-in <input type="checkbox"/> Radio Run
Suspect Used/Threatened Weapons? Type: <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO			Victim Injured? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Describe		Aided No.		Removed to Hospital? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		What Hospital?
Photos Taken? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Arrest Made? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Non Arrest Reason <input type="checkbox"/> No Offense Committed <input type="checkbox"/> Not at Scene <input type="checkbox"/> Warrant Requested <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Other				If Arrest Made, Did Perp. Resist? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO
Charge(s) (List All) Aggravated Harassment								Arrest No.
Family/Household Members Present? If YES, Last Name, First <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO						Date of Birth		Relationship
Domestic Incident Report Receipt Issued? If NO, Reason: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO						DV Notice Issued to Victim <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Date 12.13.00
Suspect's Actions: <input type="checkbox"/> Biting <input type="checkbox"/> Choking <input type="checkbox"/> Destroying Property <input type="checkbox"/> Forcible Restraint <input type="checkbox"/> Grabbing <input type="checkbox"/> Hair Pulling <input type="checkbox"/> Homicide <input type="checkbox"/> Injury to Child <input type="checkbox"/> Kicking <input type="checkbox"/> Pulling Phones From Wall <input type="checkbox"/> Punching <input type="checkbox"/> Pushing <input type="checkbox"/> Pushing/Slamming Into Walls <input type="checkbox"/> Sexual Abuse <input type="checkbox"/> Slapping <input type="checkbox"/> Threats With Weapon(s) <input type="checkbox"/> Throwing Items <input type="checkbox"/> Using Weapon(s) <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Verbal Abuse <input type="checkbox"/> Other:
Narrative of the Incident: (include results of investigation and basis for action taken) AT 7/10/00 clv states that her husband did call her on the telephone and stated that if she did not pay him $20,000 dollars that he would have her deported back to Russia. clv states that perps actions did cause her annoyance and alarm. clv does not want to press charges at this time
Victim's Statement of Allegations: My husband (Roy Den Hollander) push to me give to him 20,000 $ and he threaten me - if I don't pay this money, he will send me back in Russia.
False Statements made herein are punishable as a Class A Misdemeanor, pursuant to Section 210.45 of the Penal Law.								Victim's Signature [Signature]		Date 12.13.00
Other involved Agency(s)
Is There Reasonable Cause to Suspect A Child May Be The Victim of Abuse, Neglect or Maltreatment? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO If Yes, Reporting Officer Must Contact the NYS Child Abuse Hotline Registry # 1-800-635-1522.						Any Guns In The House? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO Household Member Have a Pistol Permit? <input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No Permit No. _____ Issuing County _____ Name _____
REFERRALS: <input type="checkbox"/> Child Protective Services <input type="checkbox"/> Licensing Bureau <input type="checkbox"/> Adult Protective Services <input type="checkbox"/> Domestic Violence Services <input type="checkbox"/> Other Outside Agency						Name of Person Notified: Date: _____ Time: _____ Notified By: _____
Reporting Officer's Signature (Include Rank) [Signature]						Officer I.D. No. 918752		Date 12.13.00		Page of 1
Supervisor's Signature (Include Rank) [Signature]						Date 12.13.00				Pages

Agency NYPD		ORI NY		New York State DOMESTIC INCIDENT REPORT (PRINT UPPER CASE)		SPRINT No. (NYPD) WA 1N		Incident Report No.		Pct. of Report 114
Date of Report 06.27.01	Time of Report 2000	Date of Occur 06.29.01	Time of Occur 2100	Address of Occurrence 28-15 34ST ASTORIA N.Y. 11103				Apt. No. 4H	Sector	Beat
Compl./Victim's Last Name, First, M.I. SHIPILINA ALINA A				Address 28-15 34ST ASTORIA N.Y. 11103						Sex F
Date of Birth 11.10.75	Age 25	Home Telephone (718) 274-4902	Race <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> White <input type="checkbox"/> Black <input type="checkbox"/> Other <input type="checkbox"/> Indian <input type="checkbox"/> Asian <input type="checkbox"/> Unk		Ethnic Origin <input type="checkbox"/> Hispanic <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Non-Hispanic <input type="checkbox"/> Unknown
Suspect/Other Party Last Name, First, M.I. HOLLANDER ROY DEN				Address 545 EAST 14 ST. N.Y. N.Y. 10009						Sex M
Date of Birth 09.26.47	Age 53	Home Telephone (212) 995-5301	Race <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> White <input type="checkbox"/> Black <input type="checkbox"/> Other <input type="checkbox"/> Indian <input type="checkbox"/> Asian <input type="checkbox"/> Unk		Ethnic Origin <input type="checkbox"/> Hispanic <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Non-Hispanic <input type="checkbox"/> Unknown
Suspect Relationship to the Complainant/Victim HUSBAND			Suspect Present? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Offense/Incident Involved: <input type="checkbox"/> Fel <input type="checkbox"/> Misd <input type="checkbox"/> Viol <input type="checkbox"/> Other		Description (Offenses) AGGRAV. HARRASSMENT
Order of Protection? Violated? <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Issuing Court Family Court		OP Registry Checked <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Expir. Date 07.31.01		Complaint Report Prepared? <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Compl. No.
Report Received <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Walk-in <input type="checkbox"/> Radio Run
Suspect Used/Threatened Weapons? Type: <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO			Victim Injured? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Describe		Aided No.		Removed to Hospital? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		What Hospital?
Photos Taken? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Arrest Made? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Non Arrest Reason <input type="checkbox"/> No Offense Committed <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Not at Scene <input type="checkbox"/> Warrant Requested <input type="checkbox"/> Other				If Arrest Made, Did Perp. Resist? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO
Charge(s) (List All) Agg. HARRASSMENT								Arrest No.
Family/Household Members Present? If YES, Last Name, First <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO						Date of Birth		Relationship
Domestic Incident Report Receipt Issued? If NO, Reason: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO						DV Notice Issued to Victim <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> YES <input type="checkbox"/> NO		Date 06.27.01
Suspect's Actions: <input type="checkbox"/> Biting <input type="checkbox"/> Choking <input type="checkbox"/> Destroying Property <input type="checkbox"/> Forcible Restraint <input type="checkbox"/> Grabbing <input type="checkbox"/> Hair Pulling <input type="checkbox"/> Homicide <input type="checkbox"/> Injury to Child <input type="checkbox"/> Kicking <input type="checkbox"/> Pulling Phones From Wall <input type="checkbox"/> Punching <input type="checkbox"/> Pushing <input type="checkbox"/> Pushing/Slamming Into Walls <input type="checkbox"/> Sexual Abuse <input type="checkbox"/> Slapping <input type="checkbox"/> Threats With Weapon(s) <input type="checkbox"/> Throwing Items <input type="checkbox"/> Using Weapon(s) <input type="checkbox"/> Verbal Abuse <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Other:
Narrative of the Incident: (include results of investigation and basis for action taken) AT T/P/O O/V STATES ABOVE PERP DID VIOL. A VALID ORDER of protection by stealing her diary and posting it on the internet along with nude photos of C/V in an attempt to annoy &amp; alarm C/V
Victim's Statement of Allegations: Моя сестра - Рой Ден Холландер украл мою дневник и разместил с сексуальными изображениями, портретом мое голаголубое и сексуальное фото на интернет. Также он разместил на сайте 2 фотографии моего лица. Я хочу на сайте удалить эти фотографии и предупредить, а также хочу сообщить о преступлении в полицию. Я хочу сообщить о преступлении в полицию. Я хочу сообщить о преступлении в полицию.
False Statements made herein are punishable as a Class A Misdemeanor, pursuant to Section 210.45 of the Penal Law.								Victim's Signature [Signature]		Date 6.27.01
Other involved Agency(s)
Is There Reasonable Cause to Suspect A Child May Be The Victim of Abuse, Neglect or Maltreatment? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO						Any Guns In The House? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Any Guns Seized? <input type="checkbox"/> YES <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NO		Household Member Have a Pistol Permit? <input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> No
If Yes, Reporting Officer Must Contact the NYS Child Abuse Hotline Registry # 1-800-635-1522.						Permit No.		Issuing County		Name
REFERRALS: <input type="checkbox"/> Child Protective Services <input type="checkbox"/> Licensing Bureau <input type="checkbox"/> Adult Protective Services <input type="checkbox"/> Domestic Violence Services <input type="checkbox"/> Other Outside Agency						Name of Person Notified: Date: Time: Notified By:
Reporting Officer's Signature (Include Rank) PO [Signature]						Officer I.D. No. 925892		Date 6.27.01		Page of 1
Supervisor's Signature (Include Rank)						Date				Pages

Queens, at 89-14 Parsons Blvd., Jamaica, NY
11432, on January 31, 2001

P R E S E N T: Hon. JOHN M. HUNT

Judge

2001 Q 00644
In the Matter of a Proceeding under Article 8 of the Family Court Act

ALINA A. SHIPILINA

Date of Birth:

Petitioner,

v.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Date of Birth:

Respondent,

Docket No.

O-01988/01

TEMPORARY ORDER OF PROTECTION

☒ Ex-Parte

☐ Respondent
Present in Court

NOTICE: YOUR FAILURE TO OBEY THIS ORDER MAY SUBJECT YOU TO MANDATORY ARREST AND CRIMINAL PROSECUTION, WHICH MAY RESULT IN YOUR INCARCERATION FOR UP TO SEVEN YEARS FOR CRIMINAL CONTEMPT, AND/OR MAY SUBJECT YOU TO FAMILY COURT PROSECUTION AND INCARCERATION FOR UP TO SIX MONTHS FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT. IF YOU FAIL TO APPEAR IN COURT WHEN YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DO SO, THIS ORDER MAY BE EXTENDED IN YOUR ABSENCE AND CONTINUE IN EFFECT UNTIL YOU APPEAR IN COURT.

NOTICE: PURSUANT TO SECTION 1113 OF THE FAMILY COURT ACT, AN APPEAL FROM THIS ORDER MUST BE TAKEN WITHIN 30 DAYS OF RECEIPT OF THE ORDER BY APPELLANT IN COURT, 35 DAYS FROM THE DATE OF MAILING OF THE ORDER TO APPELLANT BY THE CLERK OF COURT, OR 30 DAYS AFTER SERVICE BY A PARTY OR THE LAW GUARDIAN UPON THE APPELLANT, WHICHEVER IS EARLIEST.

A petition under Article 8 of the Family Court Act, sworn to on January 31, 2001 having been filed in this Court in the above entitled proceeding, and good cause having been shown,

Now therefore, it is hereby ORDERED that ROY DEN HOLLANDER observe the following conditions of behavior:

- [01] Stay 500' away from: [A] ALINA A. SHIPILINA
- [B] the home of ALINA A. SHIPILINA
- [E] the place of employment of ALINA A. SHIPILINA;

[02] Refrain from assault, stalking, harassment, menacing, reckless endangerment, disorderly conduct, intimidation, threats or any criminal offense against ALINA A. SHIPILINA;

[99] Observe such other condition(s) as are necessary to further the purposes of protection [specify conditions]: RESPONDENT NOT TO MAKE PHONE CALLS TO PETITIONER.;

JUDITH YORK

Present in Court

It is further ordered that this temporary order of protection shall remain in effect until April 6, 2001

Dated: January 31, 2001

Hon. JOHN M. HUNT, J.F.C.

APR 06 2001

Order Extended to

5-31-01

J.F.C.

Order Extended to

J.F.C.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY THAT THIS IS A TRUE COPY OF A TEMPORARY ORDER OF PROTECTION MADE IN THE MANNER DESIGNATED IN SUCH COPY AND SHOWN BY THE RECORDS OF THE FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, WITHIN THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR THE COUNTY OF QUEENS

Richard Canner Clerk of Court

Dated: JAN 31 2001, 20

CHECK APPLICABLE LINE:

- ☐ Personal service executed (specify date): _____
- ☐ Order mailed on (specify date(s) and to whom mailed): _____
- ☐ Order received in court on (specify date(s) and to whom given): _____

The Family Court Act provides that presentation of a copy of this order of protection to any police officer or peace officer acting pursuant to his or her special duties shall authorize, and in some situations may require, such officer to arrest a person who is alleged to have violated it's terms to bring him or her before the court to face whatever penalties may be imposed therefore.

Federal law provides that this order must be honored and enforced by state and tribal courts, including courts of a state, the District of Columbia, a commonwealth, territory or possession of the United States, if it is established that the person against whom the order is sought has or will be afforded reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard in accordance with state law sufficient to protect that person's rights (18 U.S.C. 2265).

It is a federal offense to: cross state lines to violate an order of protection; cross state lines to engage in stalking, harassment or domestic violence; purchase, transfer, possess or receive a firearm following a conviction of a domestic violence misdemeanor involving the use or attempted use of physical force or a deadly weapon; or (for persons other than military or law enforcement officers while on duty) purchase, transport, possess or receive a firearm while an order of protection, issued after notice and an opportunity to be heard, prohibiting assault, harassment, threatening and/or stalking, is in effect (18 U.S.C. §§922(g)(8), 922(g)(9), 2261, 2261A, 2262).

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF QUEENS

ALINA A. SHIPILINA
Petitioner,
v.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Respondent,

Docket No.
O-01988/01

PETITION
Family Offense

TO THE FAMILY COURT:

The undersigned Petitioner respectfully shows that:

1. ALINA A. SHIPILINA resides at 28-15 34TH ST., #4H., ASTORIA, NY 11103-0000, and is the SPOUSE of the Respondent.
2. Respondent resides at 545 EAST 14TH ST., #10D,, NEW YORK, NY 10009-0000.
3. On or about January 28, 2001 at a music store in new York county at approx. 2:30pm, the Respondent committed an act or acts which constitute (aggravated harassment in the second degree), (harassment in the first degree), (harassment in the second degree), (menacing in the second degree), (menacing in the third degree), (assault in the second degree), (assault in the third degree), (attempted assault), (disorderly conduct), (reckless endangerment), (stalking in the first degree), (stalking in the second degree), (stalking in the third degree), (stalking in the fourth degree) toward ALINA A. SHIPILINA who is the SPOUSE of said Respondent in that the Respondent threatens petr. Petr. states " My husband threatened to have me deported. He said that America was not for me and that it was his decision where I live. He makes me very afraid because he threatens to send me away without telling me when. He tells me that he know people in the Embassy and Immigration, both here and in Moscow. " Petr. states that about 1 month ago resp. grabbed petr. by the arm and left a scratch on petr.'s arm. Petr. states that resp. wnts petr. to pay resp. between $15,000 and $25,000 to stay in the USA. Petr. states that resp. once showed petr. a gun and that resp. sleeps with a knife. Petr. is afraid of resp. and seeks that resp. stay away from petr. and petr.'s residence and stop threatening petr.
5. The following aggravating circumstances, if any, are present in this case: Resp. has a history of threatening petr. and once showed petr. a gun.

6. The following criminal, matrimonial or family court proceeding(s) involving the respondent (has)(have) been filed:
N/A

7. Indicate whether a previous application has been made to any court or judge for the relief requested herein and, if so, the relief, if any, granted and the date of such relief: N/A

8. Respondent is licensed or has a license application pending to carry, possess, repair, sell or otherwise dispose of the following firearms: Petr. does not know.

9. Respondent is in possession of the following licensed and unlicensed firearms: Petr. states that resp. once showed petr. a gun.

10. There is a substantial risk that the Respondent may use or threaten to use a firearm unlawfully against Petitioner (and members of the Petitioner's family or household) for the following reasons:

a. Respondent has been convicted of the following violent felony offenses: N/A

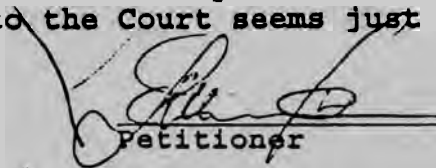

b. Respondent has previously been found to have willfully failed to obey an order of protection and such willful failure involved (infliction of serious physical injury, use or threatened use of a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument and behavior constituting a violent felony offense) as follows: N/A

c. The following facts and circumstances create a substantial risk that Respondent may use or threaten to use a firearm unlawfully against Petitioner or members of Petitioner's family or household: N/A

WHEREFORE, Petitioner prays

(a) that the Respondent be adjudged to have committed the family offense alleged;

(b) that the Court enter an order of protection, specifying conditions of behavior to be observed by the Respondent in accordance with Section 842 of the Family Court Act; and for such other and further relief as to the Court seems just and proper.

Petitioner

VERIFICATION

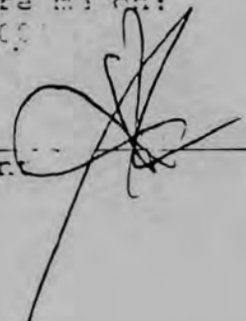

STATE OF NEW YORK                    )
  : ss.:
COUNTY OF QUEENS                 )

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, above named being duly sworn, deposes and says: I am the Petitioner in the within action; that I have read and know the contents of the foregoing Petition; that the same is true to my own knowledge, except as to matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and that as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

_____
Petitioner

Sworn to before me on:
January 31, 2008

_____
Court Assistant

KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

RONALD J. KUBA
NICHOLAS J. MUNDY*

*(ADMITTED IN N.Y. & N.J.)

DAWN P. GUIDONE†
PAULETTE DETIBERIIS†

†(ADMITTED IN N.Y. & CT.)

321 BROADWAY
NEW YORK, NY 10007
(212) 732-5050
FAX (212) 766-0049

ROCKLAND COUNTY OFFICE
(914) 356-1313

NEW JERSEY OFFICE
(201) 801-0601

February 5, 2001

Via Certified Mail RRR and First Class Mail

Roy Den Hollander
545 East 14th Street, #10D
New York, NY 10009

Dear Mr. Hollander:

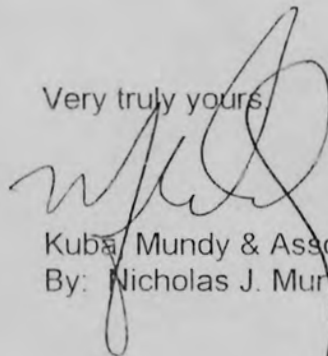

This office has been retained by your wife, Alina Shiplina. Ms. Shiplina has requested that we commence divorce proceedings, but not before giving you the opportunity to contact us, or to have an attorney contact us on your behalf, to discuss the possibility of resolving this matter amicably.

Divorce proceedings can be difficult for both parties. Recognizing this, our client desires to discuss the issues with you in a mutually agreeable setting, in the hopes that reasonable solutions can be reached.

Nonetheless, if I do not receive a response from you or your attorney within seven (7) days from the date of this letter, my client has instructed me to commence action without your cooperation.

Please be guided accordingly.

Very truly yours,

Kuba, Mundy & Associates
By: Nicholas J. Mundy, Esq.

NJM/ab

Supreme Court of the State of New York
County of NEW YORK

Date of filing: 2/13/2001
Index No. 01350091
Plaintiff designates

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Plaintiff

against

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
Angelina Chipilina

Defendant

New York
County as the place of trial
The basis of the venue is Plaintiff's residence

Summons with Notice

Plaintiff resides at 545 East 14th St.
New York, N.Y. 10009
County of New York

ACTION FOR A DIVORCE

To the above named Defendant

and, ACTION TO ANNUL A MARRIAGE

You are hereby summoned to serve a notice of appearance, on the Plaintiff's Attorney(s) within 20 days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service (or within 30 days after the service is complete if this summons is not personally delivered to you within the State of New York); and in case of your failure to appear, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the notice set forth below.

Dated, February 12, 2001
New York, New York

JUDITH BADER-YORK

Attorney(s) for Plaintiff

Office and Post Office Address

331 Madison Avenue
15th Floor
New York, NY 10017
(212) 986-1480

NOTICE: The nature of this action is to dissolve the marriage between the parties, on the grounds of the cruel and inhuman treatment of the plaintiff by the defendant; the adultery of defendant; in the alternative, to annul the marriage on the grounds of the defendant's fraud.

The relief sought is.

A judgment of absolute divorce in favor of the Plaintiff dissolving the marriage between the parties in this action; in the alternative, a judgment annulling the marriage between the parties. The nature of any ancillary relief demanded is equitable distribution of the marital property of the parties, awarding counsel fees to the Plaintiff, and for such other further and additional relief as the court may deem just, proper and equitable in the premises.

KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES
ATTORNEYS AT LAW

RONALD J. KUBA
NICHOLAS J. MUNDY*

*(ADMITTED IN N.Y. & N.J.)

DAWN P. GUIDONE †
PAULETTE DETIBERIIS †

†(ADMITTED IN N.Y. & CT.)

321 BROADWAY
NEW YORK, NY 10007
(212) 732-5050
FAX (212) 766-0049

ROCKLAND COUNTY OFFICE
(914) 356-1313
NEW JERSEY OFFICE
(201) 801-0601

March 12, 2001

Judith Bader-York, Esq.
331 Madison Avenue, 15th Floor
New York, NY 10017

Re: Hollander v. Shiplina
Index Number 350091/01

Dear Ms. Bader-York:

Enclosed please find defendant's Demand for Complaint.

As discussed this date, in the interest of sparing our respective clients embarrassment, time and expense, my client has asked that we attempt to resolve divorce and financial matters amicably. My letter to your client dated February 5, 2001 offered to proceed in that fashion, but was responded to with a Summons alleging, among other things, cruel and inhuman treatment.

In a final effort to avoid public disclosure of certain familial facts and circumstances, which by their nature should remain private and personal, I am once again extending the opportunity to engage in non-formal discovery and exchange of financial disclosure and documentation pertinent to equitable distribution and maintenance issues, prior to draft and filing of a Complaint, Answer and Counterclaims in this matter.

Please be guided accordingly.

Very truly yours,

Kuba, Mundy & Associates
By: Nicholas J. Mundy, Esq.

NJM/ab

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT
[Draft 5/23/01]

Complaint Against Ms. Shipilina

1. On or about January 31, 2000, in Moscow, Russia, Ms. Shipilina, unbeknownst to her future husband, decided to accept her future husband's marriage proposal solely to obtain a green card so she could work in America as a lap dancer and prostitute; she had no intention of fulfilling her duties as a spouse.
2. On or about March 5 to March 11, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina surreptitiously put foreign substances into her husband's meals that caused him sleepiness, nausea, constipation, euphoria and befuddled thinking, symptoms consistent with opiate poisoning.
3. On March 11, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina did not consider her wedding ceremony on that day as serious; for her it was just business in order to obtain a green card to America.
4. From March 11, 2000, the day of her marriage, to the present in New York City, Russia and Cyprus, Ms. Shipilina has repeatedly slandered and libeled her husband to her prostitution clients, lap dancing clients, lovers, friends, relatives and associates.
5. On or about March 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina stated to a third party that she would not be faithful to her husband because she was a "symbol of self realization" and would not bring herself down for her husband by obeying her marital vows.
6. From the middle of March until the beginning of June 2000, Ms. Shipilina refused to cohabit with her husband.
7. On or about the last half of March 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina engaged in intercourse twice with a Russian man whose first name is Valodya.
8. On or about the beginning of April 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina illegally acquired a second Russian passport to hide her subsequent trip to Milan, Florence and Venice, Italy for prostitution purposes.
9. On or about the beginning of April 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina tried to seduce a man named Alexei who managed the Russian discotheque "Joy".
10. On or about the first half of April 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina discussed with one of her prostitution clients, Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, intimate details of her marital relationship, see allegations 16, 17, 18 and 19 below.

11. On or about April 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina planned, without notification or consultation with her husband, to travel to Greece or Venezuela to ply her trade as a lap dancer and prostitute if she did not obtain a spousal immigrant visa to the United States.
12. On or about the beginning of May 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina dated a man whom she had talked with only once on the telephone.
13. [On or about May 9, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina engaged in sexual conduct with a Russian man whose first name is Andrei.]
14. On or about May 9, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, before going out looking for men with her friend Katya she cold heartedly and callously wrote to her husband, "You present me the best moments of my life and I send you Special Love."
15. On or about the middle of May 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina sexually propositioned a Russian man with the first name of Valodya, see allegation 7 above.
16. On or about the middle of May 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina conspired with her prostitution client Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, see allegation 10 above, to deceive her husband into believing that the two of them were only friends.
17. On or about May 19 to 22, 2000, in Milan, Florence and Venice, Italy, Ms. Shipilina engaged in numerous counts of prostitution by repeatedly having intercourse, fellatio and other sexual conduct with Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, see allegations 10 & 16 above, in return for money and jewelry.
18. On or about May 19 to 22, 2000, in Milan, Florence and Venice, Italy, Ms. Shipilina used illegal drugs to enhance her sexual performance with her prostitution client Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, see allegations 10, 16, and 17 above.
19. On or about May 19 to 22, 2000, in Milan, Florence and Venice, Italy, Ms. Shipilina denigrated, insulted, mocked and otherwise slandered her husband to her prostitution client Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, see allegations 10, 16, 17 and 18 above.
20. On or about the end of May 2000, in Italy and Moscow, Russia, Ms. Shipilina took extraordinary actions to disguise from her husband her prostitution activities in Italy, including praying to God that her husband will never suspect anything.
21. Through out Ms. Shipilina's marriage to Roy Den Hollander, she maintained contact with her prostitution client Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo, see allegations 10, 16, 17, 18 and 19 above, while swearing to her husband that she no longer communicated with Mr. Ibarra.

22. On or about June 16, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina cold heartedly and calculatingly lied to her husband when she told him by telephone that there was no one else but him and that she respected and loved him, which was all part of her plan to circumvent the Immigration Laws of the United States in order to assure that her husband take her to America.
23. On or about the middle of June 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina stated that her husband saw her as a real wife, but that she would never see him as a real husband.
24. On or about the third week in June 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina dated and engaged in petting in public with a Russian man whose first name is Roma.
25. On or about June 24 and 25, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina engaged in sexual conduct with a Russian man whose first name is Valodya from St. Petersburg, a different man than the one cited in allegations 7 and 15 above.
26. On or about 5:30 am on June 25, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina allowed a taxi driver to rub her knees in order to save money on the fare.
27. On or about June 28, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina intended to once again engage in sexual conduct with a Russian man whose first name is Valodya, see allegation 25 above.
28. On or about July 5, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina duplicitously and hypocritically wrote her husband that she was sending him "clean love" just days after she engaged in a sexual affair with a Russian man by the first name of Valodya, see allegation 25 above.
29. On or about the first week in July 2000 in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina stated her plans were to go to America as her husband's wife to make money as a lap dancer and prostitute and then divorce her husband.
30. On or about July 10, 2000, when Ms. Shipilina arrived in America in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina refused to put her belongings in the dresser, but instead kept most of her belongings in a large suitcase near the closet where she hung the dresses she used for stripping.

[In a July 1999 postcard to her boyfriend Valodya in St. Petersburg, see allegations 25 and 27, Alina expresses her view that her marriage is just business to her.]

[In a July 1999 postcard to her boyfriend Valodya in St. Petersburg, see allegations 25 and 27, Alina expresses her romantic feelings for Valodya.]

31. On or about July 17, 2000, in New York City, Ms. Shipilina began working as a lap dancer at Flash Dancers on Broadway and began collecting the business cards of some of her customers, contacting them and dating her customers.
32. From July through November 2000 in New York City, Ms. Shipilina repeatedly lied to her husband about whether she worked in the private Champagne Room at Flash Dancers and the activities she engaged in while in that room with men and women in return for money.
33. From July to the present in New York City, Ms. Shipilina made from lap dancing and dating her customers between $13,000 and $15,000 in cash a month on which she failed to file quarterly income tax returns and which she transport out of the United States without filing the proper papers with the United States Custom Service.
34. In August and October 2000 in New York City, Ms. Shipilina refused to consult with a tax accountant concerning the proper reporting of her taxes, which caused her husband to decide to file a separate return for 2000.
35. From July through September 2000 in New York City, Ms. Shipilina refused to contribute to the household even though she was earning far more than her husband.
36. From July through December 2000 in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina stated she preferred to work at Flash Dancers than go out with her husband.
37. From mid July through the beginning of September and then again in October and November 2000 in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina surreptitiously put foreign substances into her husband's meals that caused sleepiness, nausea, constipation, euphoria and befuddled thinking, see allegation 2 above.
38. In early August 2000 late one evening in the kitchen of her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina, six feet two inches tall, weighing 150 lbs and a former three times champion of Russia in the long jump, tried to stab her husband with a kitchen knife.
39. On or about August 8 and 9, 2000, in New York City, Ms. Shipilina failed to go work, which was where she told her husband she was going, and was out of the home from around 6pm until 4:30am the next morning.
40. On or about the middle of August, September and October 2000 in New York City and Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina began feigning a nonexistent serious medical condition in a cold and calculating effort to elicit even more sympathy from her husband in order to distract him from the truth of her continuing ruthless exploitation of his love for her.

[On or about September 9, 2000, in New York City at Flash Dancers, Ms. Shipilina in return for money went into a private room where she allowed a bearded man who appears on television to intimately touch her so that she received pleasure.]

41. On or about September 4, 2000, in New York City, Ms. Shipilina, before traveling to Cyprus where she planned and visited three of her former prostitution clients, duplicitously told her husband that she kissed him from her clear soul and said he was her only lover and true boyfriend.
42. From September 9 to September 29, 2000, Ms. Shipilina refused to allow her husband to travel with her to Krasnodar, Russia, and Limassol, Cyprus, where she met with three men, their first names are Rikos, Andrios and Stephanos, who were formerly her prostitution clients when she worked as a prostitute and lap dancer at the night clubs Tramps and Zygos in Limassol, Cyprus, from January to June 1999.
43. On or about September 26, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia, Ms. Shipilina insisted to her husband that she never engaged in prostitution because, as she said, after she sold her body to a man she would go to church and God would forgive her and then it was as if it never happened. Ms. Shipilina then insidiously rebuked her husband with, "If God can forgive me; why can't you!"
44. On or about the beginning of October 2000 in New York City, Ms. Shipilina lent her husband at his request $600 in cash, when her husband paid her back he mistakenly paid her $640, but Ms. Shipilina, after counting the money twice, did not inform her husband about his overpayment.
45. On or about the middle of October 2000 in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina threatened her husband with death by putting into his food some poison she had brought from Russia with her or by having her Russian friends in New York kill him, see allegations 2 and 37 above.
46. On or about the end of October 2000 in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina maliciously smashed against the floor a prized memorabilia coffee cup of her husband's from Channel 5 News; when asked why she smashed the cup after unsuccessfully trying to cover up her actions, she said her husband was not meant to have the cup anymore.
47. On or about the beginning and end of November 2000 in her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina threatened her husband by saying that after she moved out of his apartment something very bad, even death would happen to him because she would have her Russian friends harm him.
48. On or about the middle of November 2000 in the foyer of her husband's apartment in New York City, Ms. Shipilina took the knife she carries out of her purse and tried to stab her husband, see allegation 38 above.

49. On or about the beginning of December 2000 in New York City, Ms. Shipilina refused to submit a change of address card to the United States Post Office when she moved out of her husband's apartment because a paralegal at the law firm of Kuba, Mundy & Associates told her it would be better in her efforts to obtain a permanent green card for the Immigration and Naturalization Service to believe that she was still living with her husband.
50. On January 28, 2001, at around 2:30pm in the Virgin Coffee Shop on Union Square, Ms. Shipilina threatened her husband by saying that if he did not lie to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in order to get her a permanent green card, she would have her Russian mafia friends put him in the hospital or kill him or she would do it herself.
51. On January 31, 2001, one year to the date that her husband had proposed marriage and three days after her husband refused to lie to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) so Ms. Shipilina could obtain a permanent green card, she perjured herself before the Queens County Family Court by making false accusations against her husband in order to obtain a temporary order of injunction in an effort to use the Justice System to intimidate her husband into acceding to her demands that he perjure himself to the INS in order for her to obtain a permanent green card.
52. From March until December 2000 in New York City, Russia and Cyprus, Ms. Shipilina wantonly and recklessly engaged in unprotected sex with various men.
53. From May 2000 to the present in New York City, Russia and Cyprus, Ms. Shipilina often uses the name "Angelina" and the last name "Chipilina" as well as a black wig to disguise herself and keep some of her nefarious activities from being identified with her.
54. From July 2000 to the present in New York City, Russia and Cyprus, Ms. Shipilina has repeatedly demonstrated extreme avarice.
55. From July 2000 to the present in New York City, Ms. Shipilina experiences great joy working in the sex industry and the money it brings her.
56. From December 1998 to the present in New York City, Russia, Cyprus and Mexico, Ms. Shipilina has been an active member in the underworld Russian sex industry acting as a prostitute, procurer, pornography film producer and lap dancer.
57. From December 1998 to the present in New York City, Russia, Cyprus and Mexico, Ms. Shipilina has activity prompted and profited from the international Russian sex industry by recruiting young women for prostitution and pornography films.
58. From July 23, 1999 to December 2000, in New York City, Las Vegas, Florida and Russia, Ms. Shipilina repeatedly lied, dissembled and prevaricated to her future and current husband in a ruthless and opportunistic plan to exploit her husband's love and compassion for her in order to defraud him into marriage so she could acquire a temporary green card and to deceive him, once they were married, into believing she was a faithful and devoted spouse so that he would take her to America and provide her with assistance in America.

59. From July 23, 1999 to the present in America, Russia, Cyprus and Mexico, Ms. Shipilina incongruously and deceptively likened herself to an Angel who spread joy around and did wonderful things while in reality she was greedily pursuing as much money as she could through prostitution and lap dancing.
60. From February 1999 to December 1999 in Russia, Las Vegas and New York City, Ms. Shipilina intentionally engaged in a course of conduct to intimidate and cause emotional distress in her husband by practicing black magic rituals.

Supreme Court of the State of New York
New York County Courthouse
60 Centre Street
New York, New York 10007

Jun 04, 2001

To: COHEN GOLDSTEIN & SILPE LLP
505 PARK AVENUE - 8TH FLOOR
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10022

For Plaintiff

: Index # 0350091/2001

Case of HOLLANDER, ROY DEN
V SHIPILINA, ALINA A.

YOU ARE HEREBY DIRECTED TO APPEAR FOR A PRELIMINARY CONFERENCE ON 06/21/01, AT 9:30 AM BEFORE JUSTICE LOBIS, JOAN, I.A.S PT. 20 ROOM 345, PHONE # 374-8547 AT 60 CENTRE STREET, NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10007.

Both parties must be personally present in court at the time of the conference, (202.16(f) (1) Uniform Rules).

COUNSEL ARE ADVISED THAT THE FOLLOWING PAPERS SHALL BE EXCHANGED AND FILED WITH THE COURT NO LATER THAN 10 DAYS PRIOR TO THE PRELIMINARY CONFERENCE : (i) statements of net worth; (ii) all paycheck stubs for the current calendar year and the last paycheck stub for the immediately preceding calendar year; (iii) all filed state and federal income tax returns for the previous three years, including both personal returns and returns filed on behalf of any partnership or closely held corporation of which the party is a partner or shareholder, (iv) all W-2 wage and tax statements, 1099 forms, and K-1 forms for any year in the past three years in which the party did not file state and federal income tax returns, (v) all statements of accounts received during the past three years from each financial institution in which the party has maintained any account in which cash or securities are held, (vi) the statements immediately preceding and following the date of commencement of the matrimonial action pertaining to: (A) any policy of life insurance having a cash or dividend surrender value; and (B) any deferred compensation plan of any type or nature in which the party has an interest including, but not limited to, Individual Retirement Accounts, pensions, profit-sharing plans, Keogh plans, 401(k) plans and other retirement plans.

Counsel must provide the court with copies of these papers at the time of the conference. Both parties personally must be present in court at the time of the conference, and the judge personally shall address the parties at some time during the conference.

(202.16(e) (f) )1) Uniform rules).

The matters to be considered at the conference may include, among other things: (i) applications for pendente lite relief, including counsel fees; (ii) compliance with the requirement of compulsory financial disclosure, including the exchange and filing of a supplemental statement of net worth indicating material changes in any previously exchanged and filed statement worth; (iii) simplification and limitation of issues; (iv) settlement of all or some portions of the case; (v) the establishment of a timetable for the completion of all disclosure proceedings, (202.16 (f) (2) Uniform Rules).

There will be no adjournments without court approval. The recipient of this notice is advised to notify opposing counsel and/or self-represented litigants of the conference date.

Counsel are required to complete the information form on the next page and submit it to the court at the time of the conference.

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Index No.350091/01

Plaintiff,
-against-

VERIFIED COMPLAINT

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
Angelina Chipilina,

Defendant.

-----X

Plaintiff, by his attorneys, Cohen Goldstein & Silpe, LLP, as and for his Verified Complaint, alleges as follows:

1. The parties were married on March 11, 2000, in Krasnodar, Russia in a civil ceremony.
2. Each of the parties was over the age of twenty-one (21) years at the time of the commencement of this action.
3. Plaintiff has been a resident of the State of New York for a continuous period in excess of two (2) years immediately preceding the commencement of this action.
4. There are no children born of the marriage and none are expected.
5. There is no other action, pending between the parties for divorce, annulment, separation or dissolution of the marriage, whether in the Courts of this State, or in any sister state or foreign jurisdiction.

6. No decree or judgment of divorce, annulment, separation or dissolution of the marriage has been granted to either party in any Court of this State or in any sister state or foreign jurisdiction.

7. Plaintiff has taken all steps solely within his power to remove any barrier to defendant's remarriage.

AS AND FOR A CAUSE OF ACTION
FOR DIVORCE ON THE GROUNDS OF DEFENDANT'S CRUELTY

8. Plaintiff repeats and realleges the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 7 of this verified complaint with the same force and effect as if fully set forth herein.

9. Throughout the parties' marriage and without just cause, provocation or consent, defendant engaged in a course of cruel and inhuman treatment toward plaintiff, which included, but was not limited to the following:

(a) At the end of October 2000, while the parties were walking across a street, defendant admitted that she had taken drugs while engaged in sexual intercourse as a prostitute when she traveled to Italy in May 2000.

(b) During that same conversation, when plaintiff expressed his upset and horror at defendant's behavior, defendant punched plaintiff in the back causing him pain.

(c) On information and belief commencing sometime in 2000 and continuing throughout the marriage, defendant engaged in regular acts of prostitution causing plaintiff humiliation, embarrassment and concern for his own health and safety.

(d) On or about September 9, 2000, while working as a lap dancer at Flash Dancers in New York City, defendant engaged in sexual contact with a stranger, causing plaintiff humiliation and embarrassment.

(e) In or about November 2000, in the foyer of the marital apartment, defendant took a knife from her purse and attempted to stab plaintiff.

(f) On a couple of occasions during November, 2000 while at the marital residence, defendant threatened plaintiff that her "Russian mafia friends" would hurt plaintiff and possibly kill him after she moved out of the marital apartment.

(g) On or about January 28, 2001, at the Virgin Coffee Shop in Manhattan defendant threatened plaintiff that if he did not lie to the Immigration and Naturalization Service to get her a green card, that she would direct her "Russian mafia friends" to put plaintiff in the hospital or even kill him.

10. The foregoing acts of cruel and inhuman treatment have greatly injured plaintiff and have caused plaintiff great anguish. Defendant's wilful actions have rendered it unsafe and improper for plaintiff to cohabit with defendant as husband and wife.

AS AND FOR A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR DIVORCE ON THE GROUNDS OF DEFENDANT'S ADULTERY

11. Plaintiff repeats and realleges the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 10 of this verified complaint with the same force and effect as if fully set forth herein.

12. In or about the end of May 2000, defendant engaged in an adulterous affair with Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo and had sexual intercourse with him in Milan, Italy.

13. Defendant is currently employed as a lap dancer, stripper and prostitute. On information and belief defendant has been regularly engaged in acts of prostitution with numerous males on various dates and at places, not all of which are now known to plaintiff.

14. Plaintiff has always conducted himself toward defendant in a proper and fit manner and has always been a loving and dutiful husband. Defendant's conduct hereinafter complained of was without just cause, provocation or consent on plaintiff's part.

AS AND FOR A CAUSE OF ACTION
FOR ANNULMENT ON THE GROUNDS OF FRAUD

15. Plaintiff repeats and realleges the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 14 of this verified complaint with the same force and effect as if fully set forth herein.

16. In or about December 2000, a few days before defendant moved out of the former marital apartment, she advised plaintiff she would not change her address because it would be better for her immigration case if she had the same address as plaintiff. She also threatened plaintiff with bodily harm if he ever did anything to undermine her application for a green card and sought to induce plaintiff to lie in order to help her obtain a green card.

17. On information and belief, defendant obtained plaintiff's consent to the marriage by fraud in that she never intended to live with defendant as husband and wife and only intended to use the marriage to obtain an immigrant visa to secure legal entry to the United States and to become a legal permanent resident.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant as follows:

1. Granting plaintiff an annulment on the grounds of fraud; or in the alternative

2. Granting plaintiff an absolute divorce dissolving the marriage between plaintiff and defendant upon the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment and adultery of the plaintiff by the defendant;

3. Granting plaintiff exclusive possession of the marital apartment;

4. Granting plaintiff equitable distribution of the parties' marital property or a distributive award in lieu thereof;

5. Awarding plaintiff counsel and expert fees and expenses, in connection with the prosecution of the within action; and

6. Granting plaintiff such other and further relief as the Court deems just, together with the costs and disbursements of this action.

Dated: New York, New York
June 21, 2001

Yours, etc.

COHEN GODDSTEIN & SILPE, LLP

By:

Steven M. Silpe, Esq.

Attorneys for Plaintiff

505 Park Avenue

New York, New York 10022

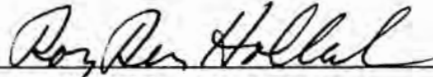

(212) 315-4400

INDIVIDUAL VERIFICATION

STATE OF NEW YORK    )
                                  ) ss. :
COUNTY OF NEW YORK    )

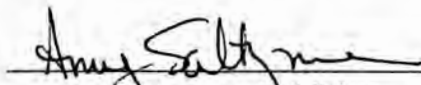

ROY DEN HOLLANDER, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

Deponent is the plaintiff in the within action;
deponent has read the foregoing Complaint and knows the contents thereof; the same is true to deponent's own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, deponent believes them to be true.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Sworn to before me this 21st day of June, 2001

Notary Public

AMY SALTZMAN
Notary Public, State of New York
No. 025A5019252
Qualified in Westchester County
Commission Expires October 18, ~~20~~2001

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT

Legal Proceedings

(Page cites are first to English; second Russian)

1. Issues

- a. Fraudulent concealment or misrepresentation of material facts.
- b. Adultery
  - i. Prostitution as course of immoral conduct to infer adultery.
- c. Cruel and Inhuman treatment
- d. Finances
- e. Obstruction of Investigation
- f. Impeachment

2. Preliminary

- a. Order directed at Alina to stop Alina from interfering with Roy's investigation into the issues of the case:
  - i. Alina telephoned Anastasia Vasiljeva trying to keep her from providing Roy with information and followed up with a message on Anastasia's pager that Alina and Anastasia would meet in court. As a result, Anastasia refuses to provide Roy with further relevant information.
  - ii. Alina and Inessa visited Irina, Melios and Marios Athanasiou recently in Cyprus and apparently told them not to provide information to Roy.
And to put a halt to her mother from
  - iii. Threatening translators and potential witnesses, and
  - iv. Forging false court documents in an effort to intimidate people into not cooperating with Roy's efforts to find information leading to potential witnesses out side the court's subpoena power for testimony as to fraud, adultery and impeachment.
- b. Order to prevent concealment and transfer of cash income abroad because it is marital property. During marriage Alina accumulated property, income after expenses, of nearly $100,000 while Roy loss in the stock market over $150,000.
- c. Name Alina's partners in adultery as co-respondents, name as Vladimir Doe.
- d. Motion for physical examination to determine if carrying STDs.
- e. Mundy's dissemblance about medical records showing I beat Alina.
- f. Mundy's threat to use evidence of an alleged crime committed by Roy to obtain a favorable settlement for his client in a civil litigation—the extortion audiotape.

2. Discovery

- a. Method for Russia, Cyprus, Mexico and Italy
  - i. Preliminary investigation

1. Interview sheets for all potential witnesses.
  2. Potential witnesses write down information and notarize signatures.
  3. Court action to stop Alina's and Inessa's interference and defamation in Krasnodar.
  - ii. Voluntary video depositions
  - iii. Written Questions
  - iv. Commission
  - v. Letters Rogatory to compel testimony
- b. Production of original diary for inspection and copying. Complete diary from beginning to present for evidence as to issues of
- i. Annulment: Fraudulent concealment or misrepresentation of material facts for which need corroboration.
    1. Material facts concealed
      - a. Habitual prostitution
      - b. Pornography work
      - c. Completely nude stripping with sexual contact work
      - d. Extensive promiscuity
      - e. Recruitment of girls for Russia's sex industry
      - f. Plan to leave Russia by marrying a foreigner
      - g. History of sexually transmitted diseases
    2. Intention to marry Roy for green card
    3. Intention to commit adultery after marriage
      - a. Second international passport
    4. Substances in food to induce Roy to go through with the wedding
  - ii. [Adultery
    1. Prostitution as course of immoral conduct inferring adultery.
    2. Incidents of adultery and co-respondents.]
  - iii. Cruel and inhuman treatment
    1. Willingness to put apparent narcotics in fiancée's food in total disregard of possible effect as to fiancée's health.
    2. Refusal to live with Roy in Moscow.
      - a. "What would I do, listen to his bloody philosophy." (39; 103)
    3. Admission of drug use to heighten sexual experience with prostitution client.
    4. Striking Roy.
    5. Engaging in regular acts of prostitution.
    6. Carried a STD.
    7. Tried to attack Roy with knife.
    8. Threats of grave bodily injury or death at the hands of Alina's Chechen mafia friends and her Chechen connections..

- iv. Finances
    - 1. Income
    - 2. Assets
      - a. Apartment and house
      - b. Cyprus bank account
  - v. Impeachment
    - 1. Honesty = Truthfulness, Sincerity
      - a. Willingness to lie under oath
        - i. [Lied to Court in obtaining Temporary Order of Protection]
        - ii. Lied to INS about
          - 1. Prostitution
          - 2. Arrest and deportation from Mexico.
          - 3. Cyprus occupation.
          - 4. Use of drugs.
      - b. Repeated evasion of taxes in US, Russia, Mexico and Cyprus. (Criminal Behavior)
      - c. Willingness to put apparent narcotics in fiancée's food in total disregard of possible effect as to fiancée's health. (Criminal Behavior)
    - 2. Inability to accurately recall details.
  - vi. Obstruction of Investigation that Alina planned and executed along with her mother to prevent the discovery of facts pertinent to the plaintiff's cause of action.
- c. Authentication that diary reports events that actually occurred and was written by Alina.
- 1. Admission,
but if refuses then
  - 2. Depositions (Written Questions, Commission, Letters Interrogatory). How many would the court require? Many have probative information on other issues.
    - a. Alexei Dikov
    - b. Inessa Shipilina
    - c. Tatyanna formerly at Flash Dancers
    - d. Aunt Sveta and her daughter Alyona
    - e. Friend Natasha who lives upstairs in her building
    - f. Katya who Alina often looked for guys with.
    - g. Lena, nurse and adviser
    - h. Olga, friend Alina and Lena
    - i. Inessa, worked at Vasiljeva, friend of Alina and Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned in two days when realized work involved prostitution.

- j. Anastasia Vasiljeva
  - k. Azul
  - l. Vladimir the sculptor
  - m. Vladimir 1
  - n. Vladimir 2
  - o. Chris 1, Cyprus
  - p. Stephanos, Cyprus
  - q. Vera Ivanasova
  - r. Yulya
  - s. Alfredo Ibarra
  - t. Katya
  - u. Irina
  - v. Others
- 3. Handwriting samples
    - a. Academy of Physical Culture
    - b. Zags
    - c. Letters to Leo
    - d. [Problem with directing Alina to write dictated text is that she studied calligraphy and may be able to disguise her handwriting.]
  - 4. Check the fingerprints on original diary pages.
- d. Production of all correspondence between Alina and Roy.
  - e. Authentication of correspondence in Roy's possession.
  - f. Authentication of letter from Alina that stated, "If something happen with me strange or if I find that you avenge me it will be one of the big mistake (without correction)—withour return.
    - i. Admission
  - g. Production of both international passports to infer
    - i. Concealment of intent before marriage to commit adultery and prostitution by surreptitiously traveling outside of Russia as evidence that for Alina marriage was not a serious obligation.
      - 1. Second international passport will show countries visited, when, provide its number that will allow backing tracking to show applied for before marriage.
    - ii. Impeachment as to honesty by showing intent to deceive
    - iii. Finances
      - 1. Hiding of assets through the violation of Customs laws by concealing transportation of cash overseas.
    - iv. Obstruction
      - 1. Travel overseas to persuade potential witnesses not to talk to Roy.

- a. Travel to Cyprus in April-May to persuade Irina, Melios and Marios not to talk to plaintiff.
- h. Production of all telephone records for both mobile and home in both US and Russia since inception of marriage to infer
  - i. [Adultery]
  - ii. Finances
    - 1. Contact with bank institutions
  - iii. Obstruction
  - iv. Impeachment
- i. Production of all emails
  - i. Finances
    - 1. Contact with bank institutions
  - ii. Obstruction
  - iii. Impeachment
- j. Production of any correspondence with men or women with whom she
  - i. Engaged in providing sexual services including lap dancing and stripping, prostitution or pornography or procuring for money before and after the marriage,
  - ii. [Engaged in sexual activity with after the marriage,]
- k. [Production of all medical records concerning STDs and diseases of the sex organs.]
- l. Production of Alina's income tax returns during marriage and before marriage in order to ascertain the existence of hidden assets.
  - i. 1998 Russia
  - ii. 1999
    - 1. Cyprus
    - 2. Mexico
    - 3. Russia
  - iii. 2000
    - 1. Russia
      - a. Italy prostitution
    - 2. US Quarterly filings, use form 4506 to obtain from IRS.
  - iv. 2001
    - 1. US Quarterly filings, use form 4506 to obtain from IRS.
- m. Production of all financial records, accounting for all income and assets, if records do not exist then a bona fide estimation.
  - i. New York
    - 1. Flash Dancers
      - a. Copy of all work schedules
      - b. Accounting for all income and cash receipts

2. Grace Del Marco
3. Free Lance modeling such as Judy Vann Associates
4. New modeling agency
5. Prostitution
  - a. Accounting for all cash receipts
6. Citibank accounts statements and safe deposit box usage.
7. Overseas accounts
- ii. Mexico
  1. Gentlemen's Club
    - a. Work schedules
    - b. Accounting for all income and cash receipts
  2. Penthouse Club
    - a. Work schedules
    - b. Accounting for all income and cash receipts
  3. Prostitution
    - a. Accounting for all cash receipts
- iii. Cyprus
  1. Zygos and Tramps
    - a. Work schedules
    - b. Accounting for all income and cash receipts
  2. Prostitution
    - a. Accounting for all cash receipts
- iv. Russia
  1. Apartment
    - a. [If Alina's name is not on the deed she still holds a 0.5 interest under Russian law because the apartment is her place of permanent residence.]
  2. House in village
  3. Prostitution
    - a. Accounting for all cash receipts
- n. Interrogatories to Alina
  - i. Full name, address and telephone number for the manager of Flash Dancers for the night shift when Alina works.
  - ii. Full name, address and telephone number for all defendant's past and present clients and customers with whom she engaged in sexual intercourse, deviate sexual intercourse and sexual contact as defined by NYS Penal Law 130; sexual conduct as defined by NYS Penal Law 230 and erotic conduct, including but not limited to lap dancing, stripping, erotic moving and still pictures, in return for money or some other economic benefit.
  - iii. List of all the places traveled to, date and with whom traveled since March 11, 2000.

- iv. List of addresses of all places stayed overnight since March 11, 2000.
- v. [List of all overnight guests in apartment in New York, Krasnodar or house in Yablonoskiyi village.]
- vi. For the full names, current addresses, telephone numbers of all the people that she and/or her mother contacted and the dates contacted in an effort to prevent them through persuasion intimidation or threats from providing information or assistance to the plaintiff in his investigation in the facts of this case.
- vii. Complete information about all the videos, digital images and still pictures that show her in sexually explicit positions or activities that she made for money (Finances, Annulment immoral conduct, Course of immoral conduct; Impeachment):
  - 1. When made?
  - 2. Where made?
  - 3. Name, address and telephone number of producers?
  - 4. How much paid for each video?
  - 5. Name, address and telephone number of person who paid Alina?
  - 6. Description of the images?
- viii. For a list of all employers and parties to whom she provided services in return for money and material benefit from 1998 to the present.
- ix. [For the full names, current addresses and telephone numbers for parties with whom she committed adultery or have first hand knowledge of her adulterous activities as defined by NYS law from March 11, 2000, to Present. Including but not limited to
  - 1. Boyfriend she was with on July 5 at around 4:30pm on the subway platform at Broadway on the N line. He was in his mid to late twenties, about six feet, round face. She was wearing white with red ribbons in her hair.
  - 2. Reya who procures models, including Alina, for sexual activity. Most of the models in Krasnodar know about Reya.
  - 3. Her clients in her almost daily masturbation service. (39; 102, 103)
  - 4. Vladimir who has a wife from Kazakhstan and a two-year-old child, and is friends with Vadik whose mother hung herself. (39, 42; 102, 110)
  - 5. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105)

6. Arsen who installed her TV antenna over a two-day period. (39, 40; 102, 103)
  7. Roma. (44; 121)
  8. Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg who sell jewelry. (44, 45; 122, 123)
  9. Stephanos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times.
  10. Rikos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times.
  11. Andrios whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times.
  12. Knife grinder. (19; 44)
  13. Vladimir who Alina arranged to help Inessa buy the apartment while Alina was in America with Roy. (35; 90)
  14. Dima who was pushed around by new Russians. (45; 123) [Adultery]
  15. Indian man whom Alina called a number of times. (46; 127)
  16. Brian Rubens, Nomura Securities, kissed and massaged his back at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
  17. Bearded man who works in TV that touched her in “single room” at Flash Dancers from which she had pleasure. (48; 130) [Adultery]
  18. Christopher Cecil, customer at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
  19. Arturo Barrera, older Mexican man who likes Russian girls, customer at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
  20. Alfredo Ibarra from Mexico (42, 43; 112-114)]
  21. Peter Petrovich, 233 E 60 St. Multiple telephone calls from Alina’s mobile to his number, 212 829 1105.
  22. All other men and women with whom Alina engaged in sexual contact as defined by NYS Penal Law 130 and sexual conduct as defined by NYS Penal Law 230 since March 11, 2000.]
- x. For the full names, current telephone numbers, current addresses and nature of her relationship with the following: (NOT A COMPLETE LIST OF ALL WITNESS WANT TO DEPOSE, JUST LIST OF THOSE FOR WHOM DO NOT HAVE CONTACT INFORMATION.)
1. [Producers and people present when Alina made her masturbation video. In addition, the location, date and money Alina earned. [Adultery]]
  2. The “clairvoyant” from whom Alina obtained the “salts and sugars”. (40, 46; 104, 128) [Fraud, Impeachment]
  3. Tatyanna who use to work at Flash Dancers and was friend of Alina’s. [Fraud, Impeachment]

4. Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned after two days because the work involved prostitution? (Anastasia, Dmitri) [Impeachment]
5. Inessa, worked at Vasiljeva, friend of Alina and Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned in two days when realized work involved prostitution. [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
6. Nadya who worked in Cyprus when Alina was there but husband sued for divorce because she was engaged in prostitution. (Yulya Kudinova Interview) [Impeachment]
7. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
8. Katya who accompanied Alina on dates with Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg. (39, 40, 41, 44, 45; 102, 105, 110, 123, 124, 125) [Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Authentication, Impeachment]
9. Masha Chebitkevich, Diary p 46, attended her bridal shower June 21, 2000.
10. Vladimir who is sculptor, in late 30s friend Alina for year. (Yulya Kudinova interview) [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
11. Manager of the Aurora Movie Theater and Vita S who help Alina and Inessa move to Krasnodar from Grozny. [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
12. Inya who won Miss Charming and Miss Russian Radio in the 2000 Miss Krasnodar contest. (39; 101) [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
13. Alina's medical doctor in Krasnodar. [Fraud]
14. Asya (faxes) [Fraud]
15. Lena, close friend and nurse who advised Alina to do eye operation, marrying Roy good business move, Alexei did not see her as a wife. (34, 39; 84, 100) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
16. Olga, friend of Alina's and Lena (Yulya Kudinova Interview) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
17. Nadya who advised Alina not to go to America. (42, 45; 111, 125) [Fraud, Adultery]
18. Aunt Sveta and daughter Alyona who lived with Alina and Inessa in the Spring and Summer 2000. (48; 132) [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment, Finances, Authentication]
19. Larissa who delivered money to Inessa when Alina was in Cyprus. (8; 20) [Finances, Impeachment]
20. Yulya from Krasnodar who knew Alina in Cyprus and went horseback riding with her. (16, 45; 37,) [Finances, Impeachment]

21. Tax driver whom Alina allowed to fondle her knee because it would reduce the fare. (45; 123) [Impeachment]
  22. Dima who Alina asked him about Italy before she went there for prostitution with Alfredo. (42; 111) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  23. Yulya from Kanevskaya who has a husband Igor. (45; 124) [Fraud, Adultery]
  24. Yulya jailed with Alina in Mexico. (31; 77) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  25. Max Garcia Appedole (25, 28, 30; 57, 65, 73) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  26. Doctor Krasnodar. [Fraud]
  27. Doctor Moscow. (18; 42) [Fraud]
  28. Mark to whom Alina told about her work in Cyprus and who apparently shot porno film of Alina. (17, 19; 40, 43) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  29. Asya-family adviser, mentioned in July 16 and August 17, 2000, faxes from Inessa. [Fraud, Impeachment]
  30. Nikita, Russian girl who helped Alina at Flash Dancers. (46; 127) [Fraud, Adultery, Finances]
  31. Chris 1, Cyprus. (1-5; 1-11) [Adultery, Finances, Authentication, Impeachment]
  32. Rikos and wife, Cyprus. (3-5; 6-10) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  33. Dr. George, orthopedist, who stopped talking to Alina, Cyprus. (3, 7, 11, 15; 7, 18, 26, 34) [Adultery, Finances, Impeachment]
  34. Kostos, employee of Marios who escorted the girls, Cyprus. (5; 10) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  35. Marios, Cyprus. (1, 9; 1, 22) [Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Impeachment, Obstruction]
  36. Tatyana, in hotel with her husband when Alina with Akhmed. Tatyana from Rostov, was 22, former ballerina. (9; 22, 23) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  37. Stelios told Inessa he wanted to have sex with Alina. (14, 15; 32, 36) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- o. List of all people want to depose given current state of information. List may change with new information acquired from on going investigation.
- i. Alexei Dikov. [Authentication, Obstruction, Impeachment]
  - ii. Inessa Shipilina. [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Obstruction, Impeachment]
  - iii. Boyfriend she was with on July 5 at around 4:30pm on the subway platform at Broadway on the N line. He was in his mid to late twenties, about six feet, round face. She was wearing white with red ribbons in her hair. [Adultery]

- iv. Reya who procures models, including Alina, for sexual activity. Most of the models in Krasnodar know about Reya. [Adultery, Impeachment]
- v. Her clients in her almost daily masturbation service. (39; 102, 103) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- vi. Vladimir who has a wife from Kazakhstan and a two-year-old child, and is friends with Vadik whose mother hung herself. (39, 42; 102, 110) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- vii. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery]
- viii. Arsen who installed her TV antenna over a two-day period. (39, 40; 102, 103) [Adultery]
- ix. Roma. (44; 121) [Adultery]
- x. Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg who sell jewelry. (44, 45; 122, 123) [Adultery]
- xi. Stephanos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times. [Authentication, Adultery]
- xii. Rikos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times. (3-5; 6-10) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- xiii. Andrios whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and other times. [Adultery]
- xiv. Knife grinder. (19; 44) [Adultery]
- xv. Vladimir who Alina arranged to help Inessa buy the apartment while Alina was in America with Roy. (35; 90) [Adultery, Finances]
- xvi. Dima who was pushed around by new Russians. (45; 123) [Adultery]
- xvii. Azul. [Authentication, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xviii. Indian man whom Alina called a number of times. (46; 127) [Adultery]
- xix. Brian Rubens, Nomura Securities, kissed and massaged his back at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
- xx. Bearded man who works in TV that touched her in “single room” at Flash Dancers from which she had pleasure. (48; 130) [Adultery]
- xxi. Christopher Cecil, customer at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
- xxii. Arturo Barrera, older Mexican man who likes Russian girls, customer at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
- xxiii. Alfredo Ibarra from Mexico (42, 43; 112-114) [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Impeachment]
- xxiv. Peter Petrovich. Multiple telephone calls to Russian male living in Bronx 212 829 1105. [Adultery]
- xxv. Producers and people present when Alina made her masturbation video. In addition, the location, date and money Alina earned. [Adultery, Impeachment]

- xxvi. The “clairvoyant” from whom Alina obtained the “salts and sugars”. (40, 46; 104, 128) [Fraud, Impeachment]
- xxvii. Tatyanna who use to work at Flash Dancers and was friend of Alina’s. [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxviii. Anastasia Vasiljeva. [Authentication, Adultery, Obstruction, Impeachment]
- xxix. Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned after two days because the work involved prostitution? (Anastasia, Dmitri) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxx. Inessa, worked at Vasiljeva, friend of Alina and Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned in two days when realized work involved prostitution. [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxxi. Nadya who worked in Cyprus when Alina was there but husband sued for divorce because she was engaged in prostitution. (Yulya Kudinova Interview) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxxii. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
- xxxiii. Vera Ivanasova. [Authentication, Obstruction]
- xxxiv. Katya who accompanied Alina on dates with Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg. (39, 40, 41, 44, 45; 102, 105, 110, 123, 124, 125) [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Impeachment]
- xxxv. Vladimir who is sculptor, in late 30s friend Alina for year. (Yulya Kudinova interview) [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxxvi. Manager of the Aurora Movie Theater and Vita S who help Alina and Inessa move to Krasnodar from Grozny. [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxxvii. Inya who won Miss Charming and Miss Russian Radio in the 2000 Miss Krasnodar contest. (39; 101) [Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment]
- xxxviii. Alina’s medical doctor in Krasnodar. [Fraud]
- xxxix. Lena, close friend and nurse who advised Alina to do eye operation, marrying Roy good business move, Alexei did not see her as a wife. (34, 39; 84, 100) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
- xl. Olga, friend of Alina’s and Lena (Yulya Kudinova Interview) [Fraud, Adultery, Authentication]
- xli. Nadya who advised Alina not to go to America. (42, 45; 111, 125) [Fraud, Adultery]
- xlii. Aunt Sveta and daughter Alyona who lived with Alina and Inessa in the Spring and Summer 2000. (48; 132) [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery, Impeachment, Finances]
- xliii. Larissa who delivered money to Inessa when Alina was in Cyprus. (8; 20) [Finances, Impeachment]
- xliv. Yulya Kudinova. [Authentication]
- xlv. Yulya from Krasnodar who knew Alina in Cyprus and went horseback riding with her. (16, 45; 37,) [Finances, Impeachment]
- xlvi. Tax driver whom Alina allowed to fondle her knee because it would reduce the fare. (45; 123) [Impeachment]

- xlvi. Dima who Alina asked him about Italy before she went there for prostitution with Alfredo. (42; 111) [Adultery, Impeachment]
- xlvi. Yulya from Kanevskaya who has a husband Igor. (45; 124) [Fraud, Adultery]
- xlix. Yulya jailed with Alina in Mexico. (31; 77) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - 1. Max Garcia Appedole (25, 28, 30; 57, 65, 73) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - li. Doctor Krasnodar. [Fraud]
  - lii. Doctor Moscow. (18; 42) [Fraud]
  - liii. Mark to whom Alina told about her work in Cyprus and who apparently shot porno film of Alina. (17, 19; 40, 43) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - liv. Asya-family adviser, mentioned in July 16 and August 17, 2000, faxes from Inessa. [Fraud, Impeachment]
  - lv. Nikita, Russian girl who helped Alina at Flash Dancers. (46; 127) [Fraud, Adultery, Finances]
  - lvi. Chris 1, Cyprus. (1-5; 1-11) [Adultery, Finances, Authentication, Impeachment]
  - lvii. Dr. George, orthopedist, who stopped talking to Alina, Cyprus. (3, 7, 11, 15; 7, 18, 26, 34) [Adultery, Finances, Impeachment]
  - lviii. Kostos, employee of Marios who escorted the girls, Cyprus. (5; 10) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - lix. Marios, Cyprus. (1, 9; 1, 22) [Fraud, Adultery, Finances, Impeachment, Obstruction]
  - lx. Tatyana, in hotel with her husband when Alina with Akhmed. Tatyana from Rostov, was 22, former ballerina. (9; 22, 23) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - lxi. Stelios told Inessa he wanted to have sex with Alina. (14, 15; 32, 36) [Adultery, Impeachment]
  - lxii. “Azul” or “Asul” Juginta Raszyukevichina, Lithuania. (25, 27, 29, 30, 31; 58, 62, 68-75) [Authentication, Fraud, Adultery]
  - lxiii. Katerina
- p. Italy
  - i. Hotel records
  - ii. Entry records
- q. Depositions (Written Questions, Commission, Letters Interrogatory)
  - i. Annulment: Fraudulent concealment or misrepresentation of material facts, need corroboration.
    - 1. Inessa Shipilina. [Fraud]
    - 2. Alexei Dikov. [Fraud]
    - 3. The “clairvoyant” from whom Alina obtained the “salts and sugars”. (40, 46; 104, 128) [Fraud]

4. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Fraud]
5. Katya who accompanied Alina on dates with Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg. (39, 40, 41, 44, 45; 102, 105, 110, 123, 124, 125) [Fraud]
6. Inya who won Miss Charming and Miss Russian Radio in the 2000 Miss Krasnodar contest. (39; 101) [Fraud]
7. Alina's medical doctor in Krasnodar. [Fraud]
8. Lena, close friend and nurse who advised Alina to do eye operation, marrying Roy good business move, Alexei did not see her as a wife. (34, 39; 84, 100) [Fraud]
9. Nadya who advised Alina not to go to America. (42, 45; 111, 125) [Fraud]
10. Aunt Sveta and daughter Alyona who lived with Alina and Inessa in the Spring and Summer 2000. (48; 132) [Fraud]
11. [Vladimir who has a wife from Kazakhstan and a two-year-old child, and is friends with Vadik whose mother hung herself. (39, 42; 102, 110) [Fraud]]
12. Yulya from Kanevskaya with husband Igor. (45; 124) [Fraud]
13. Alfredo Ibarra whom Alina told all about her relationship with Roy at 40. (25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 33, 35, 38, 40, 42, 43; 58, 60, 62, 65, 67, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, 81, 83, 90, 99, 104, 105, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114) [Fraud]
14. Doctor Krasnodar. [Fraud]
15. Doctor Moscow. (18; 42) [Fraud]
16. Asya-family adviser, mentioned in July 16 and August 17, 2000, faxes from Inessa. [Fraud]
17. Dmitri Morozov, Alina's long time photographer and confidant. [Fraud]
18. Nikita, Russian girl who helped Alina at Flash Dancers. (46; 127) [Fraud]
19. Melios, Cyprus. (Cyprus Documents) [Fraud]
20. Irina, Cyprus. (Cyprus Documents) [Fraud]
21. Marios, Cyprus. (1, 9; 1, 22) [Fraud]
22. "Azul" or "Asul" Juginta Raszyukevichina, Lithuania. (25, 27, 29, 30, 31; 58, 62, 68-75) [Fraud]

r. Divorce

i. Cruel and inhuman treatment

1. Episodes

- a. Alina admitted to using drugs when she prostituted herself in Italy.
- b. Regular prostitution
- c. Dated customers at strip club

- d. Engaged in sexual conduct with stranger at Flash Dancers
    - e. Adultery
    - f. Visited Cyprus clients, which she told me about when she moved out.
      - g. Stephanos
      - h. Rikos
      - i. Andreas
    - j. Threats
    - k. Letter
    - l. Physical intimidation
      - i. Hit in back
    - m. Attempt to injure with knife
  - 2. Effect
    - a. Javors
    - b. Friends
    - c. Cheryl
    - d. Maiya
    - e. Carol
    - f. Jeff
  - 3. Defense to Alina's accusations of Roy's cruel treatment.
    - a. Argument against abuse: In dairy Alina writes about any unpleasantness but none concerning her allegations of Roy's abuse, which implies it never happened.
- ii. [Adultery: need proof other than testimony of spouse. Subpoena of letters to and from co-respondents with Deposition notice. Lack full knowledge of incidents.]
- 1. Inessa Shipilina. [Adultery]
  - 2. Boyfriend she was with on July 5 at around 4:30pm on the subway platform at Broadway on the N line. He was in his mid to late twenties, about six feet, round face. She was wearing white with red ribbons in her hair.
  - 3. Reya who procures models, including Alina, for sexual activity. Most of the models in Krasnodar know about Reya.
  - 4. Dima who Alina asked about Italy before she went there for prostitution with Alfredo. (42; 111) [Adultery]
  - 5. Alfredo from Mexico. (42, 43; 112-114) [Adultery]
    - a. Production of photos and letters sent by Alina and record of telephone calls he made to Alina. (44; 118)
  - 6. Vladimir 1 who has a wife from Kazakhstan and a two-year-old child, and is friends with Vadik whose mother hung herself. (39, 42; 102, 110) [Adultery]

7. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Adultery]
8. Arsen who installed her TV antenna over a two-day period. (39, 40; 102, 103) [Adultery]
9. Roma. (44; 121) [Adultery]
10. Vladimir 2 and Vanya from St. Petersburg who sell jewelry. (44, 45; 122, 123) [Adultery]
11. Stephanos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Adultery]
12. Rikos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Adultery]
13. Andrios whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Adultery]
14. Knife grinder. (19; 44) [Adultery]
15. Vladimir who Alina arranged to help Inessa buy the apartment while Alina was in America with Roy. (35; 90) [Adultery]
16. Katya who accompanied Alina on dates with Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg. (39, 40, 41, 44, 45; 102, 105, 110, 123, 124, 125) [Adultery]
17. Inya who won Miss Charming and Miss Russian Radio in the 2000 Miss Krasnodar contest. (39; 101) [Adultery]
18. Lena, close friend and nurse who advised Alina to do eye operation, marrying Roy good business move, Alexei did not see her as a wife. (34, 39; 84, 100) [Adultery]
19. Nadya who advised Alina not to go to America. (42, 45; 111, 125) [Adultery]
20. Alyona, Aunt Sveta's daughter, who lived with Alina and Inessa in the Spring and Summer 2000. (48; 132) [Adultery]
21. Vladimir who is sculptor, in late 30s friend Alina for year. (Yulya Kudinova interview) [Adultery]
22. Dima who was pushed around by new Russians. (45; 123) [Adultery]
23. Yulya from Kanevskaya and her husband whom Alina visited. (45; 124) [Adultery]
24. "Azul" or "Asul" Juginta Raszyukevichina, Lithuania. (25, 27, 29, 30, 31, 42; 58, 62, 68-75, 111) [Adultery]
25. [Dmitri Morozov, Alina's long time photographer and confidant. [Adultery] ]
26. Nikita, Russian girl who helped Alina at Flash Dancers. (46; 127) [Adultery]
27. Brian Rubens, Nomura Securities, kissed and massaged his back at Flash Dancers, which was on business card. [Adultery]

28. Bearded man who works in TV that touched her in “single room” at Flash Dancers from which she had pleasure. (48; 130) [Adultery]
29. Indian man whom Alina called a number of times. (46; 127) [Adultery]
30. Christopher Cecil, customer at Flash Dancers. [Adultery]
31. Owner Flash Dancers to give testimony on true nature of her activities at the club such as special touch in Champagne room. [Adultery]
32. Peter Petrovich. Multiple telephone calls.

iii. Immoral course of conduct to infer adultery

1. Producers of masturbation video for US dollars
2. Taxi driver whom Alina allowed to fondle her knee because it would reduce the fare. (45; 123)
3. Natasha who lives in the same building as Alina. (40; 105) [Prostitution]
4. Alfredo (25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 33, 35, 38, 40, 42, 43; 58, 60, 62, 65, 67, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, 81, 83, 90, 99, 104, 105, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114) [Prostitution]
5. Vladimir and Vanya from St. Petersburg who sell jewelry. (44, 45; 122, 123) [Prostitution]
6. Stephanos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Prostitution]
7. Rikos whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Prostitution]
8. Andrios whom Alina visited in Cyprus in September 2000 and at other times. [Prostitution]
9. Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned after two days because the work involved prostitution? (Anastasia, Dmitri) [Prostitution]
10. Nadya who worked in Cyprus when Alina was there but husband sued for divorce because she was engaged in prostitution. (Yulya Kudinova Interview) [Prostitution]
11. Manager of the Aurora Movie Theater and Vita S who help Alina and Inessa move to Krasnodar from Grozny. [Prostitution]
12. [Inya who won Miss Charming and Miss Russian Radio in the 2000 Miss Krasnodar contest. (39; 101) [Prostitution]]
13. Aunt Sveta and daughter Alyona who lived with Alina and Inessa in the Spring and Summer 2000. (48; 132) [Prostitution]
14. Larissa who delivered money to Inessa when Alina was in Cyprus. (8; 20) [Prostitution]
15. Yulya from Krasnodar who knew Alina in Cyprus and went horseback riding with her. (16, 45; 37) [Prostitution]

16. Dima who Alina asked him about Italy before she went there for prostitution with Alfredo. (42; 111) [Prostitution]
17. Yulya jailed with Alina in Mexico. (31; 77) [Prostitution]
18. Max Garcia Appedole (25, 28, 30; 57, 65, 73) [Prostitution]
19. “Azul” or “Asul” Juginta Raszyukevichina, Lithuania. (25, 27, 29, 30, 31, 42; 58, 62, 68-75, 111) [Prostitution]
20. Mark to whom Alina told about her work in Cyprus and who shot porno film of Alina. (17, 19; 40, 43) [Prostitution]
21. Dmitri Morozov, Alina’s long time photographer and confidant. [Prostitution]
22. Chris 1, Cyprus. (1-5; 1-11) [Prostitution]
23. Rikos and wife, Cyprus. (3-5; 6-10) [Prostitution]
24. Dr. George, orthopedist, who stopped talking to Alina, Cyprus. ( 3, 7, 11, 15; 7, 18, 26, 34) [Prostitution]
25. Kostos, employee of Marios who escorted the girls, Cyprus. (5; 10) [Prostitution]
26. Melios, Cyprus. (Cyprus Documents) [Prostitution]
27. Marios, Cyprus. (1, 9; 1, 22) [Prostitution]
28. Tatyana, in hotel with her husband when Alina with Akhmed. Tatyana from Rostov, was 22, former ballerina. (9; 22, 23) [Prostitution]
29. Stelios told Inessa he wanted to have sex with Alina. (14, 15; 32, 36) [Prostitution]
30. Tatyanna who used to work at Flash Dancers.
31. Indian man whom Alina called a number of times. (46; 127) [Prostitution]
32. Brian Rubens, Nomura Securities, kissed and massaged his back at Flash Dancers. [Prostitution]
33. Bearded man who works in TV that touched her in “single room” at Flash Dancers from which she had pleasure. (48; 130) [Prostitution]
34. Christopher Cecil, customer at Flash Dancers. [Prostitution]
35. Arturo Barrera, older Mexican man who likes Russian girls, customer at Flash Dancers. [Prostitution]

3. Finances (Refer Analysis if Net Worth Statement)

a. Depositions

- i. Flash Dancers management
- ii. Dee Simons of Grace Del Marco.
- iii. Other modeling agencies.
- iv. Other employers and consumers of her services.

4. Obstruction of Investigation

- a. Alina planned, directed and participated in threatening, intimidating and cajoling people not to provide information or assistance to the plaintiff pertinent to plaintiff's cause of action.
    - i. Alina and Inessa threatened Anastasia Vasiljeva with court action.
    - ii. Alina and Inessa told Irina, Melios and Marios Athanasiou not tell plaintiff anything about Alina's work in Cyprus and the nature of her recent trips to Cyprus, in part, to visit her former customers.
    - iii. At Alina's direction, Inessa threatened the plaintiff's translator with arrest and imprisonment. Inessa also apparently forged a Russian court summons and sent it to the plaintiff translator's home.
    - iv. At Alina's direction, Inessa falsely accused a fellow professor of providing information to the plaintiff in return for money in an effort to intimidate the professor. In addition, Inessa threatened the professor with court action.
    - v. Similar tactics were used with varying degrees of success against
      1. Morosov, the photographer
      2. Alexei Smolin
      3. Alexei Dikov
      4. Vladimir 2 from St. Petersburg
      5. Yvegeniy Martianov, Trainer
      6. Others
5. Impeachment (Written Questions, Commission, Letters Interrogatory)
  - a. In her July 2000 post card to Vladimir in St. Petersburg, Alina says about working at Flash Dancers, "I like it a lot."
  - b. US doctor who analyzed gall bladder problem to show Alina lied about the seriousness in order to elicit more sympathy.
6. Choice of law
  - a. Under Russian law, Alina's state of mind at the time she married as expressed in her diary makes the marriage a nullity.
7. Status of Potential Witnesses and Evidence
  - a. Interviewed on Krasnodar Trip April 15-22
    - i. Masseur-Andrei S. Petrov.
    - ii. Trainer-Yvegeniy V. Martianov.
    - iii. Professor-Vera I. Ivanasova.
    - iv. Vice Rector Krasnodar Academy Ohysical-Vladimir G. Minchenko. Did not provide copies of Alina's handwriting.
    - v. Friend-Katya A. Gerokapis.
    - vi. Former boy friend-Alexei V. Dykov.
    - vii. Model agency-Anastasia Vasilyeva and Dmitri

- viii. Neighbors
    - ix. Imperio Manager-Andrei Mishenkin, says does not know Alina.
    - x. Reporter-Victoria
  - b. Interviewed on Krasnodar trip June 13-17
    - i. Alexei Dikov
    - ii. Katya Gerokaris
    - iii. Alexei Smolin
    - iv. Vera Ivanasova
    - v. Andrei Petrov, Masseuse
    - vi. Yvegeniy Martianov, Trainer
    - vii. Yulya Kudinova
  - c. Need to interview-refer interview sheets
    - i. Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned after two days.
    - ii. Natasha who lives upstairs
    - iii. Lena, nurse and adviser
    - iv. Olga, friend Alina and Lena
    - v. Inessa, worked at Vasiljeva, friend of Alina and Nadya who went to Cyprus with Alina but returned in two days when realized work involved prostitution.
    - vi. Reya, procurer for models
    - vii. Aunt Sveta and her daughter Alyona
    - viii. Nadya 2, Cyprus, divorced by husband for prostitution
    - ix. Manager Vita S
    - x. Valodya 1
    - xi. Vladimir the sculptor
    - xii. Krasnodar doctor
    - xiii. Arsen-antenna
    - xiv. Roma
  - d. Others
    - i. Alfredo
    - ii. St. Petersburg-Vladimir. Call, confront, want the truth.
    - iii. Flash Dance owner
    - iv. Leo
      - 1. Moscow doctor
      - 2. Tanya
8. File complaint for abuse of process tort.

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT
(Draft 7/24/01)

Preliminary Conference Agenda

Try to get judge to look at case because it presents unusual problems. In talking to judge try to lay groundwork for next appearance.

Opening Statement

I would like an annulment because Ms. Shipilina (Parentheses indicate when I learned about activity)

1. Misrepresented and concealed that she worked in the international sex industry engaged in the following activities:
  - a. Making sexually explicit videos. [Such as one in which she masturbated for the camera and men in return for US dollars.] (June 2001)
  - b. Habitually prostituting herself, including an almost daily masturbation service for men (March 2001) and working for a well known procurer in Krasnodar [Reya] who provided models for sexual activities to New Russians in return for money (July 2001),
  - c. Completely nude stripping with hands on sexual contact to make her customers finish (March 2001),
  - d. Recruitment of girls for Russia's sex industry (April 2001);
2. Misrepresented and concealed her extensive promiscuity that was not done in return for money ("I have only had sex with one other man.") (March 2001);
3. Concealed her intention before our marriage to commit adultery after the marriage as evidenced by her obtaining a second international passport to hide from Roy her visit to Alfredo Ibarra in Italy to whom she prostituted herself. The passport was applied for before the marriage (April 2001);
4. Surreptitiously and repeatedly put substances in my food about five days before the wedding after I told her I was thinking about not going through with the marriage. These substances caused symptoms identical to narcotic poisoning that made it impossible for me to think clearly enough to extricate myself from the situation and cancel the marriage. She did not hold a shotgun to my head. She just surreptitiously, maliciously and with reckless disregard put narcotics in my food. (December 2000)
5. Concealed her having a sexually transmittable disease (March 2001);
6. Misrepresented and concealed that she wanted to marry me not to be a true wife but to obtain a green card so she could work in New York City as a lap dancer and prostitute. (March 2001) Since coming to the US last July, she has worked as a lap dancer at Flash Dancers on Broadway, grossing nearly $15,000 in cash a month on which she evades taxes. She has also apparently been cutting private deals with various customers at Flash Dancers who are willing to pay extra for more intimate attention.

Her diary makes it clear that she married me so she could ply her trade in the number one sex market in the world.

For example:

1. Page 33 English; 82 Russian
2. Page 40 English; 104, 105 Russian
3. Page 39 English; 101 Russian
4. Page 44 English; 120 Russian

Ms. Shipilina is a very accomplished actress who can cry at will; pretend to be all bubble bath, dewy morning and moonlight while ruthlessly manipulating others with deceit and prevarications in order to maximize her return on the very attractive body that God gave her. She has grossed nearly $130,000 in the past twelve months as a result of her defrauding me into marrying her and bringing her to America.

Reasons Want Annulment

1. Justice.
2. My financial obligation to reimburse the government if Alina becomes a public charge continues until she
  - a. Becomes naturalized citizen,
  - b. Works in US for 10 years,
  - c. Ceases to be a legal permanent resident, or
  - d. Dies.

An annulment dramatically increases the probability of Alina “ceasing to be a legal permanent resident” thereby reducing the time frame in which she may become a public charge.

Direct and Counter

1. Order directing Alina to stop her from interfering with Roy’s investigation into the issues of the case:
  - i. Alina telephoned Anastasia Vasiljeva trying to keep her from providing Roy with information and followed up with a message on Anastasia’s pager that Alina and Anastasia would meet in court. As a result, Anastasia refuses to provide Roy with further relevant information.
  - ii. Alina and Inessa visited Irina, Melios and Marios Athanasiou recently in Cyprus and apparently told them not to provide information to Roy.
- And to put a halt to her mother from
  - iii. threatening translators and potential witnesses, and
  - iv. forging false court documents in an effort to intimidate people into not cooperating with Roy's efforts to find information leading to potential witnesses outside the court's subpoena power for testimony as to fraud, adultery and impeachment.

2. Order to prevent concealment and transfer of cash income abroad because it is marital property. During marriage Alina accumulated property, income after expenses, of nearly $100,000 while Roy lost in the stock market over $150,000. Push for Equitable Distribution.
3. Motion for physical examination to determine if carrying STDs.
4. Mundy's dissemblance about medical records showing I beat Alina.
5. Mundy's threat to use evidence of an alleged crime committed by Roy to obtain a favorable settlement for his client in a civil litigation—the extortion audiotape.
6. Mundy's veiled threat to embarrass me and deplete my assets if I did not help Alina obtain a permanent green card.
7. Amend pleadings
  - a. Annulment allegations above.
  - b. Adultery
    - i. Name Alina's partners in adultery as co-respondents, name as Vladimir Doe for Vladimir 1, Vladimir 2, Rikos, Stephanos, Andrios, TV man at Flash Dancers and others.
  - c. Cruel and Inhuman
    - i. Refused to live with me in Moscow right after our marriage.
    - ii. Refused to allow me to travel to Cyprus with her, where she visited a few of her former clients.

Admissions

1. Russian diary authentic
2. Video authentic
3. Title to apartment at 138 Rashpilevskaya in Alina's name.
4. Title to half house in Yablonovskiyi village in Alina's name.
5. Document 1 authentic
6. Works as lap dancer at Flash Dancers
7. Monthly gross income around $15,000 in cash
8. Wanted to date some of her customers at Flash Dancers.
9. Dated some of her customers at Flash Dancers.
10. Maintains bank account in Cyprus
11. Surreptitiously put narcotics in Roy's food just before wedding date.
12. Works as prostitute in New York
13. Worked as prostitute in Russia
14. Worked as lap dancer and prostitute in Cyprus.
15. Worked as lap dancer and prostitute in Mexico
16. Her lap dancing included drink, table, strip tease and private dances as defined by the sex industries normal course of conduct.
17. Contrived a story with Alfredo to deceive Roy into believing that she did not prostitute herself to him but were only friends.

18. Repeatedly asked the Russian Orthodox Saint Nicolas to help her succeed in her business as a lap dancer and prostitute. (Impeachment-immoral behavior that reflects on character.)
19. Said that after she engaged in prostitution, she went to church, God forgave her and it was as if it never happened. (Impeachment-immoral behavior that reflects on character.)
20. Wanted to marry a foreigner so could live abroad.
21. Misrepresentations and concealment on immigrant visa application with respect to prostitution, arrest and deportation, occupation in Cyprus, employment after college. (Impeachment-bad reputation for truth and veracity.)
22. Has not paid the full amount of US taxes. (Impeachment-criminal and immoral behavior reflecting on character.)
23. Never saw Roy as a husband.
24. Married Roy solely to obtain a green card so could work in America.

Documents

1. Put on table a few pages from diary that show fraud on Alina's part. Pages from both English translation and Russian version.
2. Bring all possible relevant documents.
  - a. Preliminary Conference Agenda and Documents
  - b. Legal Proceedings
  - c. Diary.
    1. Xenia's marked up Russian and English.
    2. Unmarked copy Russian.
  - d. Masturbation video.
  - e. Document 1 and translation.
  - f. Mundy's letter.
  - g. Flash Dance schedule
  - h. Both versions of birth certificate and translations
  - i. Alina Questiona
  - j. Work Product
    1. Legal Arguments
    2. Protection Order
  - k. Law notebook

THE LAW FIRM OF

Cohen Goldstein & Silpe, LLP

505 PARK AVENUE
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

TELEPHONE: (212) 315-4400

JEFFREY R. COHEN
GLENN S. GOLDSTEIN
STEVEN M. SILPE

KAREN BLAUSTEIN
AMY SALTZMAN
TOMOKO KATAOKA**

FAX: (212) 315-4409
E-MAIL: cgs@cgs-lawny.com

LOUIS A. MANGONE
OF COUNSEL

**AWAITING ADMISSION

July 26, 2001

Mr. Roy Den Hollander
545 E. 14th Street
Apt. 10-D
New York, New York 10009

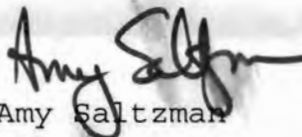

Re: Hollander

Dear Roy:

Enclosed please find a copy of the preliminary conference stipulation and order signed in court today. Please send us your draft Net Worth Statement as soon as possible so that we can prepare the final document. As you know, it must be exchanged and filed on August 10th.

Regards.

Sincerely,

Amy Saltzman

Enclosure
AS/jlm

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Plaintiff

-against-

Index No.: 350091/01

ALINA A. SHIPILINA

Defendant

Part No. 20

PRELIMINARY CONFERENCE STIPULATION/ORDER CONTESTED MATRIMONIAL

PRESIDING: HON. JOAN LOBIS
Justice of the Supreme Court

The parties and counsel have appeared before this Court on JULY 26, 1900 at a preliminary conference on this matter held pursuant to 22 NYCRR 202.16.

The court has received a copy of:

Date Filed or To Be Filed

- (1) A sworn Net Worth Statement of each party; and
- (2) A signed copy of each party's attorney retainer agreement; and
- (3) Counsel for both parties have certified that they have no knowledge that the substance of the statements or allegations of fact (including the Net Worth Statements) submitted by their respective clients is false.

Plaintiff	Defendant
9/28/01	9/28/01
9/28/01	9/28/01

both sides by 8/10/01

A. Required Information

(1) Attorney for Plaintiff
COHEN, GOLDSTEIN + SILVE, LLP
BY: STEVEN M. SILVE
505 PARK AVE., NY, NY 10022

Attorney for Defendant
KUBA, MUNDI + ASSOCIATES
BY: PAULETTE DETIBERIS
321 BROADWAY, NY, NY 10007

Phone: 212 315-4400

Phone: 212 732 5050

(2) Summons: Date Filed 2/13/2001 Date Served 2/13/2001

(3) Notice of No Necessity Filed: Yes        No X

(4) Date of Marriage: 3/11/2000

(5) Name(s) and Age(s) of Child(ren): none

B. Stipulation

The parties hereby stipulate, for purposes of trial, that the following issues between them are:

	RESOLVED	UNRESOLVED
(1) Fault will not be an issue	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
(2) Custody	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> n/a
(3) Visitation	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> n/a
(4) Child Support	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> n/a
(5) Maintenance		<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
(6) Equitable Distribution		<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
(7) Other _____

ANY ISSUES WITH RESPECT TO FAULT, CUSTODY AND FINANCE THAT ARE NOT SPECIFICALLY DESCRIBED ABOVE AS UNRESOLVED MAY NOT BE RAISED IN THE ACTION UNLESS GOOD CAUSE IS SHOWN.

THE ABOVE IS HEREBY STIPULATED TO BY THE PARTIES.

Roy De Hollander
PLAINTIFF
[Signature]
PLAINTIFF'S ATTORNEY

[Signature]
DEFENDANT
Kuba Wundy + Associates BY:
Paulette Detiberis
DEFENDANT'S ATTORNEY
PAULETTE DETIBERIS

C. Pendente Lite Relief

With respect to the pendente lite applications, the court hereby directs or the parties stipulate that:

_____
_____
_____

_____
PLAINTIFF
_____
PLAINTIFF'S ATTORNEY

_____
DEFENDANT
_____
DEFENDANT'S ATTORNEY

D. Law Guardians/Experts

(1) Law Guardian/Guardian Ad Litem (Check One)

- a. n/a The Court hereby appoints _____ as law guardian/guardian ad litem for the infant child(ren). ✓
- b. n/a The parties shall submit to the Clerk of this Part within _____ days from the date hereof a list of persons deemed suitable to serve as law guardian/guardian ad litem, together with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. ✓

(2) Neutral Expert (Check One)

- a. _____ The Court hereby appoints, on consent of the parties, the following as neutral expert to assist the court: N/A ✓
- b. _____ The parties shall submit to the Clerk of this Part within _____ days from the date hereof a list of experts deemed suitable for appointment as neutral expert, together with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. ✓

E. Case Scheduling

- (1) In addition, the Court orders the following discovery deadlines. (Fill in specific dates for the below to be served or conducted).

	Plaintiff	Defendant
(1) Notice for Discovery and Inspection	10/15/01	10/15/01
(2) Interrogatories	10/15/01	10/15/01
(3) Depositions	11/12/01	11/12/01
(4) Exchange of Expert Reports	To be determined	To be determined
(5) Other	Both sides reserve the right to further discovery, if needed.

(2) Discovery Problems

The parties shall contact the court immediately if it appears that there are any problems with the above schedule. If the Court is not contacted, discovery may be deemed completed as of the above dates or sanctions may be imposed.

(3) Expert Witnesses

At least sixty (60) days prior to the trial date set forth below, each party shall serve and file with the court a written report of each expert witness whom the party expects to call at trial and, at least thirty (30) days prior to the trial date set forth below, each party shall serve and file with the court any reply report. If a party intends that a written report shall substitute at trial for direct testimony, that party shall so advise the other party and the court at least ten (10) days prior to trial.

(4) Witnesses (Other Than Expert)

At least ten (10) days prior to trial, each side shall submit to the court and the other side a list of all other witnesses (excepting impeachment or rebuttal witnesses) whom that side intends to call at trial, specifying, where applicable, those whose depositions will be used.

(5) Exhibits

The parties shall consult and work out a stipulation governing the authenticity and admissibility of all trial exhibits concerning which the parties can agree, which exhibits shall be premarked before the case is called for trial. Ten (10) days prior to trial, the parties shall submit to the Part a list or lists of: (i) all exhibits stipulated to be admissible, (ii) plaintiff's proposed additional exhibits, and (iii) defendant's proposed additional exhibits.

(6) The court orders the parties and their attorneys to appear at a compliance conference to be held on 11/15/01 at 9:30am

The parties shall bring to the compliance conference a preliminary copy of their Proposed Statement of Disposition. 22 NYCRR 202.16(h).

(7) The court orders a Note of Issue to be filed on or before 12/3/01

(8) THE COURT ORDERS THAT THE TRIAL IN THIS MATTER WILL BE HELD ON:

December 17 x 18 at 9:30 a.m./p.m.

trial December 13, 2001 at 9:30 am

SO ORDERED:

Dated: New York, New York

7/26, 192001

2001

[Signature]
J.S.C.

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Index No.350091/01

Plaintiff,

-against-

Notice of Motion

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
Angelina Chipilina,

Defendant.

-----X

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that upon the annexed affirmation of Amy Saltzman, Esq. dated August 31, 2001, together with the exhibits annexed thereto and upon all the papers and proceedings heretofore had herein, a motion will be made at Room 130, of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, in and for the County of New York, to be held at the Courthouse located at 60 Centre Street, New York, New York on the 20th day of September, 2001 at 9:30 a.m. or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard for an Order:

1. Granting plaintiff an annulment on the grounds of fraud;
2. Granting plaintiff appropriate financial relief;
3. Awarding plaintiff counsel fees; and
4. Granting plaintiff such other and further relief as the Court deems just, together with the costs and disbursements of this action.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that pursuant to CPLR § 2214

(b), answering papers, if any, must be served upon the undersigned so as to be received at least seven (7) days prior to the return date of this motion.

Dated: New York, New York
August 31, 2001

Yours, etc.

COHEN GOLDSTEIN & SILPE, LLP

By:

Amy Saltzman Esq.

Attorneys for Plaintiff
505 Park Avenue
New York, New York 10022
(212) 315-4400

To: Paulette DeTiberiis, Esq.
Kuba, Mundy & Associates
321 Broadway
New York, New York 10007
(212) 732 - 5050

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Index No.350091/01

Plaintiff,
-against-

AFFIRMATION

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
Angelina Chipilina,

Defendant.

-----X

AMY SALTZMAN, an attorney admitted to practice before the Courts of the State of New York, affirms under the penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am an associate of Cohen, Goldstein & Silpe, LLP, attorneys for plaintiff Roy Den Hollander. This affirmation is made in support of plaintiff's motion for a default judgment against defendant granting an annulment of the parties' marriage on the grounds of fraud.

2. This action was commenced on February 13, 2001, by the filing of a Summons with Notice. A copy of Summons With Notice is attached as Exhibit A. Defendant was personally served also on February 13, 2001. A copy of the Affidavit of Personal Service is attached as Exhibit B.

3. On June 21, 2001, plaintiff served a Verified Complaint on defendant's attorneys. A copy of the Verified Complaint with an affidavit of service is attached as Exhibit C.

4. Defendant's answer was due within twenty days after service of the complaint, with an additional five days for service by mail (i.e. July 17, 2001). CPLR §§ 3012(a), 2103(b)(2).

5. Defendant has failed to serve any responsive pleading to plaintiff's verified complaint. She has failed to contest any of the allegations seeking an annulment on the ground of fraud, or in the alternative, a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. Accordingly, pursuant to CPLR § 3215, plaintiff requests a default judgment be entered against defendant and that an annulment of the marriage be granted.

6. No prior application has been made for the relief requested herein.

Dated: New York, New York
August 31, 2001

Amy Saltzman

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK-----X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Plaintiff,

Index No. 350091/01

-against-

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
ANGELAINA CHIPILINA,

ANSWER

Defendant.
-----X

Defendant by her attorneys, Kuba, Mundy &amp; Associates, for her Answer herein:

1. Admits allegations contained in Paragraphs 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6 of the Complaint herein.
2. Denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 8, 9(a) - (g), 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17, and the WHEREFORE Clause (1) - (6), of the Complaint herein.
3. Denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 3 and 7.

AS AND FOR A FIRST COUNTERCLAIM

4. The Defendant repeats and realleges each of the foregoing paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.
5. On repeated occasions the Plaintiff has been cruel and acted in an inhuman manner towards the Defendant, all of which resulted in endangering the physical and mental well being of the Defendant to a degree that it is unsafe and improper for the Defendant to cohabit with the Plaintiff. More specifically:
  - (a) The Plaintiff constantly argued and fought with the Defendant, and refused to perform his duties as husband;
  - (b) The Plaintiff constantly embarrassed and belittled the Defendant in the presence of friends and the public;

(c) During the beginning of their marriage, the Plaintiff executed a written Marriage Contract containing specific paragraphs with regard to the marriage and the behavior of the Defendant;

(d) That on or about July 11, 2000, the Plaintiff executed a Personal and Business Management Agreement in order that he could have complete control over the Defendant's career and salary as a professional model and dancer;

(e) That on or about August 1, 2000, the Plaintiff executed an Agreement containing specific paragraphs with regard to how the Defendant was to behave;

(f) That in or about the summer of 2000, while the Plaintiff and the Defendant were at the Virgin Record Shop in Manhattan, the Plaintiff threatened the Defendant that if she did not do everything he told her he would have her deported. On that same occasion, the Plaintiff did attempt to extort money from the Defendant;

(g) That on or about December 13, 2000, the Plaintiff threatened and attempted to extort money from the Defendant when he threatened the Defendant that if she did not pay him a certain amount of money he would have her deported;

(h) That on or about March, 2001, the Plaintiff stole from the Defendant her personal diary and sent copies to her friends and family. That on that same occasion, the Plaintiff in written letter to certain friends and family, defamed, disgraced and belittled the Defendant by calling her a prostitute and revealing certain husband/wife privileges;

(i) That on or about June 19, 2001, the Plaintiff without the Defendant's knowledge and/or consent, created an internet website entitled <http://www.alinashipilina.com>, in which he posted the Defendant's personal diary and naked photographs of the Defendant;

(j) That the Plaintiff constantly accused the Defendant of going out with and engaging in sexual relations with other men, there being no truth to the Plaintiff's allegations;

(k) That the Plaintiff on numerous occasions threatened to "put" the Defendant out of the house and have her "deported" from the United States if she did not pay him certain amounts of money;

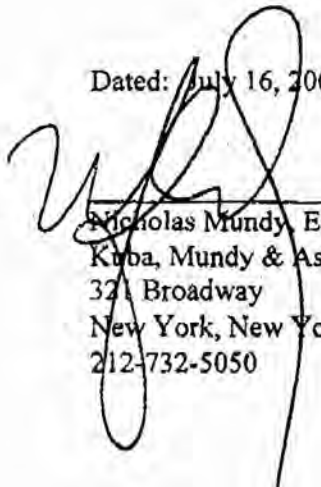

6. The foregoing acts of cruel and inhuman treatment have greatly injured the Defendant and have caused the Defendant great anguish.

7. The Defendant has always conducted herself toward the Plaintiff in a proper and fit manner and has always been a loving and dutiful wife

8. The Plaintiff's conduct as stated above was without just cause, provocation or consent of the Defendant.

WHEREFORE, the Defendant demands judgment dismissing the Complaint, judgment on the counterclaim for divorce, equitable distribution of the marital property, counsel and disbursement expenses together with such other and further relief as to the Court seems just and proper.

Dated: July 16, 2001

Nicholas Mundy, Esq.
Kuba, Mundy & Associates
321 Broadway
New York, New York 10007
212-732-5050

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT

[Draft 9/14/01]

[Robert, my prior attorney, Steven Silpe, never responded to defendant's answer presumably because her never received it. He did file a motion for default through his associate Amy Saltzman based on no answer being filed although it was.]

Answer to Defendant's First Counterclaim

5.

- a. Denies
- b. Denies
- c. Need more specifics. She may be referring to a prenuptial executed in Russia before the marriage, which according to my Russian attorney has no legal effect in the US. Or she may be referring to the following agreement reached after I learned of her adultery and prostitution in Italy.
  - a. June 15, 2000 Agreement
  - b. Alina refrain from engaging in sexual conduct with other men.
  - c. Alina refrain from trying to deceive or trick me.
  - d. Alina refrain from communicating with Alfredo.
- d. Denies
- e. Need more specifics. She may be referring to an August 1, 2000 Agreement in which she agreed:
  - a. Angel will not engage in sexual conduct with other men.
Sexual conduct means any touching of the sexual or other intimate parts of a person not married to the actor for the purpose of gratifying the sexual desire of either party. It includes: intercourse; oral and anal sex; masturbation; physical contact with the clothed or unclothed genitals, pubic area, buttocks or female breast, fondling upper thigh and rubbing the covered penis against covered buttocks.
  - b. Angel will not try to deceive or trick me regarding any matter especially her sexual conduct.
  - c. Angel will not communicate with Alfredo.
  - d. Additional agreement made July 31. Angel will not communicate with Valodya 2 whom she met in June.
  - e. As agreed to on August 1, 2000, if Angel violated any part of this agreement between June 18 and August 1, 2000, and did not tell Roy the full truth of that violation then she agrees to a separation and to move out of Roy's apartment. If Angel violates any part of this agreement after August 1, 2000, and Roy learns about it before Angel tells him, then she agrees to a separation and to move out of Roy's apartment.

[On July 31, 2000, I learned from my wife that she had engaged in sexual contact with another Russian in Krasnodar only days after she begged forgiveness for her earlier adulterous activities including her prostitution in Italy in May. In an attempt to determine whether the marriage could be saved, I wrote down her promises so our agreement would be clear and she could not claim memory lost or that she did not understand the conduct addressed. She would often parse sentences to convolute their common sense meaning and defined sex as only as intercourse. My wife has a copy of this agreement.]

f. Denies

g. Denies

i. [In August Alina and I agreed to separate and she said she would compensate me for the help I provided her while in America with her career. In Mid-late December, I asked her to live up to this agreement as usual she refused. When we met, Alina was holding her purse in her lap, which was unusual. I asked her to put the bag away because I knew she often carried a knife and did not want her to lose her temper again. I showed Alina the bill, and she started accusing me of trying to black mail her, saying I wanted money in return for my going along with Peter's plan. I was surprised and offended. I took the bill back; she stuck her sharpened right pinky fingernail into my finger causing it to bleed. I grabbed my bag and tried to leave, but she stood in front of me. She grabbed my wrist. (Just as she did to a process server in Flash Dancers.) When she let go, I tried to move around her, but she stayed in front of me. (Just as she did to the process server in Flash Dancers.) I could not leave. She stared into my eyes in the typical Soviet inquisitorial method, and asked whether I was going to agree to Peter's plan. I demurred.

h. Denies

i. [In my preliminary investigation to discover leads to evidence to prove the allegations of my complaint, I contacted people familiar with the defendant, defendant's activities and who were mentioned in the defendant's diary. My investigation was to find credible leads for authenticating defendant's diary and finding additional evidence. There is no husband-wife privilege without loyalty and confidence between the two.]

i. Denies

i. [I set up the internet site to circumvent the impact of the defendant and her mother's threats and intimidation of potential witnesses, their illegal efforts to thwart my investigation and to find additional potential witnesses.]

j. Denies

- i. [Defendant's diary reveals her sexual activities with other men while married.]
- k. Denies
  - i. [September 2000 defendant went on a three-week vacation to Russia and Cyprus. I went to Krasnodar right after she returned from Cyprus, and told her I wanted to see her diary from May until September 2000. I thought she would have already made entries from her Cyprus trip. I said if she did not show it to me that I would change the locks on my apartment, and when she returned to the US, she could live with her friend Tanya, who also stripped at Flash Dancers. She gave me the entries. I wanted the entries to see what the truth was about her sexual activities since her trip to Italy with Alfredo to engage in prostitution in late May.]

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY CLIENT WORK PRODUCT
[Draft 9/23/01]

Statement of Defendant's Net Worth and Tax Returns

(Items on which defendant committed perjury and suggestions for proving such.)

Family Data

1. Occupation: Alina failed to include stripper or lap dancer. Alina's tax returns stated her occupation in 2000 was bartending while her net worth statement listed modeling for both 2000 and 2001.
  - a. Proof Alina worked and works at Flash Dancers
    - i. An affidavit of service states that service was made on Alina while dancing at Flash Dancers. Service of Petition filed in Queens Family Court, RDH v. Shipilina 02615/01; dismissed along with TOP 01988/01 on July 31.
    - ii. Deposition of Barry the night manger of Flash Dancers or subpoena for Angelina's work schedule since July 17, 2000.
      1. September 19, 2001, talked to manager Barry who admitted having her work schedules for at least a month.
    - iii. Copies of Angelina's work schedules for 2000. Possible authentication problem.
    - iv. Millard and Associates as witness of Alina working at Flash Dancers.
    - v. Depositions of Tatyanna and Nikita.
    - vi. Witnesses who are friends of mine who saw her strip at Flash Dancers
      1. Maiya
      2. Jesse
      3. Moody
    - vii. Alina's diary, English translation pages 48 to 50; Russian pp 126 to 131.
  - b. Proof Alina not bartender.
    - i. Interrogatory as to places of bartending employment.
      1. Check with bars to determine whether they employed defendant.
    - ii. Bars generally do not hire independent contractors as bar tenders, so Alina must have payment stubs from her bartending employers.
      1. Production request for payment stubs

Expenses

1. Telephone amount of around $100 is dramatically low. She has home telephone service with Verszion that includes its answering service and mobile service with AT&T. Her mobile service for October 2000 totaled $222.33. Mobile Statement.

- a. Proof
    - i. Subpoena directly from Verizon and AT&T Alina's telephone records.
2. Liquor at zero strains credibility.
3. Laundry at zero not possible. She does not have a washer and dryer in her apartment.
4. Medical insurance expense false. Alina and I had a joint Oxford HMO plan from August 2000 to March 2001, which cost each of us about $300 a month.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Subpoena Oxford records
5. Appliances and maintenance in the amount of $2000 a month is unrealistically high. There is no maintenance on Alina's rental apartment. She may have included this amount for tax purposes. $2000 a month infers $16,000 for the eight months up to the time she filed her net worth that she lived in her apartment while her yearly gross income for 2000 was $18,800.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Production of all receipts.
6. Vacations underreported for the past year.
  - a. September 9-10, Alina flew to Moscow then to Krasnodar on Aeroflot. On September 18 or 19, she and her mother at Alina's expense flew to Cyprus where they stayed until September 25th at a five star hotel, 357 5 321 100. September 28 Alina flew back to Moscow and on the 29th flew back to NYC.
  - b. December 21, 2000, Alina flew to Moscow and Krasnodar on Aeroflot. She returned January 18, 2001.
  - c. During the last half of April and the beginning of May, Alina traveled to Krasnodar and with her mother traveled to Cyprus.
7. Income taxes reported are dramatically low and do not include a whole year but just taxes on income Alina earned from July to December of 2000. She entered the country in July 2000.
  - a. Federal-Amended Return reports taxes on Alina's income for six months at $4556 or $759 on a monthly basis.
  - b. State-Amended Return for six months of work reports $430 or $72 on a monthly basis.
  - c. City-Amended Return for six months of work reports $344 or $57 on a monthly basis.
8. Beauty parlor expenses are greater than zero.
  - a. She weekly gets a pedicure because when she is on stage at Flash Dancers advertising her wares, her feet are just below the eye level of the men sitting around the stage, giving her money.
    - i. Proof
      1. Deposition of Flash manager
  - b. Whenever she attends a modeling event it costs her around $50 to have her hair done.
    - i. Interrogatory as to whom is her hair stylist.

9. Failed to state the expenses for her photo portfolios used in modeling. She had one created last August by Phillip Jarrell and probably had another one done recently.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Photocard with Jarrell's name on it.
    - ii. Interrogatory on Jarrell.
10. Failed to include her nightly expenses for stripping at Flash Dancers. For a girl to strip she has to pay management around $100 each night. On top of that she must tip the DJ $10 to $15, the house mother who watches over the girls possessions around $15 and pay the hair stylist or cosmetician for their assistance if she uses them. All toll, Alina would pay out $140 each night or $2800 a month when working five nights a week as the management requires. Alina worked four months in 2000, so her Flash Dancers expenses were $11,200.
  - a. Proof
    - i. NYS, NYC and IRS for record keeping requirements and filings of lap dancing clubs with respect to income received from dancers
    - i. Deposition of Barry the night manager of Flash Dancers and copies of Alina's work schedules.
11. Total Expenses of $4,500 a month infers yearly expenses of $54,000, which I believe is about right when factoring in her stripping expenses, but she reported her total income for 2000 as only $18,800, which implies her reported income does not meet her expenses, so she must have other income sources.

Gross Income: Does not specifically state the period it is for. Her 2000 tax returns indicate her income for 2000 at $18,861; therefore, she did not report any of her income on the Net Worth Statement for the year 2001.

1. Fails to include income earned at Flash Dancers as a lap dancer, which I estimate at around $120,000 since July 2000.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Alina's diary pp 48-50; Russian 126 to 131.
      1. Tax returns false
        - a. August 21, 2000, "Roy learned that I did not keep all money in bank. And what about taxes? I have in the bank approximately 6300$ and approximately same amount in cash. I want to take this money to Russia and then deposit it to the bank and pay taxes. Roy thinks I am lying and fears law. I will pay, I do not want problems, but I will do it intelligently." Diary p 50 English; p 130 Russian. Copy defendant's Safe Deposit Box agreement.
    - ii. Defendant's Citibank statement for July 26 to August 21, 2000, states a balance of $7,681.51. By August 21, defendant had been working in the US for only five weeks.
    - iii. Deposition of Barry the night manger of Flash Dancers with request to produce Angelina's work schedule since July 17, 2000.

1. Question as to range that girls make.
2. Is Alina a hard worker?
3. How much does a girl have to pay management, house mother, D.J., make up artist and hair stylist in order to work there.
- iv. Depositions of Tatyanna and Nikita.
- v. Media reports on lap dancing and strip club business.
  1. Maiya saw a report on Friday or Saturday night August 17 or 18 over Comcast Cable NJ on a book signing that reported the income of lap dancers.
  2. Saturday, September 8, 20001, Fox Magazine, Channel 46 at 10pm story on lap dancers at VIP. One girl said she can make $1000 a night.
- vi. West law search for cases involving lap dancers.
- vii. Find someone to pose as student majoring in journalism and doing a paper on lap dancers or for their Women Studies courses on the financial independence of women. Interview Flash management and dancers. How women with little education or are new immigrants survive economically in NYC.
- viii. Subpoena Alina's bank records for the past year to track the flow of money into and out of the Citibank accounts.
- ix. IRS or NYS tax regulations for estimating the income of lap dancers as they do with waitresses and bartenders.
- x. FOIA with Dept of Treasury for any studies or guideline for estimating lap dancer income.
- xi. Academic studies on prostitution and stripping economics.
- xii. Research Library books on stripping.
- xiii. Search Amazon and B&N.
2. Failed to include income from prostitution.
3. Failed to include income from Judy Vann Associates and International Performance Productions, which were reported to the IRS.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Subpoena each firm's records concerning Alina's employment. Both firms keep detailed accounts.
    - ii. Subpoena IRS records.
4. Failed to include income from modeling jobs arranged by Grace Del Marco modeling agency.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Deposition of knowledgeable officer of the agency with subpoena to produce all records concerning "Angelina", which is her modeling name.
5. Failed to answer items l, m and s. This was not an oversight. One of Alina's favorite methods of lying is by omission, which she does not consider lying at all.

Assets

1. Failed to state her bank account in Cyprus.
2. Failed to state the $1200 security deposit on her apartment.
  - a. Proof
    - i. Subpoena apartment broker's records. I have the name and firm of the broker.
3. Failed to list the apartment owned in Krasnodar and the half house owned in Yablonovski Village outside Krasnodar.
  - a. Proof
    - i. My Krasnodar lawyer will try to obtain documentation.
    - ii. Alina's diary pp 33, 35, 37, 40; Russian pp 78, 84, 85, 89 and 98.
    - iii. Alina grossed around $30,000 in Mexico when factor in $2,200 commission to Leo and $1600 commission to club. Diary pp 33, 35; pp 78, 84, 85.
4. Failed to mention her vested interest in her Russian pension as a result of some of her legitimate work in Russia.
5. Failed to include numerous jewelry items she earned in return for providing sexual favors to her customers as stated in her diary.
  - a. Require Alina to produce jewelry she received from her tricks and lap dancing clients for inspection and appraisal.

Tax Returns

2. Who helped Alina prepare her tax returns?
3. None of Alina's tax returns are signed or dated. I know they are not accurate, and I doubt they were ever filed. I believe we can obtain court authorization to file a form 4506 directing the IRS to send certified copies of Alina's tax filings to us. Perhaps there is another way as well.
4. Alina's tax returns report her total income for 2000 as 18,861, which means the income reported in her Net Worth Statement did not include any income for the year 2001.
5. Alina wrongly classified herself as "single" instead of "married filing a separate return", which would have increased her taxes. This leads me to believe that one of her current boy friends completed her tax returns. Since Alina and I are still married, obtaining his name may assist in proving adultery.
6. Alina's returns failed to included income from Judy Vann Associates, International Performance and Productions and modeling jobs arranged by Grace Del Marco model agency.
7. Alina falsely listed her occupation as bartender.
8. US 1040
  - a. Failed to include a copy of page 2
  - b. Gross income from bartending $7,754.
    - i. Interrogatory as to places of bartending employment.
    - ii. Bars generally do not hire independent contractors as bar tenders, so Alina must have payment stubs from employers.
      1. Production request for payment stubs
9. Amended US 1040X

- a. When and why did Alina file an amended form?
- 10. NY State Amended Tax Return
  - a. When was it filed?
  - b. States additional gross income $12,096 while US 1040X cites additional income as $11, 241. Which is it?

Deposition Questions on Finances

- 1. Update the vacations and their costs since July 26, 2001
  - a. July 26 or 27 to July 31 or August 1, 2001, Alina traveled to Las Vegas.
  - b. August 5 to September 6, 2001, Alina took a vacation from Flash Dancers. Probably attended the “Pimp and Ho Costume Ball” August 31 to September 3 at the Mandalay Hotel in Las Vegas.
- 2. In which months of 2000 did Alina earn her reported $18,800.
- 3. Who told you that an income of around $7600 would not be believable for you to have lived on so you filed an amended return adding another $11,200 to your income.

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY CLIENT WORK PRODUCT
[Draft 9/23/01]

Outline of Annulment Case and Evidence

(Dates refer to when defendant made an entry in her diary. Diary cites are first to page numbers of Certified English translation by Dennis Whelan and then to the page numbers of Russian language original. Dates in parentheses indicate when plaintiff acquired full knowledge of a fact.)

1. Defendant intended to marry plaintiff solely for entry into the US on a permanent basis, which, along with the other benefits of living legally in the US, would enable defendant to earn large sums of money in the sex industry.
  - a. Pre and Post Marital Admissions [marriage occurred March 11, 2000]:
    - i. The following cites are from defendant's dairy for which need authentication.
      1. December 10, 1999, "I want very much to find a foreigner and live abroad; I want to buy a flat and marry a foreigner, but I do not want to live in Kransnodar." Page 34 English; p 82 Russian. (March 2001)
      2. January 17, 2000, "Roy says that I am the only happiness of his. He wants me to be near him.... If only he were younger...." Page 37 English; p 90 Russian. (March 2001)
      3. January 27, 2000, "I do not know, but it worth while marrying him only for the purpose to receive American citizenship. He is not the person I need." Page 39 English; p 95 Russian. (March 2001)
      4. January 29, 2000, "Roy is good as a friend and sexual partner, but Roy as a husband...." Page 39 English; p 97 Russian. (March 2001)
      5. February 4, 2000, "...he (plaintiff) began speaking about a paper according to which I will not have any right on his money in the case of divorce. So, in this case I will receive nothing.... In my turn I told him about a paper according to which he would have no right to send me out of the country." P 40; p 98. (March 2001)
      6. February 19, 2000, "Lena said as well that the business with Roy is very advantageous to me." Page 41 English; p100 Russian (March 2001)
      7. April 5, 2000, "And on Saturday, March 11, 2000, we registered our marriage. It was merry! I did not accept it very seriously; for me it was only business. I become so tired of him...." Page 41 English; p 101 Russian. (March 2001)
      5. April 5, 2000, "He wrote me a letter saying how it was difficult for him to be alone.... Frankly speaking, I cannot

- imagine what I will do with him in Moscow. Listen to his philosophy? To wash, to clean and to cook? And leave my mother all alone.... On one hand I would like that we remained friends, but he would not hinder my meetings with friends and I would give him freedom” P 41, 42 English; p 103 Russian. (March 2001) Just three days later in an April 8, 2000, Post Card, need authentication, defendant continued to mask her true reason for marrying plaintiff, “My love husband! I’m so miss on you but I must help my mother.... I send you this spring flowers from all my heart. I kiss and hold you.”
8. April 20, 2000, “For the first time he finished in me. Oh, my God, whom I allowed to do it....” Page 43 English; p 108 Russian. (March 2001)
  9. April 20, 2000, “What will happen if I will not receive a visa to America? I will go—with Leonid’s help—to Greece or Venezuela. In June I am sure to go somewhere!” Page 43 English; p 108 Russian. (March 2001)
  10. April 5, 2000, “Then, when we went to the disco “Joy”, Alexey told me that on wanted me and that I was driving him mad. He bought a bottle of Champaign. I was near to going with him.... I tried to seduce Alexey, to get him,....” Pp 41,42, English; pp 102, 104. Then on April 22, 2000, defendant wrote in a post card, need authentication, “My dear husband! Only come back and start to be alone again. It difficult, but I must to do a lot of things here.... But you in my heart. A lot of kisses to you.”
  11. On May 19,2000, defendant traveled to Italy to engage in adultery and prostitution with Alfredo Ibarra. Pp 44, 45; pp 112-14. On May 10, 2000, defendant wrote in two cards, need authentication, “My dear husband! In Krasnodar hard. I try to written dissertation and help my mother.... Your wife.” And, “You are present to me the best moments in my life. With special love your Angel.”
  12. June 5, 2000, “We went with Roy to the forest, he wanted to have sex with me, but I refused because sometimes there were people passing by. The most important was that his age might be clearly seen. If he were a young boy....” Page 45 English; p 117 Russian. (March 2001)
  13. June 5, 2000, “On May 31, 2000 I received visa!!! Praise to God! Page 45 English; p 117 Russian.
  14. June 25, 2000, “The problem is in his real feelings to me. I am a stimulus for him. He sees me as a real wife, but it is absurd.... I will never see him as a real husband.” Page 46 English; pp 120-21 Russian. (March 2001)
  15. July 6, 2000, “I decided to go to America for now and make some money and to get a divorce from him. Then better to go to Japan.” Diary p 47; p 124. (March 2001)

16. July 12, 2000, "God be praised!!! I am in America." Page 48 English; p 126 Russian.
  17. July 12, 2000, "I began working on Sunday and earned 400 dollars, then 540 and yesterday, on Wednesday, I earned 650 dollars. God be praised!!! P 48; p 127.
  18. September 9, 2000, "In total I earned 17-18 thousand dollars in 1.5 months (including everything – expenses, meals and presents)." P 50; p 130.
  19. September 9, 2000, "Besides, for the first time I went to a single room – I danced to a bearded man from TV. On Monday we sat there for 2 hours, I danced (I was so frightened). I allowed him to touch me. I received a pleasure." P 50; p 130. Then on September 11, 2000, just two days later the defendant wrote in a wedding anniversary card, need authentication: "Always with you belief, hope, love unforgettable. Your Angel"
  - ii. Alexei Dikov, defendant's former boy friend said, "Alina had one aim, to go outside of Russia." (June 14, 2001) Need written questions
  - iii. According to defendant's friend, Yulya Kudinova, "Alina always thought about money and how to get it. She was a pit bull in her pursuit of money. She used all connections and a lot of men to get money. Alina didn't have money to start a career as a model and she used men to get it. Alina left Alexei Dikov because he didn't have money." (June 16, 2001) Need written questions
  - iv. Anastasia Vasiljeva, defendant's model agent in Krasnodar, said defendant only wanted money and the luxury life. (April 16, 2001) Need written questions
  - v. Lena (friend of Olga who is also friend of defendant) told defendant that marriage with Roy good business deal. (March 2001)Page 41 English; p 100 Russian. Need written questions
  - vi. Natasha who lives in same building as defendant with whom defendant keeps all her things. P 42 English; p 105 Russian. Need written questions
  - vii. Tatyanna from Flash Dancers. Need to interview.
- b. Refusal to show normal affection
- i. Defendant engaged in adultery in Krasnodar three weeks after her marriage with a man named Volodya. Diary p 41; p102.
  - ii. Defendant engaged in prostitution with Alfredo Ibarra Sotelo in Italy within three months of her marriage and just days before her successful interview for an immigrant visa at the US Embassy. Diary p 44-45; p112-114.
  - iii. Defendant went to great lengths to hide her prostitution and adulterous affair with Mr. Ibarra in Italy for fear that plaintiff would not take her to America, May 19, 2000, "And now it is very important to me to extinguish all evidence. I closed package with adhesive tape and tried to hide gold and money. I hope so Roy did not learn anything. Amen! I thank God for everything; bless me!" June 5, 2000, "I came to Roy. My cellular phone was disconnected. I had to open the door with keys and ring at the door. He looked so surprised when he saw me. He began to ask me – How I came, what and where and so on. He was inspecting me for a long time and got infuriated because he could not find anything. He thought that I spent time in Moscow with some boy friend and now came to him. .... Next day we went to take photos and when I asked to give me my bag, he took it and began to open all its section and watch what was in as if it was a joke. I was watching at him perplexedly and very calmly. He was examining me. After it I understood that he would examine my "Fa" bag. When Volodya met me at registration in Moscow I gave him package with everything money, brilliants. I feared that he might tell something to Roy." Diary p 45; pp 114-16. (March 2001)

- iv. Defendant engaged in another act of adultery four months after her marriage with a man named Volodya from St. Petersburg. Diary p 47; p 123.
- v. Defendant maintained communication with Valodya from St. Petersburg while defendant was living in plaintiff's apartment. July 2000 Postcard, need authentication of copy and written questions, to Valodya, "Good luck, peace, love and all the kindness to you. Hello Valodya, This is Angelina. How are you? I am okay. It was really difficult to come here. It turns out that my boss found out information about me from MVD and FSB. And now he watches me. I began to work. It is interesting. I like it a lot. I work about eight hours a day. (I dance.) It is interesting to meet new people, to learn about different places. I think a lot about you and I miss you and it was great that we could understand each other. Do me a huge, huge favor, please, don't tell anybody, anybody, that I am here—no way. Only my mum knows about it and now you. I kiss you, I embrace you, I miss you." (Four lipstick kisses are on the card.) (August 2001)
- vi. Defendant dated other men in Krasnodar during the four months following her marriage:
  - a. Arsen, Diary p 41, 42 English; p 102 Russian.
  - b. Roma, Diary p 47 English; p 121 Russian.
- vii. Defendant tried repeatedly after her marriage to seduce one man in Krasnodar who managed a disco: Alexey Smolin, Diary pp 41, 42, 44; pp 102, 104, 110. Mr Smolin states, need written question, "Alina offered herself to me. I could have slept with her if I wanted." (June 16, 2001)
- viii. Defendant refused to live with plaintiff in Moscow for three months following her marriage, lying to plaintiff that her eye operation did not go well so she needed to be near her eye doctor and she needed to help her mother change the title to her house. According to defendant's diary, her eye operation went well, and defendant did not want to cohabit with plaintiff, April 5, 2000, “I had doubts before operation but now I am happy and I don’t want even to think about glasses, except for sunglasses. It is so wonderful to see the world with your own eyes!” Diary p 42; p103. “Frankly speaking, I cannot imagine what I will do with him in Moscow. Listen to his philosophy? To wash, to clean and to cook? And leave my mother all alone....” Diary p 41, 42 English; p 103 Russian. (March 2001)

6. Defendant insisted that plaintiff not travel to Krasnodar and Cyprus with defendant for a three-week vacation in September 2000 that she scheduled, in part, so she would not be home for plaintiff’s birthday. In Cyprus defendant met with former clients:
    - a. Rikos, Diary pp 3, 4, 5, 7; pp 6, 8, 9, 10, 16.
    - b. Andrios, Diary p 6; pp11, 12.
    - c. Stephanos, Diary pp 12, 13, 15, 16; pp 28, 31, 35, 37.
  - c. Other acts and patterns of conduct that infer defendant’s sole purpose was immigration to earn money
    - i. Transportation of cash overseas
      1. Cyprus bank account transactions. Need to subpoena records. (September 2001)
2. Misrepresented love and affection for plaintiff in order to induce plaintiff’s consent to marriage
- a. Representations before marriage
    - i. [Written Questions to Valeria A. Vorobyova, who translated prenuptial, defendant talked with her about why wanted to marry plaintiff.]
    - ii. Correspondence from defendant to plaintiff prior to marriage:
      1. November 15, 1999, fax on stationery of Westin Hotel in Acapulco, need authentication: “It your love—Angelina. Here I visit many beautiful places but I was alon, I’m think about you. It will be nice to be together. I hold you a lot, kiss a lot and miss.” In the evening of day on which defendant sent fax she engaged in sex with Alfredo. Dairy p 32; p 73
      2. November 19, 1999, fax from Mexico, need authentication: “I kiss you! I hold you! Your Angelina.” On day that defendant sent this fax, she helped Max to finish. Diary p 32; p73.
      3. February 7, 2000, Valentine’s Day Card, need authentication: “A lot of loves, my dear Roy. From all my heart it for you...Love—it flower.... With tenderness loves—your enigmatic outspoken flower, Angelina with love.
  - b. Falsity of Representations before marriage (March 2001)
    - i. Defendant rarely thought about plaintiff from September through November 1999 as indicated by defendant only mentioning plaintiff

- twice in diary while in Mexico. September 23, 1999, p 26; p 57, November 12, 1999, p 30; p 70.
- ii. Defendant visited many beautiful places from September to November 1999, but not alone, rather with many different men with whom she engaged in sexual relations and/or prostitution:
    1. Acapulco with Salvador, pp 22-25; pp 48-54.
    2. “Uana-huatu” with Alfredo, pp 26, 27; p 58.
    3. Pyramids with Alfredo, p 27; p 60.
    4. Cancun with Alfredo, p 28; p 62.
    5. Acapulco with Yatsinto, p 29; p 64.
    6. Puerto Vallarta with Alfredo, pp 29, 30; pp 65, 67.
    7. Acapulco with a Boston man, pp 29, 30; p 65.
    8. “Huatulko” with Alfredo, p 30; p 68.
  - c. Defendant did not have love and affection for plaintiff as manifested by her engaging in sexual relations and prostitution with other men during the time before marriage when the defendant and plaintiff were courting, July 1999 to February 2000:
    - i. A customer referred to as “one fucker”, p 25; p 54.
    - ii. Mavro, pp 25, 27.
    - iii. Dated one man “very good at kissing”, p 26, p 57.
    - iv. Max Garcia Appedole, pp 26, 29, 32; pp 57, 65, 73.
    - v. Still referred to her boy friend of three years, Alexei Dikov, as “darling”, p 27; p 60.
    - vi. Sydney, p 28; p 62.
    - vii. Alfonso, pp 31, 32; p 72.
    - viii. Alfredo, p 32; p 73.
    - ix. Back in Russia defendant continued her sexual relationship with her long time Russian boy friend, Alexie Dikov, p 34, 35; p 80, 82.
    - x. Defendant engaged in intercourse with Alfredo in Moscow. Defendant states in her diary, “I worried very much—I feared that Roy would notice me,” p 35; p 83.
    - xi. Telephone sex with Alfredo, p 40; p 99.
  - d. Defendant concealed true feelings for plaintiff in order to induce plaintiff’s consent to marriage (March 2001)
    - i. January 17, 2000, “If only he (plaintiff) were younger....” P 37; p 90.
    - ii. January 27, 2000, “He (plaintiff) is not the person I need.” P 39; p 95.
    - iii. January 29, 2000, “He (plaintiff) is a fool,....” P 39; p 96.
    - iv. January 29, 2000, “Roy is a good friend and sexual partner, but Roy as a husband....” P 39; p 97.
    - v. April 5, 2000, “How much nerves took and how many troubles gave to me Mr. Hollander! On March 1, 2000 we moved to our new flat. He helped us with students. But it takes too much nerve to deal with his bloody philosophy.” Page 41 English; p 101 Russian.

- vi. April 20, 2000, "For the first time he finished in me. Oh, my God, whom I allowed to do it..." Page 43 English; p 108 Russian.
  - vii. June 5, 2000, "We went with Roy to the forest, he wanted to have sex with me, but I refused because sometimes there were people passing by. The most important was that his age might be clearly seen. If he were a young boy..." Page 45 English; p 117 Russian.
  - viii. June 25, 2000, "The problem is in his real feelings to me. I am a stimulus for him. He sees me as a real wife, but it is absurd.... I will never see him as a real husband." Page 46 English; pp 120-21 Russian.
- e. Misrepresentations from defendant to plaintiff after marriage as inference of defendant's intention before marriage to fraudulently induce plaintiff to marry her
- i. In an April 8, 2000, Post Card, need authentication, defendant continued to mask her true reason for marrying plaintiff, "My love husband! I'm so miss on you but I must help my mother.... I send you this spring flowers from all my heart. I kiss and hold you." Just three days before sending this post card, defendant wrote in her diary on April 5, 2000, "He wrote me a letter saying how it was difficult for him to be alone.... Frankly speaking, I cannot imagine what I will do with him in Moscow. Listen to his philosophy? To wash, to clean and to cook? And leave my mother all alone.... On one hand I would like that we remained friends, but he would not hinder my meetings with friends and I would give him freedom" Diary p 41, 42 English; p 103 Russian.
3. Defendant concealed surreptitiously and repeatedly putting substances into plaintiff's food just days before the wedding that caused narcotic like symptoms in plaintiff in order to induce plaintiff to marry defendant after plaintiff expressed possibly canceling the planned marriage. (December 2001)
- a. April 5, 2000, "Two days prior to registration he (plaintiff) said that he might cancel everything..." Diary p 41; p 101. "...The clairvoyant gave me salt and sugar to admix into his food. His smile began to look like a smile of innocent angel." Diary p 42; p 105.
  - b. July 12, 2000, "...I was admixing something in his (plaintiff's) meals. He wanted to sleep even in the day. I had to tell him, that he was too aggressive towards me and I wanted to lower his level of aggression." P 48; p 126.
  - c. Doctor Gorny's medical records in which I described the effect of defendant's poisoning.
  - d. Written questions on defendant's "clairvoyant" in Krasnodar
4. Defendant concealed her plan before the marriage ceremony to meet with Alfredo to engage in adultery and prostitution.
- a. April 5, 2000, "It took a long time to make my second passport.... But thanks to God, I have now 2 passports. May be I will go for a week to Mexico and meet Alfred to earn some money. But I need a good reason for Roy. It is dangerous, but I will see....” P 42; pp 104-05.

- i. Need original second international passport or Apostile copy of dated application for second international passport or affidavit as to time necessary to obtain a passport as evidence that defendant’s scheme concocted before marriage.
- b. May 19, 2000, while on her way to Italy to engage in adultery and prostitution with Alfredo Ibarra, defendant wrote, “...Roy called Alfredo up. When Alfredo told me about it I wanted to reject everything. Just on that very day I passed money for visa to Italy. He felt why on that very day... He said that he was my husband and he wanted to marry me (but we are already married – probably, he wanted something more serious). He began to ask Alfredo about our relations. Alfredo did not answer, instead he called me up and we agreed that Azul was whom Alfredo wanted. Roy asked him how long Alfredo stayed with me in December; what was between us in Mexico and in Moscow. We agreed that Alfredo escorted me in my trips around Mexico, because he fell in love with Azul and they took me with them. He said that I was only a good friend of his. He was in Moscow for 1 day and half of that day he spent with me.” P 44; p 110-11.

5. Defendant concealed criminal conduct

a. Prostitution Russia, Cyprus, Mexico

- i. Defendant provided a daily masturbation service for her clients in Krasnodar. April 5, 2000, “I don’t want to make blow job because I had to get involved in masturbation for 1.5 years everyday. Roy will never understand it, because he is a man.” P 41; p 102. (March 2001). And defendant worked for a well-known procurer, Reya, in Krasnodar who provided models for sexual activities to New Russians in return for money, interview with defendant’s friend Katya Gerokaris. Need written questions. (July 2001). Defendant told her modeling agent in Krasnodar, Anastasia Vasiljeva, that defendant voluntarily engaged in prostitution in Cyprus, that it was not forced on her. Need written questions. (April 16, 2001)
- ii. Prostitution Cyprus and Mexico based on defendant’s diary:

N	Client	“Type of service”	Price	Page Russian	Page English
1	Ibragim	Intercourse and anal sex	£ 40	20	9
2	Wonderful man	Ejaculated without entering	£ 100	20	9
3	Fat man	Masturbated him in a hotel	£ 30	18	8
4	Anonymous customer 1	Blow job	£ 10	24	11
5	Anton	A new customer to which the owner Marios gave her	“sale”	22	10
6	Andreas	Bought her for full day	£50	11-12	6
7	Akhmed	Bought her for three days		23,25	10
8	Grandpa	Masturbated him + two naked pictures	£ 60 +10	35	16
9	Andreas and his son	Regular client	Golden bracelet	21	9

10	Pannikos	Regular client – masturbated him	new dress - £ 37, ring of white gold	16,19,24	7,11,13
11	Rikos	Regular client (intercourse)	Silver things, makeup, + £100	6,8-10,16	3,4,5,7
12	Chris	Regular client (intercourse)	£ 50, 10, 20, 10 + digital watch	2-6,11,13,24	1-3,5,8
13	Doctor George	Regular client	£ 50 + 100, perfume, watch, alarm clock, earring with chain, bracelet and ring of gold, silver alarm clock	7, 17-18, 26	3,7,11
14	Davie	One night stand client from the club	£	35	13,16
15	Peirre	One night stand client	£ 20	33	15
16	“Fucker” from a bank	One night stand client	£	30	13
17	Stephanos	Regular client from Ayanapa	£ 30 + £ 40 dress –£ 23, pajamas - £ 44	28, 31,35,37	12,16
18	Rich Arab 1	One night stand client	Boombox	32	14
19	Rich Arab 2	One night stand client with another girl from the club	£	31	14
20	Eric, good friend of Rikos	Regular client	digital watch, video camera, slippers, money for dentist , additional money	21, 28,31,37	14,17

Mexico (Mexico City “Gentlemens Club”)

N	Client	“Type of service”	Price	Page Russian	Page English
----------	---------------	--------------------------	--------------	---------------------	---------------------

	Anonymous client 1		$60 but took back money	54	25
2	Mavro	Regular client		55,60	25,27
3	Yatsinto – Boston man	Three day stand client	For a trip to Acapulco	64	29
4	Sidney	Regular client		62	27,28
5	Max Garcia Appedole	Regular client	For a visa assistance, golden chain, makeup	65, 73	29,32
6	Manuel Gamio	Regular client	$500, toilet water	69	31
7	Alfonso	Regular client	Chain for hand and foot, trip to Cancun, silver bracelet	72	31,32
8	Alfredo	Favorite client started 02.10.1999– intercourse, performed oral sex on him	For money, various presents and trips, transporting cash to Russia.	58,60,71,73,83	26,27,29,30,31, 32,33,34,35,37, 40

iii. April 5, 2000, “Two days prior to registration he (plaintiff) said that he might cancel everything because I told him that I did not like to speak with him about my past.... He infuriated me-I had to speak about Cyprus, about Mexico, that I was tired there and that I had not want and did not have sex there.” Diary p 39; p 101.

6. Defendant made misrepresentation as to premarital sexual conduct:

a. Prostitution, see above number 5.

7. Concealment of acts inferring an immoral character

a. Masturbation video, need authentication: In the fall of 1998, defendant made sexually explicit video in which she masturbated for the camera and men in return for US dollars. (June 2001)

i. Written questions Marc Paulsen, Torrance California

ii. Written questions Leo Perlin, Moscow

b. Completely nude stripping that included physical contact of a sexual nature and the bartering of sexual favors. (March 2001)

i. Moscow lawyers for evidence of Zygus activities and definitions of different dances.

ii. “...I for the first time danced table dance for a very thick man. He touched me....” P 1; p 1.

- iii. "On December 29 (1999) I had to insist on striptease, but I did not take off panties, stealthily. That day I have danced 3 striptease dances and 1 table dance." P 2; p 3.
- iv. January 19, 1999, "I danced for one customer a striptease and then a table dance but during time table dance he wanted striptease, and during striptease he came." P 3; p 6.
- v. January 19, 1999, "In ZIGOS he kneeled before me and kissed me below navel - it happened before we left the club. Then we went to hotel. Marios took me in his car. I and George went to hotel." P 3; p 7.
- vi. March 7, 1999, "I will do my best to be in first place in our business." P 7; p 17.
- vii. March 21, 1999, "Yesterday I talked with Sergey (after meeting with Pannikos) and burst into tears. I told him that Pannikos urged me to help in masturbation - and I am so tired of all it..." p 8; p 19.
- viii. March 21, 1999, "For the first time in my life - 5 privates 6 pounds each + 10 drinks." P 8; p 19.
- ix. March 21, 1999, "Yesterday Marios shouted at me because I went with Pannikos. He does not come to club, I have sex with him, I receive something for it and the club does not receive anything..." p 8; p19.
- x. April 3, 1999, "Last week here came tourists from Kuwait. Marios sold to them me, Regina, Julia and Nadya (40 pounds to each of us). My admirer told me that he did not want sex and being very pleased with it I drank much wine and I was stupid enough to give in to him. Prior to it I asked him to give me 100 dollars - not for sex, I just needed this money. He answered that he had left all his money downstairs with security desk. Most awful that he introduced has member into my anus. It was very painful and terrible. After it I did not feel my fanny for three days - it was very painful... He told me that he will come once more to ZIGOS or I could myself come later to him and take this money. He left the next day... Let God be his (Ibragim's) judge..." p 9; pp 20.
- xi. April 3, 1999, "I told that without sex it would cost 40 pounds, with sex - 100 pounds." P 9; p 20.
- xii. April 3, 1999, "I am glad, when a customer finishes during a private. Some persons finish this way for the first time." P 9; p 21.
- xiii. April 16, 1999, "And before Easter Marios sold me to other customer (Anton)." P 10; p 22.
- xiv. April 16, 1999, "He wanted to buy for me three days off, but I agreed only for one day off. Then he talked to the boss and bought me for three days." P 10; p 23.
- xv. April 25, 1999, "On Friday I for the first time had 8 privates and 12 drinks. I had a complete breakdown. Prior to it one fucker took me and wanted me to make him oral sex, I persuaded him to give me 10 pounds." P 11; p 24.
- xvi. May 29, 1999, "When I was with one young customer I have nearly fallen out of cabin (room) for privates." P 14; p 31.

- xvii. June 15, 1999, "Yesterday, on Monday, I had 4 privates and 5 drinks." P 15; p 34.
  - xviii. June 23, 1999, "On Friday, at 18:06 I called up Stephanos. I told him that I shall go with another customers to Ayanapa." P 16; p 35.
  - xix. June 23, 1999, "On Saturday I made a record - 10 privates, including 5 to one remarkable grandpa, and as well 2 table and 12 drinks. In total it made 500 pounds..." p 16; p 35.
  - xx. June 23, 1999, "Stephany took me and we went to Larnaka.... I earned 60 pounds for 30 minutes of masturbation..." p 16; p 35.
  - xxi. June 23, 1999, "On Sunday I worked without much effort - [?] privates, 4 tables and 8 drinks. Three customers wanted to take me - that son of a bitch Stelios, a fat man and Davie. I preferred to leave with Davie. I came back by motorbike. It was marvelous!" p 16; p 35.
  - xxii. Septmeber 16, 1999, "Today one fucker promised me to give his credit card. I went with him; I left my work before my working time actually ended. But he gave 60$ and wanted to lure me into his house – he promised to give me 300$ more; later, when I refused to kiss him, he threatened to go to police and took back all money... He was the most down man... Ali... Fucker..." p 25; p 54.
  - xxiii. November 20, 1999, "I made that day 11 dances, but Alfredo paid to me for 14. We went to a nightclub. Girls there have nice breasts and figures. A brunette danced to me in the private room. Alfredo helped, she was slightly biting me and pawed as well. It was interesting. Then Alfred wanted to take me to the hotel for massage. When I refused he went into hysterics and began to cry. He said that he could not wait any more and that I was playing with him. I understood that I had to stop waiting, had some rum and gave it to him. He was happy... The next day he presented to me a dog – it is a wonder! On Tuesday he again paid for 14 dances. We went to "Titanium". All men were looking at me and I was looking at girls. Then a Mexican girl danced in a private room where were sitting 3 men with their girls. I had drunk so much that day... I gave it to him that night; I was drunk and spoke much in Russian." P 32; p 73.
  - xxiv. February 19, 2000, "Alfredo called me up – he finished while he spoke to me. We spoke about 40 minutes. He is crazy with sex. I told him that I am sitting in white underwear and what I am touching..." p 40; p 99.
  - xxv. Defendant worked strip tease in Krasnodar. Interview Alexei Dikov, defendant's former boyfriend. Need written questions (June 14, 2001)
  - xxvi. "Alina didn't have money to start a career as a model and she used men to get." Interview Yulya Kudinova, defendant's friend. Need written questions (June 16, 2001)
- c. Defendant advertised herself to men on a website where she would charge $20 for a meeting. Interview Alexei Dikov, defendant's former boy friend. Need written questions (June 14, 2001)

- d. Recruitment of girls for Russia's sex industry (April 2001) [Post marital conduct inferring premarital concealment of immoral character.]
  - i. April 20, 2000, "On Friday we went to Leonid's party.... I persuaded girls to go to Mexico.... I will try to cooperate with him—look for girls ready to work in Mexico. Each girl will pay to me 100 dollars a month. My God, bless me!!!" P 43; pp 107-08.
    - 1. Need written questions Leo Perlin, Moscow
  - ii. Defendant tried to sell a young girl overseas from a village outside Krasnodar according to interview with defendant's friend, Yulya Kudinova. Need written questions (June 16, 2001)
- e. Infidelity
  - i. In Cyprus, defendant who at the time had a boy friend in Russia for over three years, pp 4, 7, 9, 14; pp 7, 16, 20, 32, writes with respect to another man, "I do not know, but it seems that I am ready to sleep with him. If only I had not my menstruation... I do not consider it an unfaithfulness, I do not feel, that I am unfaithful,..." P 2; p 3.
  - ii. Document One discovered in defendant's bag in August 2000. "...Why does he want fidelity? Why do I have to be faithful?...." Need certified translation and authentication
- f. Defendant's material misrepresentations to the INS on her immigrant visa about
  - i. Prostitution. Visa application, diary various pages
  - ii. Arrest and deportation from Mexico. Visa application, diary pp 33, 34; pp 76-79
- g. Defendant's tax evasion in US
  - i. Income according to defendant's dairy, pp 48-50; Russian pp126 to 131
  - ii. Citibank statement for August
  - iii. Need other Citibank statements
  - iv. Need Cyprus bank records
- h. Defendant's shipment of cash overseas in violation of US Custom's regulations
  - i. Need Cyprus bank records
- i. Defendant defrauded her Moscow agent, Leonid, out of part of his commission.
  - i. April 20, 2000, "Leonid said that Salvador felt offended with me, because I had love affair with Alfonso, I abandon him and he informed police. It is foolish. He simply feared that I can leave him and work for myself. I had to lie that I borrowed from Roy 10 000$ because I lost 7 000$ in the credit card account." Diary p 43; p 107.

- j. Defendant concealed that she believed dishonesty was the best policy and lacked the capacity to learn how to be a more civilized person when caught engaging in reprehensible acts.
  - i. After plaintiff confronted defendant with her adulterous activity in Italy, defendant criticized herself for not being more clever in hiding the affair. June 25, 2000, “What a thing Lena thought of. I should have gone on a local train to come by station where 40 train was but instead I took a bus. I will learn.” P 46; p 120.
  - ii. June 15 & 16, 2000, telephone conversations in which defendant duplicitously begged forgiveness and made promises that she had no intention of keeping. Contemporaneous telephone notes, Diary pp 46, 47; pp 119-123, Copy of postcard to Valodya.
- 8. Defendant knew plaintiff could not have children so her marriage to him at the age of 24 was not genuine because she wanted to have children.
- 9. Materiality
- 10. Plaintiff acted as ordinary prudent person with duty to inquire when put on notice:
  - a. April 5, 2000, “Two days prior to registration he said that he might cancel everything because I told him that I did not like to speak with him about my past.... He infuriated me – I had to speak about Cyprus, about Mexico, that I was tired there and I did not want and did not have sex there.” P 41; p 101.
- 11. Plaintiff relied.

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT

[Draft 9/26/01]

Outline of Cruel And Inhuman Case and Evidence
(New additions underlined>

1. Physical Abuse

- a. End of October 2000: Defendant and plaintiff ate lunch at the Coffee Shop in Union Square. When they were walking across the street talking about the “drops” that defendant took to make her orgasm more quickly when she had prostituted herself to Alfredo Ibarra in Italy; defendant punched plaintiff in the back very hard. Defendant missed plaintiff’s spine by less than an inch. At six feet, two inches in street shoes and a 145 pounds, all muscle, the defendant is very strong, having been the three-time long jump champ of Russia and presently working eight hours a night, five nights a week as a lap dancer.

2. Physical Threats

- a. In a letter from defendant dated June 18, 2000, defendant says, “If something happen with me strange or if I find that you avenge (revenge) me it will be 1 of the big mistakes (without correction)—without return.”
- b. In early August 2000, defendant and plaintiff were arguing in plaintiff’s kitchen and defendant got angry, cursed plaintiff and tried to grab a knife to attack him. Defendant swore, “You son of a bitch, you will pay for all your wrong doings.” Not an uncommon expression of hers. See Diary
- c. Plaintiff was able to get between defendant and the knives, but had great difficulty keeping defendant’s hand from the knives. Defendant is six feet tall in her bare feet, weighing around 145 lbs and a former three times champion of Russia in the long jump.
- d. In the middle of October 2000 in plaintiff’s apartment while plaintiff and defendant were sitting on the couch in the living room, defendant threatened plaintiff with death by putting into plaintiff’s food some poison defendant he had brought from Russia with her or by having her Russian friends in New York kill plaintiff. Defendant had asked plaintiff, “Why are you afraid of me?” Plaintiff answered, “Because you could kill me.” Defendant responded, “That would be easy. There are many ways to do it. I could put some of the poison I brought from Russia in your food or have my friends here kill you.” Defendant kept in plaintiff’s apartment what she described as poison. Defendant told plaintiff she took a little to clean her body, but too much could kill. Plaintiff has kept some of this substance. Defendant’s diary shows she put some unknown substances in plaintiff’s food just before they got married. Diary p 42; p 105. Plaintiff’s doctor in the US later described plaintiff’s symptoms from those unknown substances as similar to opiate poisoning or some other narcotic.

- e. In the beginning and the end of November 2000 in plaintiff's apartment, defendant threatened plaintiff by saying that after she moved out of plaintiff's apartment something very bad, even death would happen to plaintiff because defendant would pay plaintiff back by having her Russian friends harm him.
- f. On Sunday January 28, 2001, in the afternoon, defendant and plaintiff met at the Virgin Coffee shop in Union Square to separate their insurance coverage. During the conversation, defendant kissed plaintiff full on the lips, long and hard. After the kiss, she whispered in plaintiff's ear, "You son of a bitch, if you do not help me get green card my Chechen friends will put you in the hospital, kill you or I will do it myself."

3. Verbal abuse

- a. Defendant repeatedly told plaintiff that he was mentally ill.
  - i. Diary June 25, 2000, "I recommended to him a psychologist...." P 46; p 120.

4. Sexual misconduct and emotional abuse

- a. Defendant refused to live with plaintiff in Moscow right after their marriage on March 11, 2000. Diary April 5, 2000, entry: "He (plaintiff) wrote to me a letter saying how it was difficult for him to be alone, how nice is his Russian teacher who helped him in everything. Frankly speaking, I cannot imagine what I will do with him in Moscow. Listen to his philosophy? To wash, to clean and to cook? And leave my mother all alone..." Diary pp 41, 42; p103. Defendant intentionally deceived plaintiff by providing false reasons for staying in Krasnodar. Defendant lied that her recovery from her laser eye operation of February 23, 2000, was not going well so she needed to stay close to her doctor, Diary p 42; p103, and that the paper work on transferring her house to her aunt would take until the end of May. Defendant's real reason for not living with her husband in Moscow was so she could pursue her promiscuous, partying life style in Krasnodar.
  - i. Diary April 5, 2000, entry, "Inna was preparing to a competition. We went to a party to MENTOS – it was nice! First Inna wanted to go to Tony, but she did not manage it because of the institute. In the competition Inna was awarded a title "Miss Charming" and "Miss Russian Radio" – all thanks to Morozov. Alena took the first place. After it we had such a party... I danced sometimes with Morozov and sometimes with one more young man from "Premiera" - Alexey. I danced so much that I was presented with a basket of "Silver Line" perfume. That young man began to speak on continuing our relation – openly. He is fanny... Then, when we went to the disco "Joy", Alexey told me that on wanted me and that I was driving him mad. He bought a bottle of Champaign. I was near to going with him..." Diary p 41; pp 101, 102.

- ii. Diary April 5, 2000, entry, "Katya and me went to discos. In "Joy" there was "Hit FM", nice music. Last time some boys wanted to get acquainted with us, but they did not succeed, because we sat to a taxi accompanied by guards. I tried to seduce Alexey, to get him, but nobody can help me to glue the ceiling." Diary p 42; p 105.
- iii. Diary May 19, 2000, entry, "On April 29 there was a show in dramatic theater. I was so glad to see Vitalik and my other acquaintances... A good show, it lasted for approximately 3 hours. There were 50 models participating in the show. There were no free places in auditorium. That night my mum and me met Easter. We were inside church. During procession we were nearly knocked down. Nevertheless, it was wonderful!" Diary p 43; p 109.
- iv. Diary May 19, 2000, entry, "Katya and me walked. It was raining; the weather was cool. We went to "Samson-16". My former bridegroom was there with his girl; he always takes her along. In the break he disappeared without leaving a trace. "Samson" began at 18 and ended at 00:05. Lilya won this competition. That girl who was trained by her mother did not even enter the top ten. . On the way from disco Katya got acquainted with Andrey, we went to his friend. I did not like. I went with Andrei and Katya to the same place I tried to seduce Alexei. When I was ready and said I was ready, it turned out that what Andrei wanted was a surprise. My friend Katya was against this and this upset Andrei and Andrei was left with nothing." Diary pp 43, 44; pp 109, 110.
- v. Diary May 19, 2000, "Ma went away and this time I did not bring anybody home with me although I wish I had. So I camee to Volodya. I told him that I want to go to a picnic out of the city. He began to refuse; he said that he had already gone out of the city with Vladik. I insisted and he admitted that he is married, he has a child (2 years old), and he had married in 1998. His wife is from Kazakhstan but she is Russian. He lied, he wanted me and continued to lie. I was shocked." Diary pp 44; pp 109, 110.
- b. In July 2000, defendant admitted to having continuing communications with Alfredo Ibarra with whom she committed prostitution and adultery in Italy in May 2000.
- c. In July 2000, defendant admitted having an affair in Krasnodar with a man named Valodya from St. Petersburg. Defendant said she and Valodya were both naked except she had her panties on and she helped Valodya finish but did not have intercourse with him while the two were at her friend Katya's house. This occurred on June 26, 2000, just days after plaintiff confronted defendant over the telephone on June 15 and June 16, 2000, with the discovery of her May 2000 trip to Italy to prostitute herself to Alfredo Ibarra. During the June 15 telephone conversation, defendant pleaded for another chance and promised to change, saying it would never happen again. Plaintiff's contemporaneous notes of the telephone call state: "Roy forgive me, give me one last chance. I will try to correct mistake. Please give me last chance. I had sex with nobody else except Alfredo. I don't make any sex in Krasnodar during marriage. I tell you honestly. I tell you I was with nobody else. I don't want to speak lies in the future. I sorry for lies what I told." During the June 16, 2000, telephone conversation, my contemporaneous notes state, "You are only one man with whom I have serious relations. And to forgive is the higher moral principal. If you really love me, give me one last chance to renew my life. Because if you do not give me this chance, I do not have anything. I very big sorry. Only from 1999 do I see world. Before I had nothing. I make a lot of mistakes because I did not know the man. You great man, clever and wise, you taught me things. It was my mistake. I did not take you seriously. I thought you had wind in your head. You smart. But the more I like you is your heart. You very important in my life and I do not have anyone but you. Now we honest before each other. You not only friend, but specially love you. What you do for me is very important. I do not have too much experience. I make a lot of mistakes. I very big sorry. I feel myself very bad. I cry everyday. I have learned my lesson. I must respect you. All things you do, I appreciate. You were close to me. Your heart was not open. Before stupid mistakes, you was in my heart and stayed in my heart. All criminals in jail have chance to start new life. Before you, I am criminal. I ask you for a chance. I will try to change. Nobody wanted me to be honest before you. First man who take so serious honest and truth. In Russia no one wanted to be honest. Remember, I love you. You very important as person to me. Cannot forgive unless problem. If high intellect then forgive. I can change."

The following are defendant's June 25, 2000, diary statements concerning these telephone calls, "On Sunday a surprise waited for me but we came back on Monday. I was looking for Roy for 3 days but he appeared on the 4th day. (I went to the post office to send photos to Alfredo.)" Diary p 46; pp 119, 120.

"I was shocked. He told me that he knew everything in detail: about Milan, about Volodya, about the flat where he lived with his mother... I think that somebody has told him about it. Roy was with me everywhere – in Krasnodar and at home. All of it was so strange... I admitted that it was my fault. I did it. I begged for pardon. He disappeared for 2 days. I was telling him that forgiveness is the highest moral virtue. I asked him to give me my last chance. I lost hope that he would forgive me. He told me that he would never forgive me. I watched at everything with other eyes. He has an inferiority complex since his childhood, and he looks for truth to manage other people. But I am not a slave! I recommended to him a psychologist and he answered that he would agree I myself would be such a psychologist... The problem is in his real feelings to me. I am a stimulus for him. He sees ma as a real wife, but it is absurd... I will never see him as a real husband. On Sunday, when I was at Natasha's, he called me up and told me that he forgave me... He apologized for the time to think, for the pain, which he had caused to me. But I must cease to meet and to speak to Alfredo. He sees in Alfredo his rival.” Diary p 46; p 120.

“I met Roma. I put on a black wig. We kissed a little. He is funny... At the exhibition I got acquainted with boys from St. Petersburg. We went to cafes, chattered, drank and then Katya hit with her sports bike a pole and I hit people.” Diary p 47; p 121.

Defendant’s July 6, 2000, entry, “We met once more those boys on Monday. We persuaded them to stay and go the next day. We ate salad, drank some wine and for the first time in my life I was drunk and kind... In the evening we went to Katya’s. We bought shrimps and wine. We kissed with Volodya, and I myself began it. That moment all my hatred to men came to the surface – I was like a tiger. In the morning I went home and Volodya and Vanya went to see me off. I stopped a car and the driver tried to accost to me. I let him touch a little my knees but saved some money. It was 5:30 in the morning.” Diary p 47; p 123.

In July 2000 postcard to Valodya, defendant writes, “This is Angelina. How are you. I am okay. It was really difficult to come here. It turns out that my boss (plaintiff) found out information about me from MVD and FSB. And now he watches me. I began to work. It is interesting. I like it a lot. I work about 8 hours a day. I dance. It is interesting to meet new people, to learn about different places. I think a lot about you and I miss you and it was great that we could understand each other. Do me a huge, huge favor, please, don’t tell anybody that I am here—noway. Only my mum knows about it and now you. I kiss you, I embrace you, I miss you.” (4 lip stick kisses on back of card.)

Around Christmas 2000, Alina and Valodya where in contact with each other when the both of them were in Russia, and in the early part of May 2001, they were both in Krasnodar. On or about May 10-14, 2001, at defendant’s instruction, her mother, Inessa Shiplina, gave Valodya defendant’s telephone number in the US and one of he modeling cards.

Interview with Valodya. Need written questions of Valodya

- d. In early August Alina said she wanted to go out with some of her “clients” at Flash Dancers. I said no and she complained.
  - i. I then found business cards from some of he clients in her bag that she always took to work.
  - ii. On one Nomura Manager’s card she wrote, “massage and kissed back.” Need certified translation and authentication.
  - iii. She admitted collecting business cards. Since she only wore tong panties, she would fold the cards and put them inside her. See various business cards.
  - iv. My telephone logs showed calls to one of her customers that she admitted pursuing. A private investigator tried to track the individual down but could not and concluded: “It is our opinion this person is most certainly hiding something but it is unclear as to the reasons for doing so. If there is a possibility anyone in your home could be involved with ...unlawful activities, that would explain the secrecy involved here.” July 31, 2000 Report.

- e. For two nights August 7 & 8th defendant did not come home until 4:15 am, her usual time for returning from work. She said she was at work, but her work schedule showed she was off. See Work Schedule Week of August 7.
- f. In early September 2000, defendant engaged in an act of prostitution under NY State law in a private room at Flash Dancers. September 9, 2000, diary entry: “Besides, for the first time I went to a single room – I danced to a bearded man from TV. On Monday we sat there for 2 hours, I danced, I was so frightened. I allowed him to touch me. I received a pleasure.” Diary p 50; p 130.
- g. Defendant refused to permit plaintiff to accompany her on her vacation to Krasnodar and Cyprus in September 2000.
- h. In September 2000 in Krasnodar, defendant told plaintiff she “met” with three of her former clients when she traveled to Cyprus in September 2000. [Defendant also traveled to Cyprus at the end of April or beginning of May 2001]:
  - i. Rikos: In 1999 she engaged in sexual activity for makeup, silver necklace with her name on it, a necklace with heart made from pearls, she tried to get video camera for her mother from him but was unsuccessful (he kissed her between legs, Alina masturbated him, intercourse at least two times). Diary pp 3, 4, 5, 7; pp 6, 8-10, 16.
  - ii. Andreas: In 1999 he paid for entire day of work and paid her 50 pounds. Diary p 6; pp11-12.
  - iii. Stephanos: In 1999 they had intercourse many times in return for money. Diary pp 12, 16; pp 28, 31, 35, 37
- i. Also in Krasnodar in September 2000 defendant said she never engaged in prostitution because afterwards, she goes to church and asks forgiveness, which God gives her, so it is as if it never happened. Then defendant told plaintiff, “If God can forgive me, why can’t you?”
- j. In October 2000, defendant told plaintiff that she used drugs to heighten her sexual experience with Mr. Ibarra when she engaged in prostitution with him in Italy in May 2000. Diary pp 44, 45; pp112-14
- k. In October, defendant made repeated calls to the home number for Peter Petrovich, 233 E 60th, 212 829 1105.

5. Adultery

- a. Within one month of defendant’s wedding on March 11, 2000, she wrote in her dairy on April 5, 2000:
  - i. “My mum went yesterday in the evening to St. Petersburg. My God, help her! The most interesting event was Arsen with whom I got acquainted in trolleybus. He is tall (higher 2 m). He looked like a monster (good monster from a tale). He offered himself to help me with aerial; he worked for 2 days, but TV image remained far from ideal. I began to step aside from him.” Dairy p 41; p 102.

- ii. “What I had with Volodya... I at last had made up my mind. He took keys from Vadik. It was an old, badly groomed flat (here hanged herself Vadik’s mother). We had some wine and made love. Afterwards he had a rest (I was cooling). He is good at making love. We had it twice and the second time he even did not prepare... I did not finish. He was preparing in an interest way. It is strange, but I doubt whether I would be able to finish if I did not meet a real man?” Dairy p 41; p 102.

- b. Within two and a half months of defendant’s wedding, from her May 19, 2000, diary entry: “Praise to God, on May 20 I came to Milan. The man in customs was a fool but I had a ticket and I did not fear. He spoke a little Spanish. He asked: “What for did you come?” That is not any damned business of his. Alfredo met me and we went to “Lloyd” hotel. He was so happy... He is the first real man in my life. He gifted to me small brilliants (golden ring, ear-rings and a chain). I gifted to him my portrait, caviar and sweets. We made love... In a few minutes I finished. Alfredo’s member is so large.”

“We went for a walk in Milan, talked to each other. The next day we went to Florence. It took 3 hours – we went by a speed train. In Florence we visited museums. There Alfredo gifted to me golden ear-rings and a golden ring with a garnet. When we went to Florence the train was practically empty and we touched each other, giving a start if somebody was passing by. We returned in the evening, approximately at 00:30. We were tired but we went to a disco where they played Latin American dances. We danced so good that a few girls began to dance with us.”

“The next day (May 22) in the morning we went to agencies but none of them was interested in me: they wanted another kind of girls - dark-haired and swarthy. It means that this is not mine. Then we went to Venice. We swam along channel in a little steamer. Then we went to a square where there was a church. We were there only for 4 hours but it was marvelous. Alfredo kissed me, told me that he wanted me, embraced me... Roy never behaves like that - he always fears something. He fears that I will take his money and he is always tensed. In the night we went back. Having come back we went to a nightclub. There were a lot of Russian girls, and we chose one for one drink – 25 dollars. Alfredo danced with a girl and then he went away for a talk with her. I pretended to be jealous and he made excuses tome. But after it we had a storm of a night. I could not finish for a long time but he took the first position – when I was lying on the back and my legs were raised in vertical position. Yes and also the drops worked. We slept only 3 hours in the night. Previous night he did not allow me to sleep – touched, caressed. And in the morning I again finished quickly. His member fits for [?]. And he is so happy when I finish... A wonder! And Roy is simply a fool. After it I can hardly expect that I will want him!”

“Alfredo gave me 600$ and wanted to give 100$ more, but I refused – he had done for me so much... My God, send to him health and happiness! In the street a woman asked him to buy her an ice-cream and he did it! A man at the station asked to give him some money – he had not sum sufficient to buy a ticket - and Alfredo gave money to him. This is what I call humanity. Alfredo has a very special soul and heart. My God, send to him all the best!!!”

“And now it is very important to me to extinguish all evidence. I closed package with adhesive tape and tried to hide gold and money. I hope so Roy did not learn anything. Amen!”

“I thank you my God for everything; bless me!” Diary pp 44, 45; pp 112-14.

6. In September and October, defendant intentionally inflict emotional distress on plaintiff by saying that her doctor in Krasnodar diagnosed her with a tumor on her gall bladder that could mean death. When defendant returned to the US, plaintiff took defendant to her doctor who arranged for a sonar gram. After the sonar gram, defendant told plaintiff that it confirmed her Krasnodar doctor’s opinion. Plaintiff talked to the doctor who analyzed the sonar gram, who said there was no tumor, just a fold in the gall bladder and there was nothing to worry about.
7. In April through July 2001, defendant concocted and executed with the assistance of her mother, Inessa Shipilina, a campaign that defamed, disgraced and belittled plaintiff to his employees and potential witnesses in these court proceedings in an intentional effort to prevent the discovery of relevant facts by threatening and intimidating plaintiff, plaintiff’s translators and potential witnesses:
  - a. Natalya Martys: (W) 39 04 11. On or about April 26 –27, Inessa Shipilina visited Ms. Martys’ office twice. Ms Martys said, “At first, she (Inessa) came into my office, she told me very bad things, also she told that you (plaintiff) are criminal, crazy, etc. In addition she told me that you'll never visit Russia again, because you are a criminal and our police know it. She forced me to say with whom you met in Krasnodar. After this she tried to force me to write a paper with number of my passport and current address for Court with detailed describing of your last visit into Krasnodar: each meeting, with whom and when.... I said: "O'k, see you tomorrow, I'll make this paper." When she left our office I called my lawyer, and she refused to make any paper without special request from Court. When Alina's mother came again, I told her: "I agreed to help to show the real matter of justice but you haven't any possibilities for this." She was very angry, she promised to locate me at the prison very soon. Yes, it was very unpleasant, you know. Also she told that you forced Alina to write her diary, she could kill me!” Natalya was frighten because Alina and Inessa have money from Alina’s prostitution and stripping work in New York and also have connections with Chechen gangsters.

On or about July 12th, Inessa sent to Natalya's home a forged court summons in an effort to threaten and intimidate her into no longer providing translation services to Roy. In addition to the emotional distress caused Natalya, she had to take the time to consult with her lawyer once again. Need copy false summons and certified translation

- b. Vera Ivananova Ivanasova (W) 59 66 95, (H) 32 06 51: According to Ms. Ivanasova, on or about the last week of April 2000 and the first week of May, defendant's mother, Inessa, went to Vera and threatened to sue her in court, accusing Vera of taking money from plaintiff to distribute defendant's diary. Inessa said some very negative things about plaintiff that Vera did not want to repeat in plaintiff's presence. Inessa told "everybody" in the Gymnastic Department at the Academy of Physical Culture that Vera was distributing the diary to people in the Academy because plaintiff had paid her money. Others in the Academy found out that Inessa was lying and made her apologize to Vera in front of the Academy instructors. Need written questions
- c. Anastasia Vasilejeva and her husband Dima (W) 55 74 63, 55 98 07: According to them, on or about April 23-28, defendant telephoned Anastasia and asked to come over and meet with Anastasia about her meeting the previous week with plaintiff. Anastasia refused. Later, Inessa telephoned Anastasia and asked Anastasia questions about her meeting with plaintiff. Inessa told Anastasia that plaintiff was a criminal. Inessa also talked to Dima. Then Alina and Inessa sent a message on Anastasia's pager that they know Anastasia had sold information to plaintiff, and they will meet in court. Anastasia was very scared over the situation and Dima was very upset. Need written questions
- d. Alexei Dikov (M) 63 55 58, 902 439 6706: On or about April 23-28: Inessa called Alexei to try to intimidate him into not talking to plaintiff. Need written questions
- e. Yevgeniy Martianov, (H) 62 31 37: On or about April 23-28: Inessa called Martianov to ask whether plaintiff had talked to him and had given him some papers. Inessa told him that plaintiff was a crazy person. Need written questions
- f. Dmitri Morosov (W) 56 00 23: On or about the last week of April or first week of May: Alina or Inessa contacted Morosov and defamed plaintiff. Need written questions
- g. Nadya Sanchez (W) 39 04 11: On June 13, 2001 at about 15:30: Inessa walked over to Nadya and plaintiff and tried to intimidate Nadya into giving Inessa her name. When Nadya refused, Inessa said in a very threatening manner, "If you work for Roy, you will get into a big mess." Nadya was scared because Alina and Inessa have money from Alina's prostitution and stripping work in New York and also have connections with Chechen gangsters. Need written questions
- h. Roy Den Hollander: On June 16, 2001, according to Alexei Dikov, Inessa called him looking for an FSB person to "deal" with the plaintiff. On June 17, 2001, in the morning, Inessa called plaintiff's driver in Moscow and told him not to pick plaintiff up at the airport that night. Need written questions of driver When plaintiff arrived at the Krasnodar Airport to leave for Moscow, Inessa was standing with a militiaman and pointed plaintiff out to him and said a photograph was taken. Then Inessa followed plaintiff and his translator to the car and stood near the car apparently talking on her mobile telephone. Inessa's efforts were an attempt to intimidate plaintiff into not returning to Krasnodar to continue his investigation and to intimidate plaintiff's translator into not working for him.

- i. Larisa Novocelskaya, Editor "Улица Красная", 350000 г. Краснодар ул. Гоголя 52, (W) 55 93 09: On or about June 18-29, 2001, according to a reporter, Inessa visited the office of the editor of "Улица Красная" shouted and threatened her over an article the paper had printed in its April 30 – May 6 edition about the situation between plaintiff and defendant. Inessa also defamed plaintiff to the editor. The editor was intimidated into not reporting any follow up stories. Need written questions

8. Destruction of Plaintiff's Prized Personal Possession

- a. In August 2000 defendant intentionally smashed on the kitchen floor of plaintiff's apartment a prized memento coffee cup from plaintiff's former employer, Channel 5 News. Plaintiff learned of the incident by accidentally finding small pieces of the cup spread in a semi-circle in the foyer next to the kitchen. When plaintiff confronted defendant, she said she had gotten mad and smashed the cup and added, "You weren't meant to have it any more."

9. Effect of Defendant's actions on Plaintiff.

- a. As a result of the above actions by defendant, plaintiff visited a therapist, Dr. Arthur Gray, for one session in September and then beginning on November 8, 2000, plaintiff visited Irene Javors once weekly until February 7, 2001, just five days after service of defendant's Temporary Order of Protection.
- b. Various Friends

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT
[Draft 9/26/01]

October 4, 2001, Conference Responses

Reasons Want Annulment

1. This was my first marriage, in fact, I had never been engaged before. I opened my heart to this woman and ended up drugged, tricked, denigrated and used by her as if I were no more than a toy to satisfy her greed to make lots of money in the US sex industry. An annulment will help me partially wipe this very revolting experience from my everyday consciousness. It will help mitigate the emotional harm she recklessly caused me in her ruthless rush for money because an annulment, at least legally, says the marriage never occurred because I was defrauded into giving my consent. There is some solace in having a court say that I was tricked, albeit by a ruthless professional, which will enable me to put this incident behind me.
2. Justice. The fact situation satisfies the elements of annulment.
3. My financial obligation to reimburse the government if Alina becomes a public charge continues until she
  - a. Becomes naturalized citizen, will take 3 to 4 years
  - b. Works in US for 10 years,
  - c. Ceases to be a legal permanent resident, or
  - d. Dies.
4. An annulment dramatically increases the probability of Alina "ceasing to be a legal permanent resident" thereby reducing the time frame in which she may become a public charge.
5. Defendant does not want an annulment because it would lessen her chances of becoming a permanent resident.
6. At the Preliminary Conference, Judge Lobis remarked that an annulment would have an affect on Alina's immigration status. Alina's counsel said it would not, which was misleading in a Clintonesque manner. Whether the proceedings end in an annulment or divorce, the INS can terminate Alina's current status. Her status is called "Conditional Permanent Residency", which basically means she has a temporary green card for two years from the date of entry. The impact on Alina's future status, however, depends on whether an annulment based on fraud is granted or a divorce based on some other fault. After the marriage is terminated either by annulment or divorce, Alina can change her status to "Permanent Residency", which means a permanent green. But in order to acquire the permanent green card, Alina has to show that she did not marry me for immigration purposes that the marriage on her part was for bona fide reasons and not a sham. An annulment based on fraud will make it impossible for Alina to convince the INS that she married me for love and wanted to be my wife. That is why her attorney said that Alina still loved me and did not want a divorce. A divorce for adultery or cruel and inhuman treatment would give Alina a chance to still prove to the INS that she married for love and not a green card and to obtain permanent residency.

Unprofessional Conduct by Mundy

1. Mundy's dissemblance about medical records showing I beat Alina.
2. Mundy's threat to use evidence of an alleged crime committed by Roy to obtain a favorable settlement for his client in a civil litigation—the extortion audiotape.
3. Mundy's veiled threat to embarrass me and deplete my assets if I did not help Alina obtain a permanent green card.

CENTER FOR RUSSIAN LAW

MOSCOW, RUSSIAN FEDERATION

Reply to: Attorney Xenia Menshova mailto:Menshova@RussiaLaw.com

The Honorable Joan Lobis
Judge
New York

re: Roy Den Hollander

Dear Judge Lobis:

I represent Roy Den Hollander in the Russian Federation (RF). Mr. Den Hollander asked me to report on status of complaint brought by him in Krasnodar, RF, against Inessa Aleksandrovna Shipilina, citizen of the Russian Federation with registered place of residence in Krasnodar.

As of this day, 29 September 2001:

1. Under Russian criminal procedure, criminal case includes three stages of investigation:
  - a. Inquest, or pre-indictment preliminary investigation (doznanie);
  - b. Post-indictment investigation (predvaritel'noe rassledovanie);
  - c. Judicial investigation (sudebnoe issledovanie), that is, trial by judge or jury.
2. Investigative arm of the prosecutor's office (prokuratura) has now completed stage of inquest (doznanie).
3. On basis of the results of inquest, prosecutor's office initiated criminal case against Shipilina (closest Anglo-Saxon equivalent to "bringing a criminal" case is indictment) under article 129 of the Criminal Code of the RF, Defamation, that is, dissemination of knowingly false information that will harm the honor and dignity of another person or undermine that person's reputation.
4. Pursuant to Code of Criminal Procedure, Article 108, criminal case is initiated only after completion of preliminary investigation and only if investigation reveals probable cause and sufficient grounds for complaint.
5. Pursuant to Code of Criminal Procedure, Article 133, prosecutor must finish conduct of post-indictment investigation within period of two months (or such time as granted by court in extension) and either submit case for trial or dismiss it.

In summary, in judgment of City Prosecutor, pre-indictment inquest has shown sufficient grounds to bring indictment under charge of criminal conduct.

We are trying to fax to Den Hollander copy of indictment prepared by prosecutor.

I am available for telephone confirmation of this information at (7-095) 963-9834, but will be absent from office period 1 October-10 October.

Respectfully,

Xenia Menshova

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY CLIENT WORK PRODUCT
[Draft 10/1/01]

Evidentiary Needs

[(Court) means court approval required. The issue to which it goes follows each evidentiary need.]

1. Complete original diary and authentication.
  - a. Finance
    - i. Occupation
    - ii. Income taxes erroneous
    - iii. Income false
    - iv. Apartment ownership
    - v. Valuable jewelry
  - b. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      1. Admissions
      2. Refusal to show normal affection
    - ii. Misrepresentations of love and affection
    - iii. Surreptitiously put narcotic like substances in food
    - iv. Concealed intent before marriage to commit adultery with Mr. Ibarra
    - v. Concealed criminal conduct
      1. Prostitution
    - vi. Misrepresentations as to premarital sexual conduct
    - vii. Concealment of immoral acts
      1. Fully nude stripping with sexual contact and bartering of sexual services
      2. Recruitment of girls for the sex industry
      3. Infidelity
      4. US tax evasion
      5. Defrauded Moscow agent of his commission
      6. Congenital dishonesty
  - c. [Cruel and Inhuman
    - i. Physical Threats
      1. Poison in food
    - ii. Verbal abuse
    - iii. Sexual misconduct and emotional abuse
    - iv. Adultery]
2. Production of all correspondence between defendant and plaintiff
  - a. Annulment
3. Production of both international passports
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      1. Refusal to show normal affection

- ii. Concealed intent before marriage to commit adultery with Mr. Ibarra
  - iii. Concealed acts inferring immoral character
    - 1. Shipment of cash overseas in violation of Custom's regulations.
- b. Finance
  - i. Assets
- 4. Production of all telephone records for both mobile and home in both US and Russia since inception of marriage
  - a. Finances
    - i. Assets
      - 1. Different financial accounts
- 5. Production of all emails
  - a. Finances
    - i. Assets
      - 1. Different financial accounts
- 6. Production of any correspondence with men or women with whom she engaged in providing sexual services including lap dancing and stripping, prostitution or pornography or procuring for money before and after the marriage.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Income
    - ii. Assets
  - b. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      - 1. Admissions
    - ii. Misrepresented love and affection
    - iii. Concealed criminal conduct
    - iv. Concealed acts inferring an immoral character
- 7. Authentication of April 8 and 22, 2000, post cards from defendant.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      - 1. Admissions
    - ii. Misrepresented love and affection
- 8. Authentication of two May 10, 2000, post cards from defendant.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      - 1. Admissions
- 9. Authentication of September 11, 2000 wedding anniversary card.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      - 1. Admissions
- 10. Written questions of (Court)
  - a. Alexei Dikov
    - i. Annulment
      - 1. Married for green card
        - a. Admissions

- 2. Concealment of acts inferring immoral character
    - a. Nude stripping
    - b. Advertised self on internet
- b. Alexei Smolin
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Refusal to show normal affection
- c. Yulya Kudinova
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Married for green card
      - a. Admissions
    - 2. Concealment of acts inferring immoral character
      - a. Bartering of sexual services
      - b. Recruitment of girls for sex industry
- d. Anastasia Vasiljeva
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Married for green card
      - a. Admissions
    - 2. Concealed criminal conduct
- e. Lena
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Married for green card
      - a. Admissions
- f. Natasha
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Married for green card
      - a. Admissions
    - 2. Concealed criminal conduct
    - 3. Concealed immoral character
    - 4. Concealed dishonesty
- g. Clairvoyant
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Concealed putting narcotic like substances in food
- h. Katya Gerokaris
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Concealed criminal conduct
- i. Leonid Perlin, Moscow
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Concealment acts inferring immoral character
      - a. Masturbation video
- j. Marc L. Paulsen, Torrance, Cal.
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Concealment acts inferring immoral character
      - a. Masturbation video
- k. Valodya in St. Petersburg
  - i. Annulment
    - 1. Married for green card

- a. Refusal to show normal affection
  - l. [Vera Ivanasova
  - m. Martianov
  - n. Dmitri Morosov
  - o. Nadya Sanches
  - p. Valodya driver
  - q. Editor Krasnaya Ulitsa]
- 11. Authentication of copy of July 2000 post card to Valodya in St. Petersburg.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Refusal to show normal affection
  - b. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Sexual misconduct, emotional abuse
- 12. Subpoena records of Cyprus and Citibank bank accounts.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Income
    - ii. Assets
  - b. Annulment
    - i. Married for green card
      - 1. Other conduct that infers defendant's purpose was immigration to earn money
- 13. Authentication November 15 & 19, 1999, faxes.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Misrepresented love and affection
- 14. Authentication February 7, 2000, Valentine Day's Card.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Misrepresented love and affection
- 15. Dr. Gorny's medical records in which I describe effect of defendant's poisoning.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Concealed putting narcotic like substances in food
- 16. Second international passport or apostille copy of dated application for second international passport or affidavit as to time necessary to obtain a passport.
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Concealed intent before marriage to commit adultery with Mr. Ibarra.
- 17. Authentication of masturbation video
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Concealment of acts inferring immoral character
- 18. Zygos nature of business
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Concealment acts inferring immoral character
      - 1. Nude stripping with sexual contact
- 19. Authentication and certified translation of Document 1
  - a. Annulment
    - i. Concealment immoral character
      - 1. Infidelity
- 20. NY State definition of prostitution

- a. Annulment
    - i. Criminal conduct
  - b. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Sexual misconduct, emotional abuse
- 21. Authentication June 18, 2000, letter with threat
  - a. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Physical threat
- 22. Certified translation of Alina's handwriting on back of Nomura manager's card and authentication that it is Alina's handwriting
  - a. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Sexual misconduct, emotional abuse
- 23. Roy's telephone logs for July to show repeated calls to one of Alina's customers
  - a. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Sexual misconduct, emotional abuse
- 24. Natalya's email about Inessa's threats and copy with certified translation of false summons
  - a. Cruel Inhuman
    - i. Defamation, disgrace, belittlement
- 25. Subpoena defendant's work schedules at Flash Dancers
  - a. Finances
    - i. Occupation
    - ii. Income
- 26. Authentication of defendant's 2000 work schedules
  - a. Finances
    - i. Occupation
    - ii. Income
- 27. Millard & Associates as witness of defendant working at Flash Dancers, how many she or other girls do in a night and amount she or other girls pay the club nightly to work there.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Occupation
    - ii. Income
- 28. Subpoena Verizon and AT&T telephone records
  - a. Finances
    - i. Expenses
- 29. Subpoena defendant's Oxford Health Records
  - a. Finances
    - i. Expenses
- 30. Obtain directly from the IRS copies of defendant's tax returns
  - a. Finances
    - i. Expenses
- 31. NYC, NYS, IRS record keeping requirements and filings for lap dancing clubs that hire dancers as independent contractors who pay the club for dancing there.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Expenses
- 32. Authenticate defendant's safe deposit box contract

- a. Finances
    - i. Income
- 33. Evidence as to lap dancers income
  - a. Media reports
  - b. Columbia academic studies on lap dancing economics
  - c. IRS Administrative Reports
  - d. FOIA Dept Treasury
  - e. Books
- 34. Subpoena defendant's Citibank and Cyprus bank records since July 2000
  - a. Finances
    - i. Income
- 35. Subpoena Judy Vann Associates, International Performance Productions and Grace Del Marco records for defendant's income from work arranged by these agencies since August 2000.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Income
- 36. Subpoena apartment broker's record as to security deposit.
  - a. Finances
    - i. Expenses
- 37. Records of apartment and house ownership in Krasnodar
  - a. Finances
    - i. Assets
- 38. Page 2 of defendant's US 1040 for 2000
  - a. Finances
    - i. Income

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT

(Draft 9/22/01)

Opening Statement and Summation Ideas

1. This is not your typical marriage gone wrong. It involves a pathological lying Russian prostitute who tricked the plaintiff into marrying her so she could immigrate to New York to work as a lap dancer and prostitute where such work brings more money than any other place in the world. She tricked the plaintiff not just by her talent to make people feel sorry for her, she can cry at will, but by putting substances in the plaintiff's food to make him more willing to go through with a marriage he was thinking of canceling.
2. Defendant's Law Violations
  - a. US Immigration and Nationality Act
  - b. US Tax Act
  - c. Russian Tax Law
  - d. Russian Criminal Code
  - e. Cyprus Law Against Prostitution
  - f. Mexico Law Against Prostitution
  - g. Mexico Immigration Law
  - h. Italy Law Against Prostitution
  - i. Italy Narcotics
3. Defendant's strategy was to trick plaintiff into believing she was a decent person who got a raw deal in order to make me feel sorry for her and to encourage in me the illusion that she was romantically interested in me. This way she knew I would be willing to spend his money, time, energy and effort to benefit her, and all she would have to do in return is to engage in sexual conduct and pretend to care about me.
4. She is like a female Dorian Gray except she wears her painting on her face instead of keeping it in the attic.
5. After plaintiff learned about a couple of defendant's adulterous activities through the end of May, defendant again deceived plaintiff by convincing him to bring her to America by promising that she would change and be faithful. She begged for one last chance, she cried and pleaded that she had nothing in Krasnodar. However, in America she continued to pursue men sexually, especially her customers, and maintained contacts with previous clients and lovers.
6. [When Alina was young, probably 16, she decided that her goal in life was to make money off of men by using her looks, body and a false but pleasing personality. Besides satisfying her greed, her strategy would enable her to achieve vengeance against men in general by tricking them into falling in love, lust or feeling sympathy for her. She planned to exploit those feelings for money and use them to cause men emotional pain. She promised herself she would not be a good girl but a user of men.

Her false personality communicates a childish innocence and naiveté that masks a cold-hearted malicious ruthlessness. She hates men and intends them only physical and spiritual harm.]

7. Alina will allow anything to be done to her for money, including taking it in the tail that she could not sit for three days.
8. Defendant sold plaintiff a fantasy.
9. Useful expressions
  - a. Plaintiff saw more in Alina than there was.
  - b. Alina's perspective is that she has lips to whisper lies, lips to kiss a man and make him suffer. She will treat men like slaves, make them suffer body and soul.
  - c. Alina is not exactly the sort of person she pretends to be, the blushing and schoolgirl manner stammering and crying.
  - d. Alina is real good, chiefly the eyes, throb in her voice and the tears. She is dangerous.
  - e. Alina tries to buy loyalty with sex.
  - f. Alina never played square with me for a half an hour at a stretch since I have known her.
  - g. Alina tries to elicit sympathy from men that she then uses to take advantage of them.
  - h. When I was living with her I felt as if I was a toad on a wet rock and a snake was looking at the back of my neck.
  - i. Alina is a big league blond, expensive babe who knows what she has got. All bubble bath and dewy morning and moonlight, but inside blue steel—cold, cold like ice only not that clean.
  - j. I am fighting the evil that has lurked in the female soul since creation
    - i. The vamp an unscrupulous female who uses her charms to exploit men.
    - ii. The false victim who pretends to have had her rights violated by evil men but in fact was the violator.
    - iii. Modern day feminazi who uses duplicity to exploit popular trends that blame men as the source of all the evil in the world; therefore, the denial of rights to any one man is justified.

- k. She is as hollow and empty as the spaces between the stars.
- l. She didn't look like a tramp; she didn't look like a crook. Which meant only that she could be both with more success than if she had.
- m. To her, money is more important than another person's feelings.
- n. She can take your last dollar from between your teeth and look at you like you stole it from her.
- o. An innocent face that hides more than a lying tongue.
- p. She manipulates men with complete disregard for the harm she may cause them.
- q. She is like the aliens in "Independence Day" except she goes from man to man exploiting and laying waste.

Wrote back - J. said. 11/22/01

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Plaintiff,

Index No. 350091/01

-against-

ALINA A. SHIPILINA, a/k/a
ANGELAINA CHIPILINA,

Defendant.
-----X

Supplement Demand for Discovery and Inspection

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that pursuant to CPLR 3120 you are hereby required to produce and permit discovery by the defendant, or her attorneys, or someone acting on her behalf, the following articles, documents and things for inspection, copying, testing and photographing, at the law offices of KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES, located at 321 Broadway, New York, New York 10007, on the 9th day of November, 2001

1. Copies of all petitions, applications, papers, documents, forms, correspondence, receipts and information prepared and/or submitted and/or filed with the Immigration and Naturalization Service and/or any other agency and/or the American Embassy and/or Consulate, including but not limited to forms I-130 - Immediate Relative Petition, I-485 - Adjustment of Status Application, and G-325 - Biographical Data Worksheets, on behalf of the defendant, by Roy Den Hollander and/or the defendant and/or any authorized representative.

2. Copies of all petitions, applications, papers, documents, forms, correspondence, receipts and information received from the Immigration and Naturalization Service and/or any other agency, and/or the American Embassy and/or Consulate in response to the above.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that in the event of your failure to comply with the discovery notice, the undersigned will move for an Order of Preclusion.

---

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that this demand shall be a continuing demand up to the time of trial.

Dated. New York, New York
October 15, 2001

Kuba, Mundy & Associates
By: Paulette DeTiberiis, Esq.

AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE

State of New York            )
  ) ss.:
County of New York         )

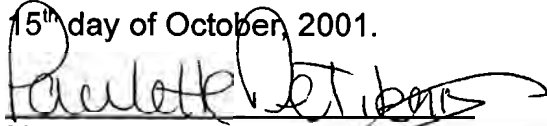

I, ALENA FARLEY, depose and say that deponent is not a party to this action, am over the age of eighteen (18) and reside within the State of New York and that on the 15TH day of October, 2001, I served a copy of the within SUPPLEMENT DEMAND FOR DISCOVERY AND INSPECTION, by ordinary mail within State of New York, addressed to each of the following persons at the last known addresses set forth after each name:

ROBERT MOSES, ESQ.
60 East 42nd Street, Suite 3210
New York, New York 10165

By: ordinary mail

ALENA FARLEY

Sworn to before me this
15th day of October, 2001.

Notary Public

PAULETTE DETIBERIS
Notary Public, State of New York
No. 02DE8036571
Qualified in Queens County
Commission Expires Jan. 31, 2002

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

: Index No. 350091/01

Plaintiff,

-against-

JUDGMENT OF DIVORCE

ALINA A. SHIPILINA,

Defendant.

-----X

The plaintiff having brought this action for an annulment and a judgment of absolute divorce by reason of the cruel and inhuman treatment of the plaintiff by defendant and defendant's adultery, and the Summons bearing the notation "ACTION FOR DIVORCE" and the Verified Complaint herein having been duly served upon defendant within this State, and the plaintiff having first appeared by COHEN, GOLDSTEIN & SILPE, LLP, and then by his substituted counsel, ROBERT H. MOSES, ESQ., and defendant having appeared by KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES, and having interposed an Answer to the Complaint, and which Answer contained a counterclaim for a judgment of absolute divorce by reason of the cruel and inhuman treatment of the defendant by the plaintiff, and thereafter this matter having come on for inquest before me as one of the justices of the Supreme on November 2, 2001, and the parties having stipulated that plaintiff withdraw the causes of action for divorce based on defendant's adultery and his causes of action for an annulment of the marriage, and the parties having proceeded to inquest for dual divorces based on defendant's cruel and inhuman treatment of the plaintiff and plaintiff's cruel and inhuman treatment of the defendant, and the pleadings were amended to conform to the proof, and such proof having been considered by me, and after due deliberation this Court having granted plaintiff a judgment of divorce, and defendant a judgment of divorce, I decide and find as stated in the separate FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW of even date herewith:

Plaintiff's address is 545 East 14th Street, Apartment 10D, New York, New York 10009, his Social Security Number is 141-40-7359, and defendant's address is 28-15 34th Street, Apartment 4H, Astoria, New York 11103, and her Social Security Number is 063-90-4695.

NOW, on motion of ROBERT H. MOSES, ESQ., attorney for the plaintiff, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED, that the marriage between the plaintiff, ROY DEN HOLLANDER, and defendant, ALINA A. SHIPILINA, is dissolved by reason of defendant's cruel and inhuman treatment of the plaintiff [D.R.L. 170(1)] and plaintiff's cruel and inhuman treatment of the defendant [D.R.L. 170(1); and it is further

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED, that the written Agreement of the parties, dated November 2, 2001, a copy of which is attached to the Findings of Fact and incorporated in this Judgment by reference, shall survive and shall not be merged in this Judgment, and the parties hereby are directed to comply with every legally enforceable term and provision of such Agreement, including any provision to submit an appropriate issue to arbitration before a single arbitrator, as if such term or provision were set forth in its entirety herein, and the Court retains jurisdiction of the matter concurrently with the Family Court for the purpose of specifically enforcing such of the provisions of that Agreement as are capable of specific enforcement, to the extent permitted by law, and of making such further judgment with respect to maintenance or support as it finds appropriate under the circumstances existing at the time application for that purpose is made to it, or both; and it is further ORDERED AND ADJUDGED, that defendant is authorized to resume the use of her maiden name, to wit: Shipilina.

ENTER: Ray Den Hollander v. Alina D. Shipilina
Arden # 358091/01
000017 JBH

Consented to as to form and Substance and Notice of Settlement waived.

Kuba, Mundy & Associates
KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES
Attorneys for Defendant
321 Broadway
New York, New York

FILED
DEC 18 2001
COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE
NEW YORK

STATE OF N.Y.
COUNTY OF NEW YORK
JUDICIAL DISTRICT
CLERK
IN SENATE CHAMBER
NEW YORK COUNTY
LEGISLATIVE CHAMBER

12/12/01
JOAN B. LOBIS

DEC 20 2001
THAT I HAVE COMPARED THIS COPY WITH THE ORIGINAL
FILED IN MY OFFICE. OF
William Goodman
Clerk

12-18-01
AND THAT THE SAME IS A CORRECT TRANSCRIPT
HEREOF AND OF THE
WHOLE OF WHICH ORIGINAL IN WITNESS WHEREOF,
I HAVE HEREUNTO SET MY HAND AND AFFIXED MY OFFICIAL SEAL.

William Goodman
COUNTY CLERK AND CLERK OF THE
SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY
FACSIMILE SIGNATURE (USCJ)
PURSUANT TO SEC. 903, COUNTY LAW.
FEE PAID

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----
ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Petitioner,

Index No. 350091/01

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT

-against-

ALINA A. SHIPILINA,
aka ANGELINA

Respondent.
-----

STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK ss:

Roy Den Hollander, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am the petitioner in this action for reformation of the Stipulation of Settlement because of FRAUD, DURESS, COERCION and OBSTRUCTION OF THE CIVIL LITIGATION PROCESS by Respondent and her attorneys. The Stipulation of Settlement, attached as Exhibit A, was entered into in the annulment/divorce proceedings Roy Den Hollander v. Alina A. Shipilina, Index No. 350091/01. Your Honor rendered a Judgment for Divorce along with Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, attached as Exhibit B, on November 2, 2001, in which the stipulation was incorporated but not merged into the judgment.

2. This motion requests reformation of the Stipulation of Settlement as concerns Maintenance and Support and Equitable Distribution as referred to in paragraph 5, Maintenance and Support; paragraph 2(a), Equitable Distribution of Property; paragraph 7, Mutual Release of General Claims; and paragraph 10 B, Full Disclosure, see Exhibit A, because Respondent and Respondent's attorneys engaged in a pattern of fraud, duress, coercion and obstruction of the civil litigation process in order to deceive and intimidate Petitioner into relinquishing his claims for equitable distribution and maintenance and support; illegally obstruct Petitioner from discovering the true nature of Respondent's finances; and otherwise violate Petitioner's rights under New York State law so as to unjustly benefit Respondent. CPLR 5015(a) permits the Court to relieve a party from a judgment on the grounds of fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party. The Court of Appeals requires transactions between spouses, including settlement stipulations "to be free from the taint of fraud and duress." Christian v. Christian, 42 N.Y.2d 63, 69, 396 N.Y.S2d 817 (1977).

3. During the annulment/divorce proceedings before Your Honor and continuing to the present, Respondent, with the connivance and assistance of her attorneys, has engaged in a methodical, cold-blooded cabal that has trampled Petitioner's rights as a human being and driven him into a state of deep emotional despair, depression and anxiety which prevents him from finding gainful employment commensurate with his experience and education, see attached Resume as Exhibit D, and necessitates the daily use of prescribed psychotropic medication, Paroxetine HCL at 40 mg a day.

4. The conspirators used attempted coercion and blatant misrepresentation by Respondent's attorney, Nicholas J. Mundy. During discussions last year with one of Petitioner's divorce attorneys, Amy Saltzman, Mr. Mundy stated he possessed an audiotape of Petitioner trying to extort money from Respondent. Mr. Mundy's clear implication was that unless Petitioner agreed to Respondent's demands for settlement, than the tape would be used to accuse Petitioner of a crime, cause criminal charges to be instituted against him, or expose or publicize the tape in order to subject Petitioner to contempt and ridicule. In addition, Mr. Mundy made a boldface misrepresentation to another of Petitioner's attorney, Judith Bader-York, when he told her that he possessed medical records showing that Petitioner repeatedly beat Respondent. As a result of Mr. Mundy's actions, Petitioner instituted Disciplinary Proceedings against Mr. Mundy in December 2001, see attached Disciplinary Complaint, Answer and Response as Exhibit E.

5. Respondent and her attorneys demonstrated a callous disregard for the orderly pursuit of justice by intentionally obstructing Petitioner's legal efforts to engage in pre-discovery investigations in order to identify financial assets and potential witnesses, New York Practice Guide: Domestic Relations, Matthew Bender, 3.12[12]. Respondent, most likely on advise from her attorneys, directed her mother to obstruct, interfere and otherwise vitiate Petitioner's search for witnesses and relevant evidence in Krasnodar, Russia. Respondent's mother defamed Petitioner as crazy and a criminal to potential witnesses interviewed by Petitioner and others whom Respondent thought Petitioner would interview with the aim of convincing them not to cooperate with Petitioner's investigation. Those whom Respondent's mother couldn't convince with her defamation were threatened. The threats included the use of criminals and disreputable policemen whom Respondent could easily afford to hire in Russia with the over $12,000 a month in cash she earns as a lap dancer at the topless club on Broadway called "Flash Dancers". The economic buying power of a dollar in Russia equals about ten dollars in America. In addition, Respondent is known to associate with both Russian and Chechen gangsters in Russia.

6. Many of the above acts of obstruction occurred while Respondent was in Krasnodar on vacation. Respondent didn't personally engage in tampering with potential witnesses but rather directed her mother to illegally interfere with the civil litigation process because her mother was not under the jurisdiction of this Court. A nice legal technicality that Respondent, not a lawyer and not an American, did not know about until her attorney's advised her on how to hamper Petitioner's efforts to uncover the true nature of Respondent's finances.

7. In reaction, Petitioner contacted a Krasnodar attorney who advised that the Russian courts could not prevent Respondent and her mother's interference in Petitioner's investigation, but the Krasnodar Prosecutor could indict Respondent's mother for defamation, which was a crime in Russia. Petitioner's attorney advised that the indictment might deter Respondent's interference.

8. At a conference before this Court on October 4, 2001, concerning the status of the annulment/divorce proceedings, see attached Preliminary Conference Stipulation as Exhibit F, Petitioner, who was already gravely upset by Mr. Mundy's earlier coercion attempt and misrepresentation and by Respondent's successful campaign of intimidating potential witnesses into silence, now realized that without his consent, Petitioner's prior attorney relinquished Petitioner's right to a trial on fault. Petitioner strenuously argued for a chance to prove fraud and adultery by Respondent at a trial. Your Honor stated that Petitioner would need to make a costly motion to set aside the stipulation of no trial on the issue of fault. Petitioner, reeling from the unrelenting onslaught on his rights, clearly understood that the Court had wanted all along for the case to disappear. Without any concern for the egregious nature of the harm Respondent, a woman, caused Petitioner, a man, the Court assumed the shortness of the marriage justified assigning the case to the black hole of expediency.

9. In the days after the conference, Petitioner struggled to decide whether justice could ever be attainable under these conditions, in this country, during this day and age or was Petitioner up against an array of forces, both individual and societal, that for differing reasons wanted him to go quietly into the night.

10. While Petitioner tried to decide whether to take arms against a sea of unjust troubles by filing a motion for a trial on the issue of fault, Respondent wasted little time in launching her next vicious attack on Petitioner's rights as an American citizen and his psychological well-being. Shortly after the conference, Petitioner received a telephone voicemail one evening from a man calling on behalf of Respondent. With malice and threats dripping from the tone of the man's voice, his message, interspersed with caustic denigrations, made it amply clear that if Petitioner went ahead with his motion, this shadowy threat would soon seek vengeance against Petitioner. Petitioner's soul flooded with fear at this Russian tactic for winning a court case. A transcript of the voicemail follows, but it does not convey the intimidation of the man's voice, so attached is a recording as Exhibit G:

"Roy Den Hollander, how are you? This is John Madison calling on behalf of Angelina. Your ex or soon to be ex-wife (inaudible). Now that she is getting new counsel<sup>1</sup>, and mainly we're going to challenge every answer to your filings, every aspect of this marriage, being that it originated in Russia. And basically try to understand that because of the fact that things didn't work out, your malicious actions are basically going to be very carefully reviewed, not only by the proper authorities, but also under every ledger of the lawyer. We will challenge every single aspect of your filings and of this case. And I assure you one thing; we're not going to basically keep our eyes closed to this issue. We are going to basically be looking at this very carefully, and we will challenge you on every aspect. I assure you of one thing on this arbitration hearing, I will be attending.

And as far as everything else goes, I can tell you first hand with all due respect that I'm disgusted by the way you handled it. And quite frankly, I question every single bit of your motions and your filings. And, I assure you one thing, that this issue is definitely going to be an issue that you're going to have to face up to reality on my friend. So as far as it goes, I will leave you with that. And I will try to reach you at home to see if you are there.

---

<sup>1</sup> Respondent never obtained new counsel, and in a later telephone conversation, "John Madison" denied being a lawyer.

But in the meantime, bear in mind that this case is not going to go basically with her lying down and being abused over this whole issue. And you trying to take advantage of the situation and try to claim all these (laughter) basic unfounded claims against her. Which basically have no foundation whatsoever. On the other hand, it really reflects on you on how you've handled this, and that a lot of your issues are very questionable. So, never the less, I will be trying to get in touch with you and have yourself a nice day."

11. Petitioner feared this lurking phantom that probably inhabited the netherworld of crime, sex and sleaze in which Respondent lived and worked. Respondent, a lap dancer for the topless club Flash Dancers, see attached Affidavit of Service Exhibit H, likely recruited with money or comely charms one of the hoodlums who haunts that club, which is well known within law enforcement circles as operated by organized crime.

12. Petitioner, whose legal career included working as an associate at Cravath, Swaine & Moore and managing the Moscow office for the security-investigative firm Kroll Associates, couldn't grasp what was happening. Had civilized laws and values of fair play become as useless and perverted in America as in Russia? Were threats, intimidations and lies acceptable tactics in proceedings before the New York State Courts as they were in the Russian judicial system? Petitioner, scared and dumbfounded, went to the police, but they only laughed at him. Probably because he was a man, and a man in modern day New York has very few rights, just like the average citizen in Russia. The police didn't care that this character from a gangster movie could walk up to Petitioner in the street at any time to carry out Respondent's instructions. If the sexes of the parties had been reversed, the police would have jumped at the chance to help the Petitioner, but unfortunately an accident of nature left Petitioner defenseless thanks to recent politically correct trends in American society. Weary of fighting a legal system that didn't care what harm came to Petitioner, what rights of his were violated, so long as Respondent, a woman, got what she wanted, Petitioner threw in the towel and gave the Court and his wife what they wanted: a settlement. Petitioner hoped these modern day feminists and the stripper Respondent would finally leave him alone. He should have known better.

13. With the divorce finalized, Petitioner started to recover from the trauma of an adulteress wife who adeptly hid the reality of her ruthless prostitute soul, see attached Exhibit I certified English translation of Respondent's diary in which the word "finish" means "orgasm" and "we" often means "I", pages 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 44-45, and secretly fed him unknown substances, apparently narcotics, with complete disregard as to whether an allergic reaction might harm or kill Petitioner, see Exhibit I, pages 42, 48, all in order to make sure Petitioner married Respondent, so she could travel to America to satiate her greed in the world's number one market for selling sexual favors as a lap dancer, prostitute or the star of porno films such as the masturbation video she made for cash, see Promotional Clips of Ms. Shipilina's Masturbation Video attached as Exhibit V. Even the demeaning experiences of a judicial system seething with hatred for men began to fade including the time when one female judge and her female clerk in the Queens Family Court laughed at Petitioner for requesting a Temporary Order of Protection against Respondent, see attached Petition Exhibit J. In spite of all these assaults, Petitioner started to pick up his life after nearly two years of hell to search for a job. But just when life seemed worth living again, terror struck once more over the telephone.

14. In February 2002, the personified nightmare of barbarity at the direction of his evil queen once again reached out to crush Petitioner on behalf of Respondent by delivering an even more vitriolic vituperative assault on Petitioner's right to live free of duress in a society supposedly ruled by laws and not women. The clear message with imminent harm stalking the connotations was Petitioner should "cease and desist" cooperating with the prosecutor in Krasnodar, Russia, that indicted Respondent's mother for the Russian crime of defamation, see Indictment attached as Exhibit K, and Petitioner should not appear at any immigration proceedings to claim that Respondent married Petitioner solely to obtain a permanent green card, see attached Exhibit I, pages 41, 46.

This time the procurer of fear said with an even more menacing tone on Petitioner's voicemail:

"Mr. Hollander, this is John Pierre, and I left you a message earlier on. And I did speak with you but apparently for whatever reason, you obviously weren't available to talk. I'm giving you a courtesy phone call.

I'm going to tell you to cease and desist with your actions against Angelina. I will tell you right now that what you're doing, I know everything about you. I know exactly what you have been doing and you're past history and your record. I know everything about you sir.

I liked to explain to you what's going to happen. If you continue harassing and making this girl's life miserable, I will promise you that everything under the law and under my ability to do so under the law, I will pursue you in every way shape and form imaginable under the law, and make sure that justice is done because right now you disgust me. As a human being, I am just so disgusted with everything about you and what you've done to this girl. More than some pathetic form of display of inhuman treatment—you've gone beyond that sir. I'm very much available! And let me tell you something that I am extremely well known in this city, and I know everything about you. You better get your act together, and I am telling you this under fairness and courtesy—cease and desist with what you are doing to this girl and her family and the way you try to (affect) her in her country. Because you, my friend, are right now going to be under investigation if I hear one more word that this is happening. And it's not going to be by me, but the federal government. And you at this point in time have crossed several boundaries that cause for a lot of red flags to (wave) in the air my friend.

So, quite frankly, right now I would be basically on my good behavior. All I'm telling you do the right thing Mr. Hollander, it obviously is the best thing to do. Be human and be courteous and understanding of other people's feelings and their lives. I think you guys are over and done with. That's it—leave her alone! Have a nice day."

Once again, a recording of the message more clearly communicates the evil at work here and is attached as Exhibit L.

15. The Krasnodar Prosecutor indicted the Respondent's mother on January 25, 2002, but there wasn't anything Petitioner could do to prevent that. Once the Russian criminal justice system took up the case, it was out of his hands. The only reason Petitioner went to the Prosecutor in the first place was to keep the Respondent and her mother from obstructing his search for potential witnesses and financial information, which, like a foolish male, Petitioner believed at the time was his right under the law, even in a matrimonial case in New York County.

16. Petitioner sunk back deeper into despair and dread. Back in October 20001, he did what the Respondent, her attorneys, the Court and the messenger of intimidation wanted him to do by not pursuing a trial on fault in the annulment/divorce proceedings, but Petitioner's manifest plead for peace through his obsequiousness fell on callous hearts. The threats were now back, meaner than ever. Every time Petitioner left his apartment, he didn't know which man might be the one moving in to carry out Respondent's threats. Fear stalked Petitioner wherever he went while nightmares haunted his fitful sleep.

17. Petitioner went to the police and filed a complaint, attached as Exhibit M, but New York's guardians of the public safety quickly closed the case telling Petitioner they didn't want to expend the resources trying to find the intimidator. At least they didn't laugh at him this time. Petitioner went to the Federal Bureau of Investigation that tracked down the man who probably made the calls, but the self-proclaimed protectors of freedom decided not to interrogate the caller because it might antagonize this goon into harming Petitioner. Now Petitioner knew for certain that truth, justice and the American way no longer existed in this country; he might as well be back in Russia where the police protect the criminals rather than the prey.

18. The Respondent's modus operandi of moral turpitude in using gangsters to intimidate witnesses next manifested its foul tactics in Krasnodar, Russia, against witnesses who testified against Respondent's mother during the prosecutor's inquiry into the criminal defamation charge. According to Petitioner's attorney, a number of the witnesses received threats from Chechen criminal thugs to change their testimony, which they did.

19. Respondent and her attorney's premeditated war to intimidate and psychologically destroy Petitioner in order to prevent him from interfering with their questionable efforts to obtain a permanent green card for Respondent, a defrauder of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), next resulted in Respondent, to the best of Petitioner's knowledge, resurrecting a complaint filed in June 2001 alleging the violation of a Temporary Order of Protection against Petitioner that was dismissed in July 2001. Respondent's attorneys apparently advised her to resurrect the complaint made last year, but on which no action was taken, in order to further pressure Petitioner into not cooperating with the INS and backing off of a Disciplinary Complaint for attempted coercion and misrepresentation filed by Petitioner against Respondent's attorney, Nicholas J. Mundy, see attached Disciplinary Complaint, Answer and Reply Exhibit E.

20. At around the same time that Petitioner received notice of the resurrected complaint and likelihood of his arrest based on the outdated complaint, Respondent's purveyor of intimidation called Petitioner once more in an obviously prearranged plan to eliminate Petitioner from any further interference in Respondent's nefarious plans by delivering a combination blow—hit him low then hit him low again. On this occasion the crier of threats who left the previous two messages, one in October 2001 and one in February 2002 hammered Petitioner with a succinct ultimatum:

Mr. Hollander, this is John Pierre calling on behalf of Angelina. I told you before to cease and desist with your legal actions. I'm warning you do not testify before the INS or we will meet. (In the background, Petitioner heard Respondent say 'About my mother and the prosecutor.') And do not try to get the case in Russia reopened. We're watching you, have a nice day.

21. Panicked and shaken, Petitioner took the only recourse left to him by obtaining a Temporary Order of Protection and Petition against Respondent, attached as Exhibit O, in the hope of convincing Respondent to call off her dog.

22. The brutally soulless manner in which Respondent and her attorneys used coercion, duress and obstruction of the civil litigation process to not only deny Petitioner his rights but to punish him for exercising those rights have driven him into severe emotional and psychological depression and suffering that prevents him from obtaining gainful employment commensurate with his education and experience. In order to provide Petitioner with the means for psychological assistance and material support until Petitioner sufficiently recovers from the trauma intentionally inflicted on him by Respondent, maintenance and equitable distribution should be provided by Respondent who continues to make well over $12,000, mostly in cash, a month from stripping, modeling and other activities and who amassed over $50,000 from the time of the marriage to commencement of the annulment/divorce proceeding.

23. Newly discovered evidence also clearly shows that Respondent with the aide of her attorneys by suborning perjury engaged in fraud by filing a Net Worth Statement, attached as Exhibit P, riddled with misrepresentations and omissions with the intent of deceiving the Court and Petitioner into believing Respondent had no assets, low earnings capacity and only earned a paltry $18,000 a year when in fact she makes approximately $130,000 a year, mostly tax free, while Petitioner on the other hand faces economic disaster and poverty as a result of foregoing opportunities in order to assist Respondent in building the legal part of her career in America.

24. Specifically, Respondent intentionally misrepresented or omitted the following items on her Net Worth Statement, attached as Exhibit P, all of which defrauded the Court while many, such as gross income and Flash Dancer expenses, defrauded Petitioner:

III. GROSS INCOME:

Respondent's tax returns for the year 2000 indicate her gross income at $18,861, which is the same amount she reported on her Net Worth Statement as her total gross income for the entire year preceding July 26, 2001. This implies she earned nothing in the first half of 2001. Whether the amount reportedly earned was for the year 2000 or the year ending July 26, 2001, it is still perjury intended to defraud the Court from carrying out its duties under the law and trick the Petitioner into relinquishing his rights to maintenance and equitable distribution. Respondent's gross income for 2000 from stripping at Flash Dancers alone was around $48,000 and for the year prior to July 26, 2001 about $120,000, as indicated by an Internet site set up by lap dancers that states the average take home pay after club fees for a dancer at Flash Dancers as $500 a night, see Club Reviews by Dancers, attached as Exhibit Q. The girls at Flash Dancers are required to work five nights a week. Respondent also failed to include income from Judy Vann Associates, International Performance and Productions and Grace Del Marco modeling agency, see attached Grace Del Marco Photo Card Exhibit R.

B. EXPENSES:

(b) and (o) Telephone and Cell

Respondent falsely stated the amount of her monthly telephone bill as around $100.

Respondent maintains home telephone service with electronic answering and voicemail and a mobile telephone. Her mobile service for October 2000 alone totaled $222.33, attached Exhibit S Mobile statement.

(f) Insurance-Medical

Respondent falsely claimed this expense as zero. Respondent and Petitioner jointly held an Oxford HMO plan from August 2000 to March 2001 that cost each of them about $300 a month, attached Exhibit T Oxford Billings.

(l) Recreational – Vacations

Respondent intentionally understated recreational costs. On September 9, 2000, Respondent flew to Moscow, Russia, then onto Krasnodar, Russia, on Aeroflot. On September 18 or 19, she and her mother, at Respondent's expense, flew to Cyprus where they stayed at a five star hotel in Limassol until September 25th. On September 28, 2000, Respondent flew from Krasnodar to Moscow and on September 29 back to New York. Respondent took a second vacation on December 21, 2000, when she flew to Moscow and then to Krasnodar on Aeroflot. She returned to New York City on January 18, 2001. For a third vacation during the last half of April and the beginning of May, Respondent traveled from New York City to Krasnodar via Moscow and, once again at her expense, she traveled with her mother to Limassol, Cyprus. Regardless of any bargains

Respondent may have wheeled, $4800 on an annualized basis for the above four cited vacations appears a fiction just standing alone and without factoring in other vacations the Respondent may have taken during the one year preceding her swearing to the truthfulness of her Net Worth Statement.

(m) Miscellaneous – Beauty

As a stripper and part time model, Respondent strains credibility with her claim that she spent nothing every month at the beauty parlor. In truth, Respondent weekly obtained a pedicure because when she is on stage at Flash Dancers, where the girls advertise their assets before heading out into the audience to give one-on-one lap dances, Respondent's feet are just below the eye level of the men sitting around the stage who give her money. Whenever Respondent's customers divert their eyes from other anatomical parts, they can't help but see her toes, close up. In addition, whenever she participated in a private event, she normally had her hair done for around $50.

(m) Miscellaneous - Other

Respondent intentional omitted her nightly expenses for lap dancing and stripping at Flash Dancers. A dancer has to pay management around $100 a night. On top of that she must tip the disc jockey $10 to $15, the house mother who watches over the girls' possessions around $15 and pay the hair stylist or cosmetician for their assistance. All totaled, Respondent probably paid out around $140 each night or $2800 for an average month since management requires all the dancers to work five nights a week. From July 17, 2000 to July 26, 2001, Respondent worked about 38 weeks, so her club expenses amounted to around $26,600. For the four months she worked in 2000, her Flash Dancers' expenses were about $11,200. In addition, Respondent intentionally failed to state the expenses for her photo portfolio used in her attempt to become a model. Her portfolio shoot in August 2000 by Phillip Jarrell, attached Photo Card Exhibit R, cost her around $400.

Respondent willfully and knowingly understated her expenses by tens of thousands of dollars in order to make the gross misrepresentation of her income appear credible to the Court and Petitioner.

IV. ASSETS:

A. Security deposits

Respondent failed to state the over $1200 in security deposited with her landlord.

G. Real Estate

Respondent knowingly omitted her 50% ownership of an apartment at 138 Rashpilevskaya Street, Apt. 8, Krasnodar, Russia 350020, see registry deed attached as Exhibit U, whose value increased dramatically during the marriage. Respondent purchased the apartment with money she earned as a stripper, lap dancer and prostitute in Cyprus and Mexico City.

K. Jewelry

Respondent failed to include the numerous jewelry items she earned in return for providing sexual favors to her customers as stated throughout her diary, see Exhibit I.

A. FAMILY DATA:

(m) Occupation

Respondent failed to include her occupation as a stripper and lap dancer. Her tax returns, which are included in her Net Worth Statement, Exhibit P, stated her occupation in 2000 as bartending while her Net Worth Statement listed only modeling for both 2000 and 2001. Neither her Net Worth Statement nor Tax Returns listed her forty-hour a week occupation as a lap dancer and stripper at Flash Dancers. Respondent continues to work mainly as a stripper at Flash Dancers.

25. The blatantly false, misleading and obfuscating information in Respondent's Net Worth Statement was intended by the Respondent to not only fraudulently induced Petitioner into agreeing to relinquishing his rights to maintenance and equitable distribution but to make a mockery of the American judicial system as represented by this Court in an arrogant attempt to prove the superiority of the Russian way of duplicity and dishonesty in dealing with government officials, especially those who believe an innocent looking face with tearful eyes would never lie. As such, paragraph 5, Maintenance and Support; paragraph 2(a), Equitable Distribution of Property; paragraph 7, Mutual Release of General Claims; and paragraph 10 B, Full Disclosure of the Settlement Stipulation should now be reformed to provide Mr. Den Hollander with the maintenance and equitable distribution he justly deserves. At the very least the general right to a plenary hearing on the issues raised in this motion should be respected. See Schnoor v. Schnoor, 189 A.D.2d 809, 592 N.Y.S.2d 461 (A.D. 2 Dept. 1993).

26. Numerous factors justify Petitioner's request for maintenance. Petitioner has been unemployed since his unfortunate marriage to Respondent and currently has next to no income. Petitioner left the work force and forewent economic opportunities in Moscow, Russia, in order to contribute to the couple's economic partnership by assisting Respondent in increasing her earning capacity in the legal area of her work and also for the betterment of the marriage since Respondent desired to work in America. Petitioner provided numerous contributions to Respondent's career including legal and business advice, introductions, information, household expenses and even home making. Given Petitioner's current psychological problems caused by Respondent, Petitioner is unlikely to gain employment in the near future. Petitioner's age at fifty-four makes it additionally difficult for him to find employment while Respondent at age twenty-six is still in her prime. Petitioner needs to defray psychiatric expenses and maintain his pre-divorce living standard as well as the time to regain the earning capacity he enjoyed before his marriage.

27. Petitioner is also justified in receiving a substantial portion of the marital property as evidenced by the following facts. From the wedding ceremony on March 11, 2000, to the commencement of the annulment/divorce action on February 13, 2001, Respondent grossed over $50,000 working as a stripper and part time model. Respondent also made an undisclosed amount as a prostitute, but Petitioner wants none of that filthy money. Respondent's apartment in Krasnodar, Russia, which she failed to disclose on her Net Worth Statement, also dramatically increased in value during the same period. In addition, if it were not for the Petitioner's actions and sacrifices during the marriage, Respondent would not now enjoy the reputation, clientele and experience in the legal part of her work that dramatically enhanced her earnings capacity over the course of the marriage and continues to build her earning power, all of which is subject to equitable distribution. Hougie v. Hougie, 261 A.D.2d 161, 689 N.Y.S.2d 491 (A.D. 1 Dept. 1999), Elkus v. Elkus, 169 A.D.2d 134, 572 N.Y.S.2d 901 (A.D. 1 Dept. 1991). For example, Petitioner provided Respondent legal and business advise; introductions to professionals in the modeling, acting and recording industries; research and advise on finding and selecting a modeling agency; explanations and interpretation of conversations with modeling agency managers; assistance in finding a Topless Club that did not condone prostitution; due diligence on free lance modeling job offers; drafting and reviewing of employment contracts; advice on taxes; assistance in planning her career; a rent free place to live; home making, which included cleaning, laundry, repairs and purchasing most of the food, paying most of the telephone and cable expenses; help in acclimating herself to the peculiarities of life in New York City along with warnings of its dangers; information and a tour of the different shops where she could buy outfits necessary for her work; and the emotional support and security necessary for an alien in a strange land to feel comfortable. During the same time, Petitioner lost around $140,000 in his net worth. Even though Petitioner is a lawyer with an MBA, "the courts should treat all matrimonial litigants equally and should not prejudice nor penalize a spouse who is married to a non-professional who many nevertheless become an exceptional wage earner." Golub v. Golub, 139 Misc.2d 440, 527 N.Y.S.2d 946, 950 (Sup. N.Y. Co. 1988).

28. The following factors cry out for equitable distribution to the Petitioner:

A. The early part of a marriage often results in the greatest sacrifices and contributions; therefore, as in this case, a "spouse in a relatively short marriage should take a larger share than if the marriage had endured sufficiently long for both spouses to enjoy the later benefits of early efforts." N.Y.P.G.: Domestic Relations, 16.06[2][b] at 16-55.

B. Petitioner at the age of fifty-four is less likely to become self sustaining or gain new assets in the future, his time has past; whereas, Respondent at age twenty-six still has the most productive years ahead of her. In addition, Petitioner's current health problem, along with his age, make it less likely that he will be able to start a new life on an equal footing with the Respondent, so Petitioner is entitled to a larger percentage of the marital property.

C. Petitioner contributed directly and indirectly to the economic partnership and Respondent's career, as specified in paragraph 26, which resulted in Petitioner sacrificing his own career opportunities as evidenced by Respondent's gross income for the year 2001 in excess of $120,000 while Petitioner earned only $2,000. In O'Brien v. O'Brien, 66 N.Y.2d 576, 498 N.Y.S.2d 743 (Ct.App. 1985), a spouse's sacrifice of her own career opportunities along with financial contributions represented an investment in the economic partnership. In Freyer v. Freyer, 138 Misc.2d 158, 524 N.Y.S.2d 147 (Sup. Suf. Co. 1987) the Court was required to consider the husband's homemaking contributions and that the wife's income exceeded the husband's by $33,000 in determining equitable distribution.

D. Due to age and health, the Petitioner possesses less promising prospects, so a greater portion of the marital property would prove more advantageous to him. Jolis v. Jolis, 98 A.D.2d 692, 470 N.Y.S.2d 584 (A.D. 1 Dept. 1983).

E. During the marriage, Respondent willfully and maliciously deceived Petitioner into bringing her to America and giving up his own career opportunities so that Respondent could pursue the goddess of greed. Respondent not only didn't care about the harm she might cause Petitioner but, in fact, later engaged in a premeditated plan to psychologically destroy Petitioner on the sacrificial alter to womanhood. After the marriage, the Respondent embarked on a course of coercion, intimidation and harassment to punish the Petitioner for not lying to the Immigration and Naturalization Service so that she could easily obtain a permanent green card and later to prevent Petitioner from providing information to the INS about her marrying him solely to obtain a green card. Of course, it was the Petitioner's duty as an officer of the courts to provide such information to a law enforcement agency charged with protecting the citizens of this country from undesirables such as Respondent whose viciousness is only curtailed by the limit of her finances. As such, justice calls for Petitioner to received a substantial portion of the marital property for which he sacrificed and continues to suffer so much.

29. No prior application has been made for the relief sought herein.

WHEREFORE, it is respectfully requested that Petitioner's motion be granted together with such other and further relief as this Court deems just and proper.

Sworn to before me on the 7th day of May 2002

/S/

_____
Roy Den Hollander

/S/

_____
Notary Public

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Index No. 350091/01

Plaintiff,

-against-

Affirmation in Opposition

ALINA A. SHIPILINA a/k/a,
Angelina Chipilina,

Defendant.

-----X

State of New York     )
                                  ) ss.:
County of New York    )

NICHOLAS J. MUNDY, ESQ., an attorney duly admitted to practice law before all of the courts of the State of New York hereby affirms the following to be true under the Penalties of Perjury:

(1) That I am an attorney with Kuba, Mundy & Associates, the attorneys for defendant ALINA A. SHIPILINA a/k/a ANGELINA CHIPILINA (hereinafter "Shipilina" or "Defendant"), and as such I am fully familiar with all of the facts and circumstances to which this affidavit relates. (I base this affirmation on the files maintained by my office and the Court, and on conversations with my client.)

(2) I submit this affirmation in opposition to the instant motion of the plaintiff pursuant to CPLR 5015(a) seeking "reformation of the Stipulation of Settlement" dated November 2, 2001, which Stipulation of Settlement was incorporated, but not merged, into the Judgment of Divorce between the parties dated December 12, 2001.

Background

(3) The above-captioned action is a settled divorce matter. The parties were married in the City of Krasnodar, Russia on March 11, 2000. A copy of the parties' Marriage Certificate with English translation is attached hereto as Exhibit "A".

(4) On or about February 13, 2001, plaintiff commenced this action by filing of a Summons with Notice seeking a judgment of divorce, grounds adultery & CoT or in the alternative, a judgment annulling the marriage between the parties (Exhibit "B"). After service of a Notice of Appearance and Demand for Complaint by defendant's counsel on March 12, 2001, plaintiff served and filed a Verified Complaint dated June 21, 2001 (Exhibits "C" and "D", respectively). Defendant served and filed an Answer with Counterclaim for Divorce based upon cruel and inhuman treatment on July 16, 2001 (Exhibit "E").

(5) A Preliminary Conference was held before the Honorable Joan B. Lobis, J.S.C., on July 26, 2001<sup>1</sup>. Plaintiff was represented by Amy Saltzman, Esq. and Steven Silpe, Esq. of the law firm of Cohen, Goldstein and Silpe, LLP on that date. The parties agreed on that date "fault will not be an issue", and that only matters of maintenance and equitable distribution need be addressed. A copy of the resulting Preliminary Conference Order is attached hereto as Exhibit "F".

(6) On or about September 17, 2001, plaintiff's counsel Amy Saltzman, Esq. telephoned Paulette DeTiberiis, Esq. of this office to advise us that plaintiff was retaining new counsel. Discovery in this matter had been proceeding at a steady pace. ✓

Incorrect

False <sup>1</sup> The first Preliminary Conference was originally scheduled for June 21, 2001. The conference was adjourned to July 26, 2001 when plaintiff and his counsel failed to appear.

(7) Pursuant to the aforesaid Preliminary Conference Order dated July 26, 2001, a Compliance Conference was held before Judge Lobis on October 4, 2001. Plaintiff was represented by new counsel, Robert Moses, Esq., on that date.

(8) In the following weeks, an open line of communication existed between Mr. Moses and Ms. DeTiberiis concerning case settlement. At the end of October, 2001, a mutually agreeable settlement was reached by the parties. Plaintiff's counsel undertook to draft the final Stipulation of Settlement, Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law and Judgment of Divorce. A mutually agreeable date, November 2, 2001, was scheduled for Inquest before the Court.

(9) On November 2, 2001, the parties appeared in Court with counsel. The mutually agreeable Stipulation of Settlement was executed and acknowledged by the parties in open Court that day. An Inquest was held before Judge Lobis at this time, and the terms of the Stipulation of Settlement and parties acceptance thereof was read into the record. Copies of the fully executed Stipulation of Settlement, Findings of Fact and Conclusion of Law and Judgment of Divorce are attached hereto as Exhibits "G", "H" and "I", respectively. A transcript of the Stipulation of Settlement allocution and Inquest is attached hereto as Exhibit "J".

Argument

(10) It is well settled, that "Stipulations of Settlement are favored by courts and are not to be lightly set aside, particularly where the terms of the stipulation were read into the record and the party seeking to vacate the stipulation was represented by counsel" (see, Matter of Galasso, 35 N.Y.2d 319, 321, 361 N.Y.S.2d 871, 320 N.E.2d 618; Daniel

v Daniel, 224 A.D.2d 573, 639 N.Y.S.2d 713; Bossom v Bossom, 141 A.D.2d 794, 529 N.Y.S.2d 1022). Relief from a stipulation will be granted only upon a showing of good cause sufficient to invalidate a contract, such as fraud, overreaching, duress, or mistake (see, Hallock v State of New York, 64 N.Y.2d 224, 230, 485 N.Y.S.2d 510, 474 N.E.2d 1178; Zwirn v Zwirn, 153 A.D.2d 854, 545 N.Y.S.2d 683). Courts will not set aside a stipulation simply because, in hindsight, a party decides that the agreement was improvident (see, Kazimierski v Weiss, 252 A.D.2d 481, 675 N.Y.S.2d 124; Warren v Rabinowitz, 228 A.D.2d 492, 644 N.Y.S.2d 315; Javarone v Pallone, 234 AD2d 814, 815, appeal dismissed 89 NY2d 1030, 90 NY2d 884).

(11) Furthermore, a Stipulation of Settlement with respect to property, custody, and support issues in a matrimonial action, which is placed on the record in open court and which is fair on its face, will be enforced according to its terms unless there is proof of fraud, duress, overreaching, or unconscionability (see, Christian v Christian, 42 NY2d 63, 73; Wilson v Neppell, 253 AD2d 493).

(12) "It is firmly established that open-court Stipulations of Settlement made by parties who are represented by counsel will not be cast aside lightly" (Sheridan v Sheridan, 202 AD2d 749, 751; see, Vermilyea v Vermilyea, 224 AD2d 759, 760; Brender v Brender, 199 AD2d 665, 666; Matter of Flournoy v Porter, 188 AD2d 465, 466; Washo v Washo, 170 AD2d 827, 828).

(13) In the case at bar, the plaintiff is requesting "reformation" of a Stipulation of Settlement entered more than seven (7) months ago. Specifically, plaintiff seeks reformation "to provide plaintiff with maintenance, support and equitable distribution" (see plaintiff's Notice of Motion at Page 1).

(14) The Stipulation of Settlement entered between the parties in this action was, and still is, fair, reasonable and equitable. The parties were married on March 11, 2000. The plaintiff filed for divorce on February 13, 2001, less than one (1) year later. The plaintiff was represented by the attorney of his choosing throughout the entire proceeding. Moreover, the plaintiff himself is an "attorney with an MBA" (see affidavit of plaintiff dated May 25, 2002 at Page 18) who had been intimately involved in the litigation from its inception, relieving two prior attorneys from representation before finalizing settlement negotiations represented by Mr. Moses. There can be little doubt that the plaintiff understood the nature and consequences of his actions when he voluntarily negotiated the subject Stipulation of Settlement, signed it before a notary public, and agreed to be bound by its terms in open Court on November 2, 2001.

fact
issue

fact
issue

(15) The affidavit submitted by plaintiff in support of his motion is filled with outlandish allegations that are baseless and unfounded. The accusations which plaintiff levels against the defendant, her attorneys, his own attorneys and various Court personnel are unsupported by fact or evidence. In his attempt to disturb the validity of a legal and valid Stipulation of Settlement, the plaintiff has failed to provide a single affidavit from persons with personal knowledge and facts which support his extraordinary claims. His allegations are based on conjecture, supposition and pure fantasy. The majority of his assertions and "evidence" are poorly veiled attempts to further deride and insult the defendant, and all women alike, and to continue embarrassing the defendant in a public forum.

fact
issue

to be decided by plenary court regardless of motive

(16) Plaintiff contempt for his ex-wife, and women in general, is further evidenced by plaintiff's constant verbal assault on women throughout his affidavit.

Referring to Judge Lobis, plaintiff claims that he was sent "reeling from the unrelenting onslaught on his rights ... without any concern for the egregious nature of the harm Respondent, a woman, caused Petitioner, a man ...". See Plaintiff's Affidavit at Page 4, Paragraph 8. He slanders his prior attorneys, both women, stating that one of them "relinquished his right to a trial on fault ... without his consent". See Plaintiff's Affidavit at Page 4, Paragraph 8. He states that the police laughed at him when he tried to make a criminal complaint against the defendant, "probably because he was a man, and a man in modern day New York has very few rights ... if the sexes of the parties had been reversed, the police would have jumped at the chance to help the petitioner, but unfortunately an accident of nature left the petitioner defenseless". See Plaintiff's Affidavit at Page 6, Paragraph 12. He states that "a judicial system seething with hatred for men began to fade including the time when one female judge and her female clerk ... laughed at petitioner for requesting a T.R.O. against respondent". See Plaintiff's Affidavit at Page 7, Paragraph 13.

(17) Plaintiff's far-fetched accusations can not overcome the simple fact that the Stipulation of Settlement entered between the parties was the result of lengthy, arms length settlement negotiations between the parties' respective counsel. Moreover, it was the plaintiff's attorney who drafted the Stipulation of Settlement. Likewise, it was the plaintiff's attorney who drafted the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law and Judgment of Divorce in this matter.

(18) As previously stated herein, the Stipulation of Settlement between the parties in this action was drafted by the plaintiff's attorney, it was presented to the parties in writing, it was signed and acknowledged by the plaintiff, and allocution thereof was

} male attby

} false w/o knowledge of fraud

read into the trial record. On November 2, 2001, before Judge Lobis, on the record in open court, the plaintiff stated under oath that he had an adequate opportunity to read the Stipulation and discuss the terms thereof with his attorney, that he was satisfied with the terms of the Stipulation and his attorneys representation, and that he was not coerced or forced in any way. Indeed, it was plaintiff's attorney who pronounced to the Court "We are pleased to report we settled the whole entire case" (see Exhibit "J", Transcript "TR" of November 2, 2001 at Page 2).

(19) The plaintiff's very own words, when questioned by Judge Lobis under oath and in open Court on November 2, 2001 speak volumes:

Q: Mr. Hollander, you've had an opportunity to read through that document, correct?

A: Yes.

Q. You have had an opportunity to ask questions of your attorney?

A: Yes.

Q: Have you been given satisfactory answers to those questions?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you believe this is a fair resolution of this marriage?

A. Yes, I do.

→ Q. Do you feel that you were coerced or forced in any way to enter the agreement?

A. No.

Q. Is the agreement the product of a negotiation that took place over some period of time?

A. Yes, it is, Your Honor.

Q. Do you understand you have a right to have a trial?

A. Yes, I do, Your Honor.

Q. If this agreement is accepted today, it will do away with your right to trial and become a part of a judgment of divorce, do you understand that?

A. I understand that, Your Honor.

Q. That would not be something you can appeal from.

A. I understand that.

Q. Have you taken any drugs or alcohol today?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Did you take any drugs or alcohol the day you signed that document?

A. I signed the document today, Your Honor.

Q. Have you been satisfied with the services of your attorney and his office?

A. I'm very satisfied with my current attorney.

(20) In sum, the plaintiff has failed to put forth a shred of acceptable evidence that would warrant the extraordinary relief which he now requests. The plaintiff is an educated man who was represented to his satisfaction by his attorney finalizing his case. His vague and baseless claims of coercion and duress seven months after case settlement are contradicted by his very own sworn statements in open Court on November 2, 2001. Moreover, the plaintiff admits being of sound mind and free of drug or alcohol influence on November 2, 2001 when he settled this case in open Court, in contrast to his admissions that he is presently under the influence of psychotropic medication necessitated by his "deep emotional despair, depression and anxiety" when making this motion. See Plaintiff's Affidavit at Page 2, Paragraph 3.

presented for seclusion psychiatric help

(21) In sum, well settled case precedent referenced above mandates that plaintiff's instant motion be dismissed in its entirety.

(22) Accordingly, for all of the reasons set forth herein, the plaintiff's motion for reformation of the Stipulation of Settlement entered November 2, 2001 should be denied in its entirety.

Dated: June 17, 2002
New York, New York

_____
Nicholas J. Mundy, Esq.
Kuba, Mundy & Associates
321 Broadway
New York, NY 10007
(212) 732-5050

To: (See annexed Affidavit of Service)

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
NEW YORK COUNTY: IAS PART 20

-----X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Plaintiff,

Index No. 350091/01

Decision and Order

-against-

ALINA A. SHIPILINA,

Defendant.

-----X
JOAN B. LOBIS, J.S.C.:

In this post-judgment matrimonial action, plaintiff, former husband, proceeding pro se, moves to reform the written stipulation of settlement that was entered into between the parties on November 2, 2001 (the "Stipulation") in order to provide him with maintenance, support, and equitable distribution. Plaintiff claims that the Stipulation must be set aside because of fraud, duress, coercion, and obstruction of the civil litigation process.

Plaintiff and defendant were married in Russia on March 11, 2000. There are no children of the marriage. The matrimonial action was commenced on February 13, 2001, less than one year after the marriage began. The Stipulation was incorporated, but not merged, into the judgment of divorce, which was entered on December 18, 2001, granting dual divorces on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

With respect to equitable distribution, the Stipulation provides that each of the parties shall have legal title to property that he or she at that point had legal title or possession of, and each party acknowledged that he or she has no title or interest in the other party's property, including real estate, degrees, bank accounts, pensions, etc. Each of the parties released and discharged each other from any and all claims and demands for support, alimony, and maintenance. The parties also waived all claims against the other, including claims or rights to equitable distribution of property, distributive awards, maintenance, counsel fees, and similar claims. Plaintiff further acknowledged that he had an opportunity to obtain financial disclosures from the wife.

Plaintiff alleges that after the Stipulation was entered into, he received multiple phone threats from associates of defendant. Plaintiff ultimately obtained an order of protection in the hope that it would stop these calls from occurring. Plaintiff claims that he contacted the police and the FBI, but both organizations believed he would be safer if no action was taken. Plaintiff alleges that defendant's mother was obstructing his ability to investigate defendant in Krosnodar, Russia. He further alleges that defendant's mother was indicted for defamation with respect to plaintiff, but the charges were later dropped because Chechen gangsters had threatened all the witnesses into changing their stories. These acts committed subsequent to the signing of the Stipulation cannot be properly referred to as having any consequence on plaintiff's actual signing of the Stipulation.

In support of his motion, plaintiff claims that defendant committed fraud, duress, coercion, and obstruction of the civil litigation process during and after the Stipulation in order to keep plaintiff from pursuing his rights. In addition to defendant, plaintiff blames defendant's relatives, friends, the police, and the courts of obstruction and threats.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff presented no evidence of fraud, duress, coercion, or obstruction of the civil litigation process by the defendant, which would entitle him to reformation. Alexander v. Alexander, 112 A.D.2d 121 (2d Dep't 1985).

---

<sup>1</sup>Plaintiff has also filed a complaint against defendant's attorney with the disciplinary department of the Appellate Division, First Department.

Plaintiff avers that defendant also committed fraud by misrepresenting or omitting aspects of her net worth statement. Plaintiff's claimed discovery subsequent to the signing of the Stipulation, that defendant had more money than he originally thought is not grounds to set aside the Stipulation, particularly when he had the opportunity for discovery. Furthermore, both parties were represented by counsel and entered into the Stipulation knowingly and voluntarily after extensive negotiations. Plaintiff's claim that he was under duress at the time of signing the Stipulation is negated by his actions of initialing every change made throughout the Stipulation. Gaton v. Gaton, 170 A.D.2d 576 (2d Dep't 1991). Additionally, plaintiff was allocuted on the record before this court. During the allocution, plaintiff indicated that he understood his rights under the Stipulation; that he believed the Stipulation to be a fair resolution of the marriage; that he entered into it of his own free will; that he was not threatened or coerced to enter into the Stipulation in any way; that he understood he was relinquishing his right to a trial; that he was not under the influence of any drugs or alcohol; and, that he was satisfied with the representation of his attorney. Indeed, it was plaintiff's attorney who drafted the Stipulation in the first instance. Plaintiff, who is both a licensed attorney and business school graduate,<sup>2</sup> should have been well aware that he was entering into a legally binding settlement of this matrimonial action.

---

<sup>2</sup>Plaintiff annexed his resume to the motion papers. According to his resume, he received a J.D. with high honors from George Washington University Law School in 1985 and then worked as an associate at Cravath, Swaine & Moore. He received an MBA from the Columbia University School of Business in 1997.

In addition, the Stipulation contains a number of terms that undermine plaintiff's claims of fraud, duress, and coercion. See Luftig v. Luftig, 239 A.D.2d 225 (1st Dep't 1997).

Article 10 of the Stipulation, titled "Full Disclosure," contains the following language:

B. The Husband hereby agrees to and does accept all of the provisions of this Agreement, and in particular the financial and property arrangements . . . In so accepting all of the provisions of this Agreement, the Husband specifically acknowledges that he has had an opportunity to obtain financial disclosures from the Wife.

C. The parties acknowledge that they have had an ample opportunity to conduct discovery to (i) compel discovery and inspection of the other's books and records, business and personal; (ii) to take examination of the other before trial; and (iii) to have accountants, appraisers or other[s] investigate, appraise or evaluate the other's business and property. Each party waives these rights to the extent that same have not been exercised.

Similarly, Article 12 provides that "[n]o representation, warranty, agreement or undertaking of any kind or nature has been made to either party to induce the making of this Agreement, except as is expressly set forth herein."

Plaintiff's request for maintenance is denied. He claims that he has been unemployed since his marriage and currently has "next to no income." He has not provided a current statement of net worth. There is no evidence that plaintiff is "incapable of self-support and therefore is likely to become a public charge" if the Stipulation is not set aside. See GOL § 5-311; See, Goldring v. Goldring, 290 A.D.2d 365 (1st Dep't 2002); see also Thompson v. Thompson, ___ A.D.2d ___, 741 N.Y.S.2d 641, 642 (4th Dep't 2002); Valente v. Valente, 269 A.D.2d 389 (2d Dep't 2000). Because there was no foreseeable risk at the time of execution of the Stipulation that plaintiff would become a public charge, his claim for maintenance is dismissed. See, Lasky v. Lasky, 163 Misc. 2d 859

(Sup. Ct. Westch. Co. 1994), aff'd, 216 A.D.2d 366 (2d Dep't 1995).

Plaintiff's motion to reform the Stipulation is denied. This constitutes the decision and order of the court.

Dated:

August 1, 2002

_____
JOAN B. LOBIS, J.S.C.

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,                      Petitioner,                      Docket No. O-03570/02

-against-

NOTICE TO ADMIT

ALINA SHIPILINA,                      Respondent,                      JUDGE: JODY ADAMS

-----X

To: Nicholas J. Mundy

Pursuant to CPLR 3123 and within twenty days after service of this notice, the petitioner requests the respondent to admit, for the purpose of this proceeding only and subject to all pertinent objections to admissibility which may be interposed at the hearing, the truth of the following matters of fact:

1. During October 2001, annulment/divorce proceedings between petitioner and respondent were on going in the Supreme Court of the State of New York in the County of New York before Justice Joan Lobis, Index No. 350091/01.
2. On October 4, 2001, respondent and her attorney, Paulette Detiberiis, attended a compliance conference before Justice Joan Lobis in the annulment/divorce proceedings between petitioner and respondent, Index No. 350091/01.
3. At the compliance conference noted in number 2 above, Justice Lobis in the presence of respondent and Ms. Detiberiis granted petitioner the right to file a motion to set aside the Preliminary Conference Stipulation that stated fault would not be an issue in the annulment/divorce proceeding between petitioner and respondent.
4. Following the compliance conference noted in number 2 above, respondent understood that petitioner's filing of a motion to set aside the Preliminary Conference Stipulation that stated fault would not be an issue in the annulment/divorce proceeding between petitioner and respondent might result in a trail on the issue of fault.
4. A criminal decree was filed against respondent's mother, Inessa Shipilina, by a Krasnodar prosecutor on January 25, 2002, that charged Inessa Shipilina with defaming the petitioner.
5. Respondent has worked as a lap dancer at the topless club called Flash Dancers located at 1674 Broadway in Manhattan.

6. Respondent continues to work as a lap dancer at the topless club called Flash Dancers located at 1674 Broadway in Manhattan.

7. Respondent has worked as a lap dancer at the topless club called Flash Dancers located at 1674 Broadway in Manhattan since July 2000.

Dated: New York, New York

May 17, 2002

Roy Den Hollander

Petitioner

545 East 14th Street, Apt. 10D

New York, NY 10009

212 995 5201

To: Nicholas J. Mundy

Attorney for Respondent

Kuba, Mundy & Associates

321 Broadway

New York, NY 10007

212 732 5050

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

----- X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,                      Petitioner,                      Docket No. O-03570/02

-against-

PETITIONER'S FIRST

ALINA SHIPILINA,                      Respondent,                      NOTICE FOR DISCOVERY

AND INSPECTION

JUDGE: JODY ADAMS

-----X

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 3120 of the Civil Practice Law and Rules, petitioner, Roy Den Hollander, demands that respondent, Alina Shipilina, produce for inspection and copying the documents described below at 4:00 p.m. on Friday, June 21, 2001, at the Village Copier, 20 East 13th Street, New York, NY 10003.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that this Notice is continuing and applies as well to any additional responsive documents that come within defendant's possession or control after the date of production.

INSTRUCTIONS AND DEFINITIONS

1. Unless otherwise specified, all requests cover the period JANUARY 1, 1996 to the date of production.
2. Requests for documents "since" a certain date means from that date to the date of production.
3. Use of the word "and" means "and/or" and use of the word "or" means the same thing.
4. References to anything "owned" by respondent or "held" in her "name" or by her includes anything owned in whole or in part by respondent, or jointly by her with any others, or in which she has a beneficial interest, provided that respondent's interest is at least 10% of the total, and also any account on which respondent is a named signatory (without regard to the percentage of her legal or beneficial interest and no matter in what capacity she is a signatory).

5. References in the present tense to respondent's ownership of any assets include both past and present ownership during all or part of the period specified, as the case may be.

6. Use of the words "including" and "any" are not restrictive and mean "including without limitation" and "any/or all", respectively.

DOCUMENT DEMANDS

1. With respect to the income, earnings, salaries, wages, commissions, interest, dividends, bonuses, funds, returns of capital, reimbursed expenses, gifts, legacies, loans, advances and other monies or securities received by defendant from all sources, including prostitution; stripping; lap dancing; and erotic and pornography videos, digital recordings and still photographs: all documents reflecting such payments since January 1998.

2. With respect to all checking accounts held in respondent's name individually or jointly with another or others: the checkbooks, checkbook stubs, monthly statements, computer printouts, computer disks and other documents reflecting the status of and activity in such accounts since September 1, 2001.

3. With respect to all cash accounts, savings accounts, certificates of deposit, money market funds, trusts, custodial accounts and other cash deposits held in respondent's name individually or jointly with another or others: the monthly statements, transaction records, computer printouts and computer disks reflecting the status of and activity in such accounts since September 1, 2001.

4. With respect to all mutual funds and brokerage accounts held in respondent's name for transactions in securities of any kind (including stocks and bonds, issued by any entity, foreign or domestic, private or governmental): monthly statements, transaction records, computer printouts and computer disks reflecting the status of and activity in such accounts since September 1, 2001.

5. All Russian international and national passports and any other passports of defendant's in force at any time since 1996.

6. Originals or copies of any complaints respondent filed with the New York City Police Department since January 1, 2002.

7. Originals or copies of any criminal proceedings brought against respondent's mother, Inessa Shipilina, by prosecutors in Krasnodar, Russia.

8. All model photo cards used by respondent since July 1, 2000.

9. Originals or copies of all respondent's work schedules for Flash Dancers Topless Club located at 1674 Broadway in Manhattan.

10. Originals or copies of telephone billing records for the numbers 718 274 4902 and 917 374 4713 for October 2001, February 2002, and March 2002.

11. With respect to all credit cards in respondent's name or maintained for her benefit since September 1, 2001: the monthly bills, statements, and vouchers.

12. Electronic address book and any other list of defendant's customers or clients for whom she engaged or engages in prostitution as defined by New York State Penal Law Section 230, and for whom she engaged or engages in erotic performances including lap dancing and stripping in return for economic gain.

Dated: New York, New York
May 17, 2002

Roy Den Hollander
Petitioner
545 East 14th Street, Apt. 10D
New York, NY 10009
212 995 5201

To: Nicholas J. Mundy
Attorney for Respondent
Kuba, Mundy & Associates
321 Broadway
New York, NY 10007
212 732 5050

---

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,                      Petitioner,                      Docket No. O-03570/02

-against-

INTERROGATORIES

ALINA SHIPILINA,                      Respondent,                      SECOND SET

JUDGE: JODY ADAMS

-----X

To: Nicholas J. Mundy

The petitioner, Roy Den Hollander, requests that the respondent, Alina Shipilina, answer under oath, in accordance with Article 31 of the CPLR, the following interrogatories:

1. State the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, business addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in October 2001 and left a voicemail at Petitioner's mobile telephone number stating the following:

"Roy Den Hollander, how are you? This is John Madison calling on behalf of Angelina. Your ex or soon to be ex wife (inaudible). Now that she is getting new counsel, and mainly we're going to challenge every answer to your filings, every aspect of this marriage, being that it originated in Russia. And basically try to understand that because of the fact that things didn't work out, your malicious actions are basically going to be very carefully reviewed, not only by the proper authorities, but also under every ledger of the lawyer. We will challenge every single aspect of your filings and of this case. And I assure you one thing; we're not going to basically keep our eyes closed to this issue. We are going to basically be looking at this very carefully, and we will challenge you on every aspect. I assure you of one thing on this arbitration hearing, I will be attending.

And as far as everything else goes, I can tell you first hand with all due respect that I'm disgusted by the way you handled it. And quite frankly, I question every single bit of your motions and your filings. And, I assure you one thing, that this issue is definitely going to be an issue that you're going to have to face up to reality on my friend. So as far as it goes, I will leave you with that. And I will try to reach you at home to see if you are there.

But in the meantime, bear in mind that this case is not going to go basically with her lying down and being abused over this whole issue. And you trying to take advantage of the situation and try to claim all these (laughter) basic unfounded claims against her. Which basically have no foundation whatsoever. On the other hand, it really reflects on you on how you've handled this, and that a lot of your issues are very questionable. So, never the less, I will be trying to get in touch with you and have yourself a nice day."

2. State the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, business addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in February 2002 and left a voicemail at Petitioner's mobile telephone number stating the following:

"Mr. Hollander, this is John Pierre, and I left you a message earlier on. And I did speak with you but apparently for whatever reason, you obviously weren't available to talk. I'm giving you a courtesy phone call.

I'm going to tell you to cease and desist with your actions against Angelina. I will tell you right now that what you're doing, I know everything about you. I know exactly what you have been doing and your past history and your record. I know everything about you sir.

I liked to explain to you what's going to happen. If you continue harassing and making this girl's life miserable, I will promise you that everything under the law and under my ability to do so under the law, I will pursue you in every way shape and form imaginable under the law, and make sure that justice is done because right now you disgust me. As a human being, I am just so disgusted with everything about you and what you've done to this girl. More than some pathetic form of display of inhuman treatment—you've gone beyond that sir. I'm very much available! And let me tell you something that I am extremely well known in this city, and I know everything about you. You better get your act together, and I am telling you this under fairness and courtesy—cease and desist with what you are doing to this girl and her family and the way you try to (affect) her in her country. Because you, my friend, are right now going to be under investigation if I hear one more word that this is happening. And it's not going to be by me, but the federal government. And you at this point in time have crossed several boundaries that cause for a lot of red flags to (wave) in the air my friend.

So, quite frankly, right now I would be basically on my good behavior. All I'm telling you do the right thing Mr. Hollander, it obviously is the best thing to do. Be human and be courteous and understanding of other people's feelings and their lives. I think you guys are over and done with. That's it—leave her alone! Have a nice day."

3. State the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, business addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in March 2002 and stated the following:

Mr. Hollander, this is John Pierre calling on behalf of Angelina. I told you before to cease and desist with your legal actions. I'm warning you do not testify before the INS or we will meet. (In the background, I heard Alina say 'About my mother and the prosecutor.') And do not try to get the case in Russia reopened. We're watching you, have a nice day.

4. State the nature of the relationship between the Respondent and the men whose names were answered in Interrogatories 1, 2 and 3 above.

5. State when, where, how and under what circumstances Respondent met the men whose names were answered in Interrogatories 1,2 and 3 above.

6. State the full name, address and telephone numbers of anyone and everyone Respondent talked with regarding any of the telephone calls cited in Interrogatories 1,2 and 3 above.

7. State all names Respondent has used since 1996, where used and the purpose for using such names.

8. State whether Respondent has ever associated with any criminals in Russia, Cyprus, Italy, Mexico or America and when, where and with whom associated.

9. State reason or reasons Respondent went to the 114th Police Precinct in March 2002 as concerns Petitioner.

10. State with whom Respondent talked at the 114th Police Precinct in March 2002 and the content of those discussions concerning Petitioner.

11. State what notice Respondent has of any United States Immigration and Naturalization investigations or proceedings concerning Respondent, the nature of the investigations or proceedings and when notified about them.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that a copy of such answers must be served upon the undersigned within twenty (20) days after the service of these interrogatories.

Dated: May 23, 2002

New York, New York

Roy Den Hollander

545 East 14th Street, Apt. 10D

New York, NY 10009

(212) 995 5201

---

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

-----X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,                      Petitioner,                      Docket No. O-03570/02

-against-

INTERROGATORIES

ALINA SHIPILINA,                      Respondent,                      JUDGE: JODY ADAMS

-----X

To: Nicholas J. Mundy

The petitioner, Roy Den Hollander, requests that the respondent, Alina Shipilina, answer under oath, in accordance with Article 31 of the CPLR, the following interrogatories:

1. State your full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, business addresses and business telephone numbers for the past four (4) years.

2. State the names, telephone numbers and addresses of all employers, agents, clients, customers or any other person or entity that provided you with money and the amount or other economic benefit and the monetary value of such, including but not limited to material goods and travel, in return for your providing services that included but were not limited to prostitution, lap dancing, stripping or any other form of sexual activity as defined by New York State Penal Law Section 130 or sexual conduct as defined by New York State Penal Law Section 230 and displaying any portion or all of your body for video, digital or still pictures or a live audience from July 11, 2000, until the present. Give the date, place, payment, expenses and nature of services provided for each provision of services and reason for termination.

3. As to your present places of work, state:

a. Name and address of owner and manager;

b. Type of work performed, position held and nature of work or business in which you are engaged;

c. Amount of time you have been working at present jobs;

d. Hours of work at each;

e. Rate of pay or earnings, setting forth specifically your gross and net average weekly income, salary, wages, commissions, overtime pay, bonuses and gratuities and itemized expenses;

Attach copies of all evidence of above payments and expenses, including pay stubs, W2 forms, etc. for the past year.

4. State and itemize all deductions from your gross weekly earnings or other emoluments, including but not limited to taxes, insurance, savings, loans, pensions, profit sharing, dues and stock options.

5. State whether you have filed federal, state, local or other income tax returns during the last four (4) years with the appropriate tax authorities for any of the countries in which you earned income, including but not limited to the United States, Russia, Cyprus, Mexico and Italy. If so, indicate the years during which the same was filed and whether federal, state, local or other. If you have not filed a return or returns, state the reason or reasons why.

Attach copies of all such returns filed during the past four (4) years.

6. Itemize all bank, stock or brokerage accounts, certificates of deposit, treasury bills, stock certificates, notes or mortgages in your name or in which you have an interest presently or have had an interest during the past four (4) years, stating for each:

(a) The name and address of each bank, stock brokerage or other depository;

(b) The balance in those accounts as of the date of the service of the summons in this action;

(c) The present balance;

(d) The source of funds for all deposits and purchases made in said accounts;

(e) The name and address in which each account is registered, the account numbers and whether any individual, whether or not listed on said account, has an interest therein.

(f) If you hold any stock certificates, notes, mortgages or commercial paper not included above, itemize them and state the number of shares, their value, the location of the certificate, note, mortgage or other commercial paper and the source of the funds used to acquire them.

Attach copies of the monthly statements of such accounts for the past four (4) years and copies of savings account books or savings books and check registers.

5. State whether you have a safe deposit box or boxes either in your name individually, or in the name of a partnership, or corporation and to which you have access, stating the following:

(a) The location of each box and box number;

(b) The name in which it is registered and who, in addition to yourself, has access to each box;

(c) List the contents of each box since the boxes were rented by you. If the contents have changed over the time of your access to the boxes, then for each box state the approximate date and nature of what was put in and taken from each box.

7. If you have any cash in your possession or under your control in excess of $500.00, specify;

(a) The amount of cash;

(b) Where it is located;

(c) The source of said cash.

8. State whether you have made any gift of any money and/or personal property to friends, relatives or anyone else during the past four (4) years of a value in excess of $500.00. If so, state:

(a) The names and address of said person and the relationship of that person to you;

(b) The nature and value of the gift or the amount of money given;

(c) The date each gift was given;

(d) The reason for such gift;

(e) The source of the funds used to purchase such item.

9. What is respondent's current immigration status in the United States?

10. State the names of the employees of Flash Dancers Topless Club with whom respondent associates and any of their telephone numbers if known.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that a copy of such answers must be served upon the undersigned within twenty (20) days after the service of these interrogatories.

Dated:

New York, New York

Roy Den Hollander

545 East 14th Street, Apt. 10D

New York, NY 10009

(212) 995 5201

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

=====X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Docket No. O-03570/02

Petitioner,

AFFIRMATION IN SUPPORT

-against-

ALINA SHIPILINA,

Respondent.

Assigned to Judge Jody Adams

=====X

NICHOLAS J. MUNDY, ESQ., an attorney duly admitted to practice before the Courts of the State of New York, affirms the truth of the following matters:

1. I am associated with the law firm of KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES, attorneys for the Respondent, and as such am fully familiar with the facts and circumstances herein.

2. I make this affirmation in support of the Respondent's motion for a protective order, pursuant to CPLR § 3103.

3. Pursuant to Uniform Rule § 202.17, I have attempted in good faith to resolve the issues raised in this motion without judicial intervention. However, at this time it has become clear that judicial intervention is required.

4. The Petitioner ROY DEN HOLLANDER commenced this action against the Respondent to obtain a permanent order of protection. Petitioner alleges Respondent engaged in conduct that was intended to threaten and harass the Petitioner, and that he received a harassing telephone call from a male caller in which he heard the Respondent's voice in the background. A copy of the Petition is annexed as Exhibit A.

5. The Respondent vehemently deny the Petitioner's allegations.

6. The Petitioner has served demands for discovery and inspection, together with a first and second set of interrogatories. He has also served Subpoenas upon the Verizon and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Copies of Petitioners various discovery demands and subpoenas are annexed hereto as Exhibit B.

7. From the outset, it has appeared to your affiant's firm that the Petitioner's demands were outrageous in the context of this litigation, and were objectionable in many ways.

8. Nonetheless, the Respondent, uninterested in protracted litigation and continuing legal fees, advised the undersigned that she preferred to resolve the instant proceeding forthwith by consenting to a one year order of protection by stipulation. Thus, Petitioner's outrageous discovery demands became mute.

9. However, on July 2, 2002, before the Honorable Jody Adams, the Petitioner refused to accept a Stipulation granting him the very one year order of protection which he seeks, and demanded a full merits hearing. Thus, the instant motion for a protective order became necessary.

10. It is apparent that this Court should issue an order, pursuant to CPLR § 3103, protecting the Respondents from Petitioner's improper demands.

11. The protective order is the Court's perpetual guard against discovery abuses." D. Siegel, New York Practice § 353 (2nd Ed., 1991).

12. On its own or on motion of any party or witness, the Court may, at any time, make a protective order denying, limiting, conditioning, or regulating the use of any disclosure device. The order shall be designed to prevent unreasonable annoyance, expense, embarrassment, disadvantage, or other prejudice to any person or the courts. CPLR § 3103(a).

13. The broad terms of CPLR § 3103(a) indicate that the Court has discretion to make whatever protective order is appropriate under the particular circumstances.

14. No time limit is provided for in CPLR § 3103 for making a motion to obtain a protective order. CPLR § 3103 states that the motion may be made "at any time". The exception is that as to certain items demanded (i.e., notices for discovery and inspection and physical exams, etc.) to which the motion should be made within ten days. CPLR § 3122.

15. Nevertheless, the Courts have allowed the motion to be made at any time where the discovery demanded is palpably improper. See: e.g., Wood v. Sardi's Restaurant, 47 AD2d 870, 366 NYS2d 150 (1975).

16. On July 2, 2002, Respondent had every reason to believe that the instant proceeding was to be settled in it's entirety. The Petitioner's unreasonable refusal to stipulate to settlement wherein Respondent has agreed to a one year order of protection is additional evidence of the fact that Petitioner seeks only to harass and annoy the Respondent with continued litigation, and is the sole reason that this instant motion became necessary.

17. In light of the foregoing, the motion should be entertained as to all discovery demanded by Petitioner. Furthermore, the mere making of the motion herein by Respondent has served to suspend disclosure of the matters in dispute. CPLR § 3103.

18. The Respondent's position is that ALL of the Petitioner's demands are objectionable. While this may appear at first glance to be an unreasonable position, even a cursory review of the Petitioner's demands make it clear that this is indeed, a fact. His discovery demands are not only unduly burdensome and objectionable, they are offensive to the Respondent, and should be offensive to the Court. There can hardly be a greater example of discovery abuse before this Court.

19. As an example of the blatant impropriety of the Petitioner's discovery demands and interrogatories the court should note that Petitioner has demanded, inter alia:

- State what notice Respondent has of any United States Immigration and Naturalization investigations or proceedings concerning the Respondent, the nature of the investigations or proceedings and when notified about them.

- State whether Respondent has ever associated with any criminals in Russia, Cyprus, Italy, Mexico or America and when, where and with whom associated.

20. Clearly, these demands are irrelevant, overbroad and unduly burdensome, and as previously stated herein, offensive. It would be waste of time to reproduce the objectionable demands made by the Petitioner in this motion, because as previously stated,

EVERY REQUEST MADE BY THE PETITIONER IS OUTRAGEOUS AND OBJECTIONABLE.

21. The information demanded and the tactics employed by the Petitioner amount to nothing more than harassment, and are thus improper. Indeed, they appear calculated to do nothing more than embarrass, annoy and harass the Respondent. Petitioner's demand for personal information that is irrelevant to these proceedings is actually shocking.

22. The Petitioner has demanded, inter alia: copies of passports, police complaint reports filed by the Respondent, "model photo cards", work schedules, credit card statements, "list of customers or clients for whom she engaged or engages in prostitution" .

23. Obviously, the Court can read through the demands, interrogatories and the notices and can see that they are palpably improper. They utilize the use of the words "any and all" and call for extraneous and unnecessary personal information. They are filled with innuendo and insult intended to embarrass and offend the Respondent in a public forum, such as naming her a prostitute.

24. Much of the information demanded is so outrageous and palpably irrelevant as to constitute grounds for sanctions. Nevertheless, Respondents are not requesting sanctions, but rather are seeking to stop the harassment at this time.

25. It is well established that proper procedure requires that a party first ascertain whether the requested materials exist and if so, whether they are arguably pertinent. Thereafter, the party serve a notice for discovery and inspection calling for the production of specifically identified documents. Only at such time can the right to discover and inspect such documents be intelligently adjudicated. [See: Ribs v. Donovan, 21 AD2d 409, 413-414, 250 NYS2d 818, 822-823, (1st Dept., 1984); Wood v. Sardi's Restaurant, 47 AD2d 870, 366 NYS2d 150 (1975); Agricultural v. Chemical, 462 NYS2d 667, 94 AD2d 671;

26. This Court is vested with the authority to "regulate" the use of disclosure devices pursuant to the explicit wording of CPLR § 3103. See also, Barouh v. IBM, 76 AD2d 873, 429 NYS2d 33 (2nd Dept., 1980). The court should do so, particularly where as here, substantial abuse would otherwise take place, and parties will be unduly burdened (in all likelihood for no reason).

27. Simply put, the Petitioner's demands are without sufficient basis and are overbroad and unduly burdensome. They are offensive, and in many instances, shockingly outrageous and abusive.

28. The Court can plainly see how onerous the demands are. They ask for information of such a personal nature, that there can be no doubt that they were simply drafted as a harassment tactic by the Petitioner.

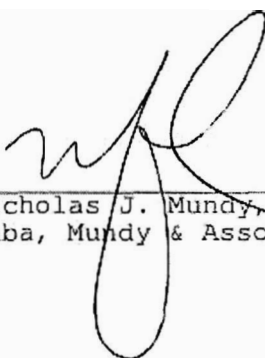

29. Burdensome, oppressive, and in many parts inappropriate interrogatories and requests for documents warrant a vacation of the interrogatories and requests, rather than pruning them. Aeron v. Chemco Intern., 498 NYS2d 49, 117 AD2d 573 (AD, 2nd Dept., 1986); Spancrete Northeast v. Elite Associates, 539 NYS2d 441, 148 AD2d 694 (AD, 2nd Dept., 1989); .

30. No previous request for the relief prayed for herein has been made.

31. Wherefore, for all the foregoing reasons, the Respondent's motion should be granted in its entirety. The Petitioner's discovery demands should be stricken in their entirety as per the CPLR, and the completion of discovery should take place in accordance with the Court's direction in its order.

Dated: July 11, 2002
New York, New York

Nicholas J. Mundy, Esq.
Kuba, Mundy & Associates

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

----- -X

ROY DEN HOLLANDER,	Petitioner,	Docket No. O-03570/02
		AFFIRMATION IN
-against-		OPPOSITION
		TO RESPONDENT'S MOTION FOR DISCOVERY
		PROTECTIVE ORDER
ALINA SHIPILINA,	Respondent,	AND VACATING DISCOVERY
		REQUESTS
		JUDGE: HELEN C. STRUM

----- -X

STATE OF NEW YORK     )
  ) ss.:
COUNTY OF NEW YORK    )

ROY DEN HOLLANDER, ESQ., an attorney duly admitted to practice law before the courts of the state of New York affirms the following to be true:

1. That I am an attorney representing myself, Petitioner, in the above captioned matter and am fully familiar with all the facts and circumstances to which this affirmation pertains.
2. I submit this affirmation in opposition to Respondent's motion for a protective order regarding discovery requests and vacating of discovery requests.

Argument

3. Discovery proceedings of the CPLR are applicable to Family Court proceedings.
Russo v. Hardy, 1972, 68 Misc.2d 1057, 328 N.Y.S.2d 425.
4. "CPLR 3101(a) broadly mandates full pre-trial disclosure by the parties of all matter or data that is material and necessary in the action...." New York Civil Practice, Weinstein Korn and Miller, Section 3101:03, page 31-14.

5. “The broad circumference of pretrial disclosure is enunciated in CPLR 3101 which in essence reflects legislative policy favoring the forthright exchange of information by parties in advance of trial in civil actions. That policy is implemented by the procedures set forth in CPLR 3102 pertaining to the disclosure menu and methodology embodied in CPLR 3102.” Id. at Section 3102.01, page 31-255.
6. “CPLR 3102 does not specifically limit a party seeking disclosure to a choice of any one or more of the methods on its menu. There is no express limit on the number of times a device may be used.” Id., page 256.
7. “The responding party no longer bears the burden of moving to strike interrogatories or demands for documents and things to which that party has an objection. Instead, under [CPLR 3103(a), 3122 and 3133], the responding party must within twenty days of service of the demand for production ‘serve a response which shall state with reasonable particularity the reasons for each objection,’ and within twenty days of the service of interrogatories, must serve ‘a copy of the answer to each interrogatory except one to which the party objects, in which event the reasons for the objection shall be stated with reasonable particularity.’” Id. Section 3103.07, pages 31-309, 310 (emphasis added).
8. The first set of discovery papers were served by mail on Respondent’s attorney, Nicholas J. Mundy, on May 17, 2002. See attached Exhibit 1, Affidavit of Service. This beginning “flood” of papers, as characterized by Mr. Mundy, weighing significantly less than a pound, consisted of interrogatories, a request for inspection and copying of documents and notice for admissions. Under the CPLR, Mr. Mundy had until June 17, 2002, to provide answers to the interrogatories or merely note his objections—overly broad, burdensome, intrusive, etc.—next the questions he believed inappropriate under Section 165 of the Family Court Act or CPLR 3101 et seq. As to the request for inspection, Mr. Mundy had until June 21, 2002, to produce the documents or, as with the interrogatories, merely note his objections. With the request for admissions, all Mr. Mundy needed to do was note “not admitted.” Mr. Mundy, however, chose to do nothing—not a telephone call, not a letter—nothing. He chose to ignore the rules of civil procedure and not even make an attempt to resolve the discovery issues without involving the Court.

9. The second, even lighter, set of discovery papers was served by mail on May 24 and due June 24, 2002. See attached Exhibit 2, Affidavit of Service. These papers consisted of eleven interrogatories on six sheets of paper. Once again Mr. Mundy did nothing and made no attempt to resolve the issues without motion practice.
10. Petitioner filed three motions to compel Mr. Mundy to play by the rules of discovery. Two other motions to compel discovery from non-parties were directed at the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Verizon in an effort to discover the identity of the man making the threatening telephone calls to Petitioner at the instigation of Respondent.
11. Had Petitioner not filed the motions to compel discovery from Respondent, Mr. Mundy would have most assuredly argued to the court that Petitioner’s silence constituted relinquishment of his right to discovery. As witnessed at the July 2, 2002, proceeding, Mr. Mundy’s arguments appear to carry great weight with the Court when before even providing the Petitioner a meaningful hearing on his motions to compel discovery, the Court decided Petitioner’s discovery requests intrusive and instructed Mr. Mundy to file a motion for a protective order—no doubt the motion will be granted. As such, the filing of the motion papers for a protective order appears more a matter of form than substance, since the Court in its own words has already made its decision.

12. The court's articulation of its discovery decision came at the beginning of the hearing when the court first addressed Mr. Mundy even though the issue involved the Petitioner's motions to compel discovery, which normally infers the court would have initiated the proceeding by questioning Petitioner. But of course, the court has wide discretion. Still the tenor, flow and length of the court's discussion with Mr. Mundy appeared to Petitioner as a continuation of previous ex parte talks. Before the hearing began, Mr. Mundy had been situated in the courtroom while Petitioner was instructed to wait in the hallway outside. The same situation occurred at the May 6, 2002, preliminary conference where Mr. Mundy also had free ingress and egress to the courtroom while the pro se Petitioner did not.
13. In any event, when a court considers a motion for a protective order, it will normally assume that the allegations of the pleadings are true. Green v. Sleznick, 220 A.D. 12, 221 N.Y.S. 63 (4th Dept. 1927); Balducci v. Zenner, 203 Misc. 40, 113 N.Y.S.2d 178 (Sup. Ct. Onondaga Co. 1951).
14. Mr. Mundy makes in his Notice of Motion and Affirmation a number of misrepresentations, dissemblances, half-truths and prevarications in a sophistic effort to obfuscate Petitioner's allegations and the facts in order to mislead the Court.
15. In the third paragraph of Respondent's Notice of Motion, Mr. Mundy says, "A good faith attempt has been made to resolve these issues without motion practices..." and in paragraph 3 of Respondent's Affirmation, Mr. Mundy says, "I have attempted in good faith to resolve the issues in this motion without judicial intervention.” Mr.

Mundy’s “good faith attempt” consisted of doing nothing in violation of the CPLR 3103(a), 3122 and 3133.

16. Paragraph 4 of Mr. Mundy’s Affirmation dissembles by implying Petitioner received only one threatening and harassing telephone call when the Petition cited by Mr. Mundy clearly states “several”.

17. In paragraph 8 of Mr. Mundy’s Affirmation, he falsely implies that Petitioner made his discovery requests while a settlement offer was pending. Nothing could be further from the truth. On May 6, 2002, the Court made an offer to Mr. Mundy in open court for his client to agree to a one-year protection order against Respondent—Mr. Mundy refused. Petitioner served his discovery requests on May 17 and 24, 2002. It wasn’t until fifteen minutes before the July 2, 2002, hearing that Petitioner learned of the settlement offer when Judge Sturm’s law clerk told Petitioner that Mr. Mundy was offering a one-year order of protection with no admissions by Respondent. Petitioner exercised his constitutional right and did not accept the belated offer.

18. Paragraph 9 of Mr. Mundy’s Affirmation misrepresents and misleads when it states “Petitioner refused to accept a Stipulation granting him the very one year order of protection he seeks....” Here Mr. Mundy failed to state the full details of the settlement offer that included Respondent not admitting to any wrong doing, which would make the order in this situation a meaningless deterrent, since it concerns a respondent steeped in the culture of Chechnya where she grew up and one who will most likely use her many homeland connections to carry out the threats communicated to Petitioner.

19. A one-year order of protection with out admission of wrong doing fails to provide sufficient protection for Petitioner, since it also does not disclose the identity of the man making the telephone calls. The man, as FBI agent Vadim Thomas opined, is probably an organized crime member that works at “Flash Dancer Topless Club”, which is the very same club where Respondent has worked as a stripper for the past two years.
20. Mr. Mundy also failed to note in his deceptive efforts to discredit Petitioner’s refusal of a settlement offer that the Family Court has the power to grant a three-year order of protection when there is exposure of Petitioner to physical injury.
21. If Mr. Mundy would listen to the two audiotapes in his possession of two of the threatening telephone calls made to Petitioner, even he would conclude that they carry the threat of physical injury. Add in the common knowledge among international law enforcement officials and private security and intelligence firms that deal with Chechnya and Russia (Petitioner served as Acting Country Manager of Russia for Kroll Associates) and any reasonable person would conclude that threats originating from a Russian with money, Respondent earns tax free an estimated $12,000 or more a month, require an effective deterrence.
22. It is difficult to convey to the Court the matter-of-fact brutality and utter disregard for court decisions that constitute business as usual in Russia and Chechnya. Disputes are more likely to be resolved with money and guns than by the courts in these two intertwined cultures. Unfortunately, many immigrants bring with them to America their traditional ways for handling disputes. Respondent has both the means in terms of money and the connections with Russian and Chechen organized crime to employ traditional Russian and Chechen methods to achieve her ends.

23. A settlement that provides for a two or three year protective order where it is on the record that Respondent admits to her intent, reasons and actions taken in arranging for some man to make the threatening telephone calls will provide sufficient deterrence to protect Petitioner from Respondent hiring some Russian or Chechen hoodlum who charges the going rate of $5,000, plus airfare and hotel expenses, for disposing of a foreigner because the FBI will have a record sufficient for them to act upon. Such a settlement would also avoid protracted litigation and continuing legal fees.
24. Mr. Mundy's Affirmation arrogantly argues that Petitioner had no right to refuse Mr. Mundy's settlement. Since it is Petitioner and not Mr. Mundy who has been threatened with the clear message of grave bodily harm, Petitioner, and not Mr. Mundy, has at least some right to decide whether a settlement offer is more likely to effectively deter Respondent in the future so that Petitioner may be restored to the peace of mind and freedom from fear he possessed before these threats began in October 2001.
25. Mr. Mundy's Affirmation regularly omits pertinent facts such as in paragraph 16 where it states, "On July 2, 2002, Respondent had every reason to believe that the instant proceeding was to be settled in its entirety." Mr. Mundy, apparently prone to hyperbole, failed to state any of the "every reason" that led Respondent to expect a settlement.
26. Also in paragraph 16, Mr. Mundy refers to "additional evidence" that Petitioner is trying to harass Respondent, but Mr. Mundy fails to provide any. Mr. Mundy has apparently forgotten the issue in this case is threatening and harassing telephone calls made to Petitioner. Petitioner's exercise of his constitutional right to petition an American court for protection from an alien resident and her associates is not harassment.

27. Mr. Mundy verbalizes his mask of righteous indignation at Petitioner's discovery requests by calling them "outrageous" in paragraph 7 of his affirmation. If they were so outrageous, why didn't he respond as provided for under CPLR 3103 (a), 3122 and 3133 rather than doing nothing that necessitated Petitioner to file motions to compel?
28. Mr. Mundy didn't respond because he wanted to avoid any discovery whatsoever, as he admits in paragraph 18 of his Affirmation—a not very subtle way of violating Petitioner's rights under the CPLR and thwarting legislative policy. Mr. Mundy goes so far in his twisted logic for preventing all discovery that the standard he advocates for the Court to use in determining the appropriateness of a discovery request is to make a "cursory review" of the demands and then throw them all out.
29. Furthermore, Mr. Mundy cites old law in paragraph 25 of his affirmation relying on Rios v. Donovan, 21 AD2d 409, 250 N.Y.S.2d 818 (1st Dept 1964) for the rule that a notice for discovery and inspection must call "for the production of specifically identified documents." (Emphasis by Mr. Mundy) According to New York Civil Practice, Weinstein, Korn and Miller, Section 3120.17, page 31-494, in 1993, CPLR 3120 (a)(1) was amended to eliminate the requirement that the notice to produce documents specifically identify the documents being requested. (Emphasis by Petitioner)

30. Mr. Mundy's objections are clearly overbroad in that he objects to every demand without any specificity and provides only conclusory statements that merely regurgitate a litany of adjectives without providing any argument as to why the adjectives apply.
31. Mr. Mundy only provides a small number of examples of what he considers are improper discovery requests by Petitioner.
32. In paragraph 19 of Mr. Mundy's Affirmation he objects to Petitioner's interrogatory concerning Respondent's notice of United States Immigration and Naturalization Proceedings (INS) concerning her. Petitioner alleges that part of the purpose for at least two of the three threatening telephone calls was to prevent him from providing information to the INS. If Respondent is the subject of an INS investigation or proceeding than that provides one bit of evidence towards showing that Respondent had a motive for instigating the threatening telephone calls.
33. Also in paragraph 19 is Mr. Mundy's objection to whether Respondent associated with any criminals in Russia (which technically includes Chechnya), Cyprus, Italy, Mexico or America. Respondent worked as a prostitute in all of the first four countries and apparently in America. (The truth, sadly, is what it is, and Petitioner is willing to provided proof.) The netherworld of the sex industry commonly includes organized criminals who make threats and break bones as part of their trade. If Respondent regularly associates with such persons, then that provides a piece of evidence towards showing means in that Respondent had access to the type of people who make a living, in part, from threatening others.

34. In paragraphs 21-23 & 28, Mr. Mundy once again throws about conclusory statements in an effort to pander to false gender stereotypes in order to rally the Court with knee jerk emotionalism against Petitioner's requests for information that Mr. Mundy characterizes as "personal" along with other descriptions for which he provides no support.
35. Mr. Mundy only revealed a handful of specific objections concerning requests for what he calls "personal" information, the parameters of which he didn't define, but apparently believes include any information concerning Respondent's means, motives and activities in conspiring to threaten Petitioner with grave bodily harm. Mr. Mundy seeks to set a new standard for discovery whereby the mere invocation of the word "personal" bans all discovery of relevant evidence.
36. Mr. Mundy specifically objects to the following requests as improper because they concern "personal" information:
- a. Copies of passports and model photo cards. In the threatening telephone calls, the man making the threats always starts by saying he is "calling on behalf of Angelina." Respondent's full legal name is Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina, but when she began working as a prostitute and lap dancer she adopted the stage name "Angelina". Logically, Petitioner needs to provide evidence that Respondent uses the name Angelina. Since Respondent has two Russian passports, one for traveling to the United States and another for other travels, this second passport may show her name as "Angelina". In addition, Respondent had model photo cards shot using the name "Angelina".

- b. Work schedules and list of customers. Respondent works five nights a week as a lap dancer at Flash Dancers Topless Club. The club issues a work schedule to each stripper on a weekly basis. The average lap dancer nets $500 a night at Flash Dancers for $10,500 a month, Exhibit 3, Club Reviews by Dancers, which infers Respondent has the cash to hire a hoodlum to make and carry out threats. The income from Respondent's prostitution clients also infers means.
- c. List of customers. Logically, there exists a significant likelihood that the man making the threatening telephones is one of Respondents customers.
- d. Credit card statements. May show a series of payments to a "doing business as" that is the man making the threatening telephone calls.

37. Petitioner did not think about requesting sanctions until Mr. Mundy raised the issue in paragraph 24 of his Affirmation. Mr. Mundy's palpably outrageous and improper conduct in stonewalling the discovery process by intentionally doing nothing after he received Petitioner's discovery requests violated CPLR 3103(a), 3122 and 3133 which constitutes grounds for sanctions. Nevertheless, Petitioner is not requesting sanctions, but rather discovery of all data material and necessary for Petitioner to obtain a meaningful order of protection that will dispel the ever-present fear and danger of physical harm from some shadowy figure that telephones "on behalf of Angelina".

38. Wherefore, for all the foregoing reasons, the Court should not deny Petitioner the right to conduct discovery by vacating all of Petitioner's discovery demands.

Dated: July 17, 2002
New York, New York

Roy Den Hollander
545 East 14th Street, Apt. 10D
New York, NY 10009
212 995 5201

At a Term of the Family Court of the State of New York, held in and for the County of New York, 60 Lafayette Street, New York, New York, on July 29, 2002

P R E S E N T:

HON. HELEN C. STURM
Judge of the Family Court

---

ORDER DIRECTING DISCOVERY

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

Petitioner,

Against-

Docket No.: O-03570/02

ALINA SHIPILINA

Respondent.

---

STURM, J:

Based upon the submissions of the parties and the applicable law, it is hereby ORDERED that Petitioner's Motion to Compel Discovery is granted with respect to:

Document Requests

- 1) Document request number six seeking complaints Respondent filed with the New York City Police Department since January 1, 2002.
- 2) Document request number 10 seeking originals or copies of telephone billing records for the numbers 718-274-4902 and 917-374-4713 for October 2001, February 2002, and March 2002 if Respondent in fact has these documents.

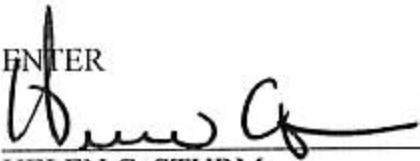

Interrogatories

- 1) Interrogatory item one of Interrogatory Set Two seeking the name and other identifying information about the man who allegedly left Petitioner a message in October 2001.
- 2) Interrogatory item two of Interrogatory Set Two seeking the name and other identifying information about the man who allegedly left Petitioner a message in February 2002.

- 3) Interrogatory item three of Interrogatory Set Two seeking the name and other identifying information about the man who allegedly left Petitioner a message in March 2002.
- 4) Interrogatory item four of Interrogatory Set Two inquiring as to the nature of Respondent's relationship with these individuals.
- 5) Interrogatory item five of Interrogatory Set Two inquiring as to conversations Respondent has had regarding the alleged telephone calls prior to the date of Petitioner's request for an Order of Protection.

Petitioner's Motion to Compel Discovery is denied with respect to all other items not specified above.

ORDERED that Respondent provide Petitioner with the requested information by August 2, 2002.

ENTER

HELEN C. STURM
Judge of the Family Court

Dated: New York, N.Y.
July , 2002

FAMILY COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

=====X
ROY DEN HOLLANDER,

Petitioner,

-against-

ALINA SHIPILINA,

Respondent.

=====X

Docket No.: 0-03570/02

Respondent's Response to Petitioner's Notice for Discovery & Inspection and Interrogatories

Pursuant to Article 31 of the CPLR and the Order Directing Discovery by the Honorable Helen C. Sturm, dated July 29, 2002, the Respondent, ALINA SHIPILINA, responds to the Petitioner's Notice for Discovery and Inspection, and Interrogatories, as set forth herein (for purposes of this response the answers contained herein shall correspond to the numbered questions as set forth in the Order dated July 29, 2002):

Document Requests

1. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, Respondent states that she is not aware of any complaints Respondent filed with the New York City Police Department since January 1, 2002.

2. At this time, Respondent is not in possession of any originals or copies of telephone billing records for the numbers 718-274-4902 and 917-374-4713 for October 2001, February 2002, and March 2002. However, the Respondent reserves her right to supplement such response up to and at the time of trial.

Interrogatories

1. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, the Respondent denies information and/or knowledge with respect to the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, businesses addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who allegedly telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in October 2001 and left a voicemail at Petitioner's mobile telephone number.

2. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, the Respondent denies information and/or knowledge with respect to the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, businesses addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who allegedly telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in February 2002 and left a voicemail at Petitioner's mobile telephone number.

3. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, the Respondent denies information and/or knowledge with respect to the full name, age, residence and post office addresses, home telephone numbers, businesses addresses and business telephone numbers and occupation for the man who allegedly telephoned Petitioner on behalf of Respondent in March 2002.

4. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, the Respondent denies information and/or knowledge with respect to the relationship between the Respondent and the men who allegedly telephoned the Petitioner as alleged in Interrogatory item one, two and three of Interrogatory Set Two.

5. Without waiver of any rights to supplement this response up to and at the time of trial, the Respondent denies that she has had any conversations regarding the alleged telephone calls prior to the date of Petitioner's request for an Order of Protection.

Dated: July 31, 2002
New York, New York

KUBA, MUNDY & ASSOCIATES
By: Paulette DeTiberis, Esq.

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF CHALLENGE TO THE VOTER REGISTRATION OF
THE RUSSIAN ALIEN: ALINA SHIPILINA

[illegible]

I, Roy Den Hollander, residing at 545 East 14th Street, New York, N.Y., a self employed consultant, being duly sworn, deposes and says that based upon personal knowledge:

1. Alina Shipilina, residing at 28-15 34th Street, Apartment 4H, Astoria, N.Y., 11103, Board of Elections registration serial number 305023386 is not a United States citizen. See attached Exhibit 1, copy of Ms. Shipilina's alien registration card.
2. Alina Shipilina violated New York State Election Law 5-102(1) and 5-210(6) by falsely swearing or affirming that she was a citizen of the United States when she registered to vote on February 22, 2001. See attached Exhibit 2, certified copy of Ms. Shipilina's New York Voter Registration.
3. Affiant married Ms. Shipilina in Krasnodar, Russia, in March 2000, see attached Exhibit 3, Marriage Certificate and translation, and brought her to America on July 10, 2000, when upon entry Ms. Shipilina obtained conditional permanent residency status from the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service. Conditional permanent residency status normally lasts for two years, see attached Exhibit 1 expiration date of July 10, 2002.
4. When Ms. Shipilina registered to vote in February 2001, she was still a conditional permanent resident and not a United States citizen.
5. In fact, Ms. Shipilina is still not a United States citizen. Affiant and Ms. Shipilina divorced in December 2001, see attached Exhibit 4, Divorce Judgment, which caused her conditional permanent residency status to terminate under the Aliens and Nationality law

8 U.S.C. 1186a(b)(1)(A)(ii).

/S/

---

Roy Den Hollander

I do solemnly swear or affirm that the foregoing statement made by me on August 7, 2002, is a truthful disclosure of the reasons for my belief that the registered voter therein named is not qualified to continue to be registered in the election district in which she is now registered.”

/S/

---

Roy Den Hollander

---

Witness

111

SHIPILINA, ALINA

11/10/75F

28-15 34TH ST 4H
ASTORIA . NY 11103

***QUEE***

MV-44 (8/00)

NEW YORK STATE VOTER REGISTRATION

(Complete only if you want to register to vote or change your address with the Board of Elections.)

If you register to vote, your completed voter registration application will be sent directly to the Board of Elections. If you decline to register, remain confidential. You will be notified by your County Board of Elections when your voter registration application has been processed.

Are you a U.S. citizen? <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No If you answered NO, do not complete this form.	Check box(es) that apply: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> new registration and enrollment <input type="checkbox"/> address change <input type="checkbox"/> party enrollment change <input type="checkbox"/> name change	Home Telephone Number (418) 27
Last year voted	Your address was (give house number, street, and city) 28-15 34TH ST	Under the name (if different from your name now) Queen

Choose a Party - Check one box only

- ☒ REPUBLICAN PARTY ☐ DEMOCRATIC PARTY
☐ INDEPENDENCE PARTY
☐ CONSERVATIVE PARTY ☐ LIBERAL PARTY
☐ RIGHT TO LIFE PARTY
☐ GREEN PARTY
☐ WORKING FAMILIES PARTY
☐ I DO NOT WISH TO ENROLL IN A PARTY

Please note:
In order to vote
in a primary election, you must be enrolled in a party.

AFFIDAVIT: I swear or affirm that

- I am a citizen of the United States.
- I will have lived in the county or in the city of New York for at least 30 days before the election.
- This is my signature or mark on the line below.
- The above information is true. I understand that if it is not true I can be convicted and fined up to $5,000 and/or jailed for up to four years.

Signature or mark

X

Date

02/22/

MAR-2 PM 1:19

THIS IS A CERTIFIED COMPUTER
PRINTOUT OF VOTERS RECORD

BOARD OF ELECTIONS
42-16 WEST STREET
LONG ISLAND CITY, N.Y. 11101

NO VOTING HISTORY RECORDS FOUND FOR VOTER: 305023386

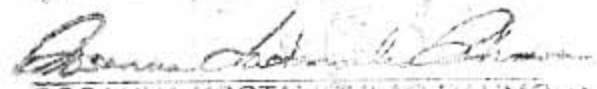

08/02/02 11:15 ELECTION ADMINISTRATION SYSTEM QUEENS EAXPV010
VOTER REGISTRATION INQUIRY

SERIAL NO: 305023386 STATUS: A AS OF 03/02/2001
FULL NAME: SHIPILINA, ALINA ED/AD: 039/36 NH:
STREET: 28-15 34 STREET 4H ENROLLMENT: R REPUBLICAN
CITY/ZIP: L.I. CITY 11103 REGISTRATION DATE: 03/02/2001
DOB: 11/10/1975 FUTURE ENROLLMENT:
SEX: F EYE COLOR: ENROLLMENT ACT DATE: 00/00/0000 US CITIZEN: Y HEIGHT: . VOTER TYPE: R REGULAR C/O NAME: DATE LAST VOTED: 00/00/0000
VTR POLL SITE: Q0139 EXPECT SIG: N
MAILING ADDRESS POLL SITE INFORMATION

LINE 1: SITE NUM/NAME: Q0139 PS 17
LINE 2: NUM/STREET: 28-37 29 STREET 30 AVE ENT
LINE 3: CITY/ZIP: L.I. CITY 11102
LINE 4: HANDICAPPED: A STATUS: A ACTIVE SITE
DISTRICT INFORMATION ABSENTEE INFORMATION: _ (Y/N) OLD EDAD
CD: 14 SD: 12 CO: 22 CC: 01 LD: SCH DIST: 30 036/36

PF1 = MENU PF2 = DUP-ID PF3 = PROMPT PF4 = PREV
PF5 = RESTORE PF9 = HISTORY PF10 = ACTIVITY PF12 = SHOW-SIG

THIS IS A CERTIFIED COMPUTER PRINTOUT OF THE VOTERS RECORD

ROSANNA KOSTAMOULLAS
CHIEF CLERK
MANHATTAN BOROUGH OFFICE

BOARD OF ELECTIONS

840

MINUTES OF THE MEETING OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF ELECTIONS
HELD ON TUESDAY, MARCH 25, 2003
AT 1:30 P.M.

42 BROADWAY, 6TH FLOOR EVS CONFERENCE ROOM
NEW YORK, NY 10004

P R E S E N T:            Nancy Mottola-Schacher, President
                              Mark B. Herman, Secretary

Commissioners    Cilmi, Graham, Kellner, O'Connor, Weiner

John Ravitz, Executive Director
George Gonzalez, Deputy Executive Director
Pamela Perkins, Administrative Manager
Naomi Bernstein, Director of Communications
John O'Grady, Chief Voting Machine Technician
Beth Fossella, Coordinator, Voter Registration
Virginia Busti, Coordinator of Election Day Operations
Joseph LaRocca, Coordinator, Candidate Records Unit
Pablo Martinez, Computer Programmer
Elliott Borack, ACCO
Steven B. Denkerberg, Counsel to Commissioners
Charles Webb, III, Counsel to the Commissioners

Guests

Dave Palmer, NYPIRG
Marjorie Shea
Alan Flacks
Joan McDougal, Women's City Club
Roy Den Hollander, Esq.

---

President Mottola-Schacher called the meeting to order at 1:35 P.M.

BOARD OF ELECTIONS

employees and draft appropriate revisions to the Board's policies and procedures manual. President Mottola-Schacher seconded the motion, which was adopted by a vote of 6 in favor and 1 abstention-Commissioner Herman.

The Step III, Grievance for Equal Pay, item was tabled until April 8th 2003.

Mr. Richman requested that the Commissioners make a determination regarding Alina Shipilina, who filed a registration form with the Board, and falsely claimed to be a United States citizen. Mr. Hollander stated that Ms. Shipilina a Russian immigrant, filed the false registration in violation of the New York State Election Law and Federal Law, with the intent to obtain a non-driver ID to acquire identification to obtain a United States passport, to prevent INS from deporting her. Mr. Hollander requested that the Commissioners refer Ms. Shipilina to the District Attorney for prosecution. Commissioner Weiner moved to refer the case to the United States District in the Eastern District of New York, and to the Queens County District Attorney for prosecution. Commissioner Graham seconded the motion, which was adopted unanimously.

Regarding the status of the 2003 Community School Board Elections, Mr. Richman reported that as of March 24th 2003, the city has not received a

Speed to B&B Meet 3/25 1:30 pm

Would like to add to the IIR in front of you although <sup>PT</sup> alien who grew up in Chechnya

(1) Shylna speaks, writes & reads Eng sufficiently & understood the voter reg doct she is claiming US citizenship

(2) I believe she went to motor vehicle to obtain a) MV identity card non driver & b) voter registration that she could use as additional doct to show she is a US <sup>citizen</sup> in order to obtain additional US id I as a passport

(3) ~~When she arrived here her only id was PT passport & Alien registration card~~

(4) I believe she is taking this route of ~~claiming US citizenship~~ <sup>for possibility of</sup> ~~as a contingency~~ <sup>immigration</sup> ~~deciding to~~ <sup>deport her for material misrepresentation her immigrant visa application</sup>

(5) ~~It will be easier to move about & get out of the US w/ fraudulently obtained US identification papers~~

(6) ~~As a further indicator of her claiming US citizen as not an innocent mistake, in her hometown Khachodas she is known to associate w/ PT & Chechen organized crime figures~~

With US identification doct it will be easier for her to continue to live and work in America

NANCY MOTTOLA-
SCHACHER
PRESIDENT

MARK B. HERMAN
SECRETARY

WEYMAN A. CAREY
MICHAEL J. CILMI
NERO GRAHAM, JR.
DOUGLAS A. KELLNER
TERRENCE C. O'CONNOR
FREDERIC M. UMANE
VINCENT J. VELELLA
STEPHEN H. WEINER
COMMISSIONERS

BOARD OF ELECTIONS

IN
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
EXECUTIVE OFFICE, 32 BROADWAY
NEW YORK, NY 10004-1609
(212) 487-5300
FAX (212) 487-5349
www.vote.nyc.ny.us

JOHN RAVITZ
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

GEORGE GONZALEZ
DEPUTY EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

PAMELA GREEN PERKINS
ADMINISTRATIVE MANAGER

STEVEN H. RICHMAN
GENERAL COUNSEL
TEL. (212) 487-5338
FAX: (212) 487-5342
E-MAIL:
srichman@boe.nyc.ny.us

VIA EXPRESS MAIL

March 27, 2003

Honorable Richard A. Brown
District Attorney
County of Queens
125-01 Queens Blvd.
Kew Gardens, NY 11415

Dear District Attorney Brown:

I am writing to you pursuant to a resolution duly adopted by the Commissioners of the Board of Elections in the City of New York at their public meeting held on Tuesday, March 25, 2003.

By letter dated March 13, 2003, Roy Den Hollander, an attorney admitted to the practice of law in the State of New York requested that the Commissioners of Elections refer the matter of Alina Shipilina's illegal registration as a voter, since she was not a United States Citizen. Mr. Hollander also appeared at the Commissioners' March 25th meeting and requested the Commissioners refer this matter to the appropriate prosecutors.

By way of background, Mr. Hollander, who claims to have been married to Ms. Shipilina and subsequently divorced. Mr. Hollander filed an affidavit with the Board in August of last year, pursuant to the provisions of the New York State Election Law, challenging the voter registration of Ms. Shipilina. Under the Election Law, the Board's Queens office conducted a review of this matter and in December 2002, cancelled Ms. Shipilina's voter registration, listing as the reason, she is not a United States Citizen.

I am enclosing herewith all the materials submitted by Mr. Hollander that was presented to the Commissioners at the March 25, 2003 meeting.

Following said presentations, the Commissioners directed that this matter be referred to both the District Attorney of Queens County and the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York for their appropriate investigation, review and action. That resolution results in this formal letter of referral.

As always, the Board of Elections in the City of New York stands ready to cooperate and assist your office as you conduct your investigation and review. If you have any questions or require any information, please contact me at my office (address and telephone number printed above).

On behalf of the Commissioners of Elections in the City of New York, I want to thank you in advance for your cooperation and assistance in this matter.

Very truly yours,

THE BOARD OF ELECTIONS
IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK

By:

Steven H. Richman
General Counsel

Enclosures

Copies (without enclosures):

The Commissioners of Elections in the City of New York
John Ravitz, Executive Director
George Gonzalez, Deputy Executive Director
Pamela Perkins, Administrative Manager
Naomi Bernstein, Director of Communications
Steven Denkberg, Counsel to the Commissioners
Charles Webb, Counsel to the Commissioners
Barbara Conacchio, Chief Clerk, Queens Office
Katherine A. James, Deputy Chief Clerk, Queens Office

NANCY MOTTOLA-
SCHACHER
PRESIDENT

MARK B. HERMAN
SECRETARY

WEYMAN A. CAREY
MICHAEL J. CILMI
NERO GRAHAM, JR.
DOUGLAS A. KELLNER
TERRENCE C. O'CONNOR
FREDERIC M. UMANE
VINCENT J. VELELLA
STEPHEN H. WEINER
COMMISSIONERS

BOARD OF ELECTIONS

IN
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
EXECUTIVE OFFICE, 32 BROADWAY
NEW YORK, NY 10004-1609
(212) 487-5300
FAX (212) 487-5349
www.vote.nyc.ny.us

JOHN RAVITZ
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

GEORGE GONZALEZ
DEPUTY EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

PAMELA GREEN PERKINS
ADMINISTRATIVE MANAGER

STEVEN H. RICHMAN
GENERAL COUNSEL
TEL. (212) 487-5338
FAX: (212) 487-5342
E-MAIL:
srichman@boe.nyc.ny.us

VIA EXPRESS MAIL

March 27, 2003

Honorable Roslynn R. Mauskopf
United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York
One Pierrepont Plaza
147 Pierrepont Street
Brooklyn, NY 11201

Dear United States Attorney Mauskopf:

I am writing to you pursuant to a resolution duly adopted by the Commissioners of the Board of Elections in the City of New York at their public meeting held on Tuesday, March 25, 2003.

By letter dated March 13, 2003, Roy Den Hollander, an attorney admitted to the practice of law in the State of New York requested that the Commissioners of Elections refer the matter of Alina Shipilina's illegal registration as a voter, since she was not a United States Citizen. Mr. Hollander also appeared at the Commissioners' March 25th meeting and requested the Commissioners refer this matter to the appropriate prosecutors.

By way of background, Mr. Hollander, who claims to have been married to Ms. Shipilina and subsequently divorced. Mr. Hollander filed an affidavit with the Board in August of last year, pursuant to the provisions of the New York State Election Law, challenging the voter registration of Ms. Shipilina. Under the Election Law, the Board's Queens office conducted a review of this matter and in December 2002, cancelled Ms. Shipilina's voter registration, listing as the reason, she is not a United States Citizen.

I am enclosing herewith all the materials submitted by Mr. Hollander that was presented to the Commissioners at the March 25, 2003 meeting.

Following said presentations, the Commissioners directed that this matter be referred to both the District Attorney of Queens County and the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York for their appropriate investigation, review and action. That resolution results in this formal letter of referral.

As always, the Board of Elections in the City of New York stands ready to cooperate and assist your office as you conduct your investigation and review. If you have any questions or require any information, please contact me at my office (address and telephone number printed above).

On behalf of the Commissioners of Elections in the City of New York, I want to thank you in advance for your cooperation and assistance in this matter.

Very truly yours,

THE BOARD OF ELECTIONS
IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK

By:

Steven H. Richman
General Counsel

Enclosures

Copies (without enclosures):

The Commissioners of Elections in the City of New York
John Ravitz, Executive Director
George Gonzalez, Deputy Executive Director
Pamela Perkins, Administrative Manager
Naomi Bernstein, Director of Communications
Steven Denkberg, Counsel to the Commissioners
Charles Webb, Counsel to the Commissioners
Barbara Conacchio, Chief Clerk, Queens Office
Katherine A. James, Deputy Chief Clerk, Queens Office

RICO Case in the U.S. Southern District Court of New York

Complaint

Motion for Default

Defendants' Motions to Dismiss

Joint Motion

Flash Dancers Motion

Detective Henning's Motion

Paulsen's Plead for Mercy

Vasilyevas' Letter to the Court

Cybertech's Motion

Bank of Cyprus' Motion

Opposition to Dismissal Motions

Roy's Opposition to Defendants Joint Motion

Attorney Mundy's Advertisement on Russian Ho Site

Evidence of Petrovich Working for Mundy

Roy's Opposition to Cybertech's Motion

Roy's Opposition to Bank of Cyprus Motion

FBI Report on the Russian Mafia

CIA and FBI Directors on the Russian Mafia

Defendants' Replies

Joint

Flash Dancers

Paulsen

Bank of Cyprus

The oral argument that never occurred.

Motion to Strike Irrelevant and Prejudicial Matter in the Defendants' Papers

Roy's Motion to Strike

Defendants' Joint Opposition

Roy's Reply

Status Conference before the new Judge: P. Kevin Castel

Letter to Judge Castel from Angelina's Lawyer

Roy's Reply to the Letter

Defendants Proposed Status Report

Roy's Proposed Status Report

Angelina's Perjury

Wisconsin Investigation

Roy's Letter to FBI Special Agent Babler 8.20.03

Roy's Interview of Zahnow 8.22.03

Roy's Interview of FBI Special Agent Babler 8.22.03

Brookfield Police Threaten to Arrest Roy 8.25.03

Roy Complains to FBI Director Mueller 8.28.03

FBI General Counsel's Response 1.5.04

Roy's Letter to FBI General Counsel 1.5.04

FBI General Counsel's Final Response 1.29.04

Supplemental Complaint Fight

Roy's Letter Requesting a Pre-Motion Conference

Supplemental Complaint

Mundy's Opposition to Conference and Supplemental Complaint

Roy's Reply to Mundy's Opposition

Angelina's Opposition to Conference and Supplemental Complaint

Roy's Reply to Angelina's Opposition

Judge Castel's Decision

Post Decision Motions

Roy's Response to Judge Castel's Decision and Request for a Pre-Motion Conference to file Recusal and

Reconsideration Motions

Defendants' Opposition to Pre-Motion Conference

Roy's Motion for Recusal of Judge Castel

Roy's Motion for Reconsideration of Judge Castel's Decision

Defendants' Joint Opposition to Recusal and Reconsideration

Flash Dancers' Opposition to Recusal and Reconsideration

Judge Castel's Denials of Motions for Recusal and Reconsideration

Roy's motion to recover service of process costs.

Roy's letter to Judge Castel requesting reimbursement costs.

Flash Dancers Opposition

Mundy's Opposition

Roy's Replies

Judge Castel's Order

Appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit

Appeal Briefs

Roy's Appeal

Mundy's Opposition

Flash Dancers Opposition

Angelina's Opposition

Detective Henning's Opposition

Roy's Reply

Roy's Motion to Strike Sections of Defendants' Briefs for Violating the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure

Roy's Letter Notifying the Second Circuit of the Motion to Strike

Roy's Motion to Strike

Mundy's Opposition

Flash Dancers Opposition

Detective Henning's Opposition

Roy's Reply to Flash Dancers and Detective Henning

Roy's Reply to Mundy

Roy's Letter Objecting to the Second Circuit's Failure to Decide the Motion to Strike

Second Circuit's Decision

Flash Dancers Motion for Costs

Roy's Motion for Sanctions Against Flash Dancers and Opposition to Costs

Flash Dancers Opposition to Sanctions and Reply for Costs

Roy's Reply to Flash Dancers Opposition to Sanctions

Second Circuit Grants Flash Dancers Motion for Costs and Denies Sanctions

Roy's Petition for En Banc Hearing on the Grant of Costs to Flash Dancers

Roy's Motion to the Second Circuit to Make Case Manager Gibbs Docket the En Banc Petition

Second Circuit's Decision Directing Gibbs to Docket Roy's En Banc Petition, which she refused.

Roy's letter to the Chief Judge of the Second Circuit requesting the En Banc Petition be docketed.

Second Circuit finally forces Case Manager Gibbs to docket the En Banc Petition.

Second Circuit denies hearing on the En Banc Petition.

United States Supreme Court

Roy's Petition for a Writ of Certiorari

Flash Dancers Opposition

Roy's Reply

U.S. Supreme Court Denial of Certiorari

Been-Scammed Web Site Content

Screen 1:

Scammed by a Russian woman?

Lost money?

Want Justice?

Join the beginning of a class action lawsuit against those involved in tricking American men into costly and harmful relationships with Russian women who are no more than liars, cheats and prostitutes.

Screen 2:

Have you been a victim of a fraudulent Russian dating, introduction or marriage service whether through a web site, magazine, newspaper or Russian model agency?

Have you suffered financial loss, emotional distress or other harm as a result of using one of these services?

Have you been taken advantage of by a Russian female?

If you have, then find out whether you qualify to join a class action lawsuit to recover your losses and any damages caused you. Any recovery might be tripled depending on the legal nature of the claim. Millions of dollars could be at stake.

The law firm of Roy Den Hollander is looking for victims of these Russian organizations, and their American accomplices, that promise honest relationships with beautiful, wholesome Russian women but end up with the American man defrauded of his money and time.

Perhaps one of the following has happened to you:

- Met a Russian girl on the Internet. After weeks of great emails, she said she was poor and asked to borrow money for food using my master card number. At first it was $50 and $100 dollars, but as I cared more and more for her, she started taking up to $1000. I told her I couldn't afford that, but she said "too bad," then "goodbye."

- Shelled out over $20,000 for what I thought would be a loving Russian wife. Traveled to meet her in Russia, had a great time, everyone was so nice to me, and I fell in love. Brought her back to the US for a visit, and all she wanted to do was lay around watching soap operas, spend my money on jewelry and run up my phone bill talking in Russian to a guy named Vladimir whom she said was just a "good friend." I was crushed. My buddies convinced me to put her on a plane back to Russia, but before I could, she disappeared. Now the US Immigration service is giving me a hard time.
- Traveled to a social gathering in Russia that was advertised in a magazine with pictures of beautiful Russian ladies at a classy hotel nightclub. When I got there, the hotel was a rat hole and the girls hags. I demanded my money back, $5,000, and these big Russian goons pushed me into a corner for a talk. I was happy to get back to the USA in one piece.
- Found it difficult to meet new people after losing my wife, so I answered a magazine ad to correspond with Russian girls. For $1000, I got ten letters with pictures of very pretty women, but when I tried to call them, they didn't exist.
- Spent thousands of dollars traveling to Russia to meet a decent girl through an introduction service, but they all turned out to be high-priced hookers.
- Married a Russian girl who turned out to be a prostitute, member of the Russian mafia, a drug addict, adulteress and thief.

- Married a Russian lady whom as soon as she received her green card, divorced me by lying that I beat her up. The American female judge believed the phony tears and gave my Russian wife $70,000 of the money that I worked hard for.

If you have had a similar experience, then you probably qualify as a member of the proposed class action lawsuit. Your next step is to fill out our short survey. All communications are protected and cannot be disclosed unless you okay it.

You will then be informed as to whether you qualify for the proposed class action lawsuit. If you qualify, your next step will be to decide to join us or not.

Joining will cost you nothing, no matter what the legal outcome. If successful, all attorney fees and costs will come out of any recovery.

Don't be a victim. Join us in our legal action.

Sponsored by: Truth, Justice and the American Ideal

Designated lead counsel: Roy Den Hollander, Esq.

Screen 3: Survey

Please complete this confidential survey and email to _____ by clicking “submit” at the bottom.

1. For now, just your first name
2. Email address
3. How did you first meet the Russian woman or women? (Click on those that apply to you.)
  - a. Internet

- b. Magazine
- c. Advertisement
- d. In person
  - i. Russia
  - ii. America
  - iii. Elsewhere
- e. Other

4. What happened after you first met her? (Click on those that apply to you.)

- a. Traveled to Russia
- b. Brought her to America
- c. Dated
- d. Married
- e. Separated
- f. Divorce or annulled marriage
- g. Invested money
- h. Other

5. Approximately how much money total did you spend on her? (Click on only one.)

- a. 0 to $1000
- b. $1001 to 5000
- c. $5001 to 10,000
- d. $10,001 to 20,000
- e. $20,001 to 40,000

- f. $40,001 to 60,000
- g. $60,001 to 100,000
- h. More than $100,000

6. Besides the money spent on her, what other damages did she cause you? (Click on those that apply.)

- a. Business losses
- b. Business interruption
- c. Loss of business opportunities
- d. Damage to property
- e. Loss of wages
- f. Loss of employment
- g. Harm to reputation
- h. Investigation costs
- i. Legal fees and costs
- j. Travel expenses
- k. Physical
- l. Health
- m. Mental/Emotional
- n. Other

7. If there is any other information you would like to provide, please use this box.

Please remember that all the information you provide is confidential and cannot be released without your permission.

Thank you for your time.

Some Communications with American Agencies

U.S. Customs

Drug Enforcement Agency

Federal Bureau of Investigation

Immigration and Naturalization Service

Internal Revenue Service

New York State Taxation

Queens New York District Attorney Freedom of Information Law Results

Semenov A. I.,
Chief of Police Department of Krasnodar
Krasnodar

Dear Chief Semenov:

I would like to inform you that I am currently prosecuting a civil lawsuit № CV-03-2417 (MBM) in the United States Federal Southern District Court against an international crime group with defendants in the U.S., Russia, Cyprus and Mexico. Among the defendants that reside in Krasnodar are various Russian criminals.

The events of this case began when I was working in Russia for the American company Kroll Associates during 1999 and 2000. Alina Shipilina, whom I first met at a party in my apartment building in Moscow, duped me into marrying her with the assistance of narcotics secretly put into my meals. Shortly after my bringing her to the United States, she revealed herself to be a drug runner, money launderer, tax evader, prostitute and procurer for an international crime group that includes Russian and Chechen organized crime figures. Part of this gang's activities are to make American men unwittingly marry its members so that the women can obtain legal U.S. residency and/or citizenship to carry out gang activities in the U.S. This is what happened to me. Alina Shipilina and her mother Inessa Shipilina both of whom previously lived in Gorzny, Chechnya and have affiliations with Viktor Vladimirovich Kononenko, Magomet Ali Kurban and the Arbi Baraev clan. In addition, my ex-wife was a mistress to Ruslan Labazanov.

Once I became aware of whom my wife really was, I instituted divorce proceedings in New York in February 2001. I pressed the divorce case by traveling to Krasnodar to obtain information and evidence. Alina Shipilina, her U.S. attorneys and Inessa began a campaign of intimidation that included Russian and Chechen bandits threatening my potential witnesses into silence. My Krasnodar lawyer, Svetlana Povaliy, notified the local prosecutor who eventually brought a criminal defamation case against Inessa Shipilina.

In October 2001, I began receiving threats over the telephone from a thuggish sounding American man. Two of the calls I was able to record. Because of the first threat, I accepted the proposed divorce settlement from Alina's attorney. But the threats continued into 2002, and I reported them to the FBI and to the New York City police—they did nothing. During this period, I also co-operated with investigations by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Drug Enforcement Administration and the New York City Board of Elections into my ex-wife's conduct. Also in 2002, the criminal defamation case against Inessa Shipilina was closed after Alina, her U.S. attorneys and Inessa bribed some officials in the Krasnodar department of the Ministry of Interior. I then started a civil defamation case, which is ongoing.

My ex-wife and her gang urgently want her to keep her legal USA status, particularly because she travels frequently to various countries, often Russia for obtaining illegal drugs in Krasnodar, and Cyprus for laundering currency while plying her trade in both countries. My co-operation with law enforcement agencies undoubtedly caused the gang to fear that my ex-wife, an increasingly valuable member of the gang, might lose her status in the USA.

The threats against me have now escalated as a result of my starting the RICO action on April 18, 2003. Very recently, on June 4, 2003, I received a telephone threat from a thuggish-sounding Russian man. This is a dramatic increase in the level of the threat. The implication is that physical assault could come very soon. I was able to record this call, a tape of which is enclosed. When I received its English translation on June 16th, the threat became clear: If I returned to Krasnodar to continue gathering evidence against the gang to which the defendants belong and to testify in the civil defamation case against Inessa Shipilina, then, in the words of the anonymous caller, "It's going to be bad for me."

Alina and Inessa Shipilina own a luxurious apartment at 138 Rashpilevskaya Street, apartment 8. As for the other Krasnodar defendants, I will be sending you a Russian translation of the U.S. court papers that lists their known addresses that can be used against them. These defendants will eventually be served with the U.S. court papers under a treaty between our two countries

Each telephone threat used my ex-wife's name to make clear it was being made on her behalf. Using the information mentioned above, I am asking you to take legal actions under the legislature of the Russian Federation against my ex-wife Alina Alexandrovna Shipilina, her mother Inessa Alexandrovna Shipilina, and the members of the crime group in Krasnodar.

Very truly yours,

Roy Den Hollander

June 2, 2003

Attorney

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009
Phone/Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile: (917) 687-0652
e-mail: rdhh@erols.com

Date: Thu, 19 Jun 2003 07:27:06 -0700 (PDT)

From: "roy den" <rdhhh@yahoo.com>  Add to Address Book

Subject: Russian and Chechen RICO

To: "Andrew Heyward" <ajh@cbsnews.com>

Andrew,

The suggestion for a story (Russian prostitution) that I sent you two years ago has unfolded into a RICO lawsuit against various Russian, Chechen and American organized crime figures. The story grew out of my unfortunate marriage to a Russian prostitute when I was managing Kroll Associates' office in Moscow.

The RICO defendants engage in white slavery and pornography and the crimes that keep it profitable, such as immigration fraud, bribery, drugs, money laundering, tax evasion, coercion, intimidation and perjury.

I ran into this den of pimps, prostitutes, pornographers and pushers after further investigation revealed that my ex-wife was associated with a gang that duped American men into marrying its members so that the women could obtain legal US residency and citizenship to carry out lucrative gang activities in the US. The duping of me included secretly putting drugs in my meals.

I then filed the RICO suit, Roy Den Hollander v. Flash Dancers, et al., 03 CV 2717 in the Southern District Federal Court.

I've been threatened four times so far by these clowns, and I'm taking it seriously given there is a connection to the Arbi and Movsar Baraev clan in Chechnya. The threats are one reason I'm trying to interest the media, since any story will provide more protection than a federal injunction, which I have requested from the judge.

If you have some interest, I can send along the Federal complaint and, of course, talk to anybody, anytime and tell all that I know so far--it's still unfolding. If you're not interested, maybe you could refer me to someone who might be.

Thanks for your time again. Hope all is well with you.

Roy Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

July 10, 2003

Andrew Heyward
President CBS News
524 West 57 St.
New York, NY 10019

Roy Den Hollander v. Flash Dancers Topless Club, et al.
Southern District Court of New York, CV-03-2717 (MBM)

Dear Andrew,

This is a follow up to an email I sent you a few weeks ago concerning a RICO lawsuit I've filed against various Russian, Chechen and American organized crime figures.

Among the defendants are those that my investigators tell me were connected with Arbi and Movsar Baraev.

Arbi, now deceased, was the General of the Chechen Special Islamic Regiment and is believed to have beheaded in 1998 four western telecommunication workers in return for $20 million from Osama Bin Laden.

Movsar, Arbi's nephew and now also deceased, led the taking of hostages at the Moscow theater complex last year.

I've enclosed a copy of the complaint.

Thank you again for your time.

Best regards,

Roy Hollander

ROY HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

April 18, 2004

Joe Conason
National Correspondent
New York Observer
54 East 64 Street
New York, NY 10021

Joe,

I thought you might have some interest in a story concerning the Russian mob. It's more colorful than the Lambert story. I attached a synopsis.

Civil RICO lawsuit against Cypriot, Russian and Chechen International Crime Organizations

- Pimps, prostitutes, pushers, pornographers and assorted criminals from Cyprus and the former Soviet Union have joined with underworld characters in Western markets over the past decade to create a global web of smuggling, protection, extortion, counterfeiting, tampering with witnesses, revenge, evasion of taxes and other illegal activities.
- Russian organized crime groups, working in cooperation with Cypriot and other foreign gangsters, infiltrate lucrative, hard currency markets, such as Cyprus and the U.S., by taking advantage of ineffective and un-enforced immigration laws as well as bribable officials to illegally gain entry for the organization's managers and human assets.
- A former member of the New York City media, Roy Den Hollander, now a lawyer and business consultant, has filed a civil action Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization lawsuit in the U.S. Federal Court for the Southern District of N.Y., Index No. 03 CV 2717.
- This case grew out of discoveries by Mr. Den Hollander (who worked in Russia as a consultant for Kroll Associates) that his Russian wife had previously worked in Cypriot brothels, was a money launderer, tax evader, and procurer for a gang of Russian, Cypriot and Chechen organized crime figures. That she had secretly slipped narcotics into Mr. Den Hollander's meals and pretended to be something she wasn't in order to marry him so that she could enter the US in order to expand the gang's criminal activities.
- This gang works, in part, to make American and European men unwittingly marry its prostitutes, so that the women can obtain legal residency and/or citizenship to carry out gang activities in the U.S and Europe.
- The RICO suit focuses on one of the core businesses of the alliances among American, Russian, Cypriot and Chechen criminals—white slavery and pornography and the crimes that keep it profitable, such as immigration fraud, bribery, drugs, money laundering, tax evasion, coercion, intimidation, perjury, official misconduct and more.
- Russians and Cypriots run prostitutes, pornography and in some cases drugs out of Russia to Cyprus and than the U.S., or by way of Mexico and than the U.S.
- The prostitutes and pornography are sold through an international affiliation of brothels and lap-dancing clubs controlled by organized crime and marketed over the Internet.
- The drugs are secretly administered to customers as a way of assuring return business.
- Russian, Cypriot, American and Chechen gangsters, including those connected with Arbi Baraev (who beheaded four British telecommunication workers in 1998 in return for $20 million from Usama Bin Laden) and Movsar Baraev (who led the taking of 700 hostages at a Moscow theater in 2002) protect the organization's operations from exposure and legal proceedings through threats, intimidation and coercion. Mr. Den Hollander has received four threats so far.

- The suit is for damages caused to Mr. Den Hollander's business and property in the amount of approximately $1,000,000 and for a court order to prevent the defendants from causing him harm (whatever good that will do).

If you have any questions, please contact the plaintiff, Roy Den Hollander, Esq., (212) 995 5201, rdhhh@yahoo.com.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

March 10, 2004

Tatianna Leonova
Chief Editor
Cyprus Advertiser
8, Evagora Pallikarides St
Limassol, Cyprus 3732

Dear M. Leonova:

The story we discussed a few years ago has evolved with new information into one that you may find more interesting. It is now in the United States Federal Court for the Southern District of New York.

I've enclosed a copy of the complaint in Russian and a press release as well. If you prefer Greek or English versions, I can send them along.

Thank you for your time although I don't expect a Russian newspaper to dare to do anything with this story. Consider it a courtesy.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

April 9, 2004

Lou Dobbs
Moneyline
1 CNN Center
Atlanta, GA 30303

Dear Mr. Dobbs:

I thought you might be interested in the unfolding immigration story that is summarized on the attached sheet.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

January 28 2004

Stephen Handelman
Associate Fellow
Harriman Institute
420 West 118 St., 12th Floor
Columbia University
New York, NY 10027

Dear Mr. Handelman:

I'm a graduate of Columbia's Business School who also spent a semester at SIPA before going for my MBA at the advanced age of 40 something.

My MBA landed me in Russia for a short consulting stint with Kroll Associates in 1999. Before starting with Kroll, I read your Comrade Criminal but still managed to stumble into a den of hoods, Chechens, pimps, prostitutes, pushers and pornographers that stretches from Southern Russia to NYC.

I thought, as a columnist and commentator, you might be interested in this story, which is now the subject of a civil RICO suit in the US Southern District Court in New York (03 Civ 2717). It's not "politically correct" but definitely evolutionarily correct. I've attached a two-page summary.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

March 23, 2004

Mike Myers
Creators Syndicate
5777 W. Century Blvd., Suite 700
Los Angeles, CA 90045

Dear Mr. Myers:

After reading your firm's client Michelle Malkin's Invasion, I thought she might be interested in the unfolding story that is summarized on the attached sheet.

Would you please forward the attachment to her.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

8/02

Followed up w/ tel
call

-no response

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

Dear John:

Are you interested in a story that reveals some of the inner workings of the Russian international sex industry and a few of its players?

The inside view comes from the on going activities of a Russian girl who grows up in Grozny, Chechnya, moves to Krasnodar, Russia, near the Black Sea, associates with Chechen hoods, and works as a prostitute, procurer and model in the city's top modeling agency. The agency provides willing girls for sexual entertainment to a club of "gangsters and bandits" who run Krasnodar. (One of the owners of the modeling agency recently immigrated to Wisconsin along with its business manager in charge of prostitution.)

While living in Krasnodar, the girl from Grozny, who also dabbles in Black Magic, commutes periodically to Moscow for prostitution and modeling with an agency there, which is protected by Moscow wise guys and currently under investigation by the Russian Central Department for the Struggle Against Organized Criminals. The Moscow agency includes American businessmen among its customers. One American doctor produces porno videos. The Chechen girl makes a masturbation video for the doctor of which I have the promo clips.

She then travels to Cyprus where she sells sex in a brothel/strip club called "Zygos" owned by Russian mobsters from Krasnodar, but managed by two Cypriot brothers who recruit girls in Russia and the Philippines. Customers come from the Middle East, Europe and Asia.

After Cyprus, she uses her Moscow agency to send her to Mexico City to the "Men's Club", another brothel/strip club apparently owned by hoods—I'm not absolutely sure about the ownership, but I can find out. Customers from America, Canada, Europe and South America.

Mexican Immigration arrests and deports her back to Russia where she dates a middle age American lawyer she met earlier. The lawyer manages the Kroll Associates Moscow Office and marries her after she secretly plies him with narcotics.

Husband takes her to NYC where she starts working at Flash Dancers on Broadway making around $14,000 a month in cash, tax-free. She still strips there. (The combined income for all the girls at Flash Dancers on the night shift—some of whom are illegals—equals around $7.8 million a year—tax-free.) Husband, suspicious, gets her diary translated, conducts an investigation and asks for a divorce. She finds a law firm that runs a mill for obtaining green cards for Russians. Her lawyer commits "attempted coercion" in trying to get the husband to settle the divorce proceedings without a revealing trial. It doesn't work, so she arranges for some unknown man to threaten the husband—that works. She gets her way.

At the same time, the husband notifies INS—they start proceedings, he notifies IRS about her tax evasion—they do nothing, he notifies US Customs about her periodic smuggling of dollars out of the US—they do nothing, he brings a criminal defamation suit against her mother in Krasnodar—the city prosecutor indicts her mother.

Same man as before threatens the now ex-husband not to testify before the INS and stop the criminal proceedings in Krasnodar. Ex-husband goes to local police—they do nothing, he goes to FBI—they find out who the man is, apparently a wise guy at Flash Dancers, but decide not to talk to him because they fear it will anger the man into violence.

She arranges for her Russian mobster associates in Krasnodar to intimidate witnesses into changing their testimony in the criminal defamation proceedings and bribes, estimated $10,000, the Department of Internal Affairs into dropping the case. Witnesses change their testimonies and the case is dropped.

That's the story so far, all true and naturally I'm the ex-husband. Interested?

Roy

Date: Wed, 7 Aug 2002 10:04:29 -0700 (PDT)

From: "roy den" <rdhhh@yahoo.com>  Add to Address Book

Subject: Aliens Voting

To: oreilly@foxnews.com

Dear Mr. O'Reilly,

I don't believe the media or politicians have picked up on the story that many illegal and legal aliens register to vote and vote in elections across the America. The law requires a person to be a US citizen, and if they aren't but still register or vote, then in New York they've committed a class E felony (max 4 years or $5,000, NY Election Law 5-210(6)).

I became aware of this problem while checking the NYC voter registration records in order to confirm petition signatures for a local candidate. On a hunch, I punched in my ex-wife's name--she's an immigrant from Chechnya--and up popped her registration form on which all voters must swear that they are US citizens, which she is not.

I inferred that millions of aliens through out the country are probably voting illegally in our elections. Since most states like NY have their voter registration records computerized, a computer comparison with INS records could easily show which aliens were voting. Naturally the ACLU would object because most aliens vote for political correctionalist candidates.

On a different note, I was surprised last night (Aug 6th) when you referred to something as not "politically correct". How can any political philosophy be "correct"? That's like saying a particular religion is the only "correct" religion.

Thank you for your time.

Roy Den Hollander
NYC

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Yahoo! Health - Feel better, live better

<http://health.yahoo.com>

Civil RICO lawsuit against the Russian Mafia and Chechen Islamic Fundamentalists

- Pimps, prostitutes, pushers, pornographers and assorted criminals from the former Soviet Union have joined with underworld characters in Western markets over the past decade to create a global web of smuggling, protection, extortion, counterfeiting, tampering with witnesses, revenge, evasion of taxes and other illegal activities.
- Russian organized crime groups and Chechen Islamic mafiosi, working in cooperation with each other and foreign gangsters, infiltrate lucrative, hard currency markets, such as the U.S., by taking advantage of ineffective and un-enforced immigration laws as well as bribable officials to illegally gain entry for the organization's managers and human assets.
- A former writer and political producer for Channel 5 and Channel 7 TV News in New York City, Roy Den Hollander, a lawyer and business consultant, has filed a civil Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization lawsuit in the U.S. Federal Court for the Southern District of N.Y., Index No. 03 CV 2717.
- This case grew out of discoveries by Mr. Den Hollander that began while working as the acting manager of Kroll Associates in Moscow.
- The RICO suit focuses on two of the core businesses of the alliance among American, Russian and Chechen gangsters—white slavery and pornography. It also addresses the attendant crimes that keep prostitution and pornography profitable, such as immigration fraud, bribery, drugs, money laundering, tax evasion, coercion, intimidation, perjury, official misconduct and more.
- The Russians run prostitutes, pornography and in some cases drugs out of Russia into the U.S., or first to Cyprus and then the U.S., or by a second route through Mexico to the U.S.
- Profit driven immigration lawyers subvert U.S. laws in order to gain entry into America for members of the Russian mafia.
- Russian, American and Chechen gangsters, apparently including those connected with the Arbi and Movsar Baraev Chechen Islamic clan, protect the organization's operations from exposure and legal proceedings through threats, intimidation and coercion. A number of Mr. Den Hollander's witnesses in Krasnodar, Russia have been threatened, and he has received four threats so far. The FBI has identified one of the threatening callers, but is afraid that by interviewing him it would provoke him to harm Mr. Den Hollander. As such, the FBI has told Mr. Den Hollander not to open his door to anyone he does not know and to be careful when out in public.
- Prostitutes and pornography are sold through an affiliation of lap-dancing clubs controlled by organized crime and allegedly marketed over the Internet on the Cybertech Internet Strip Club Network.

- The drugs are secretly administered to some customers as a way of assuring return business.
- Mr. Den Hollander, while in Russia, unwittingly fell victim to one of the Russian mafia's schemes: duping American men into marrying mafia members so that the females can obtain legal U.S. residency and citizenship to carry out and expand the organization's activities in the U.S.
- One of the mafia's members, Alina, a.k.a. Angelina, Shipilina, secretly slipped narcotics into Mr. Den Hollander's meals and exploited the American sense of "idiot compassion" to cozen him into marriage so that she could enter the U.S. to expand the mafia's criminal activities.
- Ms. Shipilina now lives in Astoria, Queens, apparently working as a call girl, laundering money, evading taxes and importing drugs for the Russian mafia. She worked as a stripper at Flash Dancers right after coming to America. While living in Chechnya, she was mistress to Ruslan Labazanov, a former bodyguard to Chechen President Dudaev.
- In addition, Ms. Shipilina's family has close connections with the Chechen Islamic mafia clan previously run by Arbi Baraev, who beheaded four British telecommunication workers in 1998 in return for $20 million from Usama Bin Laden, and subsequently run by Movsar Baraev, who led the taking of 700 hostages at a Moscow theater in 2002.
- Ms. Shipilina and her family continue to have profitable dealings with Chechen criminals in Krasnodar, Russia.
- The suit is for damages caused to Mr. Den Hollander's business and property in the amount of approximately $1,000,000 and for a court order to prevent the defendants from causing him harm—whatever good that will do.

If you have any questions, please contact the plaintiff, Roy Den Hollander, Esq., (212) 995 5201, rdhhh@yahoo.com.

■ ВИКТОРИЯ АЛЕЙНИКОВА

"Я хочу развестись со своей женой, которая вместо того, чтобы выполнять супружеские обязанности, занимается стриптизом в ночном клубе, а после работы — проституцией. Она также вовлечена в мафиозные структуры. Я привез ее в Америку из Краснодара в надежде создать хорошую семью, но это оказалось иллюзией. За четыре месяца она успела заработать проституцией 60 000 долларов наличными..."

Не подумайте, что эту "исповедь одного американца" мы нашли на интернет-сайте. Хотя там такая информация тоже имеется. Ее принес прямо в редакцию "Улицы Красной" сам автор — гражданин США Майкл Ламер. В толстой папке лежали копии документов, отчеты частного детектива и дневник неверной жены. Мистер Ламер не говорил по-русски, но документы, которые он оставил в редакции, были чисто русскими. И героиня этой полудетективной — полуромантической истории тоже русская. И может быть это все объясняет.

Светлана Бондарчук работала в краснодарском модельном бизнесе. Обладая красивой внешностью и хорошей фигурой, она могла бы стать "лицом" местной рекламы. Но не стала.

Вместе с другими русскими девушками она отправилась на Кипр и устроилась в стриптиз-клуб. В общем-то, работа безобидная: клиент может пожирать глазами танцовщицу сколько угодно, но не имеет права к ней прикасаться, даже если заказывает ривайте — танец исключительно для него в закрытой кабине. Но сложная: изматывает и морально, и физически. Порой приходится танцевать до 20 танцев подряд и при этом оставаться привлекательной и желанной. Видимо, все это у Светланы получалось неплохо — работа спорилась. Но основной доход приносила ей не она, а "шабашки". По ночам и в выходные Света подрабатывала проституцией. С "костюмерами", как называют клиентов стриптиз-клубов, она проводила время уже не на расстоянии...

"Я поехала в отель к нему, сделала массаж (40 фунтов, если секс — 100 фунтов). Я получила 100 фунтов + деньги на такси... Дай бог удачи этому человеку!" Примерно таким стилем описаны тетрадные странички Светиного дневника. Читать чужой дневник — дело, конечно, неблагоприятное, но в ксерокопии с него для полноты картины пришлось заглянуть. И удивиться, и восхититься удивительной наивностью воспитанницы российской средней школы, в головке которой перепутались все понятия о добродетелях и пороках, смешалось грешное с праведным...

...Приехали на прошлой неделе бизнесмены, кажется, из Кувейта. Денег куры не клюют. Мариос продал им меня, Регину, Джулию и Надю (по 40 фунтов). Поехали в дорогой ресторан. Мой харь сказал, что не хочет секса. Я на радостях напилась вина и по глупости отдалась (до этого попросила 100 $, славаБогу!) ...

"Странные все-таки бывают клиенты. Вчера один весельчак разул мою левую ногу, обрызгал апельсином, поцеловал пальцы. Потом одел мой туфель и повел меня танцевать на сцену. Но за танец не заплатил. На все воля Божья!!!"

Чувствуется, что несмотря на издержки профессии, такая жизнь Свету вполне устраивала. Поклонники дарили подарки — драгоценности, одежду, бытовую технику, кремы от целлюлита, парфюмы. Один богатый араб "закупил" Свету на три дня и свозил в Египет. Через ее кипрскую жизнь прошли, как тени: "замечательный мужчина: 100 фунтов стерлингов за половой акт", Эндрю: 60 фунтов плюс 10 фунтов за две фотографии в обнаженном виде; доктор Браун: духи, 50 фунтов стерлингов, часы, будильник, серьги с цепочкой, 100 фунтов, браслет и золотое кольцо" (Из отчета детектива). Короче, домой она вернулась с деньгами и подарками. Но какая же модель останавливается на достигнутом? И Светлана поехала в Мексику.

Мексиканские расценки оказались выше кипрских: за день работы в мексиканском клубе — $250, ночь — $300, table-dance (танец на столе) — $140. В Мексике Света всего за пару месяцев заработала $28 000. Правда, пришлось посидеть в тюрьме, куда многих стриптизерш забрала после облавы. Зато безбедная жизнь в Краснодаре была обеспечена.

СУПРУГА ОБЩЕГО ПОЛЬЗОВАНИЯ

С Майклом Света познакомилась в Москве, когда собралась лететь в Мексику. Все началось очень романтично. Богатый американский юрист, убежденный седины, уставший от прагматичных и эмансипированных американок, сразу же влюбился в русскую красавицу, годившуюся ему в дочери. И для кубанской казачки Майкл явился ступенью. И для возвращенца Светы из Мексики начался "голландский" орхидей, подарки, знакомство с родственниками, отдых в Сочи перед свадьбой... Рука сего ветерана американской юстиции никогда еще не была так шедрой, а сердце так быстро не билось...

Вернувшись с курорта, гражданин США Майкл Ламер и гражданка России Светлана Бондарчук заключили брак в краснодарском ЗАГСе. После чего молодой муж отправился в Москву готовить визу в США, а жена — в Италию, где ее ждал медовый месяц с... мексиканским любовником, не забывавшим ни на минуту о танцовщице из клуба. Дон Педро покалал неверную супругу по Флоренции, Милану и Венеции, подарил бриллиантовое колечко, 1000 баксов и... вернул супругу.

... Нью-Йорк миссис Ламер понравился. Правда, здесь рука мужа стала менее щедрой. Все-таки американцы — народ прагматичный и, пережив бурю романтических эмоций, Майкл стал устраивать женушку на работу. Вместе они побывали в нескольких модельных агентствах, однако единственное, что Света умела отлично делать — танцевать "у столба". Но это была ее девическая тайна. Поэтому пришлось тайком от мужа устраиваться на работу в стриптиз-клуб.

От глаз американца не укрылись странное поведение жены, ее постоянные отлучки. А тут грянул настоящий гром: Майкл обнаружил дневник супруги, в котором тщательнейшим образом описывалась каждая встреча с клиентом и фиксировалась полученная прибыль! Что бы на его месте сделал русский мужик? Ну, вы сами знаете. Но не таков обманутый американский муж! Кого Света объявила, что хочет отдохнуть с мамой на Средиземном море, Майкл не возражал, но нанял частного детектива, а также дословно перевел дневник, хранящий память обо всех ее похождениях. Визит к доктору окончательно отрезвил американца — врач открыл ему тайну недомогания, которое все чаще посещало его после обеда: молодая женушка кормила его каким-то описодеждающим препаратом...

Встретить отдохнувшую супругу Майкл прилетел в Краснодарский аэропорт. Прямо там он потребовал развода, но напрасно. Миссис Ламер совершенно не хотела вновь становиться Бондарчук и возвращалась из respectable Нью-Йорка в провинциальный Маленький Париж. Она последовала за мужем в Нью-Йорк, умоляя дать ей шанс...

Что бы на его месте сделал русский мужик? Отколотил бы изменнику и простил! А обманутый американский муж выставлял Свету из дома. О чем, впрочем, пожалел. Потому что его начали посещать странные люди и угрожать ему расправой. Вот тут то мистер Ламер всерьез испугался, ведь именно в случае его смерти безутешная вдова автоматически получит американское гражданство. А он так наивно планировал развестись с русской и пронаблюдать, как правосудие возмужествует, и неверную депортируют в Россию.

Вот так, в поисках аргументов и фактов против изменницы Майкл оказался в Краснодаре. Чем закончится эта история — одному Богу известно. Может быть когда-нибудь мы вам об этом расскажем. А пока отрывок из письма мистера Ламера в редакцию: "Надеюсь, Вам понравится эта история — о том, как талантливая местная девушка утонула в погоню за американским долларом, и том, как глупый американский мужчина среднего возраста влюбился в нее, как и многие другие, убегающие от американок в поисках женственных русских девушек".

От редакции: все имена в статье изменены.

The Spouse for Common Use.

I would like to divorce my wife, who instead of performing her marital duties, is working at the strip club, and after work is a prostitute. She is also involved in the mafia structures. I took her to the U.S. from Krasnodar in hopes of creating a nice family, but it turned out to be an illusion. For the last four months, she managed to earn $ 60,000 as a prostitute.

Don't think that this is a confession of one of the Americans online, even though there is plenty of information like that. This information was taken to "Krasnaya Street" by the US citizen Michael Lamer. In the big folder he had copies of documents, detective reports, and his wife's diary. Mr. Lamer did not speak Russian, but the documents were in Russian. The heroine of this half-detective and half-love story is also Russian. And maybe this explains everything.

Svetlana Bondarchuk used to work in a modeling business in Krasnodar. Having good looks and a nice figure she could have become the next "face" of the local advertisements. But she did not.

With the rest of the girls she went to Cyprus to work in a strip club. The work is harmless: the client could look at the dancer all he wants; however, he does not have a right to touch her, even if he orders a private dance- especially for him in a closed room. The work is hard: both physically and morally. Sometimes they had to dance 20 times in a row and still stay attractive and desired. Apparently Svetlana was good at it.

But the main income of Svetlana was from prostitution. She worked as a prostitute at night and on weekends. "I went to his hotel, gave him a massage (40 pounds, if sex- 100 pounds). I got 100 pounds and the money for the taxi... Help G-d this man!"

Approximately that was written all over in Svetlana's diary. Reading someone's diary – that is not a fine-looking thing, but in order to get a full view of the picture, we looked at its copies. Its surprising and amazing how this naïve girl from a Russian high school, in whose head everything is messed up- she is confused with virtues and vices, right and wrong....

".... Last week these businessmen came from Kuwait, filled with money. Marios sold me, Regina, Julia and Nadya (40 pounds each). We went to an expensive restaurant. Mine said that he does not want sex. With the good news, I got drunk from wine and by mistake gave myself to him (before I asked for $100 thank G-d!)...."

"We have some weird clients. Yesterday one took off shoes from left foot, spilled some orange juice on it and kissed my fingers. Then he put on my shoes and took me to dance on the stage. But he didn't pay for the dance. There is a God's will for everything!!!)

Despite the costs of her profession, Svetlana was satisfied with it. Her clients gave her presents – jewelry, clothes, home equipment, lotion from cellulite, perfumes. One affluent Arab "bought" her for three days and took her to Egypt. Through her life in Cyprus went by "amazing men: 100 pounds sterling for sexual intercourse; Andrew: 60 pounds plus 10 pounds for two nude pictures; Dr. Brown: perfume, 50 pounds sterling, watch, alarm, earrings and a necklace, 100 pounds, bracelet and a gold ring" ( from the detective's report). In short, she came home with a lot of money and presents. But she did not stop on this; she went to Mexico.

Mexican prices turned out to be more- for the day club- $250, Night-$300; table-dance-$140. In Mexico, Sveta earned $28,000. But she had to go to jail, where a lot of strippers were taken after the round-up. But she didn't have to worry about anything in Krasnodar. She got acquainted with Michael in Moscow, where she wanted to go to Mexico. Everything started out very romantically. An affluent lawyer, tired of pragmatic American women fell in love with a young woman who could have been his daughter. And for Sveta it could have been the next step to success. After her return, the "Hollywood" started: flowers, acquaintances with families, trip to Sochi before the wedding. Michael has never been that generous and his heart has never beaten that fast... After the trip, US citizen Michael Lamer and Russian citizen Svetlana Bondarchuk got married in Krasnodar. After that Michael went to Moscow to prepare a visa for Svetlana. His wife went to Italy, where she had a honeymoon with a Mexican lover, who did not forget about the dancer at the club. Don Pedro took the unfaithful wife to Florence, Milan and Venetia, gave her a diamond ring, $ 1,000... and returned the wife. Mrs. Lamer liked New York. But her husband was not as generous as before. Americans are very pragmatic, and after the romance, Michael decided to find his wife a job. They went to a couple of model agencies, but Sveta knew how to dance next to a pole really well. But that was her secret. Therefore, she went to find a job at a strip-club surreptitiously. Her husband became very suspicious of her constant absences. And then he found her diary where she listed all her clients and her profit from prostitution. What would a Russian man do in his place? Well, you know yourself. But not the American man! When Sveta told her husband that she wants to go on a cruise with her mother, Michael did not protest, but rather hired a detective and translated the diary that had all of his wife's experiences. A visit to a doctor cleared the head of Michael – the doctor gave him a reason of his malaise after dinner: his young wife added some opium contained substances in his food... Michael went to pick up his wife from the airport in Krasnodar. There he requested a divorce, but that was inefficient. Mrs. Lamer did not want to leave a comfortable life in New York and go to a provincial Paris. She followed her husband to New York, begging him to give her another chance..... What would a Russian husband do? Beat her up and let her in again. But the American man kicked her out of the house. Later on, he regretted it. Later weird people started to threaten him. Then Mr. Lamer seriously got scared, after his death the widow would receive the citizenship in America. And he wanted to see how she would get deported after the divorce. That's how after looking for the arguments against his unfaithful wife he turned out to be in Krasnodar. How this story will end- only God knows. Maybe some day we will tell you about it. But now there is excerpt from Mr. Lamer's letter to us: "I hope you liked the story of how a very talented young woman went after the money, and how a stupid American man fell for a feminine Russian beauty, trying to escape from the American girls."

P.S. All the names were changed in the article.

Ulitsa Krasnaya
April 30, 2001

Unfamiliar acquaintances

This is an interview with Tatyana Vasilieva who is a fashion designer and whose works are well known around the world.

- So, lets start with the childhood and your connection with sports
- I was born in Ribachiem City in Issi-Cule. I have always liked to dance and later I started taking gymnastics.
- What grade did you have in school for gym?
- Since I am a Leo, I don't like to do something that is required. I was very athletic and loved the only two things during the lesson: running and jumping.
- Maybe we have lost an Olympic champion?
- Maybe, maybe (very seriously)
- So what was the later relationship with sports?
- When I went away to college in Krasnoyarsk, I started skiing. Another sports activity on my record is horse riding.
- Now a personal question. Can you compare dating regular young men and young men who are into sports?
- My boyfriends were connected with two types of sports: gymnastics and alpinism. I still think that a bad person cannot be an alpinist.
- There is a conception that people who are into sports have an intellectually limited horizon and are even simple-minded. Do you agree with that?
- Absolutely not. My friends have had both athletic and life goals and have accomplished them.
- What are the common traits pertaining to athletes?
- Responsibility, inner discipline, inner organization. The athletes who I used to know had all of the aforementioned characteristics.
- Are you sure that sport has been the cause of the traits?
- Of course. When you need to come at seven at practice and then work hard for the whole day- these traits are a necessity.
- How did you occupy your daughter with sport?
- At first, Nastya was scared of water, so her dad taught her how to swim. And then she started to slouch since she was attending "sit-in" schools: English-specialized and art. Therefore, she started swimming. Later on, when there appeared a dilemma between cutting her long hair and quitting swimming, Nastya did both.
- With all the hard work, how do you manage to keep such a good figure?
- I have many sets of exercises. First of all, I run in the mornings. By doing this, I walk the dogs and improve my health. I spend about 40 minutes for all the activities
- How about your husband- does he follow your work-out or has something else?
- He watches football, hockey, tennis and etc on television. And that's his sports activities.
- What are your favorite TV sports?
- I love watching dancing and aerobics. It reflects the culture of the body, rhythm and dance- all well-organized. I also like watching Afro-Americans run; cannot take my eyes off the TV

- Many famous athletes today go on the podium as models. Can you imagine athletes among your models?
- I already have a wonderful young lady like that- Alina Shipilina, who has been working with me for a long time and completely proves my theory regarding the aforementioned traits. She came to me when she was a student at the university and not a bad runner. She was built, all muscles, 185 cm in height and a very cute Russian face. From the first look, I unfortunately had to tell her that she would never become a model. The girl answered very politely but firmly that she would. I have heard such answers many times, so I did not want to argue with her. I have to admit that I was wrong. Alina with her hard work (used to it from sport workouts) became a beauty with a figure of a true model. The girl has had time to finish university, work in the West and now she is working on her degree (this is another proof of intelligence of the athletes).
- Then, maybe you should take the models from the athletes?
- I have my own school of preparing models and we base it on my own methods. It is easier to build models from “fresh” girls rather than athletes. But I respect the psychology of these people.
- What is the sport fashion to you?
- It is the fashion where the function of the outfit has to coordinate with beauty and aesthetics. Therefore, it has to be out of the natural fabrics. A person in that costume should have a desire to run, jump, and do some physical exercise.
- Today all the athletes are wearing “Reebok”, “Adidas”, “Nike”. Is there a Russian sport fashion?
- There is no Russian sport fashion because we do not have a sport costume culture. But we do not have enough equipment to provide the best quality of the product.
- Did you ever try to become the leader in the sport fashion?
- I have tried to work with the Krasnodarsk Company “Dynamo”. But it was a misfortune mostly due to unadvanced technology.
- Is there really no hope in this area?
- Not really. Oleg Machuga’s company (he is a son of a favorite athlete Vasily Machuga) is doing pretty well on the market. They work with foreign materials and goods. Considering the costs, the output is not that big. This is going to continue until our government realizes that it is profitable to produce sport costumes.
- How much does the costume influence the outcome in sports?
- In my opinion, it is 50/50. But it gives confidence to the athlete; this actually applies to everyday life too.
- Do you have friends who are athletes?
- Yes. They are Starikov, Mkrtchyan, Lavrov, Machuga, Pachivalov. All these people have the aforementioned traits of the athletes. Also Lilya Lavrova, woman who is beautiful and graceful.
- Are athletes among your customers?
- Unfortunately not. They think that their good bodies will look good in anything. It is nice to make clothes for their perfect bodies but I do not mind not perfect either. First of all, the person should listen to my opinion, and second of all, I - have to like the person. There are plenty of resources to change the looks of the person.

- What is common between fashion and sport?
  - First of all, it is something that combines the people. Athletes care about the culture of the body, and fashion representatives try to make people look beautiful using clothes. Both of the lines are positive because they help people to advance.
  - What is needed for Tatyana Vasilieva to start producing sport clothes?
  - An investor. Even though I am still convinced that we do not have enough resources in our country to produce the sport clothes, even though we could use it here, in Cubany.
  - You have traveled all over the world with your collection of clothes. What was the most memorable thing in the theme of "Sport and Fashion".
  - When I was in London, I used to go to Guide Park. I was impressed that little kids and old people were running together. Also they had the best colorful costumes. And they were all so happy, which is partly based on the beautiful sport clothes.
  - How will the sport fashion develop in the XXI century?
  - Many fashion designers think that the traditional style will die out and the sport clothes will become popular. It is explainable by the democracy of the clothes.
  - What are the perspectives of developing of the industry of gym clothes here in Cuban?
  - Cuban is created for the development of this industry. We have a lot of resorts and this kind of clothes is exactly for that. For all sports, fishing, and swimming the gym clothes is essential. This business would profit pretty fast.
  - What kind of sports would you recommend for women?
  - I love dancing; aerobics, gymnastics, and horse riding- all this activities could make a woman look graceful and fit. But I really dislike wrestling and box. I think it is against the nature of women.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

August 20, 2003

Special Agent Barry P. Babler
Federal Bureau of Investigation
330 E. Kilbourn Ave.
Milwaukee, WI 53202

Roy Den Hollander v. Flash Dancers Topless Club, et al.
Southern District Court of New York, CV-03-2717 (MBM)

Dear Special Agent Babler:

On August 18th I left a voicemail message for you concerning your interview with Anastasia A. Vasilyeva, Nicolay N. Vasilyev and apparently the father of one of them. I have enclosed a copy of the letter that the Vasilyevs sent to the US district court in the above captioned action. Also attached is a translation.

Once again, I do not represent the Vasilyevs who are defendants in this case. I would, however, like to talk to you concerning this letter. I will be in Wisconsin until August 25th and can be reached at 917 687 0652.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

August 28, 2003

Robert S. Mueller, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
J. Edgar Hoover Building
935 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20535-0001

Dear Director Mueller:

I want to know why the Milwaukee, Wisconsin office of the FBI is interfering with my investigation of the facts in a civil RICO case presently in the US District Court for the Southern District of New York.

I am the plaintiff in the RICO action, and as a lawyer, I represent myself pro se. The defendants include Russian, Chechen and American organized criminals, an Islamic mafia group once headed by Arbi and Movsar Baraev, and others. The case is titled Roy Den Hollander v. Flash Dancers Topless Club et al., 03 CV 2717 and is before Chief Judge Michael B. Mukasey. Currently, the domestic parties are proceeding through the Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b) motion stage.

Two of the defendants, Anastasia and Nicolay Vasilyeva, are currently alien residents living in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. As the RICO complaint alleges, they also run a call-girl operation through a model and fashion house in Kransnodar, Russia by providing prostitutes to local officials and criminals and exporting prostitutes to Cypriot brothels/strip-clubs that are run by Russian organized crime and to other countries such as the USA.

In July 2003, the Vasilyevas sent a letter to the New York Southern District Court with a copy to me that responded to the complaint. See attached Exhibit A, copy of the original letter with an English translation. From August 21st to the 25th I traveled to Milwaukee to determine the accuracy of some of the statements in the letter and continue my investigation into the facts of the case.

On August 22nd at around noon, I interviewed Anastasia Vasilyeva's former employer and apparent friend, Cynthia Zahnow, who manages a small tailoring shop that seems to be part of the upscale Valentina fashion house in the Town of Brookfield outside of Milwaukee. Ms. Zahnow answered a number of my questions during the 10 to 15 minute interview that provided me with some useful information. Other people were present during the conversation. I left my business card with her.

On the same day at a little after one o'clock in the afternoon, I interviewed FBI Special Agent Barry P. Babler at the FBI's Milwaukee office. The Vasilyeva's letter to the Court stated that Mr. Babler had "inspected all of us" when Anastasia Vasilyeva's father came to Wisconsin from Russia on December 25, 2002. See Exhibit A, p 3, last paragraph of the English translation.

Mr. Babler talked with me for around 10 minutes in the waiting room of the FBI office and without another agent being present. Mr. Babler said there was no investigation into Anastasia Vasilyeva's father, only a routine inquiry that resulted from a random check of aliens visiting Wisconsin. He stated the inquiry only concerned confirming the father's paper work.

Mr. Babler added that he was familiar with the RICO case, had read the complaint (which is 91 pages long) and had a copy of it in his office. According to Mr. Babler, Anastasia Vasilyeva had contacted him after being served the complaint (June 2003), told him it concerned the Russian mafia and asked him for advice. Mr. Babler recounted that he told her he could not provide any legal advice.

Also during my interview of Mr. Babler, he agreed to give me the first name of Anastasia Vasilyeva's father which is necessary for determining her patronymic and in turn finding any criminal records that may exist in Russia. He told me to call back later that day. When I called back, he refused to provide me the father's first name as promised because, as he said, it would impact one of the FBI's investigations. The routine inquiry was now an investigation and apparently ongoing.

On August 25 at around 8:45 am, I received a call from Police Officer Sean Schmidt of the Town of Brookfield. Officer Schmidt said a complaint had been made against me by Ms. Zahnow and, if I contacted her again, I would be arrested for aggravated harassment.

Officer Schmidt continued that he understood from Ms. Zahnow that an FBI agent had been talking to me concerning my interview with Ms. Zahnow on the same day that the interview took place, August 22nd. In addition, Officer Schmidt said Ms. Zahnow told him that the FBI agent had contacted her and told her to call the local police to file a complaint against me.

Ms. Zahnow had no way of knowing that I had a discussion with an FBI agent while in Milwaukee unless it came from the FBI itself. Since the only agent I talked to during my trip was Mr. Babler, the mostly likely chain of events is that after I interviewed Ms. Zahnow, she contacted Anastasia Vasilyeva who then called Mr. Babler. Mr. Babler then either contacted Ms. Zahnow directly or told Anastasia Vasilyeva to tell her to make a complaint with the local police. Either way, it's the FBI interfering with a pending case in a federal court.

On August 25th before my plane left for New York, I visited the Milwaukee FBI office again to find out the reason for the FBI's interference. The head agent, David Mitchell, was on vacation, and the acting manager, Jeffrey Troy, was busy in meetings, apparently because of the influx of tens of thousands Harley Davidson enthusiasts. Mr. Troy's secretary said he would call me at my number in New York. He hasn't, and, if he does, I doubt he will provide me with any reasonable answers.

This is the third in a series of what I can only characterize as “bizarre” responses by the FBI concerning the fact pattern of this RICO suit. The other two occurrences concerned the New York City office and a series of threatening telephone calls made to me.

In closing, I want to know why the Milwaukee FBI is protecting two Russian alien defendants who ran and apparently still run an international prostitution ring centered in Krasnodar, Russia. I am taking this route of contacting you before I decide whether it is necessary to take up the District Court’s time with a motion for a preliminary injunction against the FBI.

Thank you very much. If you have any questions, please contact me.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

September 22, 2003

Robert S. Mueller, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
J. Edgar Hoover Building
935 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20535-0001

Dear Director Mueller:

I have not received any response to a letter I sent you on August 28, 2003, concerning the interference of the Milwaukee, Wisconsin office of the FBI into the investigation of the facts in a civil RICO case presently in the US District Court for the Southern District of New York, 03 CV 2717.

Attached is a copy of the August 28th letter

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

CC: Jeffrey N. Drummond
Attorney at Law
303 West 21 St.
New York, NY 10011

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

September 22, 2003

Robert S. Mueller, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
J. Edgar Hoover Building
935 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20535-0001

Dear Director Mueller:

I have not received any response to a letter I sent you on August 28, 2003, concerning the interference of the Milwaukee, Wisconsin office of the FBI into the investigation of the facts in a civil RICO case presently in the US District Court for the Southern District of New York, 03 CV 2717.

Attached is a copy of the August 28th letter

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

CC: Jeffrey N. Drummond
Attorney at Law
303 West 21 St.
New York, NY 10011

U.S. Department of Justice

Federal Bureau of Investigation

Office of the General Counsel

Washington, D.C. 20535

December 16, 2003

Mr. Roy Den Hollander
545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Dear Mr. Den Hollander:

Your letter, dated August 28, 2003, to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) was referred to this office for response.

Your allegation, in summary, is that an FBI agent in the Milwaukee Field Office interfered in your investigation in support of the civil RICO complaint you filed in the Southern District of New York. After reviewing the details set forth in your letter, and inquiring into the matter with cognizant personnel in the FBI Milwaukee Field Office, I am satisfied that the Milwaukee agent acted appropriately in his contacts with the parties in your complaint and did not, in any manner, interfere with your investigation.

Specifically, the agent made it clear to all parties who contacted him that the FBI had no interest in the matters alleged in your civil complaint and that he could not advise them as to how to respond or proceed. The only exception was the agent's advice to one party to contact the police because that person had alleged that you were harassing her.

U.S. Department of Justice

Federal Bureau of Investigation

Office of the General Counsel

Washington, D.C. 20535

January 29, 2004

Mr. Roy Den Hollander
Attorney at Law
545 East 14th Street
New York, New York 10009

RE: ROY DEN HOLLANDER V. FLASH DANCERS TOPLESS CLUB, ET AL.
CV-03-2717 (MBM)

Dear Mr. Hollander:

I received your letter dated January 5, 2004, requesting additional information with regard to your complaint that a Special Agent (SA) assigned to the FBI's Milwaukee Division interfered with your investigation in the above-captioned matter. As you were advised by my previous letter dated December 16, 2004, the FBI's Office of the General Counsel has determined that there was no impropriety on the part of the Milwaukee SA in your case. Inasmuch as the FBI has no interest in this litigation, any further requests for information regarding the FBI's authority to investigate foreign visitors or any other issues of interest to you may be obtained through the Freedom of Information Privacy Act pursuant to 28 Code of Federal Regulations § 16.1 et seq.

Sincerely,

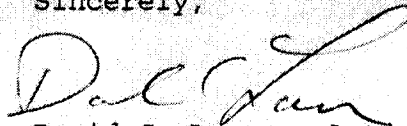

David C. Larson, Acting Chief
Investigative Law Unit

Mr. Roy Den Hollander

Furthermore, in refusing to provide you the name of your defendant's father or any other FBI record information, the agent was acting in compliance with the Privacy Act, which prohibits release of this information. Finally, I assure you that the FBI is not "protecting" your named defendants or anyone else, for that matter. In closing, let me reiterate that the FBI has no interest in your litigation or its outcome.

I trust that this response addresses your concerns.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "D. C. Larson".

David C. Larson, Acting Chief
Investigative Law Unit

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

January 5, 2004

David C. Larson, Acting Chief
Investigative Unit
U.S. Dept. of Justice
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Office of the General Counsel
Washington, D.C. 20535

Roy Den Hollander v. Flash Dancers Topless Club, et al.
Southern District Court of New York, CV-03-2717 (MBM)

Dear Mr. Larson:

Thank you for your letter of December 16, 2003 in response to my complaint that the FBI Milwaukee Field Office interfered with my investigation in the above captioned case.

I am concerned that Special Agent Babler provided legal advice to a particular party complaining about harassment by telling her to contact the police. I understand that the FBI rules and regulations prohibit agents from providing such advice to the public.

In addition, Special Agent Babler's action does not appear accidental or even negligent. He knew I was in Milwaukee conducting the type of research that attorney's do on a case. (Please see the attached August 20, 2003 letter to Babler.) In this instance, I was trying to confirm the representations made to a federal court by two defendants. (Please see the attached letter to S.D.N.Y. court.) Despite this knowledge, Special Agent Babler went ahead and advised a member of the public to use the local police to complain of harassment. Being an experienced law enforcement officer in modern day America, Special Agent Babler had to have known that the police would respond to such a complaint from a woman by threatening me with arrest. As simple logic dictates, such a threat would have some deterrent effect or at least consume valuable time in my investigation of a pending case. Regardless of Special Agent Babler's motives, his action negatively impacted my investigation into a matter before a federal court and he should be reprimanded. It is unacceptable in a republic for one law enforcement agency to use its street smarts to manipulate another agency into interfering with a lawful investigation in a civil case.

Further, your letter did not indicate whether Anastasia Anatolyevna Vasilyeva (father's first name Anatole) or Cynthia D. Zahnnow (the interviewee) was the party that contacted Special Agent Babler.

Lastly, I would like to know whether it is normal procedure for the FBI to investigate visitors to the USA from Russia as in the case of Special Agent's Babler's investigation of Anastasia's father when he visited in December 2002?

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

Barry P. Babler FBI Special Agent Interview
(414 276 4684, direct 414 291 4258)

8/22/3 at around 1:05 to 1:18pm, RDH interviewed Babler at FBI office 330 Kilbourn Ave, Milwaukee, WI 532202.

Babler came out into the waiting room to talk to me alone. (Usually two FBI agents talk to someone.) Babler was very nervous but had a good tan.

I introduce myself and mentioned the RICO case.

Babler apologized for not returning my call of Monday 8/18/3.

Babler said that Anastasia Vasilyeva had come to him concerning the RICO case and asked for advice on what to do. Vasilyeva said the case involved Russian organized crime. Babler told her that he couldn't give her legal advice, and that he did not give her legal advice. Babler had a copy of the complaint, which he said he had read.

Babler said that the FBI only conducted a routine inquiry into Anastasia's father after he had arrived in America. Babler said the inquiry resulted from a random choice of papers that normally flow across his desk. The inquiry entailed confirming the paper work was accurate. Such routine inquiries never take six weeks and are done only after the alien arrives. The inquiry of Anastasia's father did not take 6 weeks; did not take a month. It was done quickly after the father had already arrived. (Contradicts Zahnow.)

Babler does not read Russian.

I asked him whether he knew Anasatasia's middle name. He said it would be the first name of her father. He thought the father's first name was Anatole. I asked if he would check. He said it was in his records in his office and would check later because he had an appointment at that moment. Babler told me to call him in an hour and a half and he would give me the name.

Babler said he heard about similar situations as mine.

After I mentioned to him I had been traveling to Russia since 1991, he said he was surprised that I was not on their list.

At around 3:20pm, RDH telephoned Babler.

Babler was no longer nervous; he was in the typical FBI authoritarian mood. He refused to provide the name of Anastasia's father because it is information that impacts one of our investigations and cannot give it out. (Babler previously indicated it was only a routine inquiry that had been completed. Now it was an investigation, apparently ongoing.)

He said he was involve in another investigation of a gentleman in my situation but nothing could be done because the fraud occurred in Russia. He said it was not at all infrequent for an older American man to marry a younger Russian woman who only wants to get to America. Babler asked me whether I lived in Wisconsin or NY. I told him NY, but it seemed a strange question.

After hanging up with Babler, I called Vasilyevas' home number which was busy for at least 5 minutes later.

8/25/3 from around 12:45 to 1pm, RDH was at the FBI Office on Kilbourn Ave. trying to meet with a supervisor to find out why the FBI was interfering with his investigation into the RICO case. The boss of the office and head for the state, David Mitchell, was out of town for a week. His assistant, Jeffrey Troy, was busy, and the receptionist told me to call back around 2pm. The receptionist made a point that I should call back at 2pm and not stop by. At 2pm I called Troy's office, the secretary said we have a lot of things going one this week, but she would call me back in 15 minutes. At 2:20pm Troy's office called me back to say that Troy was busy in meeting all day and that he would contact me by telephone tomorrow, 8/26/3.

Brookfield Town Police
(262 796 3798)

8/25/3 at 8:15am Officer Sean Schmidt received a telephone complaint from Cindy Zahnow concerning the 8/22/3 interview with her. Case No. 031776.

At around 8:45am Schmidt called RDH on his mobile. Schmidt very nastily said that if I contacted Zahnow again I would be arrested for aggravated harassment and that I had no legitimate reason for contacting her. To add to the intimidating effect, Schmidt said Zahnow told him that an FBI agent had talked to me concerning my interview of Zahnow. Schmidt was clearly implying I was the subject of an FBI inquiry.

I explained to Schmidt about the letter by one of her employees to the court in the Federal case. I said I have a right to confirm the information in the letter. Schmidt went on that I have no legitimate right to contact her again, to visit her shop and if I do I will be arrested for aggravated harassment.

Schmidt added that Zahnow told him that an FBI agent had contacted her and told her to call the local police concerning the interview. Zahnow did not tell Schmidt the name

Around 11:30am, RDH visited the Town of Brookfield police and talked with Acting Chief Chris Perket. Told the Chief I did not appreciate the intimidation implicated in the threat to arrest me. I informed him about the RICO case in federal court, that the defendants in Wisconsin were Russian and Zahnow was the former employer of one defendant. I added I was within my rights to continue my investigation into the case. I requested a copy of the complaint that they later provided.

8/26/3 at around 10:50am, RDH called Sean Schmidt and asked why his report did not included that Zahnow told him an FBI agent told her to call the Brookfield police to file a complaint. Schmidt confirmed that is what she said but did not put it in the report because it was not confirmed. I told Schmidt that I would probably need a statement as to what she said and he agreed. Schmidt said he did not include Zahnow's statement about the FBI because he had no way of confirming whether it was true.

Date: Wed, 27 Aug 2003 10:14:58 -0700 (PDT)
From: "roy den" <rdhhh@yahoo.com>  Add to Address Book
Subject:  Get out of town by sundown
To: "Jeffrey Drummond" <jndrummond@msn.com>

Jeff,

I talked to the Wisconsin local chief of police. Apparently the cops were just tools of the complaintant and FBI's effort to intimidate me. The FBI head could not see me while I was still there. His secretary said he will call me here in NYC. Anyway, I've drafted a letter to the FBI Director Mueller. I'd appreciate you looking at it. There's some more to tell then what's in the letter.

If the case survives the dismissal, I'm thinking of adding the FBI and complaintant into the RICO.

The defendants have requested and I agreed to a two week extension to put in their motions to dismiss.

When's a good time to meet to update things?

Roy

Zahnow, Cynthia "Cindy" D. Interview

On 8/22/3 RDH visited Custom Tailoring 18900 W. Bluemound Rd., Brookfield, Wisc 53045, tel. 262 796 0434. The shop is small and in the back of the Galleria West Mall. It is next to the Valentina women's clothing store that sells expensive designer clothes and specializes in expensive wedding dresses.

Custom Tailoring and Valentina are geographically arranged and present the same image as Vasilyeva's Fashion House in Krasnodar. Valentina has a storefront with tall model like attendants and manikins draped with fashionable clothes. Off to the side is the apparently captive tailoring shop, Custom Tailoring, that serves Valentina's clients.

Approximately from 11:50am to 12:05 pm, RDH interviewed Cindy Zahnow in the presence of a young (20s) male employee with black hair and a seamstress with burnette hair in her 30s or 40s. Purpose was to confirm information that Vasilyeva provided the court in a letter.

After RDH introduced himself as a NYC lawyer in an ongoing case in the federal court in NY, Zahnow did not recall Anastasia's patronymic but said she would check her records and for RDH to call her Monday at work.

Zahnow said that Anastasia had left to work at the Boston Store in downtown Mil. within the last few weeks. The young said Vasilyeva left work on July 25 or 28.

Zahnow found Vasilyeva the job because it paid benefits.

Zahnow said that one of Vasilyeva's child was born with defects and that Anastasia was probably at that moment in Children's Hospital.

Anastasia's father arranged to come to America to help with the child, but the FBI had delayed his entry for about six weeks while it conducted an investigation into Anastasia's father. The FBI had visited Custom Tailoring as part of its investigation.

Zahnow said she was not Russian.

Zahnow said she knew what was going on in the case concerning the "kook". She asked of RDH are you the "kook"? I asked who mentioned the word "kook". Zahnow said that Anastasia had shown the complaint to "everybody". But Zahnow would not say who used the word kook in describing the plaintiff.

RDH asked again whether Zahnow knew Anastasia's last name and she said no and that she probably didn't have it in her files.

I gave Zahnow my card.

RDH left and returned to ask for Zahnow's card. She did not have one. As RDH left, Zahnow sneaked up behind him and his witness and asked if they were talking about her to which RDH replied that he never defames people as others do.

Zahnow then walked into Valentina.

Cynthia Zahnow was arrested in 12/27/00 for disorderly conduct. Case dismissed on prosecutor's motion.

There are no Corporation records for Custom Tailoring and no telephone listings.

Valentina is owned by Gina Chirchirillo and Anthony "Tony" J Chirchirillo. Gina was arrested 3/14/95 for issuing worthless check, dismissed on prosecutor's motion and 12/18/95 for issuing a worthless check, pleaded guilty. Gina and Tony live at 1725 Old Oak Ct, Brookfield, WI 53005, which is also the Register Agent Office for Valentina, telephone number is unpublished.

FROM RUSSIA AS 'SLAVES'

Lev Trakhtenberg, under house arrest, denies the women he has brought over from Russia (below) to dance in local clubs are here against their will.

RON ANTONELLI/DAILY NEWS

They came through Kennedy Airport with visas claiming they had traveled 5,000 miles to work as musicians in internationally renowned Russian show groups.

Instead, the women of Voronezh, an agribusiness city of 1 million people in central Russia, worked as strippers in northern New Jersey clubs like Delilah's Den and Frank's Chicken House.

Natasha, Vanessa, Liza, Lolita and about 30 others danced six days a week, shuffled from Brooklyn apartments by a hulking ex-boxer.

Today, several are government witnesses in a federal case that opens a window on the burgeoning international trade in young, attractive Russian women.

"The fearful plight of these women, who were forced to dance nude and perform other abhorrent acts, cannot be measured in a 12-count indictment," New Jersey Attorney General Peter Harvey said of the case. "Their plight can only be measured in human tragedy."

One expert has testified that as many as 8,000 women are smuggled into the region each year to work in strip clubs, massage parlors or as domestic servants.

The trade generates thousands of dollars a week for dancers who are forced to kick in between $200 and $600 a day to the people who brought them here — money that over the years has attracted violence.

In April 2000, Veronica Chaschina, a 28-year-old Russian stripper, was gunned down in her Brighton Beach apartment by an acquaintance who believed she was hiding more than $100,000.

"These women are not doing this of their own choice," Jersey City Police Lt.

Within a week, he found work outside the Democratic National Convention at Madison Square Garden, hawking flyers for a Manhattan strip club.

Federal prosecutors say that in the late 1990s, Trakhtenberg and his ex-wife, Viktoriya I'lina, hatched the plan to bring women from their native Voronezh to work in strip clubs in New Jersey.

They placed ads in Voronezh newspapers, seeking women who wanted to work "striptease" in America. They hired I'lina's old flame Sergey Malchikov, a former professional boxer, to drive the women to their jobs from sparsely furnished apartments in Brooklyn, authorities say.

Prosecutors say the couple lied on the women's visas, claiming they would work in popular Russian show groups or study at the University of Illinois. Further, the prosecutors say, the women were not informed of the "lascivious" nature of the dancing.

The women's passports were confiscated to restrict their movement, and those who tried to leave or refused to pay back their $5,000 smuggling fee were threatened, prosecutors say.

Trakhtenberg tells a different story. He said he and his family were forced to take part in the smuggling by unnamed criminal elements. He alleged his name was forged on the women's visa documents and that they lied in the hopes of winning residency.

"I never smuggled anybody," Trakhtenberg said as he sipped Russian cognac in

DAILY NEWS

SPECIAL REPORT

By THOMAS ZAMBITO

DAILY NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lev Trakhtenberg, under house arrest, denies the women he has brought over from Russia (below) to dance in local clubs are here against their will.

'The fearful plight of these women, who were forced to dance nude and perform other abhorrent acts, cannot be measured in a 12-count indictment.'

N.J. Attorney General Peter Harvey

RON ANTONELLI/DAILY NEWS

massage parlors or as domestic servants.

The trade generates thousands of dollars a week for dancers who are forced to kick in between $200 and $600 a day to the people who brought them here — money that over the years has attracted violence.

In April 2000, Veronica Chaschina, a 28-year-old Russian stripper, was gunned down in her Brighton Beach apartment by an acquaintance who believed she was hiding more than $100,000.

"These women are not doing this of their own choice," Jersey City Police Lt. Walter Zalisko told a group gathered last month at the Ukrainian Institute of America on East 79th St. for the screening of a film that dramatized the problem. "They're slaves."

He said the Russian mob is behind many of the operations.

Zalisko, who is fluent in Russian, has assisted with prosecutions in New York and New Jersey and estimates he has spoken with as many as 800 victims, some as young as 15, working in strip clubs or as prostitutes.

Since 2001, the Justice Department has charged 149 traffickers — three times the number from the previous three years. Over the same period, 287 prosecutions were opened.

"It's like a cancer that has gone undetected and has metastasized," said Rep. Chris Smith (R-N.J.), a sponsor of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act.

Enacted in 2000, the law increased penalties for traffickers and made cooperating victims eligible for visas.

At the center of the case involving the women of Voronezh is Lev Trakhtenberg, a 39-year-old Russian émigré who produces theatrical shows for Brighton Beach's Russian community.

Trakhtenberg arrived in the United States in 1992 with a master's degree in Russian literature and few prospects.

The women's passports were confiscated to restrict their movement, and those who tried to leave or refused to pay back their $5,000 smuggling fee were threatened, prosecutors say.

Trakhtenberg tells a different story.

He said he and his family were forced to take part in the smuggling by unnamed criminal elements. He alleged his name was forged on the women's visa documents and that they lied in the hopes of winning residency.

"I never smuggled anybody," Trakhtenberg said as he sipped Russian cognac in his Brooklyn apartment, where he is under house arrest awaiting trial in October in Newark Federal Court.

"Everybody who came here came here voluntarily. Can you imagine they're calling this modern-day slavery if many of [the dancers] came here twice and continue to do the 'lascivious' dancing? This is absurd."

But prosecutors said in court papers that I'lina, attorney Larry Bronson and a private investigator tried to intimidate witnesses in the case at Delilah's Den in South Amboy, N.J., last November.

"We're gonna win, and I know they promised you a green card," I'lina told one of the dancers, according to a prosecutor's account. "They're going to use you like condoms and throw you away."

Prosecutor Leslie Faye Schwartz said one of the alleged victims told her that an attorney and another man from the group came close to the stage, waving $20 bills as she danced.

"Come on and talk to me like a customer," one of the men said. "I'll take a dance."

Bronson questions the credibility of the dancers.

"Anybody who can stand on a stage and take their clothes off and then give some greasy truck driver a lap dance is not someone who is a shrinking violet," Bronson said.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street
New York, NY 10009

Tel. & Fax: (212) 995-5201
Mobile 917 687 0652
rdhhh@yahoo.com

June 18, 2004

Peter Harvey
N.J. Attorney General.
Office of the Attorney General
P.O. Box 080
Trenton, NJ 08625-0080

Re: Attached Newspaper Article – “From Russia As Slaves”

Dear Mr. Harvey:

With all due respect, you don't know a damn about the Russian mafia's underground pipeline for bringing Russian prostitutes and strippers to America. These ladies come of their own free will to make big money. The average monthly salary in Russia is $150. They can make many times that in one night at a lap-dancing club and even more as prostitutes. Prostitution was always the former Soviet Union's key capitalistic enterprise with the pimps being both men and women. Now it's Russia's key earner of hard currency because the fall of the Iron Curtain unleashed tens of thousands of prostitutes and assorted criminals into the world.

The Russian sex industry works quite simply: model agencies through out Russia, some run by men, some by females, are swamped with pretty young girls wanting to sell their assets in hard currency markets. The agencies, often via bribes, obtain the girls travel visas so they can work overseas in lap-dancing clubs and brothels. Some agencies send the ladies to work at clubs in Mexico City, such as The Men's Club, and then smuggle them into the U.S. The girls know before they leave what they are going to work at, how else could they hope to make so much money. They sell their bodies willingly because that's how they become millionaires by Russian standards.

The standard agency fee is around 20% for making the travel and visa arrangements and paying the airfare. The strip club or brothel takes around another 15%. That leaves the prostitutes and strippers 60 to 65% beside the private prostitution deals they cut with their customers and whatever they can cheat from the money they owe their agencies. It's rather difficult for a model agency in Russia to keep track of how many times a girl gives a lap dance or performs sexual acts. These Russian model agencies also function as matchmakers, suckering American men into bringing these prostitutes to America, and pornography producers for the American market.

I suggest you talk to the Deputy District Attorney for Los Angeles County, Marcia Daniel, who recently prosecuted the largest prostitution ring in Los Angeles' history, run by a 42 year old Ukrainian woman and her 22 year old daughter. Ms. Daniel will tell you how the underground railway funneling Russian prostitutes into America works. But you are probably not interested, since you are obviously pandering to the female vote. Oh, and by the way, when a Russian has her passport stolen or "confiscated," all she needs to do is contact the nearest Russian Consulate to obtain a replacement.

You may feel like a white knight, but the folks in Russia and those here that understand the twisted nature of that country are laughing at your gullibility. You should take a lesson from former President Harry Truman, "Those Russians, they lie." And Russian women are the best at it in large part because they can cry at will.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Roy Den Hollander

Russian Articles, Papers and Presentations by Roy

Interviews of Roy

Roy's Speech at the Kremlin

Two Russian TV News Appearances by Roy

ROY DEN HOLLANDER

545 East 14th Street, 10D
New York, N.Y. 10009

(917) 687-0652
roy17den@gmail.com

---

SUMMARY

Civil litigator in Federal and New York State courts.
Proficient in electronic discovery (Relativity, DocuMatrix, Clearwell).

EXPERIENCE

Contract Attorney Document Review

2015-2018

KLDISCOVERY for Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison proposed merger D.O.J. second request-relevance, Beacon Hill Staffing for Shook, Hardy & Bacon pharmaceutical product litigation-relevance and privilege; TransPerfect Solutions for Simpson Thacher Bartlett LLP-European Commission's second RFI on a proposed merger; TransPerfect for Reed Smith LLP, Cohen Gresser LLP, and Paul Weiss-relevance and privilege projects; Labaton Sucharow class action securities fraud-relevance; Tapfin for Ernst & Young product liability-relevance and privilege; DTI Global for Prudential Insurance Company emails for regulatory compliance.

Contract Attorney, New York, N.Y.

2011-2014

Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan residential and commercial mortgage-backed securities fraud case.

- Team leader for privilege review.
- Drafted exhibits based on prospectuses.
- Conducted electronic document review with Relativity and DocuMatrix.

Attorney and Business Consultant, New York, N.Y.

2000-2011

Litigated civil cases and advised on corporate governance.

- Plaintiffs' attorney in federal class action challenging various provisions of U.S. immigration law as unconstitutional.
- Insurance subrogation litigation for Seneca Insurance Co., Inc.
- Counseled a number of small corporations on security, regulations, tax, and litigation.

Kroll Associates Russia, Moscow, Russia

1999-2000

Improved and managed Kroll's delivery of intelligence and security in the former Soviet Union.

- Reorganized operations that increased service quality and reduced turn around time for conducting investigations, processing information, and preparing intelligence reports.
- Redefined the role of Russian employees in the firm so as to foster decision-making ability, confidence, and pride in their work.
- Developed and executed a marketing strategy that acquired new Western clients.
- Improved financial reporting and cost allocation systems that reduced expenses.
- Collected all receivables that were overdue past 90 days.

Attorney, New York, N.Y., Russia, Ecuador

1990-1999

Counseled companies, individuals, and nonprofit organizations in America, Russia and Ecuador on legal and business issues, including international financing and marketing.

- Provided financial advice to the Russian Ministry of Foreign Economic Affairs on increasing hard currency revenues by trading in Russian's foreign debt.
- Consulted with the Office of the Chairman of the Supreme Soviet, Ruslan Khasbulatov, on privatization and antitrust laws.
- Counseled an Ecuadorian presidential candidate on a comprehensive plan for reducing that country's foreign debt without further impoverishing the nation.
- Advised clients on which Russian companies to invest in through Russia's privatization program.

Cravath, Swaine & Moore, New York, N.Y.

1986-1989

As an associate wrote briefs, took and defended depositions, and prepared expert witnesses in a variety of Fortune 500 company cases.

- Played crucial role in successful around-the-clock, high-pressure effort that prevented the hostile takeover of a multi-billion dollar corporation.
- Prepared testimony on the valuation of a major Atlantic City Casino-Hotel in the successful defense of a multi-million dollar fraud suit.
- Managed a team of attorneys and paralegals.

U.S. Department of the Treasury-Honor Program, 1985-1986

Attorney in the Office of Chief Counsel of the Internal Revenue Service: Interpretative Division.

- Prevented the improper dissolution of a multi-billion dollar irrevocable trust as result of income tax implications.

WABC TV News, New York, N.Y.

1980-1981

Political Producer, Writer and Assignment Editor.

- Managed news coverage of the 1980 Presidential primaries, conventions and election campaigns that contributed to making the evening news show number one in its market.
- Produced award winning half-hour special on the political situation in Israel and Lebanon.

EDUCATION

Columbia University Business School, New York, N.Y.

MBA 1997

Concentration in Finance. Beta Gamma Sigma Honor Society.

George Washington University Law School

J.D. 1985

Order of the Coif Honor Society.

ADMISSIONS

Admitted N.Y. State Supreme Court-First Department, No. 2168805, U.S. District Courts Southern and Eastern Districts of N.Y., U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second and Third Circuits, U.S. Supreme Court.

RICO Defendants Websites

Cybertech Exotica VIP Escorts

Strip Club Escorts

Strip Club Network

(Includes Flash Dancers)

SAFE DEPOSIT LEASE AGREEMENT — New York

NAME Alinea A Chipilina DATE 08/22/09 SAFE NO. 14699
 NAME _____ SAFE LOCATION 411 5th Avenue
 MAILING ADDRESS 545 East 144th St 10D, NY, NY ANNUAL RENTAL FEE 43 DEPOSIT 43
10009

In this agreement, the words, I, ME, and MY mean all individuals named at the top of this Agreement. The words YOU and YOUR refer to Citibank. Please read this Agreement carefully, and sign it in the space provided. If more than one person signs, each will be liable to fulfill the obligations spelled out in this Agreement.

RENTAL TERMS

I agree to lease the safe described above for a period of one year from the date of this Lease. At the end of that time, this Lease will be renewed automatically from year to year, unless I notify you in writing at least 15 days before the Lease is due to expire that I do not want to renew, or unless you decide to cancel it. I agree to pay the first year's annual rental fee, and the fees for each yearly renewal, in advance. You may also, with advance notice to me, impose a charge each time I open my safe.

I authorize you to charge any deposit account maintained with you in my name individually or jointly with another party, for the amount of any rental fee remaining unpaid after 30 days from the due date for such rental payment.

USING MY SAFE

I have received two keys for my safe. I agree to protect these keys and return them both to you if my Lease is terminated. If I lose one key, I understand that I will have to pay a fee for a replacement. I also understand that if I lose both keys, I will have to pay a fee to replace the lock on my safe. These fees cover the cost of materials and labor.

I agree to observe the hours and procedures you set if I want to open my safe. For my own protection, each time I want to open my safe, I must present my key and sign a request so you can check my signature.

The only others who will be allowed access to my safe, are my authorized legal representatives and my approved deputy or deputies.

APPOINTING A DEPUTY

I may authorize another person as my deputy, in addition to myself, to handle all business concerning my safe. To do so, I must fill out one of your deputy authorization forms. You will continue to honor this authorization until you receive written notice from me that it has been cancelled, or until you have notice my death. If you follow my instructions, I agree that you are not responsible for any actions of my deputy.

ITEMS PROTECTED

I understand that my safe is intended to provide protection for securities, jewelry, precious metals and valuable papers only. I agree that your responsibility respecting these valuables is limited to the use of ordinary care.

I further understand that you do not insure the contents of my safe.

I agree not to use my safe for any other purpose. If I do, you will be not be responsible for the loss or destruction of any other property kept in my safe, including money.

TERMINATING THIS AGREEMENT

I can terminate this Agreement at any time by notifying you in writing. I must then empty my safe and return both keys to you. You can also terminate this Agreement at any time and require me to remove the contents of my safe and return the keys to you. You agree to give me at least 15 days advance notice in writing sent by ordinary mail to the address you have for me in your records.

LEGAL NOTICES

If you receive a legal notice that might affect my safe or its contents, you may deny me access to it until the matter is settled or the notice cancelled or withdrawn.

REFUNDS

If you terminate this Lease, I will receive a refund of any prepaid rental for the unexpired time of my Lease.

If I terminate the Lease, you will determine if I am entitled to a refund of any prepaid rental. However, if I terminate the Lease immediately upon notice by you of increased charges for use of the safe, I will receive a refund of any prepaid rental.

If I have given you a deposit, I understand that you will return it upon my third renewal or whenever I return both keys to you. The deposit will not be returned if any renewal payment is not made within 60 days of coming due.

Judicial and Attorney Complaints

Judge Fran Lubow

Judge Helen Sturm

Attorney Steven Silpe

Attorney Niclolas Mundy

Attorney Roy Den Hollander

NYC
Weather
83°
SUNNY

NEW YORK POST

24 HOURS A DAY

Get Home Delivery

Tuesday, July 29, 2008
Last Update: 11:45 AM EDT

CARS
JOBS
REAL ESTATE
DATING powered by
YAHOO!

Recent

NEWS

News Home Columnists Local National International Weird But True NYPD Blotter Traffic & Transit Lottery

BIKINI BABES' GIG A SWEET MEAL TICKET

By MARINA VATAJ

October 22, 2006 --
Meet America's hardest-working beauty queens -
Middle American pageant veterans
living in New York City rent free in exchange for hustling cocktails
in their bikinis at a Times Square hot spot.

For the young beauties, it's a shot at becoming a top model.

For the customers,
it's wall-to-wall

HOT DISHES: Jennifer Johnson and Angelina Shipilina wait a table at the Hawaiian Tropic Zone...

PREVIOUS

NEXT

SHARE BOX

Show your support.
Buzz this article up.

Digg Reddit Email Link
Print

MOST EMAILED

- KRAZY KAT GOT ME
KOMMITTED
- THAT '70S WOE IN RERUN
MORE >

2006 in photos
Click to view gallery

ALL CLASSIFIEDS

DATING

JOBS

AUTOS

REAL ESTATE

lovelies who can juggle drinks and dinner orders while looking gorgeous.

Owners of the Hawaiian Tropic Zone, an 800-person-capacity restaurant that just opened on 49th Street, recruited ambitious women from pageant competitions across America as its first wave of bikini-clad employees. Those women have since been joined by 82 local waitresses.

The out-of-towners live in a dorm-like apartment on the Upper East Side - it's "The Real World" meets "Gidget."

"It is a great opportunity for me to get closer to my dreams of becoming a model," said Jennifer Johnson, a 26-year-old who left her job teaching fourth grade in Dallas after winning the Miss Texas Hawaiian Tropic contest.

Her roommate and fellow Texan, Sarah Jo Lammers, a 24-year-old from Corpus Christi with a finance degree, bolted the business world to pursue a modeling dream here.

The Texans live with eight other recruits in two three-bedroom pads in an eight-story walkup on the Upper East Side owned by Dennis Riese, who owns the Hawaiian Tropic Zone with PM nightclub honcho Adam Hock.

Under the terms of their Hawaiian Tropic Zone deals, the models live rent free for six months, pay $200 for the seventh month, $400 the eighth and $600 a month until they leave. They also get discounted gym memberships and tanning, because they're required to take part in both.

In return, they weave in and out between crowded tables as waitresses for the restaurant, welcoming guests, serving drinks and taking dinner orders while wearing Nicole Miller bikinis.

Every night is a beauty pageant. The waitresses strut their stuff twice a shift in front of the usual crowd of suit-clad bankers and brokers who quiet down and cast their paper ballots for the hottie they most admire.

The pageant winner gets a $100 bonus on top of $100 for each eight-hour shift and tips as high as $100 per table.

"I went out and bought shoes, which are everywhere in this city," Johnson said, recalling a whopping gratuity from one admirer.

But the guys "are never inappropriate or touchy-feely" Johnson said. "Mostly, they just ask to take pictures with us."

When they aren't working, "we like to stay in a lot," Johnson said. "But when we do go out, we respect each other. That means no boys come back with us."

"No if, ands or buts," Lammers said. "If there's a guy here after midnight, we kindly ask them to leave."

marina.vataj@nypost.com

Celebrity Photos: Best of 2006

News

- Local News
- National News
- International News
- News
- Columnists
- Weird But True
- NYPD Daily
- Blotter
- Liberty Medals
- Traffic & Transit
- Lottery
- Classroom
- Extra

Sports

- Yankees
- Mets
- Giants
- Jets
- Knicks
- Nets
- Rangers
- Islanders
- Devils
- Sports Blogs
- Columnists
- Bettor's Guide
- Horse Racing
- Picks
- Post Line

Gossip

- Page Six
- Cindy Adams
- Liz Smith
- Braden Keil
- Michael Riedel
- Celebrity Photos
- Celebrity Sightings
- Page Six Magazine
- Delonas
- Cartoons

Business

- Business Columnists
- Real Estate
- Stock Quotes

Entertainment

- Movies
- Movies Blog
- Oscars
- Food
- Fashion
- Fashion Blog
- Music
- Theater
- Health
- Travel
- Travel Blog
- Horoscope
- Weddings
- Dating
- Weekend Guide
- Comics & Games
- Post Game Report
- Tempo

Post Opinion

- Editorials
- Oped
- Columnists
- Letters
- Books
- Ramirez
- Cartoons
- Send a Letter

TV

- Linda Stasi
- Starr Report
- Adam Buckman
- Reviews
- TV Listings
- LIVE: The TV Blog

Classifieds

- Cars
- Dating
- Jobs
- Real Estate
- Marketplace
- Place an Ad

Miscellaneous

- Sweeps/Contests
- Coupons
- Media Kit
- Parade Magazine
- RSS
- Special Sections
- Privacy Policy
- Terms of Use
- Video
- Page Six Magazine
- Media Kit

User Services

- Contact Us
- FAQ
- Daily Newsletter
- Home Delivery
- Avant Go
- E-Edition
- Mobile
- Archives
- Back Issues
- Reprints
- Story Index
- Past Editions

SIGN IN SUBSCRIBE PRIVACY POLICY TERMS OF USE NEWS HEADLINES FROM OUR PARTNERS RSS

NEW YORK POST is a registered trademark of NYP Holdings, Inc. NYPOST.COM, NYPOSTONLINE.COM, and NEWYORKPOST.COM are trademarks of NYP Holdings, Inc.

Copyright 2008 NYP Holdings, Inc. All rights reserved.

Angelina's Immigration Proceedings

Deportation hearing 2007-2008, Immigration Court decided to deport the Ho for her fraudulent marriage to Roy Den Hollander.

Board of Immigration Appeals on February 12, 2009, upheld the Immigration Court's decision to deport the Ho.

In the second deportation proceeding of the Ho for her second fraudulent marriage to another American, the Immigration Court decided to administratively close the proceeding because her immigration file had disappeared, which left the Ho free to live and work in America.

August 19, 2014, letter to the General Counsel for the Executive Office for Immigration Review volunteering to provide him a key part of the Ho's file--her diary.

General Counsel's response--get lost.

October 24, 2014, letter to the Department of Justice Inspector General notifying him about the disappeared file--no response.

February 20, 2015, letter to the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman, Charles Grasley, notifying him of the disappeared file--no response.

May 1, 2017, letter to Attorney General Sessions complaining about Ho's disappeared file.

June 5, 2017, letter from Christina Baptista, Senior Counsel, that complaint over Ho's disappeared file was forwarded to the Chief Immigration Judge, Mary Beth Keller.

July 27, 2017, unsigned letter from Office of the Chief Immigration Judge that, in effect, disappeared files do not indicate any misconduct.

July 24, 2018, USCIS reopens investigation into Ho that also involves her Russian criminal boyfriend.

Further Action Notice

Social Security Administration Tentative Nonconfirmation (SSA TNC)

For SSA Field Office Staff: use EV-STAR and see POMS RM 10245.005ff

Den Hollander	Roy
Employee's Last Name	Employee's First Name
141-40-7359	09/1947
Employee's Social Security Number	Employee's Month/Year of Birth
06/11/2015	2015162094807QD
Date of SSA Tentative Nonconfirmation	Case Verification Number
Reason for this Notice:	SSN did not match: The name and/or date of birth entered for this employee did not match Social Security Administration records

EMPLOYER INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Review this Further Action Notice in private with the employee as soon as possible.
IMPORTANT: If the employee does not speak English as his or her primary language or has a limited ability to read or understand the English language, also provide the employee with a translated version of this Further Action Notice. Translated versions are available in the 'View Essential Resources' section of E-Verify. If the employee cannot read this document for some other reason, provide the information in an alternative format.
2. Check that all of the information at the top of this Further Action Notice is correct. If this information is incorrect, close this case in E-Verify and create a new case with the correct information.
3. Ask the employee to indicate whether he or she will contest the SSA Tentative Nonconfirmation (SSA TNC) by signing and dating Page 2 of this Further Action Notice, and then sign and date below as the employer.
4. Give the employee a copy of the signed Further Action Notice in English (and a translated version, if appropriate) and attach the original to the employee's Form I-9.
5. Log in to E-Verify and search for this case using the information above. Follow the instructions in E-Verify to refer the case to SSA if the employee contests the TNC, or close the case if the employee does not contest the SSA TNC. If the employee chooses not to contest the SSA TNC, you may terminate his or her employment and close the case in E-Verify.
IMPORTANT: If the employee contests the SSA TNC, refer the case to SSA, print the Referral Date Confirmation from E-Verify, provide it to the employee, and instruct the employee to visit SSA within 8 Federal Government working days as specified in the Referral Date Confirmation.

Employer Signature and Date

I have notified this employee of the SSA Tentative Nonconfirmation and provided the employee with a copy of this Further Action Notice.
Epiq Systems	Tania Dubljevic
Employer's Name	Employer Representative's Name
Date	Employer Representative's Signature

EMPLOYEE INSTRUCTIONS:

Why you received this Further Action Notice

Your employer participates in E-Verify, a program managed by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the Social Security Administration (SSA). E-Verify compares the information you provided on Form I-9, Employment Eligibility Verification, with records available to DHS to verify that you are authorized to work in the United States.

You received this Further Action Notice from your employer because E-Verify provided a result of SSA Tentative Nonconfirmation (SSA TNC). An SSA TNC means that the information entered into E-Verify by your employer does not match SSA records. An SSA TNC does not necessarily mean that you gave incorrect information to your employer or that you are not authorized to work in the United States. Visit the For Employees pages at www.dhs.gov/E-Verify to learn the reasons you may have received an SSA TNC.

What you should do:

1. Check that the information on Page 1 of this Further Action Notice is correct. If it is not correct, provide the correct information to your employer. Your employer should close this E-Verify case and use the corrected information to create a new case.
2. Decide if you will contest (take action to resolve) the SSA TNC and inform your employer of your decision.
IMPORTANT: If you decide not to contest the SSA TNC, your case will become a Final Nonconfirmation, which means that your employer may terminate your employment.
3. Select your decision to contest or not contest and sign and date this Further Action Notice below. If you decide to take action to contest the SSA TNC, to begin to resolve the SSA TNC, you must visit an SSA field office within 8 Federal Government working days from the date your employer refers your case in E-Verify.
IMPORTANT: Review Page 3 of this notice for important information about employer responsibilities and your rights.

Select box, sign and date below:

I choose to: (check one)
<input type="checkbox"/>	CONTEST (take action to resolve the SSA TNC)
<input type="checkbox"/>	NOT CONTEST (not take action to resolve the SSA TNC)
Employee's Signature	Date

What you must do to take action to resolve the SSA TNC:

1. Visit an SSA field office within 8 Federal Government working days from the date your employer refers your case to SSA to begin to resolve your case. Your employer must give you a Referral Date Confirmation, which will tell you the date by which you must visit SSA.
To locate an SSA field office, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/locator or call SSA at 800-772-1213 (TTY: 800-325-0778). If you live in an area where there is a Social Security Card Center, you are required to visit the Card Center.
2. Bring this Further Action Notice when you visit the SSA field office. Tell SSA that you are there because of an E-Verify issue.
3. Bring the following original documents to the SSA field office, if you have them. SSA may require:
  - Proof of your age; for example, a birth certificate or passport
  - Proof of your identity; for example, a driver's license or passport
  - Proof of a legal name change; for example, a marriage certificate, if your current name is not displayed on your current Social Security number card.
  - Proof of U.S. citizenship or your work-authorized status:
    - If you are a U.S. citizen, for example, a Naturalization Certificate, U.S. public birth certificate, or U.S. passport, or

- If you are not a U.S. citizen, for example, a Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551 or "green card"), Employment Authorization Document (Form I-766), or Arrival-Departure Record (Form I-94) showing work-authorized status.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

---

This page provides important information about employer responsibilities and your rights.

- Employers must promptly notify you, in private, of a Tentative Nonconfirmation (TNC).
- Employers must allow you to contest a TNC and may not take adverse action against you because of the TNC while you are contesting the TNC and your E-Verify case is pending.
- You have 8 Federal Government working days to visit an SSA field office or contact DHS to contest the TNC from the date the employer refers the case in E-Verify.
- Employers must not discriminate against you because of your citizenship, immigration status or national origin.
- Employers cannot use E-Verify selectively or to pre-screen job applicants. E-Verify must be used for all new employees regardless of citizenship, immigration status or national origin.
- Employers cannot use E-Verify to verify existing employees, unless the employer is currently a federal contractor with the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) E-Verify Clause in its federal contract.
- Employers are required to clearly display the 'Notice of E-Verify Participation' and the 'Right to Work' posters in all languages supplied by DHS.
- Employers may terminate employees because of a TNC only after receiving a Final Nonconfirmation, or after an employee has decided not to contest a TNC.
- Employers may not use E-Verify to reverify existing employees whose employment authorization has expired. Instead, employers must complete Section 3 of Form I-9, Employment Eligibility Verification, or complete a new Form I-9.

For More Information

If you have questions about what to do, contact E-Verify at 888-897-7781 (TTY: 877-875-6028) or email E-Verify@dhs.gov. If you need assistance in a language other than English, you may ask the E-Verify customer representative for an interpreter. For more information on E-Verify, including our privacy practices and program rules, visit the E-Verify website at www.dhs.gov/E-Verify.

To contact SSA, call 800-772-1213 (TTY: 800-325-0778) or visit SSA's website at www.socialsecurity.gov/.

Report Violations

If you believe your employer has violated E-Verify rules, or treated you in an unfair manner, we encourage you to report it. To report misuse of E-Verify, including privacy violations, and general E-Verify complaints, contact the E-Verify Employee Hotline at 888-897-7781 (TTY: 877-875-6028) or email E-Verify@dhs.gov.

To report employment discrimination based upon your citizenship, immigration status, or national origin, contact the Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Office of Special Counsel for Immigration-Related Unfair Employment Practices (OSC) at 800-255-7688 (TTY: 800-237-2515). Language interpretation is available to all callers. For more information, visit OSC's website at www.justice.gov/crt/about/osc.

Protect Your Identity

If you want to learn more about identity theft or fraud and the simple steps you can take to protect yourself, visit ftc.gov/idtheft.

Referral Date Confirmation

Social Security Administration Tentative Nonconfirmation (SSA TNC)

---

E-Verify Case Verification Number: 2015162094807QD

Employee Name: Den Hollander, Roy

Your employer referred your E-Verify case to SSA after you decided to contest (take action to resolve) an SSA Tentative Nonconfirmation (SSA TNC). This document confirms that your case was referred to SSA.

What you should do

Visit an SSA field office within 8 Federal Government working days, by 06/23/2015 (MM/DD/YYYY), to begin to resolve the SSA TNC. If you have not received the SSA TNC Further Action Notice from your employer, contact your employer immediately to obtain this notice.

The SSA TNC Further Action Notice includes information about your E-Verify case and which documents you need when you visit SSA. You must have the SSA TNC Further Action Notice when you visit SSA.

If you do not take action within 8 Federal Government working days, by 06/23/2015 (MM/DD/YYYY), a Final Nonconfirmation will be issued and your employer may terminate your employment. Employers must allow you to contest an SSA TNC and may not take adverse action against you because of the SSA TNC while you are contesting the SSA TNC and your E-Verify case is pending.

For More Information

If you have questions about what to do, contact E-Verify at 888-897-7781 (TTY: 877-875-6028) or email E-Verify@dhs.gov. If you need assistance in a language other than English, you may ask the E-Verify customer representative for an interpreter. For more information on E-Verify, including our privacy practices and program rules, visit the E-Verify website at www.dhs.gov/E-Verify.

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street, 10D
New York, N.Y. 10009

Tel: (917) 687-0652
roy17den@gmail.com

July 4, 2015

Fred M. Maurin
Social Security Administration
New York Regional Commissioner
26 Federal Plaza, Room 40-120
New York, NY 10278

Dear Mr. Maurin:

Your agency and the Department of Homeland Security recently rendered an e-Verify “Nonconfirmation” finding that I am not a U.S. citizen. (Ex. A). In effect, both agencies told my temporary employer at the time that I was an “illegal alien”, which resulted in the loss of employment on a project.

If you find the term “illegal” offensive, then substitute “criminal,” since anyone who entered the country in violation of U.S. law is either guilty of a misdemeanor or felony, which are criminal classifications. That is what your agency and Homeland Security effectively called me to my former employer.

All my life, I thought I was a U.S. citizen—as if that means anything anymore. My mother told me I had been born at a hospital in Paterson, New Jersey; the same town that Lou Costello was from, so perhaps this is all a Government joke.

My earliest memories are of a small town in New Jersey—a state which was one of the original colonies. We had no mariachi bands, Taco Bells or “Don’t Drink the Water” signs. However, I did take two years of Spanish in high school, but my Spanish is nowhere good enough to be an illegal.

I thoroughly understand that the Obama Administration could care less about the money, time, and annoyance this lunacy is costing me. After all, I am the Administration’s latest synonymy for demon—a white, heterosexual man who is politically incorrect, or as I like to say, “evolutionarily correct.”

Due to typical Obama Administration ineptitude or malice, I now have to prove to bureaucrats drunk with power, who enforce their sanctimonious lefty ideologies instead of the law, that I am a U.S. citizen. So, just how do I do that, since Homeland and Social Security have already rejected my Social Security card and driver’s license as invalid? Perhaps, I should just change my name to José Jiménez and leave La Raza to deal with it.

My Social Security card was issued in the 1960s. It shows that my last name is “Den Hollander.” (Ex. B). Many people of Dutch heritage have two words for a last name, such as Vincent Van Gogh, although I still have both my ears. Most illegals, however, have so many names, they can easily interchange identities. Russians do the same by using their patronymics as a last name, but that’s okay—they’re commies as are many in the current administration.

Because my last name has two words, which means “the Dutchman,” mostly likely invented by Homeland Security’s predecessors at Ellis Island when my father arrived in the 1920s, some institutions in America have shorten my last name to “Hollander” while others have combined the words into one, sometimes with a lower case “h”—“Denhollander,” sometimes with a capital “H”—“DenHollander.” And, as hard as it is to fathom, some bureaucracies have actually gotten my last name right—“Den Hollander” with a space between the words.

When Social Security switched from paper files to digital, some mentally challenged clerk probably entered something wrong from my paper file. Most likely, they muddled the last name, but it could have been anything—I have no idea. Then again, it might be malicious, since a search of my name “Roy Den Hollander” on the Internet makes clear that I do not subscribe to the prevalent looney tune PC ideology of the day that substitutes for thinking and the rule of law.

So, as the precursor to a lawsuit if necessary, here’s my proof of citizenship, which includes those bureaucracies that got my last name correct and those that did not. Therein lies a defense for Homeland Security and your agency by blaming me for bureaucratic incompetence—I should have corrected the entities that got my name wrong. Not so fast, especially where the entities relied on Homeland Security and your inaccurate computer records. Additionally, I accurately completed the many bureaucratic forms but some fool chose to fit my name into a digital formula. That’s their fault; I’m not paid to waste my time doing their job.

Alleged proof of U.S. citizenship:

Ex. B Social Security Card

Ex. C Birth Certificate

Ex. D New York State driver’s license

Ex. E George Washington University Law School alumni membership card

Ex. F Columbia University alumni reading card

Ex. G U.S. Passport

Ex. H New York State Unified Court System Attorney Secure Pass

Ex. I U.S. District Court Southern District of New York Attorney Service Pass

Ex. J Certificate of Good Standing Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of NY

Ex. K Certificate of Good Standing U.S. District Court Southern District of New York

Ex. L Certificate of Good Standing U.S. District Court Eastern District of New York

Ex. M Certificate of Good Standing U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit

Ex. N Certificate of Good Standing Supreme Court of the United States of America.

Unfortunately, I do not have a Matrícula Consular de Alta Seguridad, so the preceding exhibits may not be sufficient, and the courts will have to decide whether I originated from south of the border.

Finally, I have not complied with Homeland Security and your agency's dictated deadline to physically visit and wait interminably for a "Club Fed" bureaucrat with the hubris of a prince or princess to condescending rule that I am a citizen. So no surprise, if I continue as an illegal alien in the eyes of this increasingly intrusive, incompetent and ideologically corrupt administration. At least I'll have more rights.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

/S/

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street, 10D
New York, N.Y. 10009

Tel: (917) 687-0652
roy17den@gmail.com

July 6, 2015

Donald Trump, CEO and Pres.
The Trump Organization
725 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10022

Dear Candidate Trump:

I agreed with your position on illegal aliens until the Department of Homeland Security classified me as one, which resulted in my losing a temporary job.

Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration operate a program called "E-Verify." The program allows employers to determine whether a new employee can legally work in the United States.

As an attorney admitted to practice in New York, the U.S. Southern and Eastern District Courts, the U.S. Second Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court, I recently was hired for a temporary attorney project. Homeland Security's E-Verify program, however, determined that I was not legally permitted to work, so my employer could not use me on a subsequent project. (Exhibit A, Nonconfirmation Report). Needless to say I was surprised, since my Spanish is not that good.

I could have appealed, but to do so required me to take the time to physically visit and wait interminably for a "Club Fed" bureaucrat with the hubris of a prince or princess to condescending rule that I am a citizen. I chose not to, having once worked for the U.S. Treasury Department with a top secret security clearance. Instead, I sent the Regional Administrator a less than PC-correct letter with copies of numerous identification documents. (Exhibit B, letter only).

Since Homeland has already deemed my social security card and driver's license invalid, why should they do something different with these other documents?

The real issue here is not me; I can take care of myself, perhaps with a lawsuit against these idiots. But what of those other Americans who lose jobs that are vital to their livelihoods and families because these illegal alien sycophants and haters of everything American are too inept or malicious to do their jobs as required by the law.

True, being an illegal alien does have its advantages: I don't have to pay taxes, La Raza will give me free legal advice, and if I'm arrested, Homeland Security will send me back to where I came from—Paterson, New Jersey.

So in your campaigning, if you see a group of illegals waiting to be hired and one is wearing a Joseph Bank's blue pinstripe suit with a Columbia University rugby tie—that's me.

I wish you success in your campaign.

Sincerely

/S/

Roy Den Hollander

ROY DEN HOLLANDER
Attorney at Law

545 East 14th Street, 10D
New York, N.Y. 10009

Tel: (917) 687-0652
roy17den@gmail.com

August 10, 2015

Ann Coulter
c/o Crown Publishing
1745 Broadway
New York, NY 10019

Dear Ms. Coulter:

This Edward R. Murrow “small picture” or “Adios America” tale maybe of interest to you.

Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration recently declared me ineligible to work in my native country—the U.S.A. In effect, they classified me as an illegal alien even though I was born here and have not, to my knowledge, renounced my citizenship. Their classification resulted in my losing a job.

It’s a mystery to me why these lefty supremacists in Obama’s Administration found me to be “undocumented.” My Spanish isn’t that good, and I have plenty of documents, but they’re all issued by federal, state or private U.S. organizations, for example:

Certificates of Attorney Good Standing from – the Supreme Court of the United States of America, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York, and the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of N.Y.; Social Security Card; Birth Certificate, New York State driver’s license, George Washington University Law School alumni membership card, Columbia University alumni reading card, U.S. Passport, New York State Unified Court System Attorney Secure Pass.

Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration operate a program called “E-Verify.” The program allows employers to determine whether a new employee can legally work in the United States.

Obama’s E-Verify program determined that I was not legally permitted to work here. (See Attachments). I contested the determination but was then required to visit a Social Security Office within eight working days. The job that I was offered was due to start in a few days, and I had prior commitments during those few days. Besides, why should I, a U.S. citizen whom the federal government tried to send to Vietnam twice, be required to take the time to physically visit and wait interminably for a “Club Fed” bureaucrat with the hubris of a prince or princess to condescending rule that I am a citizen?

I chose not to, having once worked for the U.S. Treasury Department with a top secret security clearance where I became all too familiar with the corruption of the Government. Instead, I sent the N.Y. Regional Administrator of Social Security, Fred M. Maurin, a less than PC-correct letter with copies of the above cited documents. So far no response.

Since Homeland and Social Security initially deemed my social security card and driver's license invalid, they have probably done the same with the other documents.

The real issue here is not me; I can take care of myself, perhaps with a lawsuit against these idiots. But what of those other Americans who lose jobs that are vital to their livelihoods and families because these haters of everything American are too inept or malicious to do their jobs as required by the law.

True, being an illegal alien does have its advantages: I don't have to pay taxes, La Raza will give me free legal advice, and if I'm arrested, Homeland Security will send me back to where I came from—Paterson, New Jersey.

If in your travels you see a group of illegals waiting to be hired and one is wearing a Joseph Bank's blue pinstripe suit with a Columbia University rugby tie—that's me.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely

Roy Den Hollander

Citizenship Possible Media Responses
(Privileged and Confidential Attorney Work Product)

So what happened?

I don't understand—my Spanish isn't that good.

Did you appeal within 8 days?

No. As an illegal alien I now have more rights than U.S. citizens: I don't have to pay taxes, I get free legal advice from La Raza, and if I'm arrested, I get sent back to where I'm from—Paterson, New Jersey.

Besides, why should I a US citizen, whom the federal government tried to send to Vietnam twice, jump through the hoops of the illegal alien sycophants in the Obama Administration?

Unlike Obama, I have better things to do than play golf. I'm not dropping everything and schlepping to a government office, to sit for hours waiting for some club fed bureaucrat to do as little work as possible in order for her to qualify for her year end bonus?

Were they going to pay my hourly rate while waiting? Were they going to pay my transportation? Were they going to give me back some of my taxes that pays them for their stupidity and sloth? No.

When Homeland Security's declaration of my illegality kept me from signing up right away for the next project, I scheduled my time for other matters. The bureaucrats whom I stupidly pay to harass me were going to have to wait.

What matters?

Can't say or the people paying me might receive a visit from Homeland Security and be charged under the Patriot Act for aiding a U.S. citizen to live in the country in which he was born and raised.

I subsequently spent three hours putting together a less than nice letter to the Regional Administrator of Social Security and mailed it on July 4th. Do you think he got the message? I would have sent it out on Cinco de Mayo but that would have meant waiting nearly a year, and I need to support myself and this "hate everything American Administration" with my taxes.

Aren't you responsible for losing that job by not appealing?

To an extent, but the real issue here is not me; I can take care of myself, perhaps with a lawsuit against these idiots. But what of those other Americans who lose jobs that are vital to their livelihoods and families because these illegal alien sycophants and haters of everything American are too inept or malicious to do their jobs as required by the law.

How will you get your citizenship back?

Easy, under the Violence Against Women's Act all I have to do is date an American girl then accuse her of abuse—does not matter whether it is true or not because Homeland Security will only listen to me the illegal alien. So it will conclude I've been abuse and make me a permanent resident. In three years, I can become a citizen again. Boy, I hope she's hot.

How do you feel about this?

I'm getting tired of the illegal alien jokes.

When I go to the law library at the NYC Bar Association, they now ask me for my green card.

A friend remarked that he didn't know I could swim.

A lawyer said he'd represent me in my deportation proceeding.

Did you get your citizenship back?

On July 20, 2015, not having heard back from the Regional Administrator, I went down to his office at 26 Federal Plaza to pay a personal visit. A couple of security guards who could barely speak English would not even let me into the building. Just as I thought, under Obama America was now the United States of the Third World. The Caribbean security guards sent me down to Williams Street to wait with all the other illegals trying to con their way into America. Most of the clerks at Williams Street were Obama look a likes—just what a bigot like him and his wife wanted. But I got lucky and the lottery gave me a white middle-aged man who spoke fluent English. "How may I help you?" "I'd like my U.S. citizenship back," and showed him the E-Verify Non-confirmation document. "Damn," he said in surprise and went to work. He was thorough, took his time, and figured out what had happened. According to him, someone in Social Security, perhaps the Regional Administrator's secretary had gone into my file to correct the Administration's error. The white clerk made some additional changes and double checked everything to make sure I would not have any more problems with E-Verify. I thanked him and left. Always a pleasure dealing with a non-millennial American who knows his job.

eAccessNY

Occupational Licensing
Management System

New York Department of State

Logon

Search Results List

Click on "Name" to see details.

Press "Back" to return to the previous screen.

Press "New Search" to start new search.

Search Criteria		Search by License Number
License Type		Salesperson:Salesperson
License Number:		10401211558
Name	License Number	License Type	Status	Expiry Date
ALINA SHIPILINA	10401211558	Salesperson:Salesperson	Current	04/01/2019

BackNew Search

DOS Home | Site Map | Privacy Policy | Accessibility Policy | Contact Us

Russian Tales

© Roy Den Hollander (11/17/17)

Father and Daughter

I'm in Moscow for some reason or the other, and one day my Russian girlfriend calls in tears saying that her father abused her.

"Call the police," I say.

"No, the police are useless, I want you to come over here now and beat him up."

"Me?"

"Yes, if you love me you will protect me."

"Okay," I reluctantly say, and take the metro to the station near her house.

There I am a boy from New Jersey walking down Tverskaya Street, a couple blocks from the Kremlin, the heart of the evil empire, on my way to beat up my girlfriend's father who is not only younger than I but bigger. How did I get into this?

Her father, Vladimir, is in the living room lying on the sofa with a rag over his face and his wife and daughter, my girlfriend, are scolding him in Russian.

My girlfriend says, "Go ahead, beat him up, or I'll know you don't love me."

"Okay," I say, "come on Vladimir, put 'em up." His daughter translates while I'm hoping my offer is declined.

Vladimir says something in Russian, and his daughter says with a smirk, "Father doesn't want to fight."

Whew, I lucked out, I'm thinking.

Vladimir, then props himself up to look at me and the rag falls off his face showing a black and blue eye.

"How'd he get that?" I asked my girlfriend.

She says, "He came home and wanted me to make him some soup, but I didn't want to, so I bounced the can of Campbell's off his head."

Then Vladimir's wife rushes over to the sofa and wham, slaps him right across that eye.

I saying to myself, I'm getting on the next plane out of this nut cake country and I did.

Volunteer Cops

The son of the family where I rented a room when in Moscow was a volunteer policeman.

Late one night I went out on assignment with him.

His group of volunteer cops were helping the regular police run a check point for drunken drivers on the outer ring road that circled Moscow. Cars would stop and they'd check ids and whether the drivers were drunk.

It was boring when suddenly a black Mercedes Benz zooms through the check point.

The volunteers and I pile into what reminded me of a Tinker Toy car with the regular cops jumping into a Match Box Toy car.

Off we go in pursuit with me wondering how these cars powered with lawnmower engines are going to catch a Benz.

Want to know how? By seriously reckless driving. Our driver turns off his headlights, leaving starlight—no moon, and an occasional working street lamp to navigate by in his effort to sneak up on the Benz.

Through sheer lunatic driving, a dirt road short-cut and luck, we end up right behind the Benz with the regular cops directly in back of us.

Our driver turns on his headlights and the Benz, trying to lose us, makes a sharp turn off the ring road zooming down a half paved road with no street lights.

Then I hear gun shots. Damn, the goons in the black Benz are shooting at us? I'm glad I'm in the back seat. But there were no gun flashes coming from the Benz, so I looked behind us at the regular police. They're the ones shooting at the Benz with us in the middle and me still in the back seat. I'm trying to figure out if I still like the people mentioned in my will.

The Benz finally stops—it's a dead end. The volunteers rush out toward the Benz without a second thought as to whether the occupants of this favorite car of the Russian criminal class are armed.

The regular cops are keeping their distance, standing behind the open doors of their car with their guns ready.

The volunteers yank open the driver's door of the Benz and pull the unarmed driver out. The regular cops see this and that the other passengers are two girls. The regular cops leave the protection of their car, grab the driver and beat the tar out of him. We all go to the stationhouse, where the regular cops beat the driver some more—swift and effective justice.

Disco Duck

I'm enjoying a Moscow nightclub and decide to go out and catch some air. Smoking was legal everywhere in Russia, but the cancer rate wasn't too bad because they still used the old Commie health statistics.

While outside and standing off to the side of the entrance, up rolls a bus that looks like it escaped from a Donald Duck cartoon—wide and foreshortened and gray. The bus turns and backs up to the club's entrance. It has this oversized door in the back of it. The door flies open and out piles, not cartoon characters, but the military with AK-47s. They rush by me into the nightclub slamming to the side anyone in their way. I follow to check it out. They find the guy they're looking for—maybe an enemy of the state or someone who didn't pay enough in bribes—beat the tar out of him and drag him back to the Donald Duck bus.

Off it chugs down the road to Lubyanka.

McDonalds

In the early 1990s, McDonalds opened its first restaurant in Moscow. It immediately became the place to go with Russians dressing up the way Americans used to when dining out at a fancy place.

For me, it was one of the few places that served edible food.

The first time I went, the line stretched around the block. The police had set out these metal barricades, like the cops in New York City use for crowd control, to channel the line into the restaurant.

The barricades allowed for three people to stand abreast, but up and down the line only two people were standing abreast, leaving a kind of passing lane on their left. Strange I thought until a couple of Russian hoods, you can tell them by their size and all black clothing, used the passing lane to cut in front of the line.

Screw this, and I stepped into the passing lane, but not to cut in front, rather to block anymore hoods from doing so. Along came another couple of hoods, they clearly recognized me as an American from my suit, and proceeded to push the Russians standing next to me out of the way, so as to cut around me and resume their travels in the passing lane. They didn't touch me—guess my Brooks Brothers' suit intimidated the hoods.

West Moscow Party

The New Russians—government officials in positions to privatize state assets by pocketing them—build their mansion dachas west of Moscow. Perhaps they are trying to get nearer America's conspicuous consumption culture.

The members of a band with whom I was friendly and often went to watch play were hired for a New Russian event west of Moscow. They invited me and I went.

There was plenty of booze, hot young amateur prostitutes making their way through college and older, rich, corrupt mini-oligarchs. While returning from a trip to the men's room, some mini-oligarch ran into me and started cursing me in Russian for daring to make contact with his augustness. Not about to be intimidated by a commie crook, I responded, "Okay Bolshaya Shyshka (big boss), let's take this outside." The mini-oligarch quickly said, "Oh, I didn't know you were American. My apologies." Which I as quickly accepted.

Good thing I wasn't Russian. I might not have made it home. The New Russians see themselves as the new aristocracy that can get away with anything as long as only Russians are involved. But when it comes to Americans, they fear us more than the Nazis. After all, we won the cold-war.

Hunger

In 1992, my girlfriend and I brought some food to a Russian family with whom she was a friend. The husband and wife were in their 30s, both had PhDs, and they had a young child.

We sat down at a table, and when I looked up, one of the four horsemen of the apocalypse was staring into my eyes—starvation. These two highly educated parents were starving in order to provide their child with enough food. This was happening in the capital of Russia—Moscow, in the 20th not the 13th century.

Simplified Tonal Music Theory

[Draft]

Introduction

Music is an audible sound—it cannot be seen. It works through the ears and body on the brain to cause pleasant emotions, sad or angry emotions.

In Western Europe around the ninth century, people began trying to represent the audible sounds visually. Through the rest of the Middle Ages into the Renaissance, they created a system of symbols and rules to depict and understand what composers were doing to elicit emotions. They were not unlike the alchemists of the time trying to understand the physical world.

The problems faced by medieval alchemists and medieval musical theorists were they not only did not understand the science of what they were trying to represent, but failed to pursue the simplest explanation—the simplest hypothesis. The medieval musical theorists kept trying to preserve their original hypotheses by adding new rules that made musical theory overly complex with convoluted and uncertain qualifications.

This paper is a minor effort to simplify tonal music theory by doing away with the 60 different scales, the different clefs and key signatures by focusing on intervals as the reason that music elicits emotions.

Physics

Tonal music consists of more than one sound occurring at the same time; that is, two or more voices. This creates harmony—the sound of two or more notes occurring simultaneously or where consecutively sounded notes sound as though they were played simultaneously. The consecutively sounded notes harmony is a trick of the brain, similar to watching a movie made up of individual still pictures.

The average adult can hear a range of frequencies (pitches, tone, notes) from a low of 20 sound vibrations in one second (lowest pedal on a pipe organ) to a high of 20,000 per second. Frequencies are measured in “Hertz” (Hz).

Humans can most easily distinguish pitches below 5,000 Hz when they are at a relatively low intensity (amplitude, loudness) such as at a symphony. As a result, the instruments in an orchestra that play tonal music span a pitch range from around 20 Hz to around 5,000 Hz. After all, you want the audience to easily hear what you play; otherwise, why bother.

12 chromatic notes

The approximate 20 Hz to 5,000 Hz pitch range consists of about eight octaves as indicated on a piano. The piano has a range of about 7.5 octaves.

The medieval musicologists designated C as the first note in any octave, but that made the first note in the lowest octave a C with a frequency of 16.35 Hz, which next to no one could hear. When the piano was invented, it started with the first note that was easily heard—an A at 27.50 Hz, but that meant the first key of the piano did not start on a C. Logic would have changed the convention for indicating which note began an octave, since any note can be used. But logic was not a strong point of the Middle Ages.

Each successive or higher pitch from A is 1.0594631 (the 12th root of 2) times the previous frequency. For example,  $1.0594631 \times 27.5 = 29.1352$  Hz to get A#; or  $1.0594631 \times 41.2$  (E) = 43.65 Hz to get F. Each octave consists of 12 chromatic pitches, also referred to as notes, tones or keys.

The notes in an octave were originally represented with seven letters, C to B, but that only accounted for seven frequencies. Later medieval musicologists invented flats (b) and sharps (#) in order to represent the other five notes in a chromatic scale while maintaining their seven letter format. Flats and sharps are called “accidentals” because the medievalists had accidentally ignored them by using only seven letters to designate notes.

The introduction of flats and sharps resulted in a notational rule for determining whether a note of a particular frequency be designated a sharp or flat: write sharps when notes are ascending, but flats when notes are descending, or refer to what is written after the traditional cleft, unless a sharp or flat is borrowed from a different scale. It’s a rule divorced from reality, since the sharp of one letter note usually equals the flat of another letter note regardless of the scales from which the notes come. For example, is it A# or Bb?<sup>1</sup> Both have the same pitch or frequency—they sound the same. But which one is used may depend on whether the score is going up or down. That’s similar to having two buttons in an elevator for the same floor—one button for going up and one for going down to the same floor. The use of flats and sharps for identifying pitch is convoluted and just causes confusion. What do you expect from feudal Europe?

Musical alchemy from the Middle Ages created the following nomenclature for notes—some with the same frequency, others not:

A, A# Bb, B Cb, B# C, C# Db, D, D# Eb, E Fb, E# F, F# Gb, G, G# Ab.

Or without the alchemic redundancy of different notations for the same pitch:

A, A#, B, C, C#, D, D#, E, F, F#, G, G#. The interval between each is traditionally called a half-step (“H-step”), which is the 12th root of 2 Hz.

A more simple nomenclature would be the following that lists the different frequencies by number. The corresponding medieval notations without multiple names for the same note are also listed below:

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12
A, A#, B, C, C#, D, D#, E, F, F#, G, G#.

---

<sup>1</sup> Also adding to the convolution, is it B# or C, Cb or B, E# or F, Fb or E.

Once again, the interval between consecutively numbered notes is still a H-step or the  $12^{\text{th}}$  root of 2 Hz, and each numbered note has a different pitch.

The 8 octaves are ordered from the lowest frequency or fundamental frequency to the highest frequency or highest average frequency in overtones. Traditionally, the notation for octaves has been “0” for notes in the lowest octave set of frequencies to “7” for notes in the highest octave. To avoid confusion with notes being assigned numbers, octaves can be assigned lower case letters a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, with a as the lowest set of note frequencies and h as the highest.

Each of the 8 octaves would have a set of notes labeled 1 to 12. A note with a number X in one octave sounds similar to a note with the same number X in another octave. That is, note 1 in any octave sounds similar to all the other note-1s in all the other octaves. The same is true for the other notes 2 to 12.

The reason for similar sounding notes over different octaves deals with overtones and the set of neurons that the brain uses to hear. Note X in octave b will have a pitch of 2 times the frequency of X in octave a. So going up one octave will increase the frequency of note X by multiplying it times 2 raised to the power of 1. Going up two octaves will increase the pitch of note X by multiplying it times 2 raised to the power of 2. The formula is X in Hz times 2 raised to the power of n, where n is the number of octaves going up. Going down, divide instead of multiply.

Six-staff lines for a graphic representation of sound

The musical alchemists used a staff of 5 lines, but one with 6 lines can be used that would eliminate the need for clefs by always writing the same note on the same line or in the same space no matter the voice. Also, at the beginning of each staff, the voice would be indicated by writing S for soprano, A for alto, T for tenor and B for base. In front of each voice letter, a lower case letter could be place to indicate the octave. Since a staff of 6 lines can carry every note in an octave, it would also eliminate the use of ledger lines.

The unchanging positions of notes would have odd numbers in spaces, even numbers on the lines:

Octave	Voice	Notes
abcdefgh	S, A, T, B	-----12---- 11
		-----10---- 9 -----8---- 7
		-----6---- 5 -----4---- 3
		-----2---- 1

The exact pitch of any note depends on its number (1 to 12) and the octave it is in (a to h). Notes of the same number sound similar throughout all 8 octaves. Since notes 1 to 12 on six-staff lines and spaces comprise an octave, the next note up from 12 will be note 1 in the first space of the next octave up, unless a different octave is designated. And the next note down from note 1 will be note 12 on the line of the next octave down.

Since most western tonal music spans four octaves, a composition will have four voices (S, A, T, B) written over four sets of six-staff lines. The staves for the separate octaves can be stack on top of each other with a highlight indicating where one ends and the other begins—no more ledger lines.

The ancient ghost of scales

The medieval musicologists invented scales to help explain and show what composers were doing.

A scale is a graduated series of seven notes that ascend in pitch from the first. Each octave has a total of 60 scales called major, natural minor, harmonic minor or melodic minor. The total number of scales are 480 (8 octaves times 60 scales), but the seven notes in each and every scale are represented by the notes: A, A# Bb, B Cb, B# C, C# Db, D, D# Eb, E Fb, E# F, F# Gb, G, G# Ab, which are really only 12 different notes when medieval redundancy is eliminated. Since the notes in one octave had a different pitch (frequency) than the notes in another octave, composers were in reality dealing with 96 different notes of which all but 12 sounded similar. These 12 notes, pitches, tones, frequencies were the building blocks of Western music from around 1600 until Stravinsky—leave it to the Russians to upset matters.

Medieval scales are nothing more than an overly complex method of trying to visually explain what composers were doing by ear. The explanations involved whole-steps and half-steps to note the frequency distance, or intervals, between successive notes on a scale in order to determine whether the scale was major, natural minor, harmonic minor, or melodic minor even though composers most likely did not rely on such descriptions.

Major	W	W	H	W	W	W	H
Natural Minor	W	H	W	W	H	W	W
Harmonic Minor	W	H	W	W	H	(W+H)	H
Melodic Minor	W	H	W	W	W	W	H

The major scales create a mood of “brightness” and minor scales one of melancholy. The mood is created by the particular selection and arrangement of notes with the respective intervals between the notes. For example, take the traditional A natural minor scale: A w B h C w D w E h F w G w A. The first four notes give it a melancholy feel. But start at C (C w D w E h F) and that part of the same scale sounds bright. So it is not the scale that determines the mood but which of the 12 basic notes are chosen and by choosing the notes, the composer is also choosing the interval spacing and sequence of intervals. It is the intervals between notes and the sequence of intervals that matter—not the specific scale.

The medieval musical alchemists gave each note in every one of the 60 scales a number (scale degree) and name depending on its position in the scale: 1=tonic, 2=supertonic, 3=mediant,

4=subdominant, 5=dominant, 6=submediant, 7=leading. Each scale degree is ascribed an importance or non-importance. 1 & 7 are most important. 7 moves the melody to 1 which results in “feel good” because tension is resolved, unless like Teddy Roosevelt and Donald Trump you relish a fight. 2 & 4 are passing tones that take your mood elsewhere. 3 establishes quality, which means whether the scale is major (bright) or minor (melancholic). 5 creates tension that for some needs to be resolved by going to 7 and then 1 or straight to 1. 6 is deceptive, like politicians. The problem with this traditional analysis is that the scale degree of the very same note changes in other scales. Further, the mood elicited depends on the intervals between notes, whether horizontal or vertical—not a note’s scale degree in a specific scale because it is always changing. Using a 12-note, 6-line system eliminates this unnecessary complexity involving scale degrees because it eliminates scales. The composer need only concentrate on the moods created by certain intervals.

Scale degrees:

- 1 = most stable
- 2 = passing tone, tendency to move 1 to 3 or 3 to 1
- 3 = somewhat stable that provides a quality of whether Major or minor
- 4 = passing tone, tendency to move 3 to 5 or 5 to 3
- 5 = stable but tension also leads to 1
- 6 = deceptive, listener thinks 5 will go to 1, but goes to 6 instead leaving a feeling of being conned, it is a game changer
- 7 = not stable, moves to 1

Under the medieval musicologists, a natural minor scale is modified with H-steps to make it harmonic by raising the 7th note of the natural minor scale. The melodic minor is created by raising the 6th and 7th notes of the natural minor scale. This is done to create a H-step from the 7th note in the scale to the 1st note in the same scale but an octave higher. The shortness of the H-step interval provides a consistency and direction to the melody. Of course, this can simply be done by inserting one of the 12 chromatic notes that is consecutive to the next note, since it will be a half step interval because they are all half steps when consecutive—no scales or scale degrees needed.

Medievally, the melodic minor scale exists only when notes are ascending. If they descend, then the scale becomes a reverse natural minor. This is done to create a mood of “resolution”; otherwise, there will exist unresolved tension. Using a 12 note chromatic system to mimic the same intervals will create the same mood without the unnecessary rule of what goes up must come down differently. The focus is on which intervals or series of intervals elicit the desired mood—not terminology.

Intervals

An interval is the frequency distance between two notes: frequency “v” of the higher frequency note Y minus the v of the lower frequency note X. The difference is made up of a number of H-steps, or one H-step, depending on how far apart in frequency are notes Y and X.

The musical alchemists not only described an interval in H-steps (two H-steps equaling a whole step) but also assigned each interval a “quality”. The quality descriptions are minor, major, perfect, diminished, and augmented. Such resulted in the following types of interval descriptions:

P1 or d2
m2 or A1
M2 or d3
m3 or A2
M3 or d4
P4 or A3
d5
A4
P5 or d6
m6 or A5
M6 or d7
m7 or A6
M7 or d8
P8 or A7

Determining an interval is complex thanks to the curse of scales. In medieval Europe, first count the number of letter notes starting with the lowest pitch and ending with the highest pitch. Since we’ve already learned our A, B, Cs, counting the number of letters going up is easy—down, not so easy. That gives the “distance” from one note to the other and is represented by a number, which is the number of letter notes that the interval spans.

Next is to determine the quality. Perfect intervals are easy, well maybe. If the number of letters is one, that equals P1 a.k.a. unison; number of letters is four, that equals P4; number of letters is five, that equals P5; and number of letters is eight, equals P8.

Now, the hard part: For determining major or minor, take the low pitch bottom note of the interval, assume it is the first scale degree or tonic of one of the 60 scales. Look up or run through your memory all the scales until you find one or more with that note as a tonic, then check to see if the high end note is also in that scale. If it is, then the interval has a quality the same as that particular scale, which will be either major or minor. But it is not quite that “easy.” You may be able to find that one of the 60 scales has that low end note as a tonic, but it does not have the high end note in the same scale. Do what the alchemist of old always did when their theories couldn’t explain a phenomenon—add a new rule of exception to their convolutions. In this case, look at the closest note in the scale to the high end note and add a sharp or a flat or eliminate a sharp or a flat to make the high end note the same frequency as the one in the scale. Remember, going up gets a sharp, going down gets a flat. When you do this, however, the interval loses any medieval major, minor or perfect quality and takes on the quality of being diminished (decreased) or augment (increased).

There are other ways but still convoluted. To determine minor or major, once again count the number of letter notes. If the number of letter notes is 2 or 3 and the number of H-steps between the two notes are even, then the interval is major. If the number of H-steps is odd, then the interval is minor. If the number of letter notes is 6 or 7 and the number of H-steps are even, then the interval is minor. If the number of H-steps is odd, then the interval is major.

There is also the inverse method for determining an interval's size and quality. Every octave can be divided into two intervals. If one is a major with size S, then the other will be a minor of size  $|9-S|$ . So, if one is P5 (five letter notes), the inverse will be P4 (four letter notes) and vice versa:

$$\begin{aligned} P4 + P5 &= P8 \\ M2 + m7 &= P8 \\ m2 + M7 &= P8 \\ M3 + m6 &= P8 \\ m3 + M6 &= P8 \end{aligned}$$

So when faced with a large interval, to create the inverse interval, take the higher note and put it below the lower note—the same note an octave down. Figure out what the smaller interval is and then take the inverse of that to determine the larger interval. That is, count the letters in the smaller interval to get the size, then determine whether it is major or minor. The size of the larger interval will be 9 minus the size of the smaller interval, and if the smaller is minor, then the larger is major and vice versa.

Intervals are considered the building blocks of tonal music because depending on the interval different emotions are elicited. But these emotions result from the frequencies of the notes used and the number of H-steps between them—not the musical alchemists convoluted methodology involving scales.

Interval	No. H-Steps	Consonance or dissonance	Frequency ratios Y/X
P1 or d2	0	consonant	1:1
m2 or A1	1	dissonant	16:15
M2 or d3	2	dissonant	9:8
m3 or A2	3	consonant	6:5
M3 or d4	4	consonant	5:4
P4 or A3	5	either	4:3
d5	6	dissonant	45:32
A4	6	dissonant
P5 or d6	7	consonant	3:2

m6 or A5	8	consonant	8:5
M6 or d7	9	consonant	5:3
m7 or A6	10	dissonant	9:5
M7 or d8	11	dissonant	15:8
P8 or A7	12	consonant	2:1

If the interval goes beyond 12 H-steps, then subtract 12 from the total number of H-steps, which will give a number of H-steps to be matched with one of the above intervals.

What a chore. With a system of 12 numbered notes on six-staff lines, one glance does the work to determine a specific note, and an ability to count to 12 and subtract takes care of the intervals. The interval between note X and note Y =  $|X-Y|$ , which is the number of half steps and that will tell you whether the notes create a consonant or dissonant sound. For example, if you want to know the number of H-steps from note 3 to note 10, then  $|3-10|$  equals 7, which produces a consonant sound when the notes are played simultaneously or consecutively.

With 12 numbered notes on six-staff lines, there's no counting our A, B, Cs and no major, minor, perfect, diminished, or augmented needed. An added benefit is that Russians, Asians and Arabs use the same numbers and mathematics as Europeans, so they don't have to worry about knowing their A, B, Cs.

Guesstimating what scale is where in a composition.

Medieval musicologists' reliance on scales to understand what composers were doing created another problem. Composers were not about to limit their compositions to one scale of seven notes, regardless of the number of similar notes that the different octaves provided. Composers used any note or notes from any scale they wanted to create the effect they desired. The alchemists, therefore, needed a way for preserving their analyses based on scales in determining which of the 60 scales a piece was in at a particular point. They called this invented convolution modulation.

The problem with modulation is that a composer might be throwing in a note or notes not on a predetermined scale just for an effect. There are even difficulties in discovering what exactly is the predetermined scale. Composers don't always write on which scale a composition starts. If you do not know the starting scale, then how can you find out the alleged modulations using the medieval musicologists' system of analyses? If you do know the starting scale, you still may not be able to determine the modulations. So the alchemists came up with guessing games.

To determine the beginning scale of a piece look at the first note of the soprano—skip the note if it is just marking time, and start with the second note. Then look at the last note of a movement. Also check the first note of the base and the last note of the base for a movement. Scan the piece to see whether there are a lot of such notes used. The alchemists do not define “a lot.” If these notes are all the same or nearly all the same, then the alchemists claim that is the tonic of the scale with which the composer started—maybe. So you have a guesstimate tonic, now you need to compare the other notes in the piece to the major and minor scales that have that alleged tonic to conclude whether the scale is major or minor.

As long as the composer keeps using notes from that alleged scale, there is no modulation. But what if he doesn't? Does that mean he changed scales or just threw in a note from a different scale for impact? According to traditional theory, it depends on whether the following notes belong to a different scale and whether they persist. The alchemists give no definition for "persist," and with only 12 distinct notes spread over 60 scales, the piece might be in a different scale but using the same notes as the previous scale. The alchemists do assert, however, that a change in scales may be; that is, may be, foretold by the appearance of the leading tone (7) from the new scale. But how do you know a note is the leading tone of the new scale, if you don't know the new scale. Perhaps a "philosopher's stone" would help.

Another alleged way is determining where a cadence occurs in the scale that the piece is believed to be in at a particular point. The cadence would be the melody moving from the guesstimate scale note with degree 5 in the base to 1, or 5 to 6 to 1 in the base, and at the same time moving in the soprano from note scale degree 7 to 1. The motion usually crosses into the next measure where the cadence ends on the down beat. A change in scale may also be indicated by the sudden appearance of accidentals not in the previous scale. Additionally, when only one voice is being played, that may indicate a change in scale.

Once again, none of these calculations are necessary using a 12-note, six-staff line system because in it—scales don't exist.

Then there's transposition. This means moving every note in a sequence of notes up or down  $n$  intervals to create a subsequent sequence of notes that maintains the ascending or descending motion of the notes being transposed. The medieval method, however, requires knowing which scale the notes come from. Okay, let's assume the philosopher stone worked, and we know the scale of the first set of notes and the scale of the second set that we want. For each note in the first set, write the scale degree, go to the second scale and copy down the note with the same scale degree.

In a 12-note, six-staff line system, take the number of H-steps ( $n$ ) that you want to move a sequence of notes up or down. The notes in the second sequence will be  $X + n$ , and  $n$  will be a plus for up and a minus for down in frequency. For example, to move 3 H-steps down and the second note in the first sequence is 6, then the second note in the transposed sequence will be  $6 + (-3) = 3$ . No scale guessing needed.

Musical Motion

Up, down, sideways, together and alone

Horizontal

Notes and rests written horizontally across a set of staff lines comprise a melody, regardless of the voice. It is a directional movement of sounds through time.

A melody is distinguished horizontally by notes of various frequencies and duration, the notes' interval relationships, rests of various duration, and the relationship of notes and rests to the beats. The smaller the interval between consecutive notes in a melody, the smoother the melody.

Melody is a voice's motion and stability as determined by the horizontal intervals between consecutive notes and the phrase form.

Vertical

Notes written vertically on the same set of staff lines or on the staff lines of the four different voices (S.A.T.B.) comprise a harmony that moves and usually changes as the melody progresses horizontally through time.

Harmony is a combination of vertical note intervals called chords. Now sometimes the notes in a chord do not occur at precisely the same point in time, but because of the way humans hear, it sounds as though they occurred at the same point in time.

Horizontal + Vertical

Since tonal music generally has four voices each with its own melody moving through time, the pattern of movement for each melody can be vertically compared to that in a different voice:

Similar—both voices move in the same direction over time (ascending, descending, or level) but the intervals between horizontally consecutive notes differ in different voices.

Parallel—both voices move in the same direction over time but the intervals between horizontally consecutive notes in different voices are the same.

Contrary or counterpoint—both voices move in opposite directions. Counterpoint is the comparison of two voices at the same point in time by determining the vertical intervals between the notes in the different voices. There are 5 types and are the major foundations of music since the 1600s.

Helter Skelter—Mozart.

Chords

A chord is three or more notes played together (vertical) or one after another (horizontal). A horizontal chord can span beats. This occurs when notes in the base voice are the same over a beat span.

The frequencies of the adjacent notes in a chord (vertically or horizontally) are separated by 3 or 4 H-steps.

A chord with three notes of different frequencies is a Triad. The lowest frequency of the three notes in an octave is the root or base, the second is 3 or 4 H-steps higher, and the third is 3 or 4 H-steps higher in frequency than the second note.

Since a triad has three notes, it has two intervals that can be represented by a fraction. The denominator is the number of H-steps from the root note to the second note and the numerator is the number of H-steps from the second note to the third.

Numerator      = 3H/3H or diminished; 4H/3H or minor; 3H/4H or major; 4H/4H or augmented
Denominator

Under the medievalists' scheme, chords were created from the notes of a particular scale. For triad chords, that meant using three notes from one of the 60 scales in an octave. To determine the chord used by a composer first required determining which scale he was using for a particular phrase. We've seen how uncertain that can be, but assume you intuit the scale. Next, list all the notes in the chord that are from that scale and determine what order of notes yields intervals of only 3 or 4 H-steps, or simply re-arrange the letter notes in positions that are closest to each other. The first note will be the root.

Once the root is discovered, determine the scale degree of that note in the particular scale. That gives the Roman numeral for the chord, but is it an upper case or lower case Roman numeral? That depends on whether the chord is major or augmented, which takes an upper case Roman numeral, or minor or diminished, which takes a lower case Roman numeral. It is major or augmented when the number of H-steps from the root to the second note = 4 H-steps; that is, the denominator = 4 H-steps. It is minor or diminished when the number of H-steps from the root to the second note = 3 H-steps, or the denominator is 3 H-steps. But we're not finished yet. If the denominator is 4 H-steps and numerator is 4 H-steps, the upper case Roman numeral gets a "+" sign. If the denominator is 3 H-steps and numerator 3 H-steps, the lower case Roman numeral gets a "o" sign. So to determine a chord requires not only figuring out the scale; knowing you're A, B, Cs; finding the root scale degree in upper or lower case Roman numeral, assuming you have the right scale and can count H-steps; and ascertaining whether diminished or augmented or nothing, once again assuming you can count H-steps.

In a 12-note, six-staff line system, scale guessing is not required and counting H-steps are easy because moving from a line to a space or space to a line is always one H-step. To determine the root note, list all the notes in the chord and determine what order of notes yields intervals of only 3 or 4 H-steps, or simply re-arrange the number notes in positions that are numerically closest to each other. Use simple subtraction to determine the number of H-steps between the root and second and the second and third notes. For example the chord with notes 2, 6, 9, denominator 4 H-steps and numerator 3 H-steps, so it's a major chord. To label the chords simply write the root note number (1 to 12) with d (diminished) or m (minor) or M (major) or A (augmented). Or replace the traditional D, m, M and A notations with different notations. Whatever, no Roman numerals needed; therefore, no scales or scale degrees required. Further, under this system, since the notes in a chord are not limited to the notes in the particular scale of that part of a composition, knowing the scale in order to write chords is irrelevant.

Composition techniques

Species

Counterpoint, which is contrary motion, is allegedly pleasing to the ear.

The traditional and different species of counterpoint often switch from one to the other in a composition regardless of beat or voice. Which makes one wonder, why even bother with five different species? Anyway, here they are:

First Species Counterpoint:

In First Species, there is only one note above the other; therefore, both voices move at the same rate, or number of notes per unit of time. Any new section or new theme starts with a P5 or P8 vertical interval and ends with a P5 or P8 vertical interval. There are no consecutive P5 vertical intervals and no consecutive P8 vertical intervals. All the vertical intervals must be consonant—no dissonant vertical intervals between the notes in the two voices; that is, no intervals of P1, 2, P4, 7.

Horizontal or melody motion should have a H-step or whole step interval between consecutive notes. Consecutive notes have to be of different frequencies. There cannot be a repetition of consecutive notes horizontally. This is most pleasing to the ears of overly sensitive people—a majority of millennials in this day and age. The last note must be horizontally moved into by a half or whole step.

In 12-note, six-staff lines, the rules are the same only it is easier to determine the intervals. The intervals are described by the number of H-steps between numbered notes on the six-lined staves, |X-Y|. Stepwise is an interval of one H-step or two H-steps.

To write first species:

1. Start with the melody of the lowest frequency voice.
2. Write in arrows among horizontal notes indicating ascending or descending on lowest frequency voice.
3. In higher frequency voice, move horizontally trying to write successive notes with stepwise intervals moving in opposite direction of the notes in lower voice.
4. Three notes before end, write in possible endings with a vertical interval of 7 or 12 H-steps.
5. Use higher voice notes so that the last note creating the 7 or 12 H-step vertical interval is reached by an H-step or whole step horizontal interval.

Second Species Counterpoint:

One note in one voice corresponds to two notes in another voice—can be any two voices.

The vertical intervals can be dissonant but only on the second of the two notes; the second note must be on a weak beat depicting motion in the same direction as its neighboring notes; that is, for the first set of two notes, the second note and the next first note of the second set of two notes taken together indicate ascending or descending; and the note on the dissonant interval is between two notes with consonant vertical intervals.

A vertical interval of 7 or 12 H-steps can only be approached by contrary motion unless it arises on a weak beat.

Most horizontal moves should be stepwise but a small number of leaps are okay providing each leap is surrounded by stepwise motion.

Third Species Counterpoint:

One note in one voice corresponds to four notes in another voice. The second note of the four may have a dissonant vertical interval or the second and fourth notes may have dissonant vertical intervals. Dissonant vertical intervals are approached and left by stepwise motion, but a leap from a dissonant to a consonant vertical interval is allowed. Consonant intervals may leap between each other.

Fourth Species Counterpoint:

Fourth species like second species has two notes for every given note in the cantus firmus—base line. In fourth species there are suspensions. A consonant vertical interval in measure  $n$  with its note X is tied to the same note X in measure  $n + 1$ . X in  $n + 1$  is on the downbeat and its vertical interval can be consonant or dissonant. Note X in  $n + 1$  is followed by note Y, which is on a weak beat. If Y is a vertical dissonant interval, then it must be one horizontal stepwise interval descending from note X. If Y is on a consonant vertical interval, then can be stepwise down or up from X in  $n + 1$ .

Fifth Species Counterpoint:

Combination of one, two, three or four species.

Ritonello form

Consists of three parts:

1. Vordorstz is the opening segment usually three measures but can be longer.
2. Fortspinning follows with the prior sequence of notes transposed up or down  $n$  H-steps.
3. Epilogue ends with a new melody that ends with a soprano 7-1 cadence accompanied by a base 5-1 cadence. Regardless of the scale, the distance from 7-1 is one H-step and the distance from 5-1 is five H-steps. In a 12-note, six-lined staff system, the soprano cadence is two notes separated by one H-step, and the base cadence has two notes separated by 5 H-steps.

Composers can start with any of the three parts and throw in a scale degree 6 after the 7 or 5 as a deception. The deception, however, is still created by the intervals involved, not the scale degrees.

Phrase form

A musical phrase is the smallest unit of music with a defined beginning and ending.

1. “Parallel Period” is a musical phrase that lasts for 8 bars and starts with the “Antecedent” for 4 bars and ends with the “Consequent” for 4 bars. Antecedent and Consequent have the same set of notes for the beginning  $n$  bars, or transposed notes for the beginning  $n$  bars in the Consequent. After bar  $n$ , the Consequent notes differ from the Antecedent. The Consequent traditionally ends with a scale degree cadence of 5-1 (five H-steps between the last two notes) or 7-1 (one H-step between the last two notes in a 12-note, six-lined staff system).

Parallel Period develops the melody or is a melody that sticks in your head.

2. “Sentence” also lasts for 8 bars. Starts with a basic idea for 2 bars, then repeats the basic idea for 2 bars, but the notes may be transposed or changed. Next is the Continuation for 4 bars with familiar, contrasted, new material or a combination of these that traditionally end in a scale degree cadence of 5-1 or 7-1; that is, five H-steps or one H-step between the last two notes in a 12-note, six-lined staff system.

Sentence is not a melody but can be used as a transition among melodies.

To determine whether a Parallel Period or Sentence phrase is used, listen for when the music changes. Then re-listen and count the seconds between the changes by counting one-one thousand, two-one thousand, etc.—just like boys playing football without enough players. Each count is about a second long. The timing for Parallel Period before and after a change will be equal. If not, then it is probably a Sentence structure.

To analyze from a written score in the medieval scale system:

1. Guesstimate the scale.
2. Write scale-degree numbers over each note—look for 5-1 or 7-1 cadences.
3. Count the number of measures and write the measure number for each.
4. Mark the sections where the notes are repeated, whether exactly or transposed.
5. Determine which of the two phrase forms most closely approximates the unit of music.

To analyze from a written score in a 12-note, six-staff line system:

1. Look for five H-steps or one H-step between notes.
2. Count the number of measures and write the measure number for each.
3. Mark the sections where the notes are repeated, whether exactly or transposed.
4. Determine which of the two Phrase forms most closely approximates the unit of music.

Four part or four voice composing

Given a base line or cantus firmus, the objective is to create a sequence of triad chords according to certain rules:

1. Each of four voices has a note, so the root note is repeated. Traditionally, soprano and alto were spread over the top two octaves and tenor and base over the lower two octaves without the voices crossing. The same applies in a 12-note, six-staff line system.
2. The musical alchemists required determining the scale of the first created vertical chord before following a list of rules for creating successive chords. In a 12-note, six-staff system the scale determination is not necessary, so just pick up following the rest of the rules.
3. The next vertical chord is dependent on the next cantus firmus note. If any of the possible triad combinations would repeat a note in the n-1 chord or prior chord, then repeat that identical note in the nth chord. Maximum number of common notes is two.
4. If a note in the n-1 chord is H-step below a possible note in the nth chord, then put that note in the nth chord.
6. Try to have every note in nth chord reached by stepwise motion from a prior note in the n-1 chord.
7. Avoid consecutive chords where both have a vertical interval of P5 (7 H-steps between notes) or both have an interval of P8 (12 H-steps between notes).

Rhythm

The horizontal progression of notes gives music a time aspect ( $t$ ). The sound represented by a note lasts for a period of time and the silence or rest lasts for a period of time. Notes are played right after each other unless a rest is indicated.

The time ( $t$ ) for a note or rest is determined by the total amount of time  $T$  for a composition.  $T$  is usually divided into equal parts of time called measures. Measures are in turn usually divided into equal time sections called “beats.” Each beat consists of one or more notes or rests. So what is  $t$  for each note and rest—it depends.

The musical alchemists were smart enough to use proportions rather than absolutes because some compositions were fast, some slow and most had parts that seemed fast and slow. The beginning of each composition has a fraction:  $X/Y$ .  $X$  = the number of beats in a measure: 2, 3, 4, 6, 9, 12.  $Y$  = the type of note or rest used to measure one beat duration and can equal whole, half, quarter, eighth, sixteenth, 32nd, or 64th. So if  $Y = 4$ , that means one quarter note or rest lasts one beat, or  $B$  = the time for one beat as determined from the metronome markings on the score. Where  $Y = 4$  and there are two eighth notes that means each eighth note spans  $\frac{1}{2} B$ . When playing a quarter note as compared to two eighth notes, the eighth notes make the piece sound faster even though the total time  $B$  to play them is the same.

With the duration of a composition as  $T$ , and the total number of measures as  $M$ , the duration of each measure is  $m = T/M$  assuming equal time for all measures. Each measure, unless indicated otherwise, contains  $X$  beats, each beat therefore lasts  $B = m/X$ . The amount of time that anyone note or rest lasts is dependent on  $Y$  and the proportional relationship of notes and rests to  $Y$ . For example, a measure that lasts 4 seconds with four beats per measure, each beat lasts one second. If  $Y$  = a quarter note, then any quarter note will last one second, any eighth note will last 0.5 seconds and a half note will last two seconds.

A beat can be characterized as strong, semi-strong or weak and the order may vary from measure to measure.

Rhythm does not involve scales or clefs or key signatures, so it is the same in a 12-note, six-lined staff system.

Reading

Using 12 numerically numbered notes on six-staff lines for every voice will simplify reading a score for a player. Since the note on a particular line or in a particular space has the same number no matter what the octave, it is unnecessary to engage in Georges Dandelot's recommendations.

According to Dandelot, to read with ease and speed requires knowing the place of each note on a staff. This requires "fixing in the soul of the reader some points of repose/reference situated at different places on the staff." Reliance on the "soul," assuming it exists, is the usual medieval convention of giving credit to that which cannot be proved.

Also according to Dandelot, once a reference point is fixed in the "spirit," the reader then must learn the neighboring notes and the succession of notes up or down. Take the spirit of C, depending on the cleft, it is in a different staff location and its neighbors may be natural, sharps or flats depending on the scale and whether C is natural, sharp or flat. None of that is needed in a 12-note, six-staff lined system.

Conclusion

The medieval musical alchemists used clefs to tell the pitch of a note on a staff. The note was given a letter plus nothing for natural or a sharp to indicate one H-step higher or flat to indicate one H-step lower. They used the key signature after the cleft to tell which of two scales the composer started with but gave no explicit note of the actual scales used later on or at the end of the piece. To determine which of the two beginning scales were used required an examination of the intervals because major and minor scales have a different series of intervals between consecutive notes.

Using a chromatic arrangement of the basic 12 notes and a register of six lines where the same note is on the same line or in the same space all of the time eliminates the need for scales, accidentals, clefts and the arrangement of sharps or flats following a cleft; that is, key signatures. It also eliminates figuring when a composer switched to a different scale in the composition because there are no longer scales.

SSS Hearing Dec. 4, 2018, 1pm, Court 5A

(Italics are DOJ lawyer quotes)

Introduction

Good afternoon Your Honor.

I'm Roy Den Hollander, one of the attorneys for the Plaintiff, Elizabeth Kyle-Labelle. I was admitted for this case pro hac vice.

As Your Honor may know, our client is now a 21-year-old woman. Yet the DOJ lawyer who wrote this Reply [hold up and shake it] contemptuously denigrated her rights because she is a woman. He wrote:

“In Rostker, the plaintiffs were men who faced civil and criminal penalties if they did not register for the Selective Service. In contrast here, Plaintiff is a female who is not required to register for the draft, nor is she prevented from pursuing military service (including in a combat role) or penalized for not registering.” (DOJ. Reply at 7, Ripeness Hardship, D.E. No. 82).

That is nothing but an archaic-stereotypical effort by a supercilious lawyer to cheapen my clients' rights just because she is a woman. Insinuating that because she is a woman, the injury to her rights—that Your Honor found existed (Opinion at 5 n.5, 9, 13, D.E. No. 72)—is not as important as that faced by the male plaintiffs in Rostker or the two male plaintiffs in the Nat'l Coal. for Men v. Selective Serv. Sys., 4:16-cv-03362 (S.D. Tex. 2016). This haughty lawyer cannot even refer to my client as a woman. His Reply only refers to her as “female.”

The author of this Reply obviously doesn't understand that “a victim of discrimination [even a woman] suffers a dehumanizing injury as real as, and often of far more severe and lasting harm than, a blow to the jaw.” Hassan v. City of New York, 804 F.3d 277, 290 (3rd Cir. 2015) (quoting Mardell v. Harleysville Life Ins. Co., 65 F.3d 1072, 1074 (3rd Cir.1995)).

How more obvious can it be that the Federal Government—especially these days—is still infested with primitive notions about the value of women in this society. That alone is enough to throw this motion into the gutter where comments like that belong.

Request conversion to Summary Judgment

If not the gutter, then we request that Your Honor convert the Rule 12(b)(6) part of DOJ's motion to one for Summary Judgement.

In Ford Motor Co. v. Summit Motor Prods., Inc., 930 F.2d 277, 284 (3rd Cir. 1991), certiorari denied 502 U.S. 939, the Third Cir held that either the pleader or the moving party or both may cause the conversion provision of Rule 12(d) to operate by submitting matter that is outside the challenged pleading. (Automobile manufacturer brought action alleging copyright and trademark infringement against distributor.)

DOJ introduced in its Exhibit 3 (D.E. No. 80-4) on this motion 130 pages of outside evidence consisting of Government recommendations to the Commission. That evidence comprises additional factual allegations that the SAC does not make but on which the DOJ relies for support to establish its defense of deference.

Furthermore, just 5 days before this hearing, DOJ submitted another exhibit of outside evidence in an effort to bolster its defense. The document was not referenced in the SAC and includes statements by the Commission's chairman—a lobbyist. (D.E. No. 87) (Final Rprt not Interim Rprt will address draft registration at 4 and Interim Rprt will not “indicate Commission's leanings” at 5).

Both exhibits are more appropriate for a summary judgment motion. (DOJ Br. at 8 & 14 (D.E. No. 80-1).

The materials submitted do not have to be affidavits, they can be any written or oral evidence introduced in support of or in opposition to the motion challenging the pleading that provides some substantiation for and does not merely reiterate what is said in the pleadings. Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1366 (3d ed.).

[Those 130 pages of additional factual allegations also were not part of our Motion to Continue (D.E. No. 58 & 65); Opposition to DOJ motion on standing (D.E. No. 70) or our Opposition to this DOJ motion on ripeness and 12(b)(6) (D.E. No. 81).]

Further, Plaintiff has introduced an affidavit in opposition to the Rule 12(b)(6) motion that is not part of the SAC. (Ex. E, 6/4/2018, D.E. No. 81-6).

In Hanna v. U. S. Veterans' Admin. Hosp., 514 F.2d 1092, 1094 (3d Cir. 1975), Plaintiff's attorney filed a memorandum of law in opposition to defendant's 12(b)(6) motion to which was attached excerpts of testimony pertinent to the case's issues. The Third Cir held this required conversion to a summary judgment motion. (Plaintiff sued the veterans' administration hospital for alleged medical malpractice).

[This Court has complete discretion to determine whether or not to accept any material beyond the pleadings that is offered in conjunction with a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1366 (3d ed.).

[The district court considered material outside the pleadings; therefore, summary judgment was appropriate. Messer v. Virgin Islands Urban Renewal Bd., 623 F.2d 303, 307 (3d Cir. 1980) (plaintiff not entitled to relocation assistance because move prior to government acquiring title).]

The issue in this case

The specific circumstances presented in this case (DOJ Reply at 4, D.E. No. 82) are not whether the Commission can formulate suggestions for the Congress and the Executive branches of government, but whether the MSSA statute as it exists now and the SSS's enforcement of it violate our client's Equal Protection and Substantive Due Process rights.

As Your Honor previously summarized the issue:

“Plaintiff Elizabeth Kyle-LaBell wants to register for the military draft. She believes it is her right and duty as a United States citizen to do so. But because she is a woman, she is prohibited from registering. She brings this putative class action to challenge the constitutionality of the draft's male-only requirement.” (Opinion at 1, Standing, D.E. No. 72).

The Federal agency of the SSS over the passed 3.5 years has enforced the gender-discrimination of the MSSA against the Plaintiff five times by barring her from registering. The most recent was October 2, 2018. [Copy to Court and DOJ] (Opp Mtn Dsmss 4, Kyle-LaBell Aff., D.E. No. 81-6). The SSS is the defendant—NOT the Commission or Congress or President Trump.

This case, here and now, allows this Court to determine whether registration with the SSS will comport “with our Nation's touchstone values of fair and equitable treatment, and equality of opportunity,” (DOJ Ex. 2, Pentagon Report at 19, D.E. No. 80-3); whether after nearly 250 years, the Federal Government will finally be required to place women and men on an equal footing.

Without some definitive, action one way or another, by this Court or the court in the Southern District of Texas, the fortune teller arguments by the DOJ concerning the Commission allow Congress and the President to continue their policy that women do not “count as citizens in our American democracy equal in stature to men.” U.S. v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 545 (1996).

[Powerful Republicans oppose allowing women into combat and the logical result that women would also have to register for the draft. If they continue to have their way, the last vestige of federal de jure discrimination against millions of young women will live for who knows how long.]

Can this Court decided the merits.

Justiciability means an Art III court can decide the merits of a case.

Non-justiciability means an Art III court cannot decide the merits of a case.

The Third Circuit in Dillard v. Brown, 652 F.2d 316, 323-24 (3d Cir. 1981), held that “[i]f the military justification outweighs the infringement of the plaintiff’s individual freedom, we may hold for the military on the merits, but we will NOT find the claim to be non-justiciable and therefore not cognizable by a court.”

The Supreme Court in Nixon v. U.S., 506 U.S. 224, 226 (1993), stated “[B]efore we reach the merits . . . we must decide whether it is ‘justiciable,’ that is, whether it is a claim that may be resolved by the courts.”

So before deciding Defendants’ Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) failure to state a claim, which “is a disposition on the merits,” Johnsrud v. Carter, 620 F.2d 29, 33 (3d Cir. 1980), the issue of justiciability needs to be resolved—can this action be decided by the Court.

DOJ lied when the author of its Reply wrote, at no point in this litigation have Defendants ever asserted that Plaintiff’s claims are non-justiciable. (DOJ Reply at 1, D.E. No. 82). Defendants do not contend that this case is not “justiciable.” (DOJ Reply at 4).

Right from DOJ’s first motion on 10/2/2015 (D.E. No. 19, Ripeness, Standing), they’ve been challenging justiciability by arguing either the case is not ripe or Plaintiff does not have standing.

The 3d Circuit has held that:

The case-or-controversy limitation is enforced “through the several justiciability doctrines that cluster about Article III,” including “standing, and ripeness, mootness, the political-question doctrine, and the prohibition on advisory opinions.” Plains All Am. Pipeline L.P. v. Cook, 866 F.3d 534, 539 (3d Cir. 2017); Toll Bros., Inc. v. Twp. of Readington, 555 F.3d 131, 137 (3d Cir. 2009) (internal quotation marks omitted).

The Supreme Court has held that:

“Ripeness is a justiciability doctrine designed to prevent the courts, through avoidance of premature adjudication, from entangling themselves in abstract disagreements over administrative policies, and also to protect the agencies from judicial interference until an administrative decision has been formalized and its effects felt in a concrete way by the challenging parties.” Nat’l Park Hospitality Ass’n v. U.S. Dep’t of Interior, 538 U.S. 803, 807–08 (2003).

The author of the DOJ Reply knew his ripeness argument was an argument for non-justiciability because he quotes the very last part of that sentence from Nat'l Park Hospitality Ass'n in the DOJ Reply at 2: “effects felt in a concrete way by the challenging parties.” So the author of the Reply made an intentional falsehood—that’s a lie, an intentional deception.

How can he be allowed to get away with that?

Further, throughout its Ripeness argument, DOJ relies on deference to the military, Congress and the President to assert this case is not ripe. (DOJ Reply at 2-8, D.E. No. 82). DOJ therefore admits that Deference is a justiciable issue.

The DOJ has opposed this action four (4) times on the ground of ripeness (DOJ Brief at 17, D.E. 19-1; DOJ Brief at 18, D.E. 33-1; DOJ Opp Mtn Continue at 8, D.E. 61; DOJ Brief at 12, D.E. 80-1).

So what is this DOJ lawyer saying now—Never Mind!

If the Reply author’s statement of not challenging on non-justiciable grounds is to be believed, the DOJ wasted this Court’s time by challenging Plaintiff’s standing and is again wasting everyone’s time by challenging whether this case is ripe. Or, their statement can be construed as an admission that the case is ripe.

If this Court decides it is powerless to prevent the military from engaging in invidious discrimination on the basis of gender, then such a ruling would end up applying to all protected characteristics, such as race and transgenderism.

The future is uncertain.

The crux of DOJ’s argument is that there are a series of preliminary steps that the Commission, Congress and the President have to go through before any law is enacted—if one is enacted. During that time, on which there is no deadline, this Court must sit idly by even though none of those steps carry any legal impact except for possibly an unknown law enacted at some unknown time in the future.

There are many twists and turns in the proceedings of a commission, Congress and the Presidency and even the fortune teller that the Rolling Stones sang about in 1966 cannot foresee.

Here’s a sampling of the unforeseeable:

(1) Originally the Commission was required to make its suggestions by November 5, 2019—now the date is March 19, 2020. See Pub. L. No. 114-328 § 555(e)(1); Joint Status Report 8/15/17, D.E. No. 68 (Conf Comm had Pentagon to provide by 7/1/2017).

Will the Commission’s suggestions be put off longer?

(2) What will Congress do with the Commission's suggestions, and how long will that take?

Let's not forget that the recommendations from Government commissions have an uncanny ability of landing on the trash heap of history.

The Kerner Commission investigated the 1967 race riots and provided recommendations to avoid such in the future. So what did President Lyndon Johnson do—he ignored its report and rejected its recommendations.

In 2002 the 9/11 Commission was set up to provide recommendations designed to guard against future attacks. What did President Bush "43" do—he ignored many of the recommendations to the point that the commissioners actually toured the country to draw attention to their recommendations. The co-chairs even published a book in which they said that the commission had been "set up to fail."

Now that is not to say such will happen with the Commission here—but we don't know and neither does the DOJ.

[DOJ takes issue that the Commission here, as with the Kerner and 9/11 Commissions, may simply be a public relations gimmick to quell public concern and give Congressional politicians a place to hide.

[DOJ argues that such "runs counter to the well-established precedent that government officials are assumed to execute their duties in good faith. Marcavage v. Nat'l Park Serv., 666 F.3d 856, 861 (3d Cir. 2012)." (DOJ Reply at 6, D.E. No. 82).

[Tell that to Chief Judge Merrick Garland of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia or to Justice Bret Kavanaugh.]

(3) What will President Trump, assuming by then he is still President, do with any legislation from Congress?

Will he sign it or veto it?

(4) If Pres. Trump vetoes Congressional legislation, will Congress override it and how long will that take?

(5) Before the Commission presents its unknown suggestions or before Congress passes any legislation, will President Trump with the stroke of the pen undo President Obama's policy of opening all combat positions to women?

No one knows the answer to these questions—not even the fortune teller the Rolling Stones sang about in 1966.

Yet the DOJ relies on the vagaries of political fortune to erase Plaintiff’s civil rights if the DOJ can just delay a decision by this Court long enough—when Plaintiff turns 26, this case is moot.

[Let’s not forget that Pres. Trump in a tweet banned transgender persons from the military, and his administration is currently trying to “roll back recognition and protections of transgender people under federal civil rights law.” Erica L. Green, Katie Benner and Robert Pear, Transgender’ Could Be Defined Out of Existence Under Trump Administration, NYTs, October 21, 2018.

[Current military policy “specifically bans transgender individuals from serving in the military in a manner consistent with their gender identity. (Mattis Memorandum). It excludes anyone who requires or has undergone gender transition, and requires proof that a person has been stable in their birth sex for the last thirty-six months. In sum, it disadvantages transgender service members “in the same fundamental way [as Trump’s initial ban].” Stockman v. Trump, 2018 WL 4474768 * 6 (Sept. 18, 2018)]

[DOJ asserts that a revoking of Obama’s allowing women in combat is absurd.

[Plaintiff’s claim that the government’s strategy is to delay litigation in the hopes that the current administration will reverse its position on the integration of females into combat units, see Pl.’s Opp. at 2, is entirely meritless and is contradicted by declarations filed by the Department of Defense in SWAN, which make clear that the combat integration process is proceeding. See No. 12-cv-6005 EMC (N.D. Cal.), ECF No. 99-1, Declaration of Anthony M. Kurta ¶ 5; ECF No. 113 at 11-16. (Reply 7 n.3).]

~~[But not so absurd as to be raised in another case involving the same DOJ attorneys as here and the military but on a different issue of gender discrimination—SWAN v. Secretary of Defense, 3:12-cv-06005, N.D. Cal.]~~

~~In successfully opposing DOJ’s motion for dismissal on standing and failure to state a claim, SWAN 12-cv-06005, 09/27/18, D.E. No. 133 & 140, Order at D.E. No. 140, SWAN argued intentional discrimination by the military in integrating women into combat positions. SWAN relied, in part, on a recent action by Sec. Defense Mattis and statements by President Trump, Mattis and Chief of Staff Kelly opposing women in combat. Ct did not consider because submitted too late.~~

[Sept. 2018, Mattis “instituted a review by ‘the Chief of Staff of the Army [and] Commandant of the Marine Corps’ that will determine whether allowing women into combat positions ‘make[s] sense.’” (SWAN L.R. 7-3(d) Ex. B at 21, VMI Mattis Q & A, 3:12-cv-06005, 09/26/18, D.E. No. 132).

[9/26/17, “Secretary Mattis’s statement that the ‘jury is out’ on whether it is ‘a strength or a weakness to have women’ in combat positions, in part because only a ‘few stalwart young ladies’ have so far entered combat positions. See Ex. A (9/25/17 CNN article entitled Mattis: ‘The Jury Is Out’ on Whether Women Will Be Successful in Combat Roles).” (SWAN L.R. 7-3(d) filing at 1, 3:12-cv-06005, 09/26/18, D.E. No. 132).

[Secretary Mattis also stated that opening up combat positions to women was a policy that he had ‘inherited’ and that had resulted from ‘some people’s perspective of what kind of society we want.’ Secretary Mattis also explained that infantry soldiers are ‘necessarily macho,’ while signaling that women are the weaker and more vulnerable sex:

[‘In the event of trouble, you’re sleeping at night in your family home and you’re the dad, mom, whatever. And you hear glass break downstairs, who grabs a baseball bat and gets between the kids’ door and whoever broke in and who reaches for the phone to call 9-1-1? In other words, it goes to the almost primitive needs of a society to look out for its most vulnerable.’”

(SWAN L.R. 7-3(d) filing at 1, 2, 3:12-cv-06005, 09/26/18, D.E. No. 132).]

The author of the DOJ Reply makes a false statement in arguing for more delay by way of a stay prior to judgment:

Indeed, the SWAN litigation to which Plaintiff refers is instructive because the district court there stayed a challenge to the military’s exclusion of women from certain combat positions for more than three years pending the political branches’ review of the issue and implementation of the integration of women into combat roles. See No. 12-cv-6005 EMC (N.D. Cal.), ECF No. 37. (Reply 8, D.E. No. 82)

The stay was for discovery—not for deference to the political branches.

“On January 21, 2014, Defendant filed a motion for protective order seeking a stay of all discovery pending a decision on Defendant’s motion to dismiss. . . . The Court’s May 5, 2014 Order staying the litigation suspended the parties’ discovery obligations (other than obligations to preserve relevant information, including information responsive to pending discovery requests) . . . . Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss the Third Amended Complaint is fully briefed and pending before the Court. Defendant believes its motion will resolve the present litigation in its entirety and thus the case should remain stayed until the Court resolves that motion. (SWAN Jt Case Mngmnt Statmt at 4-6, 3:12-cv-06005, 09/20/18, D.E. No. 130).]

The issue of deference or justiciability comes down to what is more constitutionally important: the rights of young women here and now or crystal ball predictions as to what self-interested politicians may or may not do?

As the Supreme Court reasoned in Orr v. Orr, justiciability still exists even though “we have no way of knowing how the [legislature] will in fact respond,” but such is no reason “to hold that underinclusive statutes can never be challenged because any plaintiff’s success can theoretically be thwarted” by a legislature’s subsequent action or inaction. Orr v. Orr, 440 U.S. 268, 272 (1979) (emphasis in original); Arkansas Writers’ Project, Inc. v. Ragland, 481 U.S. 221, 227 (1987) (to “effectively insulate underinclusive statutes from constitutional challenge [is] a proposition we [have] soundly rejected . . .”).

The DOJ focuses on a future that is impossible to predict while Plaintiff is focused on what is happening now to her rights by a statute that is still on the book and is still being enforced against her.

The DOJ’s argument of “wait and maybe we will see someday” would require every Article III court in the country to put on hold any case that involves the military or national security issues because the Executive or Congress are conducting studies while people’s rights are being violated?

Now, we’re not arguing that this Court does not owe deference to Congress and the President, we’re arguing it does not owe deference to unknown possibilities of what bureaucrats may or may not decide at some indefinite time in the future.

As the Rostker Court stated, “Announced degrees of ‘deference’ to legislative judgments . . . may all too readily become facile [superficial] abstractions used to justify a result.” Rostker, 57 U.S. at 69-70.

That’s exactly what the DOJ lawyers are trying to do here.

For this Court not to act—one way or the other—on the equal protection and substantive due process issues would admit that civil rights can be violated as long as the Government might stop violating those rights at some unknown time in the future.

Perhaps the Board of Education of the City of Topeka, Kansas should have used that argument in 1954.

The problem of course is what’s to stop the Government from continuing its violations while asking for more and more time, which is what the DOJ has been doing here and in Nat’l Coal. for Men v. Selective Serv. Sys. case (13-2391, C.D. Cal; 16-cv-03362, S.D. Tex.)

It would also recognize the legitimacy of the remnants of hostility that existed in 1875 when women could only serve as nurses and cooks in the military while the Supreme Court unanimously denied women the right to vote. See Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162, 178 (1874).

Rostker* was decided on the merits.

According to Rotunda and Nowak, Treatise on Const. L. § 18.23(i) (5th ed. 2013):

“The [Rostker] majority opinion, by Justice Rehnquist, stated that the Court should accord Congress great deference when reviewing laws having to do with the establishment or regulation of the military, but went on to find that the gender-based classification would survive scrutiny under the substantial relationship-important interest test.”

Rostker, 453 U.S. at 67, stated “We of course do not abdicate our ultimate responsibility to decide the constitutional question, but simply recognize that the Constitution itself requires such deference to congressional choice.” Here, Congress has not made a choice other than to have a commission conduct a study.

So rather than doing nothing, the Rostker Court went on to decide the merits. It found that women and men were not similarly situated—the first element in deciding an Equal Protection violation.

“The existence of the combat restrictions clearly indicates the basis for Congress’ decision to exempt women from registration. The purpose of registration was to prepare for a draft of combat troops. Since women are excluded from combat, Congress concluded that they would not be needed in the event of a draft, and therefore decided not to register them. . . . Men and women, because of the combat restrictions on women, are simply not similarly situated for purposes of a draft or registration for a draft.” Rostker, 453 U.S. at 77-78.

Today, the definition of “combat troops” means men and women. So for this Court to give deference to Rostker means requiring young women to register because they are now potential “combat troops.”

[DOJ admits that “Historically, Selective Service registration has been relied upon to replace those falling in combat.” (Defendant Selective Service System’s Objections and Responses to Plaintiffs’ First Set of Interrogatories at No. 10 p. 6 Response, filed in Nat’l Coal. for Men v. Selective Serv. Sys., No. H-16-3362 (S.D. Tex., August 30, 2018, Dkt. 76).]

Rostker does not demand deference for a facial challenge to MSSA.

DOJ asserts that in reviewing a facial challenge to the constitutionality of the MSSA, this Court must give deference to the political branches. See Rostker, 453 U.S. at 70 (DOJ Reply at 4)

What Rostker actually stated at 70 was “deference does not mean abdication” When a statute “is challenged on equal protection grounds, the question a court must decide is not which alternative it would have chosen, had it been the primary decisionmaker, but whether that chosen by Congress denies equal protection of the laws.”

Rostker, no deference when there are merely ongoing discussions in Government.

The Legislative and Executive Branches are currently engaged in their own review of the MSSA (DOJ Reply at 3, D.E. No. 82)

It is really the Commission that is doing the review and that review has no present impact on the current violation of Plaintiff’s rights. If it did, the Commission would be a defendant.

Such deference extends not only to the merits of the question at hand, but also to the process chosen by the political branches for addressing the policy at issue. Rostker, 453 U.S. at 65 (DOJ Reply at 4, D.E. No. 82)

Rostker does not say that nor hold that as the DOJ Reply author states with a cite that lacks a qualification signal.

The only deference that the U.S. Supreme Court in Rostker showed Congress was in accepting its decision that “[t]he purpose of registration . . . was to prepare for a draft of combat troops.” 453 U.S. at 76-77 (emphasis in the original).

The only decision Congress has made here is that a commission will do a study.

Separation of Powers, Courts v. Congress and the President

“The irreplaceable value of the power articulated by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall [Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)] lies in the protection it has afforded the constitutional rights and liberties of individual citizens and minority groups against oppressive or discriminatory government action.” U.S. v. Richardson, 418 U.S. 166, 192 (Powell, J., concurring) (1974).

Plaintiff is asking Your Honor for that protection and asking for it NOW.

DOJ argues that the power of Art III courts is limited to statutes after Congress (1) amends a statute that is already on the books, or (2) refuses to amend that statute, or (3) until Congress finally makes up its mind on what to do with that statute already on the books even though the harm caused by that statute is present and continuing.

Your Honor has already found that Plaintiff is being injured—here and now by the Government preventing her from registering. (Opinion at 5 n.5, 9, 13, D.E. No. 72). If she is currently being injured, how can this Court be prevented from doing anything about it, or be required to wait for who knows how long before doing anything about it.

In 1875, Congress granted federal question jurisdiction to Article III courts primarily to provide “a forum designed to minimize the danger of hostility toward . . . federally created rights.” 15 Moore’s Fed. Prac., § 103.03 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

As a result, it is “the courts [that] are called upon to decide whether Congress, acting under an explicit constitutional grant of authority, has by that action transgressed an explicit guarantee of individual rights which limits the authority so conferred.” Rostker v. Goldberg, 453 U.S. 57, 70 (1981). Here, it is the MSSA.

For this Court to wait for the President and Congress’s decision on the Commission’s suggestions and then base its decision on that Congressional determination would raise separation of powers issues. Congress would then, in effect, be deciding an existing case, which is an improper interference with the independence of the judiciary. Cf. U.S. v. Klein, 80 U.S. 128, 145-147 (1871) (separation of powers problem because Congress attempted to decide a case pending in the Supreme Court in which the U.S. Government was a party).

Plaintiff’s Fifth Amendment rights would be violated during the wait because Plaintiff would be denied the opportunity to raise the constitutional issues of Equal Protection and Substantive Due Process in a competent forum. See Oestereich v. Selective Serv. Sys. Local Bd. No. 11, Cheyenne, Wyo., 393 U.S. 233, 243 (1968) (Harlan, J, concurring) (“To withhold pre-induction review . . . would thus deprive petitioner of his liberty without the prior opportunity to present to any competent forum . . . his substantial claim that he was ordered inducted pursuant to an unlawful procedure.”).

Due Process Rights v. Military, National Security

The Supreme has held that “the phrase ‘war power’ cannot be invoked as a talismanic incantation to support any exercise of congressional power which can be brought within its ambit. ‘Even the war power does not remove constitutional limitations safeguarding essential liberties’. . . . Implicit in the term national defense is the notion of defending those values and ideals which set this Nation apart.” U.S. v. Robel, 389 U.S. 258, 263-264 (1967) (internal quotation Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell, 290 U.S. 398, 426 (1934)).

Even if the civilian Plaintiff here would be considered a member of the armed services by registering, the protections of the Due Process Clause would still apply. U.S. ex rel. Innes v. Hiatt, 141 F.2d 664, 666 (3d Cir. 1944) (“[a]n individual does not cease to be a person within the protection of the fifth amendment of the Constitution because [s]he had joined the nation’s armed forces . . . .”)

“When the national government explicitly and deliberately discriminates against historically subordinated groups, the suggestion that judges are incompetent to understand that discrimination betrays a fundamental conception of judicial review that has prevailed for [seventy-five years].” Kenneth L. Karst, The Pursuit of Manhood and the Desegregation of the Armed Forces, 38 UCLA L. Rev. 499, 580 (1991).

Numerous cases have confirmed that the Federal Courts will not refrain from a decision on the merits based on notions of non-reviewability because the military or national security is involved:

“The war power of the United States, like its other powers and like the police power of the states, is subject to applicable constitutional limitations.” Hamilton v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Company, 251 U.S. 146, 156 (1919) (Brandeis, J.) (citing Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 121-127 (1866) (presidential declaration of martial law found unconstitutional)); accord Duncan v. Kahanamoku, 327 U.S. 304, 323-324 (1946) (declaration of martial law in Hawaii following the attack on Pearl Harbor held unconstitutional); Monongahela Navigation Co. v. United States, 148 U.S. 312, 336 (1893) (power granted by Congress to Secretary of War to take for public use certain property at a predetermined compensation violated the Fifth Amendment).

Holder v. Humanitarian Law Project, 561 U.S. 1, 34 (2010) (“Our precedents, old and new, make clear that concerns of national security . . . do not warrant abdication of the judicial role.”);

Weiss v. United States, 510 U.S. 163, 176 (1994) (“Congress . . . is subject to the requirements of the Due Process Clause when legislating in the area of military affairs”);

Dow v. Johnson, 100 U.S. 158, 169 (1879) (“[T]he military should always be kept in subjection to the laws of the country to which it belongs, and that he is no friend to the Republic who advocates the contrary. The established principle of every free people is, that the law shall alone govern; and to it the military must always yield.”);

Marbury, 5 U.S. at 177 (“the [C]onstitution controls any legislative act repugnant to it”).

U.S. v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515 (1996) (not discussing justiciability but instead focusing on the merits of whether Virginia’s policy of excluding women from enrolling in its historically single-sex military college violated the Equal Protection Clause);

Rostker v. Goldberg, 453 U.S. 57, 78-79 (1981) (The Court stated that it was “called upon to decide whether Congress, acting under an explicit constitutional grant of authority, has by that action transgressed an explicit guarantee of individual rights which limits the authority so conferred.” Rostker, 57 U.S. at 69-70.

Brown v. Glines, 444 U.S. 348, 361 (1980) (First Amendment challenge to regulation limiting circulation of petitions at Air Force base was reviewed on the merits);

Schlesinger v. Ballard, 419 U.S. 498, 506-510 (1975) (challenge to Navy promotion time-limits based on sex decided on Equal Protection grounds under the Due Process clause in which the Court found that men and women service members were not similarly situated);

Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S. 733, 757 (1974) (Court-martialed army captain sought discharge from confinement in federal penitentiary. The captain's conduct in publicly urging enlisted personnel to refuse to obey orders which might send them into combat was unprotected under the most expansive notions of the First Amendment);

Frontiero v. Richardson, 411 U.S. 677, 690–691 (1973) (statutes discriminating against women in granting military benefits was found to violate Equal Protection under the Due Process Clause because they were based on archaic and overbroad generalizations).

Gilligan v. Morgan, 413 U.S. 1, 11-12 (1973) (rejecting claims based on the allegedly improper training methods of the Ohio National Guard, but stating that “it should be clear that we neither hold nor imply that . . . there may not be accountability in a judicial forum for violations of law or for specific unlawful conduct by military personnel, whether by way of damages or injunctive relief. We hold only that no such questions are presented in this case”).

Jorden v. Nat’l Guard Bureau, 799 F.2d 99, 109 (3d Cir. 1986) (“The Supreme Court has heard many cases involving claims for injunctive relief against the military without even suggesting that the claims were not reviewable in a civilian court.”)

Jaffee v. United States, 663 F.2d 1226, 1237 (3rd Cir. 1981) (“[T]he Rostker opinion certainly does not suggest the courts should abdicate their responsibility to assure military authorities comply with constitutional mandates . . .”).

Dillard v. Brown, 652 F.2d 316, 320-321 (3d Cir. 1981) (The Third Circuit held that it is precisely the role of the courts, not the military, to define the constitutional rights of individuals).

“Neither [Article I, Section 8 (Congressional power over military) and Article II, Section 2 (Presidential power over military) of the Constitution] expressly or by implication, prevents a federal court from entertaining an appropriate constitutional claim brought against the military. The military has not been exempted from constitutional provisions that protect the rights of individuals, even though the rights of those in the armed forces may differ from those of civilians. Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S. 733 (1974); Raderman v. Kaine, 411 F.2d 1102 (2d Cir. 1969).”

In Dillard a National Guard regulation forbid single parents with minor children from enlisting. A woman service member challenged the regulation as sex discrimination. The Third Circuit found the claim was justiciable.

“Her challenge, unlike that of the plaintiffs in Gilligan v. Morgan, 413 U.S. 1 (1973), does not require a court to engage in an ongoing supervision of the National Guard. A court by considering Dillard’s claims is not usurping the responsibility constitutionally committed to a coordinate branch. Nor is the court here asked to engage in a task for which it has no competence. Dillard merely seeks constitutional review of a regulation by a federal court, a task which traditionally and constitutionally has been committed to such a forum. The claims ‘presented and the relief sought are of the type which admit of judicial resolution.’ Powell v. McCormack, supra, 395 U.S. 486, 516-17 (1969). Consequently in Dillard’s case there is present neither the level of intrusion into the responsibilities of the coordinate political branches nor the lack of competence of the judicial branch that was found in Gilligan.”

This case is similar to Dillard, only here, Plaintiff is not in the military.

[“In Dillard we explicitly rejected the test set forth by the Fifth Circuit in Mindes v. Seaman, 453 F.2d 197 (5th Cir.1971), for determining whether a court should hear a particular claim involving the military. Jorden v. Nat’l Guard Bureau, 799 F.2d 99, 111 n.16 (3d Cir. 1986).”]

[It is clear that Dillard was not overruled by either Chappell v. Wallace, 462 U.S. 296 (1983) or Jaffe II, 663 F.2d at 1240. Jorden, 799 F.2d at 111 n.16 ]

SWAN v. Mattis, Order at 16, 3:12-cv-06005, 05/01/18, N.D. Cal., D.E. No. 118) in finding justiciability, the Court relied, in part, on the Third Circuit case Dillard v. Brown, 652 F.2d 316 (3d Cir. 1981), cert. denied sub. nom., Sajer v. Jorden, 484 U.S. 815 (1987), to distinguish Gilligan.

The SWAN Court quoted the following from Dillard:

“Gilligan [v. Morgan, 413 U.S. 1 (1973)] does not stand for the proposition that issues concerning the operation of the National Guard are necessarily committed to the coordinate political branches. The Supreme Court held only that a federal court could not exercise continuing regulatory jurisdiction over the National Guard. The plaintiffs in Gilligan were not merely seeking to have the Court hold that certain practices or regulations were unconstitutional. Rather they sought to vest virtual control of the Ohio National Guard in a federal court.” Dillard at 321.

Emory v. Sec’y of Navy, 819 F.2d 291, 294 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (“The military has not been exempted from constitutional provisions that protect the rights of individuals. Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S. 733 (1974). It is precisely the role of the courts to determine whether those rights have been violated. Dillard v. Brown, 652 F.2d 316, 320 (3d Cir.1981).”)

Doe 1 v. Trump, 275 F. Supp. 3d 167, 210 (D.D.C. 2017) (addressing merits of claims brought by transgender service members and aspiring service members that directives issued by President violated their constitutional rights. “Where it is alleged, as it is here, that the armed forces have trenched upon constitutionally guaranteed rights through the promotion and selection process, the courts are not powerless to act. The military has not been exempted from constitutional provisions that protect the rights of individuals [and, indeed] [i]t is precisely the role of the courts to determine whether those rights have been violated.” Quoting Emory v. Sec’y of Navy, 819 F.2d 291, 294 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

If courts can stop the banning of transgender soldiers, the courts can stop the banning of women from registration. [Four lower-court judges have ruled the White House’s transgender ban unconstitutional.]

[Stockman v. Trump, 331 F.Supp.3d 990 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 18, 2018) (not entitled to rational-basis review pursuant to the doctrine of military deference); Karnoski v. Trump, 2018 WL 1784464 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 13, 2018) (preliminary injunction upheld pending appeal by 9th Cir No. 18-35347, Dkt. No. 90.); Stone v. Trump, 280 F. Supp. 3d 747, 768 (D. Md. 2017), appeal dismissed, No. 17-2398, 2018 WL 2717050 (4th Cir. Feb. 2, 2018) (preliminary injunction issued, DOJ dismissed its appeal).]

Owens v. Brown, 455 F. Supp. 291, 299, 301 (D.D.C. 1978) (plaintiffs were woman Navy personnel who filed a class action, seeking to remove a statutory bar that prevented them from being assigned to duties aboard Navy vessels. The district court held that the case was justiciable. Defendants read Article I, Section 8 and Article II, Section 2 as signifying an intent to commit decisions regarding the military to the discretion of the legislative and executive branches of government and to leave no room for the third branch to exercise independent review. This argument proves too much. Numerous court decisions have shown “not the slightest hesitancy about reaching the merits even though military affairs were involved.” “[A] succession of cases in this circuit and elsewhere has reiterated the proposition that the military is subject to the Bill of Rights and its constitutional implications”).

This action, as in Dillard and SWAN, is NOT “a call on judicial power to assume continuing regulatory jurisdiction over the activities” of the military’s draft registration. See Gilligan at 5 (quotation). Rather, this case is a challenge to a facial barrier— “the type of military decision that courts have exercised jurisdiction over,” according to the DOJ in SWAN (DOJ Mem. at 2, 3:12-cv-06005, 02/16/18, D.E. No. 110).

DOJ admits justiciability—that courts can decide the merits.

DOJ lawyers have already admitted that this Court has justiciability to review the MSSA: Rostker itself noted that even in a case involving critical issues of military policy, courts “do not abdicate [their] ultimate responsibility to decide the constitutional question.” Rostker v. Goldberg, 453 U.S. 57, 67 (1981). (Reply at 4, D.E. No. 82)

In SWAN, 3:12-cv-06005 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (DOJ Dismissal Mtn Hearing Transcript, April 19, 2018, D.E. No. 115), the DOJ replied to the U.S. district court judge’s question on whether a general military exclusion based on gender is justiciable.

Court: Does it make a difference whether the policy being challenged is a facial challenge to an explicit group-based policy? In this case, it’s gender based. . . . [I]t is gender based on its face. Does that make it—tend to make it more justiciable than one that is kind of an effects case, where you’re challenging the impact of something? (Tr. 5-25 to 6-6).

DOJ: It does. I think that's why we never raised it earlier, because a general exclusion based off of also gender, as the first -- as the Direct Combat Rule was, is -- that's typically something that you would -- you would think is justiciable. (Tr. 6-7 to 6-11).

The DOJ's argument in SWAN emphasized that its process for integrating women into combat positions does not create a barrier based on gender. If it did, the Government admitted that such a barrier would be justiciable: "[T]his case has transformed from a challenge to a facial barrier on service, the type of military decision that courts have exercised jurisdiction over . . . ." SWAN (Gov't Mem. at 2, filed Feb. 16, 2018, D.E. No. 110). "In its prior iterations, this lawsuit did indeed challenge a categorical military policy against females serving in direct combat positions." (Id. at 13).

Plaintiff agrees with the DOJ's argument in SWAN that the general exclusion of women because of their gender is justiciable when the military is involved. Since registration is part of the military, Rostker, 453 U.S. at 68, the exclusion of women there is also justiciable.

The case here challenges just such a "facial barrier," but here, the DOJ takes the opposite of its position in SWAN.

The SWAN Court still found justiciability of the challenge to the Pentagon's detailed process for integrating women into combat positions, but dismissed w/o prejudice on standing:

"[t]he military does not have any special expertise on gender integration. . . . Courts regularly assess claims of disparate treatment under the Equal Protection Clause, and scrutiny of discrimination by the military is not uncommon. Justification for class-based exclusions from the military or portions thereof, despite justification based on, e.g., morale or combat readiness, are not beyond the ability of the courts to adjudicate. See, e.g., Rostker, 453 U.S. at 57 [citations omitted]. . . . Carried to its logical extent, under the government's position herein, even race-based exclusions from the military or racial segregation within would be immune from judicial review. . . . It is too late in the day for any such argument." SWAN Order at 17-18, 3:12-cv-06005, N.D. Cal., 05/01/18, D.E. No. 118)

The Third Circuit in Yusupov v. Attorney Gen. of U.S., 650 F.3d 968, 981 (3d Cir. 2011), quoted the Supreme Court as stating that "concerns of national security and foreign relations do not warrant abdication of the judicial role. Holder v. Humanitarian Law Project, 130 S.Ct. 2705, 2727 (2010)."

DOJ's abstract and disingenuous deference arguments for this Court to do nothing.

1. Abstraction

DOJ lawyers continue to do what the Rostker Court warned against concerning deference:

“Announced degrees of ‘deference’ to legislative judgments . . . may all too readily become facile [superficial] abstractions used to justify a result.” Rostker, 57 U.S. at 69-70.

DOJ claims that This lawsuit seeks to draw the Court into this ongoing policymaking process and predetermine its outcome. (DOJ Reply at 1, D.E. No. 82). [W]rest from the political branches an issue of military policy that is committed to those branches by the text of the Constitution. (DOJ Reply at 3, D.E. No. 82). The entry of judicial relief for Plaintiff at this stage would interfere with, if not negate, the Government’s ability to address a fundamental revamping of the Selective Service System to better account for changes in society and warfare as mandated by Congress. (DOJ Reply at 7, D.E. No. 82).

The DOJ claims the sky will fall if this Court defends Plaintiff’s rights, but doesn’t give any specifics—perhaps they exaggerate.

2. Pending legislation

DOJ argues for deference because Congress is in the midst of a policymaking process . . . . (DOJ Br. at 1, D.E. No. 80-1). All that Congress is in the “midst of” is waiting—who knows for how long—for the Commission to formulate suggestions.

